Sister Tanner and I have just returned from visiting four missions and one stake in Japan, all of which are presided over by Japanese. One couple are natives who were born and raised there, who have filled missions in Japan, and who are doing a great job. We visited the mission in Korea and the one in Hong Kong, each of which is presided over by Americans who had filled missions only ten or twelve years ago; in fact, six of the mission presidents have served in the areas where they now preside, and five of the wives.

It thrilled me to see the marvelous work being done by the missionaries throughout these great countries, to see the growth of the Church, the quality and devotion of the members, old and new, most of whom are young people twenty to thirty-five years of age.

Outstanding leaders were observed in every mission and in the stake, and great strides are being made. We had from 300 to 1,000 people attending the meetings of the members, and one cannot help but have every confidence in the future growth and strength of the Church there. There was a great spirit in every meeting.

Effective missionaries

Impressions I received while I was there were that these are devoted, able, humble, prayerful, effective missionaries; boys who have developed into men; men with courage, understanding, and leadership ability; ambassadors of the Lord, admired, loved, and respected by the members, carrying heavy responsibility, filling all or any leadership positions and training others to fill these positions, such as branch presidents, heads of auxiliaries, and teachers; baptizing, confirming, and ordaining, etc., encouraging and strengthening the weak, administering to the sick. One bore testimony of a miraculous healing that he experienced where he was the one who gave the blessing to his father.

They are men and women with testimonies who have met and overcome temptation and evil; men who will come home prepared and ready and able to accept any position in a ward or stake; men who have felt important and have been important; men who will strengthen, inspire, and give leadership to your wards and stakes and inspire your youth if you will just give them an opportunity to do so; men deeply concerned about inactive members; men deeply concerned about anyone who has a problem and who are trying to help him solve it. This is one group of men.

Work of servicemen

I would like to refer to the servicemen. We met some while we were in Korea and in Osaka, and many of these young men are doing a tremendous work in the Church.

When I was speaking to newly called missionaries, I asked for all who were twenty-four years of age to stand, because that is the age Joseph Smith was when the Church was organized. Five stood at this meeting, and I asked one of them to come up and tell us how he happened to come into the Church, and to bear his testimony. He said he was in the armed services in Vietnam, and that while there he met some of our young men, one in particular who was living and teaching the gospel, and as a result this young man is now a member of the Church. He explained the great difference it had made in his life, how he had repented of what he had done, and how he came to understand the purpose of life. And then I asked the other four. Two of them told the same thing in bearing their testimony—that they had joined the Church while in the armed services. It was a thrilling experience to realize the effect of young servicemen who were devoted, who had testimonies of the gospel and the courage to live and teach the gospel and bear testimony, while in the armed services.

It was thrilling to see in the stake and missions how missionaries were able to bring people into the Church, people who regard them very highly. One convert was a university professor; another, a successful businessman; two, outstanding doctors, one of whom was a heart surgeon. It was most humbling to see how these men praised the work of the young men who had brought them into the Church and influenced their lives, and they bore testimony of the great things that the gospel has done for them since they joined the Church.

I was greatly impressed by the leadership in each and every mission and in the stake.

Opportunity to serve

I appeal to the bishops and stake presidents to see that these young men, when they return from their tour of duty, have an opportunity to serve.

And to the young men: Your study and your devotion and experience have prepared you for real service in the work of the Lord. Thank the Lord for the privilege you have had of testing in your lives and improving your testimony. Never feel that you have finished or completed your tour of duty in church service. You have only prepared yourself to be of further service in the work of the Lord. Seek and accept opportunities to serve. Never return to the old gang. Be an example. Let the young girls and boys see what a mission will do for a young man, and never let them down. These youth in the wards and stakes, when you return, will look up to you and expect great things of you; and if you live as you should, you will influence their lives for good, as much as you have the lives of those with whom you have come in contact when you were in the service—the service of your country or the service of the Lord.

Encourage these young men with whom you meet when you come home to prepare themselves for missions, temple marriage, and the blessings that are available to faithful members of the Church. Help them to overcome evil and temptation, to appreciate the priesthood that they hold, and to sustain their leaders. That is the thing I hope these returning men will do.

Promise of blessings

Magnify your priesthood at all times. Honor and uphold one another. Never, never submit to temptation. Honor womanhood and virtue with your life, if necessary. Never become discouraged or quit. As you continue in active church service you will be more successful, more highly regarded, and happier than you will in any other way. And I want to promise you, my young brethren, that if you will seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness and be prepared to serve the Lord wherever you can, the Lord will bless you with greater success and happiness and contentment than you could possibly enjoy otherwise. You will do better in your school work if you will be active in the Church, and you will be an influence for good in the world.

A man with whom I am associated as a director in a large company said to me the other day (he is representing the government now, and he has been a very successful businessman in the lumbering industry): "We asked for applicants who were prepared to accept a certain job in the government. We had many applicants, and we got them down to ten, and as we were considering those ten, we noticed that one of them was a member of your church, and we took him just like that."

I said, "Why did you take him?"

He said, "Because we knew that he wouldn't be carousing at night; we knew that we could depend upon him, and we knew that he would do the work assigned to him." And I thought, what a tremendous thing if our young men would all just realize that that is true.

Problem with delayed recommends

I could read you a letter here tonight that I read to the Regional Representatives, and I think I should read parts of it, at least. Maybe I can tell you what is in it.

The president of the Korea Mission, when I was over there, was telling me of the problems they have with young men in the service because the bishops were not sending the recommends for two or three months after they had arrived. He said that our servicemen do not enjoy—in fact, they resent—being there, and they become lonesome, and there are prostitutes there in great numbers. In fact, he told me that it was a common thing for these soldiers to have a prostitute companion. He told me an experience where one of our priests who was lonely, who had not been too active, became involved with one of these prostitutes. And then one of our young men who was living the gospel and who was interested in trying to save these young men contacted him, worked with him, and finally got him to acknowledge the value of the Church, to repent of his doings, and to strive to work as he should to be worthy of the blessings of the Lord. And then he said if he could have just got hold of that boy when he arrived, he could have helped him and probably prevented this tragedy. He goes on to tell of the experience with many of the young men there, and how many of them bear testimony that it was because somebody met them and worked with them, and gave them companionship and love, that they were able to withstand the temptations that are so prevalent there.

So, brethren, you bishops and stake presidents, when these young men leave home to go to school, be sure that you send the recommends and the information you have regarding them to that university or college. When they go into the armed services, for goodness' sake, for the sake of these young men, be sure that you are not too busy and that your interest is keen enough to do all in your power to try to save these young men who are going into the armed services. Send information ahead of them to the group leaders or other proper people.

Returned missionaries

As for these missionaries, when they return, and the young men who are preparing, be close to them. Let your influence be felt. Encourage them. They are on fire when they return from a mission. You know when they are returning. Meet them, greet them, love them, and give them an opportunity to work. I have heard several examples of this—one just last week. A mother said to me, "When my boy returned from his mission, he wasn't given an opportunity to speak in the ward, he wasn't approached by the bishop other than to say, 'Hello, it's good to see you home,' and no one seemed to take an interest in him." Then she said, "I really had to work with that boy to keep up his interest and activity in the Church."

Brethren, you who are returning from these armed services and school and missions, report to your bishops and offer yourselves to be of service. And bishops, I appeal to you to see that when these young people leave your ward, you send on information to the proper officials in schools, universities, and the armed services, so that they might know and be able to give the necessary help and encouragement when they arrive.

Importance of a soul

May the Lord bless us that we might realize the importance of a soul; that right in our midst we have people needing attention and help, and it is our responsibility to keep them active, to encourage them, and to reach them if they are having problems. May we realize that the priesthood of God is the power of God given us to act in his name. May we do it wisely, humbly, effectively, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

First Counselor in the First Presidency

During the last week, we have spent an afternoon and all day with our Regional Representatives of the Twelve, directing their attention to a theme, "The Church has need of every member that all may be edified together." We developed some statistics that have now been reduced to charts, which the Regional Representatives will be taking out to the various regional meetings to impress the need for reaching out to those who presently are not active in the Church.

Priesthood activity figures

I may take figures from one chart to impress the importance of what we are talking about. On one chart we have 353,000 holders of the Melchizedek Priesthood in the Church, most of whom are fathers, and only 187,000 are active, using attendance at one sacrament meeting and one priesthood meeting each month as helpful criteria. Or, in other words, they were considered active if they did that much. Of the 184,000 men over 21 who hold the Aaronic Priesthood, most of whom are fathers too, only 17,000 are active, mind you. There are also 48,000 adult male members who are unordained, and 117,480 nonmember husbands, most of whom are fathers also. Thus, of approximately 700,000 adult males, many of whom are fathers, almost 500,000 of the total are by these criteria inactive, if we include unordained males and nonmember husbands in describing this scope of our challenge.

The weight of responsibility

Now, brethren, we are going out now with a determined activity to bring these our brethren into activity—activity of some kind. One of the mission presidents, with a group of his missionaries back in the Eastern States some years ago, was meeting in a hall with pillars that ran down the center of the hall, and he said to one of the missionaries, “Get up and push that pillar over.”

“Well,” said the missionary, “I can’t.”

“Why?”

“Because the weight of that ceiling is all on top of the pillar.”

Then the president asked, “Suppose that weight were lifted off. Could you push the pillar over then?”

The missionary replied, “Why, sure, I think I could.”

Then the president said, “Now, brethren, you and I are just like one of those pillars. As long as we have a weight of responsibility in this church, all hell can’t push us over; but as soon as that weight is lifted off, most of us are easy marks by the powers that drag us down.”

Now we want to put a weight of responsibility on every holder of the priesthood and on every father in every home. You must remember that if we are to multiply the number of those who are so-called inactive, who haven’t been to the temple, by the average-size family, you are counting up to hundreds of thousands of members of this church who, unless we do something about it, will not be sealed together in the temple and will not, therefore, belong together in family relationships in the hereafter.

Remember that activity is the soul of spirituality.

Focus on individual

We propose that you introduce this kind of program: We want the bishops now to instruct the home teachers and quorum leaders to submit the names of inactive members to their bishops, along with suggestions as to how these individuals might be approached and involved. We want the bishops, in turn, to submit these names to their stake presidents in the same manner, so that there is a continuing effort and evaluation over a period of time in which we focus on individuals rather than numbers, in which we test our love and creativity in terms of how we can best reach and assist fellow members in giving them the opportunity of serving others.

Call for professional services

We have had these brethren speak as they have tonight, directing your attention to this vital subject. All of them have touched upon various areas of concern. We have in the Church many men in various professions who have been asking, "Why can't we, instead of being called to go out on a proselyting mission, go on a mission where we can use our talents, our professional skills, in helping the work of the Lord?"

This is a program that we will hear more of, and this is a call to doctors, nurses, agricultural people, and all those whom Dr. Mason has talked about that we are going to try to marshal and call as regular missionaries to go out at their own expense, as all proselyting missionaries do, to give help for a period of time in helping to lift the standards of our people wherever that help is needed. Now we can see in this a great uplift and a great surge of strength that will come from many of these persons who are asking for somebody to give them a chance to serve in the fields where they are able to serve; to reach out to all of these who are in some measure less active than they should be and give them something to do. Use your imagination, you leaders, and see that everyone is given some responsibility, with the feeling that the Church needs them for a specific service.

Caring for others

I recall, and I think I have mentioned this before and I repeat it tonight, the experience of the late Adam S. Bennion when he went out to the Utah State Penitentiary. He was bolder than some of us have been when we have gone out there. He engaged them in conversation. "Boys, I would like to ask you, what happened in your lives that caused you to make the mistakes that brought you here as inmates in the Utah State Penitentiary?" After he broke the ice, as it were, they gave him one answer: "We are here in the state penitentiary because there came a time in our lives when we were made to feel that nobody cared what happened to us."

You and I sit here tonight in a comparative measure of security, but the Lord help any one of us if ever we are made to feel in our hearts that nobody cares what happens to us. A father or a mother or a child, or one who is not active, who feels that nobody cares—that man or woman is in a dangerous state, and we want you to reach out to all of these and bring them now into a measure of some activity, as soon as you can marshal your forces so to do.

Joy from husband's activity

I was down in a husbands-and-wives meeting in Provo years ago when a lovely sister bore her testimony as to the joy that had come into her home since her husband had become active in the Church. She told about going through the temple with her husband. She told how he had been inactive, how he had smoked and hadn't been advanced in the priesthood, and how someone took hold of him and finally helped him to become worthy and ready to receive the priesthood; and the bishop had finally given him a recommend to go to the temple. After she had described that wonderful evening, she said, "Here, five little girls came in to be sealed to their father and mother. This man of God pronounced us a family for the eternities." And as she finished this story and bore her testimony, she looked over the pulpit and down in front of her where her husband was seated. She seemed to forget for that moment that there was anybody there but just the two of them, and she said to him, "Daddy, I can't tell you how happy the girls now are and how grateful we are for what you have done for us, because, you see, Daddy, except for you who holds the priesthood, neither the children nor I could be together as a family in the hereafter. Thank God for our daddy who holds the key and unlocks the door to an eternal family home."

I could have wished that every careless father in the Church could have heard that girl's testimony.

Challenge to priesthood

Please, we ask you priesthood holders, wake up these fathers now, while it is yet day and while there is time for them to receive their blessings before the darkness comes. May the Lord help us so to do now and to catch the vision and the message that President Tanner and these men who have spoken to you tonight have given you—a glimpse of what we can do if we will only exercise the priesthood, which is the power of God by which he works through men to the salvation of his children. That the Lord might help us so to do, to catch that vision, and to carry out the purposes of what we are trying to do in these years ahead, I pray humbly in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

We shall now close this meeting with the chorus singing "Praise the Lord." We are grateful to the Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir, with Richard P. Condie conducting, and Roy M. Darley at the organ. These brethren over the years have touched our hearts with their wonderful service, and we thank them again for this service.

We should remind you that if you come to the broadcast in the morning you must be here at 9:15. The broadcast starts at 9:30.

After the chorus sings "Praise the Lord," the benediction will be offered by Elder David B. Haight, Assistant to the Twelve, and this conference will then be adjourned until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir sang "Praise the Lord."

The closing prayer was given by Elder David B. Haight, Assistant to the Twelve.

The conference was adjourned until Sunday at 10 o'clock a.m.

THIRD DAY MORNING MEETING

SIXTH SESSION

The sixth session of the conference convened in the Tabernacle on Sunday, October 3, 1971 at 10 o'clock a. m.

With President Joseph Fielding Smith presiding, President Harold B. Lee, first counselor in the First Presidency, conducted the meeting.

The Tabernacle Choir, under the direction of Richard P. Condie, with Alexander Schreiner at the organ, furnished the special music for this session.

Before the opening of the meeting, the Tabernacle Choir without announcement sang "Glory to God on High."

President Lee then made the following remarks:

President Harold B. Lee

To all assembled this morning in this historic Tabernacle we extend a cordial welcome to this the sixth session of the 141st Semi-Annual Conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

We welcome also special guests—government, educational and civic leaders, and stake and ward members from far and near, and the vast television and radio audience tuned to these proceedings throughout many areas of the world.

The Tabernacle Choir, under the direction of Richard P. Condie, with Alexander Schreiner at the organ, will open these services by singing "Send Forth Thy Spirit," following which Elder W. Brent Hardy, formerly president of the Hong Kong Mission, will offer the invocation.

The Tabernacle Choir sang the number, "Send Forth Thy Spirit."

The invocation was offered by Elder W. Brent Hardy, formerly president of the Hong Kong Mission.

Following the invocation the Choir sang "Sing the Lord, Ye Voices All" without announcement.

President Lee

Our first speaker this morning will be President N. Eldon Tanner, second counselor in the First Presidency of the Church.

President N. Eldon Tanner

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

It is a humbling experience indeed to be called to speak to this great audience assembled here, and to all those who may be listening in. I sincerely pray that the Spirit and blessings of the Lord will attend us as we discuss the significance of God's first question to Adam, "Where art thou?"—a direct and searching question that applies to every one of us today.

Purpose for man's existence

To do this intelligently, we need to understand the purpose for man's existence here upon the earth and why God posed this question to Adam, who represents all mankind. In the council in heaven before the world was, the Gods decided to create an earth on which man would dwell, and God said:

"... we will prove them herewith, to see if they will do all things whatsoever the Lord their God shall command them;

"And they who keep their first estate shall be added upon; and they who keep not their first estate shall not have glory in the same kingdom with those who keep their first estate; and they who keep their second estate shall have glory added upon their heads for ever and ever." (Abr. 3:25-26.)

"And I, God, created man in mine own image, in the image of mine Only Begotten created I him; male and female created I them.

"And I, God, blessed them, and said unto them: Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it, and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth." (Moses 2:27-28.)

"And I, the Lord God, planted a garden eastward in Eden, and there I put the man whom I had formed . . . to dress it, and to keep it.

"And . . . commanded the man, saying: Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat,

"But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it; nevertheless, thou mayest choose for thyself, for it is given unto thee; but, remember that I forbid it. . . ." (Moses 3:8, 15-17.)

It is evident, therefore, that the earth was made as a dwelling place for man, and all things therein were given to him for his use, for his good, and for his enjoyment; but God has pointed out to us, as to Adam, that if we are to enjoy life to the full, there are things we must do and things we must not do. In other words, we are given everything for our benefit and blessing, but we must remember that there are a few "forbidden fruits" that will deprive us of full enjoyment and bring sorrow and regret to us if we partake.

Two plans presented

At the council in heaven, two plans were presented for man's salvation. Christ's plan was approved and he was chosen as the Savior of the world; and Satan's plan was rejected and he rebelled. The record states:

"Wherefore, because that Satan rebelled against me, and sought to destroy the agency of man, which I, the Lord God, had given him, and also, that I should give unto him mine own power; by the power of mine Only Begotten, I caused that he should be cast down;

"And he became Satan, yea, even the devil, the father of all lies, to deceive and to blind men, and to lead them captive at his will, even as many as would not hearken unto my voice." (Moses 4:3-4.)

Satan's plan

In the Doctrine and Covenants we read:

"Satan stirreth them up, that he may lead their souls to destruction.

"And thus he has laid a cunning plan, thinking to destroy the work of God; . . .

"Yea, he saith unto them: Deceive and lie in wait to catch, that ye may destroy. . . . And thus he flattereth them, and telleth them that it is no sin to lie. . . .

"And thus he . . . leadeth them along until he draggeth their souls down to hell. . . .

"And thus he goeth up and down, to and fro in the earth, seeking to destroy the souls of men." (D&C 10:22-23, 25-27.)

"Where art thou?"

Immediately after God left Adam and Eve in the garden, telling them to partake freely of the fruit of all the trees except one, of which they were commanded not to partake, Satan began his nefarious plan for their destruction. Following Satan's successful attempt, God returned to the garden; and because they were ashamed, Adam and Eve were hiding from him, so he called: "Where art thou?" a question which can and does apply to every one of us individually and collectively, and one which we might well be asking ourselves as it applies to our relationship to God and our fellowmen.

Adam's reply

Adam replied: ". . . I heard thy voice in the garden, and I was afraid, because I was naked; and I hid myself.

"And he said, Who told thee that thou wast naked? Hast thou eaten of the tree, whereof I commanded thee that thou shouldest not eat?"

Adam, as we all are inclined to do, tried to blame someone else, and replied:

". . . The woman whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat."

And Eve said: ". . . The serpent [meaning Satan] beguiled me, and I did eat." (Gen. 3:9-13.)

Conditions surrounding Adam and Eve, and those surrounding us today, point up clearly the influence of Satan and the frailties of man, the temptations and problems that he has to meet in life, and how the Lord has prepared a way for him to overcome.

When God said "Where art thou?" he knew where Adam was. With his omniscience he knew what had taken place, but he was calling Adam to consider the seriousness of his actions and to report to him. But Adam had hidden himself because he was ashamed.

We are all like Adam in that when we partake of "forbidden fruits" or do the things we are commanded not to do, we are ashamed, and we draw away from the Church and from God and hide ourselves, and if we continue in sin, the Spirit of God withdraws from us. There is no happiness in disobedience or sin. We have all learned from our childhood that we are happier when we are doing right.

Obedience by faith

Sometimes we do not understand why it is necessary for us to keep the commandments and do certain things to receive certain blessings, except that the Lord commanded it. We cannot explain why we should be baptized or have the laying on of hands or other ordinances. Some even question the teachings of God. But if by faith we obey his commandments, we will receive the promised blessings. Jesus said that unless we become as little children, who have such great faith, we cannot enter the kingdom of heaven. We must learn to have explicit faith.

Then, too, we must understand the importance of obedience. The prophet Samuel taught that "to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams." (1 Sam. 15:22.) The scriptures give us many examples of obedience by faith alone. After Adam and Eve were driven out of the Garden of Eden, the Lord "gave unto them commandments, that they should worship the Lord their God, and should offer the firstlings of their flocks, for an offering unto the Lord. And Adam was obedient unto the commandments of the Lord.

"And after many days an angel of the Lord appeared unto Adam, saying: Why dost thou offer sacrifices unto the Lord? And Adam said unto him: I know not, save the Lord commanded me.

"And then the angel spake, saying: This thing is a similitude of the sacrifice of the Only Begotten of the Father, which is full of grace and truth." (Moses 5:5-7.)

Nephi's obedience

When Nephi was recording the history of his people, he explained that he had received a commandment to make two sets of records—one for an account of the ministry of his people, and the other for an account of the reign of the kings and the wars and contentions of his people. Then he said:

"Wherefore, the Lord hath commanded me to make these plates for a wise purpose in him, which purpose I know not.

"But the Lord knoweth all things from the beginning; wherefore, he prepareth a way to accomplish all his works among the children of men. . . ." (1 Ne. 9:5-6.)

This, as we now know, proved to be of great importance at the time of the translation of these records. If we will only have the faith to keep the commandments, whether we fully understand them or not, we will be blessed, and just as surely, we will reap the results of disobedience.

"Forbidden fruits"

I remember so well that when I was just a young man, to be obedient to the teachings of the Church I refrained from the use of tea, coffee, liquor, and tobacco. At that time the world did not understand, and scientists had not proven, that the use of these things was detrimental to the body and not good for man. Today they have proven that these things are harmful and that we should not partake of them; and yet in spite of this knowledge there are many in the world today who are suffering ill health, much unhappiness, and even death as a result of partaking of these "forbidden fruits."

In fact, most of the contention, strife, and unhappiness in the world are caused by our refusing to accept and live the commandments of the Lord. As was pointed out before, we are here to prove ourselves, and no matter how busy we are, or how successful, we must realize that death will come to us and is not far away. We might well ask ourselves: What am I doing to prepare for death and eternal life? Where am I when it comes to the performance of my duty to God and to my fellowmen?

Teaching our families

Our duty lies in studying the word of God, developing our faith in him, supporting our faith by our actions, and in the heavy responsibility of teaching our families their duty. Again we might ask: Where am I when it comes to teaching my family, by example as well as by precept, to walk uprightly before the Lord, to be honest and honorable in all their dealings, including the payment of tithes and offerings to the Lord? Are we keeping the Sabbath day holy, or do we compromise in certain respects? Are we observing the Word of Wisdom strictly, or do we tamper with any of these "forbidden fruits"? Am I aware of the increasing availability of illegal drugs, and warning my children of the dangers involved? What am I doing in my community to clear up problems pertaining to drug addiction, alcoholism, sexual promiscuity and disease, which are more prevalent than most parents realize? In your own community these are threatening the children of every home.

Where am I when it comes to loyalty to my country? Am I teaching my family to be loyal citizens? Am I teaching them that in order to enjoy the good things in life they must accept responsibility as citizens and contribute to making theirs a better community? Is my home an example of love and harmony and peace? Am I holding regular home evenings so as to be close to my family? Are we having family prayer regularly in order that we may report to the Lord "where we are" and ask for his help and guidance?

Undisciplined homes

I was impressed the other day when I read an article on the family. The author said that juvenile crimes of the times do not reflect on the great body of the young people involved as much as they reflect on the manner in which the adult population is discharging its responsibility. This observation was voiced recently by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court in Ontario, Canada. The group that is causing most of the trouble, he contends, is the product of the undisciplined homes and irresponsible parents.

We must realize that it is our duty and privilege to be good neighbors, especially to those who have no families, and to visit the sick, the poor, and the needy. The Lord has said that the second great commandment is to love our neighbors as ourselves. Are my family and I qualifying in this respect? Are we interested in their welfare and ready to help wherever possible? We read in James that "pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction." (James 1:27.)

Conflict between right and wrong

We are aware that there has always been a conflict between right and wrong, righteousness and evil, good and bad. We must prepare ourselves to meet these conflicts and teach our children and help others to choose the right and make the decisions that will keep them from yielding to temptation. Someone asked me the other day why we have all these temptations, and why the Lord has given us the desires such as appetites and passions, and why we have to be tempted and tested.

One reason is to help us develop and grow through the schooling we receive in the experiences we encounter in mortal life. Brigham Young said: "I am happy . . . for the privilege of having temptations." (Journal of Discourses, vol. 3, p. 195.) Temptations are necessary for our advancement and our development. "When temptations come to you, be humble and prayerful, and determined that you will overcome, and you will receive a deliverance and continue faithful, having the promise of receiving blessings." (JD, vol. 16, p. 164.)

Choosing the right

All of these temptations—these appetites and passions—are for our good and enjoyment if we will but let wisdom's voice control. Temptations come to all, but long before we are faced with them, we and our children must have determined what our course will be. It is too late if we wait until the moment of temptation before making our decision. If we have been taught and determined always to choose the right and resist evil, we will have the strength to overcome.

We must remember that Satan is always on the job, determined to destroy the work of the Lord and to destroy mankind, and as soon as we deviate from the path of righteousness, we are in great danger of being destroyed. The scriptures and history give us many examples of men in high places who, when they turned from and despised the teachings of the Lord, or in any way deviated from the path of righteousness, suffered much sorrow, loss of position, loss of friends and even family.

Perilous times

Conditions in the world today cause us to reflect on the prophecy made by Paul to Timothy, wherein he said:

"This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come.

"For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy,

"Without natural affection, truce-breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good,

"Traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God;

"Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away." (2 Tim. 3:1-5.)

This causes us to ask: Where are we individually on each of these counts? Where are we as a nation and as the world? Are conditions in this great country and in the whole world comparable to the conditions that caused the downfall of Sodom and Gomorrah and Rome and other civilizations that have fallen because of moral decadence? How far have we moved, and how rapidly are we moving away from God and his teachings? Again, where are we and what will be our destiny if we as individuals and as a country and the world refuse to repent and turn to God, and quit hiding ourselves from him?

How fortunate we are to have the gospel of Jesus Christ as a guide, and the promise that if we will serve God we will be saved from destruction and, in fact, enjoy life to the full here and eternal life hereafter. Christ's whole mission was to make it possible for us to enjoy immortality and eternal life, and he gave us the plan by which we can accomplish this.

Influence of gospel living

If every family in the Church were to live the principles of the gospel, the influence for good in the world would be tremendous. And if every family in the world would accept and live the teachings of Jesus Christ, we would have none of the prevalent ills, and all would be living together in love and peace. Such a thought staggers the imagination!

However, in the Book of Mormon we read of such a condition:

"And it came to pass . . . the people were all converted unto the Lord, upon all the face of the land . . . and there were no contentions and disputations among them, and every man did deal justly one with another . . . because of the love of God which did dwell in the hearts of the people.

"And there were no envyings, nor strifes, nor tumults, nor whoredoms, nor lyings, nor murders, nor any manner of lasciviousness; and surely there could not be a happier people among all the people who had been created by the hand of God." (4 Ne. 2, 15-16.)

Atonement of Christ

As individuals, families, communities, leaders, and governments, we must turn to God acknowledge him as the Creator of the world and the universe, and as Father of us all, and seek his guidance and keep his commandments. No one can state too plainly or emphasize too strongly this eternal truth that only through the atonement of Christ can mankind be saved. Because of his atoning sacrifice all men will be raised in immortality and live forever as resurrected beings, but only those who believe and obey his laws will enjoy exaltation and eternal life.

Appeal to youth

I humbly pray that we may have the wisdom, knowledge, desire, courage, and strength to overcome and repent. I make a special appeal to our youth that they will always keep themselves clean and pure, and never be guilty of doing anything that will bring sorrow to them and their families and make them feel to hide from the Lord because they are ashamed.

I appeal to each member of the Church to ask himself: Where am I? Am I ashamed so that I want to hide, or am I where I should be, doing what I should be doing, and preparing to meet God? Let each of us determine to humble ourselves and repent, and prove ourselves worthy of the great promise that those who keep their second estate shall have glory added upon their heads forever and ever. May this be our happy lot I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

Following President Tanner's address the Choir sang "God So Loved the World" without announcement.

President Harold B. Lee

The Tabernacle Choir has just sung "God So Loved the World."

Many stations have just tuned in on this conference, and we wish to extend to them also a cordial welcome.

Bishop John H. Vandenberg, Presiding Bishop of the Church, will now address us.

Bishop John H. Vandenberg

Presiding Bishop

In the Book of Job we read where the Lord spoke to Job and said:

"Gird up now thy loins like a man; for I will demand of thee, and answer thou me.

"Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth? declare, if thou hast understanding.

"Who hath laid the measures thereof, if thou knowest? or who hath stretched the line upon it?

"Whereupon are the foundations thereof fastened? or who laid the corner stone thereof;

"When the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy?" (Job 38:3-7.)

Our preexistence with God

This bit of scripture, we believe, alludes to our preexistence with God when we, in his presence, rejoiced at his announcing to us, his children, the plan of the creation of the earth on which the human race would dwell. We believe that, as the plan was presented, we agreed to it and received the privilege of progressing in our eternal existence.

William Wordsworth must have given a great deal of thought to the mystery of life when he was inspired to write his "Ode on Intimations of Immortality," in which he says:

"Our birth is but a sleep and a forgetting;

The Soul that rises with us, our life's Star,

Hath had elsewhere its setting,

And cometh from afar:

Not in entire forgetfulness,

And not in utter nakedness,

But trailing clouds of glory do we come

From God, who is our home:
Heaven lies about us in our infancy!
Shades of the prison-house begin to close

Upon the growing Boy,
But he beholds the light, and whence it flows,

He sees it in his joy;

The Youth, who daily farther from the east

Must travel, still is Nature's Priest,
And by the vision splendid

Is on his way attended;

At length the Man perceives it die away,

And fade into the light of common day.

Earth fills her lap with pleasures of her own;

Yearnings she hath in her own natural kind,

And, even with something of a Mother's mind,

And no unworthy aim,

The homely Nurse doth all she can

To make her Foster-child, her Inmate Man,

Forget the glories he hath known,
And that imperial palace whence he came."

How to live

Henry Ward Beecher has said: "God asks no man whether he will accept life. That is not his choice. He must take it. The only choice is how." Parenthetically, I would say we did make the choice to come to earth. God does not force his children.

The choice we are now concerned with is how we are going to live our lives. We have the agency to make that choice as we react to the conditions in which we find ourselves during our life span. We must make choices, as we are surrounded by the elements and resources of the earth as well as by the people with whom we associate. From the words of the prophets to the words of the atheists, the question is: How will we emerge? Will we rise or fall? Will we fulfill our life's purpose, or will it be wasted?

Good and evil

In accepting life, we must relate to the world as it is—to the struggle between good and evil. There are, of course, some who would have us believe that there is no such thing as good or evil, but this philosophy runs counter to the natural laws of opposites that exist, such as heat and cold, light and dark, gravitation and vacuum, and many others. We need to use our eyes that we may see, our ears that we may hear, and our minds that we may be able to think and make our own decisions as we sift out the chaff of all we see and hear, so that we may know the truth of that which we feel in our hearts, as it is affirmed by the Holy Spirit.

Evidence of God's existence

Faith in God is a prerequisite to the influence of the Holy Spirit. To have a belief in God is the foundation of a full and happy life. Without this belief, life can be wasted. Evidence of God's existence spreads throughout the universe.

Abraham Lincoln said: "I can see how it might be possible for a man to look down upon the earth and be an atheist, but I cannot conceive how he could look up into the heavens and say there is no God." I believe I know what Lincoln meant when he made that statement.

Some years ago I accepted an invitation to a fathers and sons outing, where the participants spent an arduous but interesting day mounted on horses on a trip to Bloomington Lake in the mountains of Bear Lake County, Idaho. Late at night, after the campfires had all burned out and everyone had settled down under the open heavens, I lay on my back, gazing overhead. It was a moonless night, and I have never seen such a beautiful sight. The heavens were alive with the brightness of stars and planets. How small I felt in comparison to that vast universe! A sense of appreciation came over me as I thought of God's glory, of his handiwork, the earth, the heavens, all created for one purpose—his children, mankind. That experience has remained with me. I was overwhelmed by the magnitude of it.

It calls to mind an incident I read that tells of the naturalist, William Beebe, who made a visit to another naturalist whose name was Theodore Roosevelt. In describing the visit, William Beebe said that each evening, after a talk in Roosevelt's home at Sagamore Hill, the two men would go out on the lawn and gaze up at the sky to see who could first detect that faint spot of light-mist beyond the lower left-hand corner of the Great Square of Pegasus. Then one or the other would recite: "That is the Spiral Galaxy of Andromeda. It is as large as our Milky Way. It is one of a hundred million galaxies. It is 750,000 light-years away. It consists of one hundred billion suns, each larger than our sun." After an interval Beebe reported that Mr. Roosevelt would grin at him and say, "Now I think we are small enough. Let's go to bed."

Vision of Moses

Can you imagine how Moses felt when he said: "Now, for this cause I know that man is nothing, which thing I never had supposed" after he "was caught up into an exceedingly high mountain, And he saw God face to face, and he talked with him"? (Moses 1:10, 1-2.) We read in the first chapter of Moses that "Moses looked, and beheld the world upon which he was created; and Moses beheld the world and the ends thereof, and all the children of men which are, and which were created; of the same he greatly marveled and wondered." (Moses 1:8.)

And then Satan appeared and tempted Moses and commanded in a loud voice: "I am the Only Begotten, worship me.

"And . . . Moses began to fear exceedingly; and . . . he saw the bitterness of hell. Nevertheless, calling upon God, he received strength, and he commanded, saying: Depart from me, Satan, for this one God only will I worship, which is the God of glory.

"And now Satan began to tremble, and the earth shook; and Moses . . . called upon God, saying: In the name of the Only Begotten, depart hence, Satan.

"And . . . Satan cried with a loud voice . . . and he departed hence, even from the presence of Moses. . . .

"And . . . when Satan had departed . . . Moses lifted up his eyes unto heaven, being filled with the Holy Ghost, which beareth record of the Father and the Son;

"And calling upon the name of God, he beheld his glory again, for it was upon him. . . ."

And Moses beheld the earth and the inhabitants thereof. And he beheld many lands. And "Moses called upon God, saying: Tell me, I pray thee, why these things are so, and by what thou madest them?

"And behold, the glory of the Lord was upon Moses, so that Moses stood in the presence of God, and talked with him face to face. And the Lord God said unto Moses: For mine own purpose have I made these things. . . .

"And by the word of my power have I created them. . . .

"And worlds without number have I created; and I also created them for mine own purpose; and by the Son I created them, which is mine Only Begotten. . . .

"But only an account of this earth, and the inhabitants thereof, give I unto you. For behold, there are many worlds that have passed away by the word of my power. And there are many that now stand, and innumerable are they unto man; but all things are numbered unto me, for they are mine and I know them.

"And . . . Moses spake unto the Lord, saying: Be merciful unto thy servant, O God, and tell me concerning this earth, and the inhabitants thereof, and also the heavens, and then thy servant will be content.

"And the Lord God spake unto Moses, saying: The heavens; they are many, and they cannot be numbered unto man; but they are numbered unto me, for they are mine.

"And as one earth shall pass away, and the heavens thereof even so shall another come; and there is no end to my works, neither to my words.

"For behold, this is my work and my glory—to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man." (Moses 1:19-22, 24-25, 30-33, 35-39.)

Purpose of creations

Think of the impact of that statement. All the creations of God were made for this one purpose—to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of his children.

Moses became aware of the magnitude of the creation and its purpose firsthand, by talking face to face with God and beholding his works. There are few who have had that experience. But others have beheld God's majesty through his works. Abraham Lincoln stated his conviction when he said that he could not conceive how anyone could look up into the heavens and say there is no God. I had an unforgettable witness to God's handiwork as I lay on my back in the mountains of Bear Lake County, Idaho. No doubt many could concur in such an experience, for it has been said, "We must, despite ourselves, turn heavenward our eyes."

The plan of salvation

As the Lord talked to Moses, he told him of the creation of the earth and how he formed man and instructed him to teach his children to know good from evil and to teach them "that all men, everywhere, must repent, or they can in nowise inherit the kingdom of God, for no unclean thing can dwell there. . . .

" . . . I give unto you a commandment to teach these things freely unto your children, saying:

"That by reason of transgression cometh the fall, which fall bringeth death, and inasmuch as ye were born into the world by water, and blood, and the spirit, which I have made, and so became of dust a living soul, even so ye must be born again into the kingdom of heaven, of water, and of the Spirit, and be cleansed by blood, even the blood of mine Only Begotten; that ye might be sanctified from all sin, and enjoy the words of eternal life in this world, and eternal life in the world to come, even immortal glory;

"For by the water ye keep the commandment; by the Spirit ye are justified, and by the blood ye are sanctified;

"Therefore it is given to abide in you; the record of heaven; the Comforter; the peaceable things of immortal glory; the truth of all things; that which quickeneth all things, which maketh alive all things; that which knoweth all things, and hath all power according to wisdom, mercy, truth, justice, and judgment.

"And now, behold, I say unto you: This is the plan of salvation unto all men, through the blood of mine Only Begotten, who shall come in the meridian of time." (Moses 6:57-62.)

"The Child's Appeal"

And so the creation of the world, the plan of salvation—all this is for us. It behooves all parents to know of it, that they may respond to desires of the child that are so aptly stated by Mamie Gene Cole in her poem "The Child's Appeal":

"I am the Child.

All the world waits for my coming,
All the earth watches with interest to see what I shall become.

Civilization hangs in the balance,
For what I am, the world of tomorrow will be.

"I am the Child.

I have come into your world, about which I know nothing.

Why I came I know not;

How I came I know not;

I am curious; I am interested.

"I am the Child.

You hold in your hand my destiny.
You determine, largely, whether I shall succeed or fail.

Give me, I pray you, those things that make for happiness.

Train me, I beg you, that I may be a blessing to the world."

Things that bring happiness

What a responsibility for a mother and father, to answer this appeal from their child: "Give me, I pray you, those things that make for happiness." The first thing that comes to mind is that we cannot give that which we do not have. Do we, as parents, have those things that make for happiness, the basis of which is the understanding of God's plan as revealed to Moses, and try to live our lives in accordance to that plan?

Do you think of yourself as a happy person? A young man once made a list of all the things he thought would bring happiness in life. He included such things as wealth, fame, honor, success, and love. It was quite a long list, and he thought he had covered everything; but when he showed it proudly to an elderly friend, he was told, "You have left out the most important thing of all—peace of mind." The young man said he could not, at that time, understand how right his friend was.

Peace of mind, a clear conscience, was declared by President David O. McKay as the first condition of happiness. He said: "It is glorious when you can lie down at night with a clear conscience that you have done your best not to offend anyone and have injured no one. . . . These and countless other virtues and conditions are all wrapped up in the Gospel of Jesus Christ." (Man May Know for Himself [Deseret Book Co., 1967], p. 458.)

Some other conditions that make for happiness are the ability to follow that which you know to be true, to control your appetites and passions, to be able to make your own decisions, to feel no envy of another, to be able to commune with God in prayer, and to be free from bonds, and to be master of yourself.

A blessing to the world

The second appeal of the child to his parents—train me to be a blessing to the world—is companion to happiness, for it calls for action by the individual in an expression of service, of losing himself in helping his fellowman.

You've heard that statement that each of us is either a part of the problem or a part of the answer, with the understanding that this world is beset with problems. If you are a part of the answer, then you are a blessing to the world and can train your children to follow in your footsteps. Those who are a blessing to the world will try to do these things: (1) lend a helping hand, (2) refrain from infringing upon the rights of others, (3) obey God's laws and the laws of the land, (4) stand up for the right and fight against evil, and (5) share the truth with others, remembering, and remembering well, that the greatest gift of God is his plan of salvation.

May we guide our lives and those of our children in this direction, I pray humbly in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

He to whom we have just listened is Bishop John H. Vandenberg, Presiding Bishop of the Church.

The Choir and the congregation will now join in singing "I Stand All Amazed," following which we shall have a brief interlude with singing by the Choir.

The congregation sang the hymn, "I Stand All Amazed," following which the hymn, "Lead Kindly Light," was rendered by the Tabernacle Choir.

President Lee

For the benefit of the television and radio audience who have just joined us in this sixth session of the 141st Semi-Annual Conference of the Church, we are convened in the historic Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City.

We shall now hear from Elder Paul H. Dunn of the First Council of Seventy. He will be followed by Elder Alvin R. Dyer, Assistant to the Twelve.

Elder Paul H. Dunn

Of the First Council of the Seventy

We have been taught well in this great conference, my brothers and sisters, and I have been thinking a great deal about teaching and great teachers. Last evening, Elder Marion D. Hanks brought to our attention the situation concerning his departed cousin, a Brother [Ivan] Frame, who had a deep impact on humanity. He mentioned that one of the great tributes paid at his funeral was that every boy should have a Brother Frame in his life.

Charles B. Stewart

I have thought about that, and I thank God repeatedly for such an individual in my life. He was a 78-year-old man who was assigned to be a priests adviser to six of us who were in our struggling teens and challenged with the future. His name was Charles B. Stewart. His son is here today as president of the great Tabernacle Choir.

I don't know what you thought about a 78-year-old man when you were 16, but some of us questioned the wisdom of our bishop, for we thought he had literally brought Moses back.

I remember the first day I reported to my class in that rickety old upper room of the Hollywood Ward. There was that kind, gentle man to greet me. He took me by the hand as he had the other boys and said, "You're Harold Dunn's son, aren't you?"

I said, "Yes, sir."

New thoughts

He talked a little bit about me, my family, and showed a great personal interest. And then he said, "Paul, one of the requirements for being a member of this class is to think a new thought every day." He said, "Do you have one this morning?"

Well now, I hadn't had a new thought in years, and he could see my plight, and he said, "All right, I will teach you one. Listen carefully.

'Attention is the mother of memory.' Now can you repeat it back?" And I tried and finally gave it back to him. He permitted me to enter.

We had a wonderful class. It ended; as I went to leave he said, "I forgot to tell you—before you go home you've got to give me another new idea." I thought, I won't go home. I didn't have one, and so he said, "Now listen very carefully and I will teach you one that you'll always remember." He said, "'Oh, what a tangled web we weave, When first we practise to deceive.'" I've never forgotten it.

Another week passed, and we went through a similar experience. I still didn't have a new thought. He said, "Listen very carefully. 'There's an odd little voice ever speaking within that prompts us to duty and warns us from sin. And what is most strange, it makes itself heard, though it gives not a sound and says never a word.'" And I've never forgotten that one.

I started to go home and found he wouldn't let me go until I cited another. When I couldn't he said, "Listen carefully. 'There was a wise old owl who sat in an oak, and the longer he sat the less he spoke. The less he spoke, the more he heard. Oh, Paul, why can't you be like that wise old bird?'"

I've thought a lot about that since. Still another week and another great thought. He said, "'Remember, young man, example sheds a genial ray which men are apt to borrow. So first improve yourself today and then your friends tomorrow.'" And I haven't forgotten that concept either.

Teachers who care

Time won't permit a number of others. Two years later I found myself in the fighting forces of our country. I was on the island of Okinawa. I received a letter from Mrs. Stewart, and it told me of the sad news that my kind friend and adviser had passed away. In it she had attached a half-written letter from Brother Stewart to me, and he said: "Dear Paul, I've been thinking about you in that far-off country, discouraged, I'm sure, and somewhat depressed; and in order to build your spirits, I have included some additional gem thoughts." There were twenty-five new ideas, and I have never forgotten them.

Thank God for people who care, for the Frames and Stewarts. I have since counted on my hand five such teachers who have influenced me for good. I would agree with Elder Hanks; there ought to be a Brother Stewart and a Brother Frame in every boy's life.

What a teacher is

What is a teacher? The teacher is a prophet. He lays the foundation of tomorrow.

The teacher is an artist. He works with the precious clay of unfolding personality.

The teacher is a friend. His heart responds to the faith and devotion of his students.

The teacher is a citizen. He is selected and licensed for the improvement of society.

The teacher is an interpreter. Out of his mature and wider life, he seeks to guide the young.

The teacher is a builder. He works with the higher and finer values of civilization.

The teacher is a culture-bearer. He leads the way toward worthier tastes, saner attitudes, more gracious manners, higher intelligence.

The teacher is a planner. He sees the young lives before him as a part of a great system that shall grow stronger in the light of truth.

The teacher is a pioneer. He is always interpreting and attempting the impossible, and usually winning out.

The teacher is a reformer. He seeks to improve the handicaps that weaken and destroy life.

Teaching how to live

The teacher is a believer. He has an abiding faith in God and in the improbability of the race. It was James Truslow Adams who said, "There are obviously two educations. One should teach us how to make a living, and the other how to live."

We are engaged in teaching people how to live.

Elbert Hubbard said, "You can't teach anybody anything. You can only help him find himself."

That was the genius of the Savior. He taught us divine principles we could apply to ourselves and thus solve our personal problems. The Savior had no peer as a teacher.

Parables of the lost

For just a moment, let me walk you through the fifteenth chapter of Luke, wherein this great master teacher tells us how to solve problems that we all face. Luke records that there drew near him a great multitude, the publicans, the sinners, the Pharisees, the Sadducees, and he spake unto them this parable, saying: "What man of you, having an hundred sheep, if he lose one of them, doth not leave the ninety and nine . . . and go after that which is lost."

Then he tells about the rejoicing moment when the sheep is found. And then, without even a pause, he goes into a second parable like unto it, which says: "Either what woman having ten pieces of silver, if she lose one piece, doth not light a candle, and sweep the house, and seek diligently till she find it." And she too rejoices with her neighbors. (Luke 15:4, 8.)

And then he goes into that parable of parables, the Prodigal Son: "A certain man had two sons: And the younger of them said to his father, 'Father, give me the portion of goods that falleth to me.'" And we recognize how with his agency he squandered it all. (See Luke 15:11-32.)

I used to wonder, as a teacher so-called, why the Savior would spend time citing three parables about things that get lost. And then one day it dawned. People do get lost in various ways, and here in this great chapter of Luke we find the Savior counseling how to recover them.

Application for today

Permit me this observation: The Savior might say to us today, if he were to teach this parable again, that sheep (or people who get lost) are not basically sinners by nature or even choice, but people, like sheep, get confused in what's important. In other words, they have misplaced values. And I am sure the Savior would say to the teacher in the classroom, to the adviser, "If you want to retrieve this kind of person, put a higher value in place of the one he now elects." Family, service, brotherhood are all greener pastures for today's sheep. Feeding here brings them home.

Next, he talks about lost coins. This whole conference has talked about precious coins that become lost—young people, if you please. And there are those of us who are the responsible agents who, like the woman of this great teaching parable, let these priceless gems slip through our fingers. Certainly we wouldn't recover this kind of lost article the way we would a sheep. He would say love, care, and attention would be the process used to recover lost coins (or people).

And then the great parable of the Prodigal Son, with the Savior saying that there are those who get lost by choice; and in the concluding of that parable, he says: "And when he came to himself he [the Prodigal Son] said, How many hired servants of my father's have bread enough and to spare. . . ." (Luke 15:17.)

There are those who get lost because their free agency takes them down that path. We can't do a lot at some points to recover this kind of a person except open our arms and our church doors and let them know they are wanted. Teachers and advisers are really needed here. But note: he came to himself. He repented, sought forgiveness, and came home. Many people are like the Prodigal Son.

A positive gospel

Let me just say as a concluding thought that this is a positive gospel. We ought to be the happiest people in the world. The gospel of Jesus Christ is a great building force. It teaches people to be happy and to always wear a smile. But sometimes we neglect the simple things that mean the most. Most people in the rush of modern life never know real friendship and the warmth that the gospel and even a smile can bring.

An acquaintance of mine recently said to me as we walked down the street and noticed a man with a sour face, "He looks like he was weaned on lemon juice and a dill pickle."

I also heard about a mother and her young daughter who were listening to a public speaker when the child said to her mother, "Isn't that man happy?" The mother replied, "I guess so." To which the girl remarked: "Why doesn't he tell his face?"

To be lived and shared

I think our Heavenly Father would be most disappointed if he saw the expressions of some of us who have all that the world contains and fail to incorporate it into our lives and share it with others. The meaning and purpose of the gospel of Jesus Christ to me is that it brings joy and happiness, peace and contentment.

We all have problems. The world is sick with problems. And yet in these sacred words, in the standard works, are the solutions to the problems we face. Let us encourage the world to know the word of God.

There are forty-three other parables in the New Testament that teach us how to help people. Search the scriptures, for in them ye shall find the way to eternal life.

My testimony is that the gospel is true and that it works.

I gave a beggar from my store of wealth

Some gold. He spent the shining ore,
And came again, and yet again,
Still cold and hungry, as before.

I gave a thought, and through that thought of mine

He found himself, the man, supreme, divine—

Fed, clothed, and crowned with blessings manifold

And now he begs no more.

(Adapted from "The True Gift," Author Unknown)

Such is the gospel of Jesus Christ, to which I bear solemn testimony in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

We have just listened to Elder Paul H. Dunn of the First Council of Seventy. Elder Alvin R. Dyer, Assistant to the Twelve, will now address us.

Elder Alvin R. Dyer

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

I feel honored this morning, my brothers and sisters, to be in the presence of the First Presidency of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and my fellow associates in the cause of Jesus the Master. This vast congregation is also most humbling. I have sought the inspiration of the Spirit in the few thoughts I have prepared.

Formulas for living

Men seek for a phrase or a slogan to motivate and give impetus to action under certain conditions. History refers to such statements as, "Give me liberty, or give me death!" or "I have not yet begun to fight," and "Surrender? Never! We will die first." Modern slogans have also had their effect, such as "V" for victory, and the peace and freedom symbols of crowds of demonstrators.

Formulas for living—how to attain a peaceful world civilization—are common today, as exponents of opposing ideologies hurl their challenges. Men are constantly seeking for an answer to an easier and better way of life.

Teachings of Joseph Smith

Be that as it may, concerning slogans as an answer to the problem,

I am not prepared to say; but for a realistic and productive life, the Prophet Joseph Smith gives the following statements, which might well be a panacea for our troubles:

Idleness

"Cease to be idle; cease to be unclean; cease to find fault one with another; cease to sleep longer than is needful; retire to thy bed early, that ye may not be weary; arise early, that your bodies and your minds may be invigorated." (D&C 88:124.)

This is a very controversial subject, with many different ideas. I once heard of a man by the name of Wilson who slept so much that his friends nicknamed him "Rip Van Wilson." He said, "I don't sleep long. I just sleep slow."

A great thinker of our modern day supports the statement of the Lord concerning idleness, for said he:

"When a man shuns effort, he is in no position to resist temptation. So, through all the ages, idleness has been known as the parent of all the vices. . . . The dryrot of ennui, the vague self-disgust of those who cannot 'deal with time,' is the natural result of idleness. . . . The indolent ennui of the hopelessly rich and the indolent misery of the helplessly poor have this much in common. . . .

'Life drives him hard' who has nothing in the world to do." (David Starr Jordan, The Strength of Being Clean [New York and Boston: H.M. Caldwell Co., 1900], pp. 18-19.)

Chastity

Concerning chastity and cleanliness, as associated with righteous dominion, the Lord gave this direction:

"... let virtue garnish thy thoughts unceasingly; then shall thy confidence wax strong in the presence of God; and the doctrine of the priesthood shall distil upon thy soul as the dews from heaven.

"The Holy Ghost shall be thy constant companion, and thy scepter an unchanging scepter of righteousness and truth; and thy dominion shall be an everlasting dominion, and without compulsory means it shall flow unto thee forever and ever." (D&C 121:45-46.)

Attitude toward others

Concerning our fellowman and our attitude toward him, the Prophet Joseph Smith gave this purposeful thought:

"And let every man esteem his brother as himself, and practise virtue and holiness before me.

"And again I say unto you, let every man esteem his brother as himself." (D&C 38:24-25.)

For a man to seek ascendancy over another man by the suppressing of his rights is not virtuous and would not tie in with the words of the Master, who said:

"Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets." (Matt. 7:12.)

Sleep and rest

As to sleep and rest, the Prophet Joseph Smith, in saying "Cease to sleep longer than is needful," does not mean, as Dr. John A. Widtsoe states it, that "one should sleep a certain minimum number of hours. . . . Nine hours is a minimum for some adults, while others seem to keep healthy on seven or less." (The Word of Wisdom [Deseret Book Co., 1938], p. 231.)

Authorities on child nutrition insist that many undernourished children are lacking not good food but enough sleep. Perhaps the late TV shows are taking a toll in this regard.

What I believe that the Prophet is saying about more sleep than is needful concerns the individual who goes far beyond the need, developing slothful and lazy habits, which deaden the senses and become a retarder of accomplishment. To overcome these things in life requires discipline and restraint.

Good and evil

Soon after Adam and Eve, our first earthly parents, were driven from the Garden of Eden because of their yielding to temptation, they came to know the difference between right and wrong and good and evil, for thus the Lord declared: "... Behold, the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil. . . ." (Gen. 3:22.)

Without a knowledge of good and evil, the divine principle of agency would be ineffectual. The application of this law, while serving to elevate man, can also condemn him. For that in which we participate, whether it is good or evil, either defiles or exalts us. Concerning this, the Master has said: "There is nothing from without a man, that entering into him can defile him: but the things which come out of him, those are they that defile the man." (Mark 7:15.)

There is weakness in the thought that one can indulge heavily in both evil and good things at the same time. Many centuries ago Jesus said that "man cannot serve two masters," he will either love one and despise the other or hate the one and love the other. The apostle James emphasized the importance of constantly choosing right over wrong. To those who attempt an allegiance to both right and wrong, he declared: "A double minded man is unstable in all his ways." (James 1:8.)

The sum result

Man is the sum result of what he thinks and does. Habit is the instrument that molds his character and makes of him essentially what he is. Habit can become a monster to tarnish and destroy, yet proper behavioral traits can bring lasting joy and achievement. To say no at the right time and then stand by it is the first element of success.

The effect that both good and bad habits have on our lives is all too real to be ignored. Bad habits that violate the commandments of physical health (D&C 89) and of moral behavior (D&C 121), given by revelation to the Prophet Joseph Smith many years ago, will threaten and destroy all opportunities for real happiness.

The practice of restraint

The experience of countless families, the demonstration of crowded hospitals, treating pitiful cases caused by drug addiction in its many forms, such as alcohol, tobacco, the use of capsules, and injections of a high and stimulating nature, are straining the stability of our present civilization.

Sicknesses such as these, which sometimes induce improper and wrongful habits, should, of course, be treated with modern techniques. It is nevertheless true, however, that all too often that which we are unwilling to cope with, and which otherwise could be controlled by personal restraint, is regarded in our modern way of thinking as a form of sickness, and therefore the indulger is led to believe that he is free of moral obligation. Where such is the case, where one is led to believe that he can excuse injurious acts of indulgence upon the basis that what he does is the result of a sickness and that he is really not to blame, the psychological effect is most devastating and in reality is a compounding of the wrongful indulgence.

The practice of restraint is a necessary attribute of every gentle and good man. Women without it become coarse and unrefined. To curb the appetites and passions, to screen wisely the thoughts that are permitted to enter our minds, to avoid the habit that does not produce the spiritual and abundant life, are experiences of life to be concerned with if the crown of achievement and the nobility of good character are to be possessed.

The crowning achievement

Choosing good over evil and right over wrong is the crowning achievement of life, and in so doing man becomes the masterpiece of the Creator and fulfills the basic purposes of his mortal probation. An ancient prophet speaks of it in this way: "... he that ruleth his spirit

[is greater] than he that taketh a city." (Prov. 16:32.)

Among the last words spoken unto the beloved apostle John, while in vision on the Isle of Patmos, are these: "He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son." (Rev. 21:7.)

The fusing of ritual and commandment with everyday living calls for the best that is in us, that by our agency we may feel the affected condition by choosing good rather than evil, thus not only glorifying ourselves but glorifying Him who has made all things possible.

Obedience to God's will

Concerning the need of fusing obedience to the will of God, the Prophet Joseph Smith once gave this important counsel:

"We take the sacred writings into our hands, and admit that they were given by direct inspiration for the good of man. We believe that God condescended to speak from the heavens and declare His will concerning the human family, to give them just and holy laws, to regulate their conduct, and guide them in a direct way, that in due time He might take them to Himself, and make them joint heirs with His Son. But when this fact is admitted, that the immediate will of heaven is contained in the Scriptures, are we not bound as rational creatures to live in accordance to all its precepts? Will the mere admission, that this is the will of heaven ever benefit us if we do not comply with all its teachings? Do we not offer violence to the Supreme Intelligence of heaven, when we admit the truth of its teachings, and do not obey them? Do we not descend below our own knowledge, . . . by such a course of conduct?" (Docu- mentary History of the Church, vol. 2, p. 11.)

The gospel is true

I bear my testimony to you, my brothers and sisters, that I know that the gospel is true. When I entered the top floor of the temple in the late afternoon Thursday, with General Authorities and the Regional Representatives of the Twelve and our wives, it seemed as though a thousand voices unseen were saying, "The gospel is true; the gospel is true."

I have had the assurance of this since the day, as a young missionary in Pennsylvania, when I placed a Book of Mormon in the hands of an investigator who went directly to a clump of bushes in a park to ask God if this book were true. He returned convinced and asked for baptism. And again when a farmer in Pennsylvania met us at the farm gate to say, "I have been expecting you. I have seen you in my dreams." After a day and night of giving them a message of the restoration, I witnessed this family of five request baptism, which was accomplished by damming the creek in back of their barn.

I know that God lives, that Jesus is the Christ, that Joseph Smith and his successors, including President Joseph Fielding Smith, are prophets of God.

Of this I testify in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. ■

Following Elder Dyer's address, without announcement the Tabernacle Choir sang the number, "Now We Sing Thy Praise."

President Harold B. Lee

The Tabernacle Choir has just sung, "Now We Sing Thy Praise."

Elder Spencer W. Kimball, Acting President of the Twelve Apostles, will be our concluding speaker.

President Spencer W. Kimball

Acting President of the Council of the Twelve

My beloved brothers and sisters and friends: Much is being said of deep crime which darkens heaven's windows. We shudder at immoralities deep crime which darkens heaven's windows. We shudder at immoralities which terrify us. We nearly panic at the divorce frequency and broken homes and delinquent children about us. But perhaps sometimes we should stop to reflect that all are not criminals, all are not bad, and all are not rebellious.

Painting of portrait

More than once I have repeated an experience I had in getting my portrait painted.

In the temple on the fourth floor is the room of the Council of the Twelve Apostles with large chairs in a semicircle. Here important meetings of that body are held. Around its walls are portraits of the Brethren. When I came to this service, I looked upon them with admiration and affection, for these were truly great men with whom I was associated.

Sometime later authorization was given by the First Presidency of the Church for my portrait to be added to the others.

Lee Greene Richards was selected as the artist, and we began immediately. I sat on a chair on an elevated platform in his studio and tried very hard to look handsome, like some of the other brethren.

With paints, brushes, and palette ready, the artist scrutinized my features and daubed on the canvas alternately. I returned many times to the studio. After weeks the portrait was exhibited to the First Presidency and later to my wife and daughter.

It did not pass, and I was to submit to a redoing.

A glimpse of heaven

The angle was changed, the hours—many of them—were spent, and finally the portrait was near completion. This particular day was a busy one like most others. I suppose I was daydreaming, and quite detached from this world. Apparently he had difficulty translating my faraway gaze onto the canvas. I saw the artist lay down his palette and paints, fold his arms, and look straight at me, and I was shocked out of my dreaming by the abrupt question: "Brother Kimball, have you ever been to heaven?"

My answer seemed to be a shock of equal magnitude to him as I said without hesitation: "Why, yes, Brother Richards, certainly. I had a glimpse of heaven just before coming to your studio." I saw him assume a relaxed position and look intently at me, with wonder in his eyes. I continued:

"Yes. Just an hour ago. It was in the holy temple across the way. The sealing room was shut off from the noisy world by its thick, white-painted walls; the drapes, light and warm; the furniture, neat and dignified; the mirrors on two opposite walls seeming to take one in continuous likenesses on and on into infinity; and the beautiful stained-glass window in front of me giving such a peaceful glow. All the people in the room were dressed in white. Here were peace and harmony and eager anticipation. A well-groomed young man and an exquisitely gowned young woman, lovely beyond description, knelt across the altar. Authoritatively, I pronounced the heavenly ceremony which married and sealed them for eternity on earth and in the celestial worlds. The pure in heart were there. Heaven was there.

The greatest success

"When the eternal marriage was solemnized, and as the subdued congratulations were extended, a happy father, radiant in his joy, offered his hand and said, 'Brother Kimball, my wife and I are common people and have never been successful, but we are immensely proud of our family.' He continued, 'This is the last of our eight children to come into this holy house for temple marriage. They, with their companions, are here to participate in the marriage of this, the youngest. This is our supremely happy day, with all of our eight children married properly. They are faithful to the Lord in church service, and the older ones are already rearing families in righteousness.'

"I looked at his calloused hands, his rough exterior, and thought to myself, 'Here is a real son of God fulfilling his destiny.'

"'Success?' I said, as I grasped his hand. 'That is the greatest success story I have heard. You might have accumulated millions in stocks and bonds, bank accounts, lands, industries, and still be quite a failure. You are fulfilling the purpose for which you were sent into this world by keeping your own lives righteous, bearing and rearing this great posterity, and training them in faith and works. Why, my dear folks, you are eminently successful. God bless you.'"

My story was finished. I looked up at the portrait artist. He stood motionless in deep thought, so I continued: "Yes, my brother, I have had many glimpses of heaven.

Home of stake president

"Once we were in a distant stake for conference. We came to the unpretentious home of the stake president at mid-day Saturday. We knocked at the door, and it was opened by a sweet mother with a child in her arms. She was the type of mother who did not know there were maids and servants. She was not an artist's model, nor a society woman. Her hair was dressed neatly; her clothes were modest, tastefully selected; her face was smiling; and though young, she showed the rare combination of maturity of experience and the joys of purposeful living.

"The house was small. The all-purpose room into which we were welcomed was crowded and in its center were a long table and many chairs. We freshened up in the small bedroom assigned to us, made available by 'farming out' to the neighbors some of the children, and we returned to this living room. She had been very busy in the kitchen. Her husband, the stake president, soon returned from his day's labors and made us welcome and proudly introduced us to all of the children as they returned from their chores and play.

Supper made ready

"Almost like magic the supper was ready, for 'many hands make light work,' and these numerous hands were deft and experienced ones. Every child gave evidence of having been taught responsibility. Each had certain duties. One child had quickly spread a tablecloth; another placed the knives and forks and spoons; and another covered them with the large plates turned upside down. (The dishes were inexpensive.) Next came large pitchers of creamy milk, high piles of sliced homemade bread, a bowl at each place, a dish of fruit from storage, and a plate of cheese.

"One child placed the chairs with backs to the table, and without confusion, we all knelt at the chairs facing the table. One young son was called on to lead in family prayer. It was extemporaneous, and he pleaded with the Lord to bless the family and their schoolwork, and the missionaries, and the bishop. He prayed for us who had come to hold conference that we would 'preach good,' for his father in his church responsibilities, for all the children that 'they would be good, and kind to each other,' and for the little cold shivering lambs being born in the lambing sheds on the hill this wintry night.

"A very little one said the blessing on the food, and thirteen plates were turned up and thirteen bowls filled, and supper proceeded. No apologies were offered for the meal, the home, the children, or the general situation. The conversation was constructive and pleasant. The children were well-behaved. These parents met every situation with calm dignity and poise.

Love and harmony visible

"In these days of limited families, or childless ones, when homes often have only one or two selfish and often pampered children, homes of luxury with servants, broken homes where life moves outside the home, it was most refreshing to sit with a large family where interdependence and love and harmony were visible and where children were growing up in unselfishness. So content and comfortable were we in the heart of this sweet simplicity and wholesomeness that we gave no thought to the unmatched chairs, the worn rug, the inexpensive curtains, the numbers of souls that were to occupy the few rooms available."

I paused. "Yes, Brother Richards, I glimpsed heaven that day and many days, in many places." He seemed uninterested in his painting. He stood listening, seemingly eager for more, and almost involuntarily I was telling him of another flight into heavenly situations.

Heaven in Navajo hogan

"This time it was on the Indian reservation. While most Navajo women seem to be prolific, this sweet Lamanite wife in their several years of marriage had not been blessed with children of her own. Her husband was well employed. These new converts to the Church were buying their weekend groceries. As we glanced at the purchases in the large, well-filled basket, it was evident that only wholesome food was there—no beer, no coffee, no cigarettes. 'You like Postum, do you?' we asked them, and their reply touched our hearts: 'Yes, we have had coffee and beer all our lives, but since the Mormon missionaries told us about the Word of Wisdom we use Postum, and we know it is better for the children and they like it.'

"'Children?' we asked. 'We thought you were a childless couple.' This brought from them the explanation that they had filled their home with eighteen Navajo orphans of all ages. Their hogan was large but their hearts even larger. Unselfishness—the milk of human kindness! Love unfeigned! These good Indians could shame many of their contemporaries who live lives of selfishness and smugness."

I said to the artist: "Heaven can be in a hogan or a tent, Brother Richards, for heaven is of our own making." I was ready to return to the picture but apparently he was not so inclined. He stood and listened intently.

Temple at Laie

"This time I was in Hawaii in the beautiful little temple at Laie. It was a missionary group. The spirit was there; the proselyters could hardly wait their turns to bear testimony of the Lord's gospel. Finally, the little Japanese missionary gained the floor. By the pulpit in her stocking feet she knelt reverently, and with a heart near bursting with gratitude for the gospel and its opportunities, she poured out her soul to heaven.

"Heaven was there, my brother, in that little room, in that sacred spot, in that paradise of the Pacific with those sweet, consecrated young soldiers for Christ."

I continued: "Heaven was in my own home, too, Dr. Richards, when home evening was held. Through the years the room was filled with our children, when each, eager for a turn, sang a song, led a game, recited an Article of Faith, told a story, and listened to faith-promoting incidents and gospel teaching from parents who loved them.

Heaven in Europe

"Again, I found heaven in Europe:

"Elder Vogel was a local convert German boy of great faith. His parents refused to assist him in the mission which he so desired to fill. A kind American member helped with a monthly check to assist with the mission expenses. He enjoyed his work and all went well for a year and a half. One day a letter came from the wife of his sponsor, advising that her husband had been killed in an auto accident and it would be impossible to send any more money.

"Elder Vogel kept his disappointment hidden and prayed earnestly for a solution. As he and his American companion, Elder Smith, passed a hospital one day, a solution to his financial problem was born in his mind. The next day he made an excuse and was gone for a time. When he came back he said little but went to bed early. When asked the reason, he said he was a little extra weary. A few days later Elder Smith noted a small bandage on the arm of the German brother, but his question was passed off lightly.

"Time passed and Elder Smith became suspicious of the periodical bandages until one day, unable to keep his secret longer, Elder Vogel told him: 'You see, my friend in America is dead and can no longer give support to my mission. My parents are still unwilling to help me, so I visit the blood bank at the hospital so I can finish my mission.' Selling his precious blood to save souls! Well, isn't that what the Master did when he gave his every drop in the supreme sacrifice?

Heaven a condition

"Do you believe in heaven, Brother Artist?" I asked. "Yes, that is it. Heaven is a place, but also a condition; it is home and family. It is understanding and kindness. It is interdependence and selfless activity. It is quiet, sane living; personal sacrifice, genuine hospitality, wholesome concern for others. It is living the commandments of God without ostentation or hypocrisy. It is selflessness. It is all about us. We need only to be able to recognize it as we find it and enjoy it. Yes, my dear brother, I've had many glimpses of heaven."

Portrait completed

I straightened up in my chair and posed again. The artist picked up his palette and brushes and paints, did some touching up of the portrait, and sighed contentedly as he said, "It is completed."

In due time it was placed with those of others of the Brethren in the Council of the Twelve room on the fourth floor of the Salt Lake Temple, where it hangs to this day.

The gospel of Jesus Christ teaches men to live righteously, to make the family supreme, the home inviolate. It moves the characters of its adherents toward faultlessness. It is the true way. If lived rightly it will ennoble men toward Godhood.

May the true gospel of the Master reach into the lives of all of us, I pray. In the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

We have just listened to President Spencer W. Kimball of the Twelve Apostles.

We express our thanks and appreciation to the General Authorities who have spoken to us and have borne such remarkable testimonies, and to the Tabernacle Choir for their usual inspirational music.

We are grateful to the owners and managers of the many television and radio stations who have offered their facilities as a public service to make proceedings of the conference available to millions throughout North America, South America, the Far East, and many other areas of the world.

This session has been carried by direct wire from the Tabernacle over direct oceanic cables to a large number of members and friends assembled in chapels throughout Great Britain, Germany, France, Holland and Austria.

We shall conclude this sixth session of the conference with the Tabernacle Choir singing "148th Psalm—Lord Who Hast Made Us for Thine Own," after which the benediction will be pronounced by Elder Arturo R. Martinez, former president of the Mexico North Central Mission, and this conference will then be adjourned until 2:00 this afternoon.

The Tabernacle Choir sang "148th Psalm—Lord Who Hast Made Us for Thine Own."

The benediction was offered by Elder Arturo R. Martinez, former president of the Mexico North Central Mission.

The conference was adjourned until 2 o'clock p.m.

THIRD DAY AFTERNOON MEETING

SEVENTH SESSION

The seventh and concluding session of the General Conference began at 2 o'clock p. m. on Sunday, October 3, 1971.

President Joseph Fielding Smith presided, and President N. Eldon Tanner, second counselor in the First Presidency, conducted the meeting.

The choral numbers were provided by the Tabernacle Choir, with Jay E. Welch conducting and Robert Cundick at the organ.

President Tanner made the following remarks at the beginning of the session:

President N. Eldon Tanner

Members of the Church are convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City, Utah, in the seventh and concluding session of the 141st Semi-Annual Conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

President Smith who has been presiding and is presiding at this session has asked me to conduct.

This afternoon many television and radio stations throughout the western part of the United States will carry the proceedings of this session of the conference.

Sessions of this conference will be received by millions in the United States and Canada over the hundreds of stations cooperating to provide the extensive coverage of this conference.

The full proceedings of both sessions today will be rebroadcast to far-distant places by Radio Stations KSL, KMBZ at Kansas City, and WRFM at New York City, beginning at midnight tonight.

Saturday evening an inspirational meeting of the priesthood of the Church was held in the Tabernacle. The proceedings of this meeting were relayed by closed-circuit broadcast, originating in the Tabernacle, to members of the priesthood assembled in approximately 675 separate locations in all parts of the United States and Canada. Approximately 175,000 holders of the priesthood participated in this meeting.

We extend a cordial welcome to all present this afternoon—special guests, educational leaders, our regional representatives and stake presidencies from near and far, temple presidencies, bishoprics, members of the general auxiliary boards, and thousands of members of the Church, and many friends everywhere who are listening in by radio and television.

The Tabernacle Choir, with Jay E. Welch conducting and Robert Cundick at the organ, will begin this service by singing, "Hear My Cry, O God."

The invocation will be offered by Elder R. Wayne Shute, former president of the Samoa Mission.

The Tabernacle Choir sang the number, "Hear My Cry, O God."

The opening prayer was offered by Elder R. Wayne Shute, former president of the Samoa Mission.

President Tanner

The invocation was offered by Elder R. Wayne Shute, former president of the Samoa Mission.

The Tabernacle Choir, under the direction of Jay E. Welch, will now sing, "Arise, Shine for Thy Light Is Come."

Elder Gordon B. Hinckley of the Council of the Twelve will then speak to us.

The song, "Arise, Shine for Thy Light Is Come," was rendered by the Tabernacle Choir.

President Tanner

The soloist in that lovely number was Albert Fallows.

Elder Gordon B. Hinckley of the Council of the Twelve will now speak to us. He will be followed by Elder Joseph Anderson, Assistant to the Twelve.

Elder Gordon B. Hinckley

Of the Council of the Twelve

My dear brethren and sisters: I am grateful for the prayer of President [Wayne] Shute. I earnestly hope that the petition therein expressed will be answered in our behalf.

Duty and obedience

Recently I stood in Trafalgar Square in London and looked up at the statue of Lord Nelson. At the base of the column are his words uttered on the morning of the Battle of Trafalgar: "England expects that every man will do his duty." Lord Nelson was killed on that historic day in 1805, as were many others; but England was saved as a nation, and Britain became an empire.

The image of duty and obedience has been seriously tarnished since that time. This is not exactly new; it is as old as human history. Isaiah declared to ancient Israel: "If ye be willing and obedient, ye shall eat the good of the land:

"But if ye refuse and rebel, ye shall be devoured with the sword: for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it." (Isa. 1:19-20.)

Experience of President Grant

I recall sitting in this Tabernacle when I was fourteen or fifteen—up in the balcony right behind the clock—and hearing President Heber J. Grant tell of his experience in reading the Book of Mormon when he was a boy. He spoke of Nephi and of the great influence he had upon his life. And then, with a voice ringing with a conviction that I shall never forget, he quoted those great words of Nephi: "I will go and do the things which the Lord hath commanded, for I know that the Lord giveth no commandments unto the children of men, save he shall prepare a way for them that they may accomplish the thing which he commandeth them." (1 Ne. 3:7.)

There came into my young heart on that occasion a resolution to try to do what the Lord has commanded. I would that I might have the power, through the Spirit of the Lord, similarly to touch someone in this congregation today.

God makes a way

What marvelous things happen when men walk with faith in obedience to that which is required of them! I recently read the interesting story of Commander William Robert Anderson, the naval officer who took the submarine Nautilus beneath the polar ice from the Pacific Ocean to the Atlantic Ocean, a daring and dangerous feat. It recounted a number of other exploits of similar danger. It concluded with a statement that he carried in his wallet a tattered card that had on it these words, which I commend to you:

"I believe I am always divinely guided.

I believe I will always take the right road.

I believe God will always make a way where there is no way."

I too believe that God will always make a way where there is no way. I believe that if we will walk in obedience to the commandments of God, if we will follow the counsel of the priesthood, he will open a way even where there appears to be no way.

Obedience of prophets

Facing Trafalgar Square in London is the National Art Gallery of Britain, in which hangs Sir Joshua Reynolds' painting of the boy Samuel, who as a child heard a voice and replied, "Speak; for thy servant heareth." (1 Sam. 3:10.)

From that day Samuel walked in obedience to the commandments of God and became the great prophet of Israel. He it was who selected and ordained both King Saul and King David. And it was to Saul that he declared in a rebuke that has rung down through the ages, ". . .

to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams." (1 Sam. 15:22.)

I draw strength from a simple statement made concerning the Prophet Elijah, who warned King Ahab of drought and famine to come upon the land. But Ahab scoffed. And the Lord told Elijah to go and hide himself by the brook Cherith, that there he should drink of the brook, and that he would be fed by the ravens. And the scripture records a simple and wonderful statement: "So he went and did according unto the word of the Lord." (1 Kings 17:5.)

There was no arguing. There was no excusing. There was no equivocating. Elijah simply "went and did according unto the word of the Lord." And he was saved from the terrible calamities that befell those who scoffed and argued and questioned.

Feeling of inadequacy

It is not always easy to be obedient to the voice of the Lord. We may feel inadequate. I frequently draw comfort from the conversation Moses had with Jehovah, who called him to lead Israel out of Egypt. Moses was a fugitive and a herder of sheep. How totally inadequate he must have felt!

"And Moses said unto the Lord, O my Lord, I am not eloquent . . . but I am slow of speech, and of a slow tongue." (And then I can almost hear him say, "Please don't ask me.")

"And the Lord said unto him, Who hath made man's mouth? . . .

"Now therefore go, and I will be with thy mouth, and teach thee what thou shalt say." (Exod. 4:10-12.)

Call of Heber C. Kimball

In 1837, when the Church was struggling in Kirtland, Ohio, the Prophet Joseph Smith called Heber C. Kimball to go to England to open the work there. Brother Kimball exclaimed in self-humiliation: "O, Lord, I am a man of stammering tongue, and altogether unfit for such a work; how can I go to preach in that land, which is so famed throughout Christendom for learning, knowledge and piety . . . and to a people whose intelligence is proverbial!"

But then on reflection he added: "However, all these considerations did not deter me from the path of duty; the moment I understood the will of my Heavenly Father, I felt a determination to go at all hazards, believing that he would support me by his almighty power, and endow me with every qualification that I needed; and although my family was dear to me, and I should have to leave them almost destitute, I felt that the cause of truth, the Gospel of Christ, outweighed every other consideration." (Orson F. Whitney, Life of Heber C. Kimball [Bookcraft, 1967], p. 104.)

He traveled over the sea and commenced the work in Preston, Lancashire, with the very devils of hell opposing him and his companions. And thus began a work in that part of the world that has blessed for good the lives of hundreds of thousands. The great conference recently held in Manchester was but the lengthened shadow of that fearful but faithful beginning.

Distasteful assignments

The assignments given us may be distasteful. Naaman the leper came with his horses and with his chariot, with his gifts and his gold, to the Prophet Elisha to be cured. And Elisha, without seeing him, sent a messenger saying, "Go and wash in Jordan seven times, and thy flesh shall come again to thee, and thou shalt be clean."

But Naaman, the proud and haughty captain of the Syrian host, was insulted at so distasteful a thing and went away. Only when his servants pleaded with him was he humbled enough to return. And the record says, "Then went he down, and dipped himself seven times in Jordan, according to the saying of the man of God: and his flesh came again like unto the flesh of a little child, and he was clean." (See 2 Kings 5:1-10.)

Missionary call

There sits in this hall a man known to many of you. Some years ago he received a missionary call to the Western States Mission with headquarters in Denver. He had been to Denver a number of times as a member of the university debate team. It was only over the mountain. He and his parents had dreamed of a more exotic field, of one of those "faraway places with the strange-sounding names." His friends smiled. Some dear to him doubted the wisdom, the inspiration of his call. Why should so choice a young man be called on a mission from Salt Lake City to Denver? But he went. He became a powerful missionary. There are those today who thank the Lord for his coming. He was named counselor to his mission president and experienced marvelous opportunities for training in leadership. He met there a beautiful girl whom he later married. Out of the remarkable and peculiar opportunities of that mission, there emerged within him qualities that have made him preeminent in his chosen vocation. Today he sits here as one of the Regional Representatives of the Twelve.

I think I should add that a man who sits here behind me, President Harold B. Lee, went to the same field, under similar circumstances, and out of that obedience came some of those great and marvelous qualities which we have witnessed in his life, and for which we dearly love him.

Assignment from mission president

May I share with you something of a personal and sacred testimony?

Nearly forty years ago I was on a mission in England. I had been called to labor in the European Mission office in London under President Joseph F. Merrill of the Council of the Twelve, then president of the European Mission. One day three or four of the London papers carried reviews of a reprint of an old book, snide and ugly in tone, indicating that the book was a history of the Mormons. President Merrill said to me, "I want you to go down to the publisher and protest this." I looked at him and was about to say, "Surely not me." But I meekly said, "Yes, sir."

I do not hesitate to say that I was frightened. I went to my room and felt something as I think Moses must have felt when the Lord asked him to go and see Pharaoh. I offered a prayer. My stomach was churning as I walked over to the Goodge Street station to get the underground train to Fleet Street. I found the office of the president and presented my card to the receptionist. She took it and went into the inner office and soon returned to say that Mr. Skeffington was too busy to see me. I replied that I had come five thousand miles and that I would wait. During the next hour she made two or three trips to his office, then finally invited me in. I shall never forget the picture when I entered. He was smoking a long cigar with a look that seemed to say, "Don't bother me."

I held in my hand the reviews. I do not know what I said after that. Another power seemed to be speaking through me. At first he was defensive and even belligerent. Then he began to soften. He concluded by promising to do something. Within an hour word went out to every book dealer in England to return the books to the publisher. At great expense he printed and tipped in the front of each volume a statement to the effect that the book was not to be considered as history, but only as fiction, and that no offense was intended against the respected Mormon people. Years later he granted another favor of substantial worth to the Church, and each year until the time of his death I received a Christmas card from him.

I came to know that when we try in faith to walk in obedience to the requests of the priesthood, the Lord opens the way, even when there appears to be no way.

Experiences as member of Twelve

Ten years ago last Friday I was sustained in this great Tabernacle as a member of the Council of the Twelve. These have been wonderful years, fraught with a thousand faith-promoting experiences in many parts of the earth. But of all the experiences

I have had, the most rewarding have come in participating in the weekly meetings of the First Presidency and the Council of the Twelve in the temple that stands to the east of us. Here there is prayer, an earnest pleading for the will of the Lord. And in this sacred place is manifest the spirit of revelation as decisions and programs affecting the Church are proposed and presented.

Out of the experiences of these ten years I give you my testimony that God is constantly making known, in his way, his will concerning his people. I give you my witness that the leaders of this church will never ask us to do anything that we cannot perform with the help of the Lord. We may feel inadequate. That which we are asked to do may not be to our liking or fit in with our ideas. But if we will try with faith and prayer and resolution, we can accomplish it.

Exaltation in obedience

I give you my testimony that the happiness of the Latter-day Saints, the peace of the Latter-day Saints, the progress of the Latter-day Saints, the prosperity of the Latter-day Saints, and the eternal salvation and exaltation of this people lie in walking in obedience to the counsels of the priesthood of God.

"We thank thee, O God, for a prophet, To guide us in these latter days." (Hymns, no. 196.)

Help us, O God, to be willing and obedient, that we may eat the good of the land. Help us, Father, to place our trust in thee, to go forth with willing, subdued hearts, that we may be worthy of thy blessings, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President N. Eldon Tanner

Elder Gordon B. Hinckley of the Council of the Twelve has just spoken to us.

We shall now hear from Elder Joseph Anderson, Assistant to the Twelve. He will be followed by Elder Bruce R. McConkie of the First Council of Seventy.

Elder Joseph Anderson

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

I sincerely hope and pray that I may have the Spirit of the Lord to be with me as I speak to you this afternoon.

Many thoughtful people are deeply concerned about the religious and social conditions that prevail in our society. It is the contention of some students of history and men of learning that our civilization is rapidly deteriorating and we are drifting into a decadent period of existence.

We have made remarkable progress in scientific research and education, in transportation and communication. Science has found the cure for many dread diseases, alleviated pain, and lengthened the span of life. Superstition has been overcome to a great extent and we have been blessed with such comforts of life as our forefathers never dreamed possible. But in spite of these remarkable developments, there is great confusion and uncertainty in the realm of religion.

True religion needed

The thing that is needed more than anything else today is a return to faith in the Lord Jesus Christ and in the gospel plan that he gave. Today, as perhaps seldom if ever before, civilization is in need of a knowledge of the true and living God. Yes, the cure for the ills that beset the world today is true religion. We need the humility of prayer, and a determination to learn God's will and to keep the commandments that he has given. We need faith that our Savior lives, faith in his redeeming sacrifice. In other words, Christ and his teachings should become the center of our lives.

Our late president, President David O. McKay, in an interview with a leading journalist sometime ago, was asked: "If you had the power to grant unto America one great wish, what would it be?" His answer was: "I would wish that America had a testimony of the Lord Jesus Christ and would obey his principles; that would bring peace on earth. I believe that is the greatest blessing that can be given."

Do we need Jesus today? Do we need his teachings? If we are to survive, if our civilization is to persist, we must accept him and his inspiration and guidance. Someone has said that "the world needs a bath in Christ's pure religion. Only a dedication to Christ can wash the dirt out of our society."

A noted lecturer and traveler was recently asked: "What is the greatest message that could be broadcast to the world today?" And he answered that the greatest message would be the message that God has again spoken to man.

Savior's earthly mission

There are those who have wished that they might have had the privilege of living when the Savior was upon the earth, that they might have known him and heard the sound of his voice and felt the touch of his hands. Yes, it would have been a great privilege and blessing to have been with him when he walked upon the earth had we been among his followers and had faith in his mission. Very few at that time recognized him as the creator of heaven and earth and the Savior of mankind.

It would have been a marvelous experience to have been as closely associated with him as were his disciples, but even they did not fully appreciate his mission. Though he explained his mission to them and told them that he would lay down his life for the salvation of mankind, that he would come forth again from the tomb on the third day, that he would take upon himself the sins of all mankind, it was difficult for his followers to understand these things.

Messiahship of Jesus

After his crucifixion and his body was placed in the tomb, Peter and others of the apostles returned to their nets and their fishing. Those in other occupations no doubt manifested a similar attitude. They did get a glimpse of his Messiahship on one occasion before his crucifixion when Jesus asked his disciples:

"Whom do men say that I the Son of man am?"

"And they said, Some say that thou art John the Baptist; some, Elias; and others, Jeremias, or one of the prophets."

"He saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am?"

"And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.

"And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven." (Matt. 16:13-17.)

Increased conviction

Peter and others were permitted to witness the Master's transfiguration, and they had seen the wonderful miracles that he had performed; yet it was not until after his resurrection and his appearance and association with them prior to his ascension and after they had been endowed with the Holy Ghost on the day of Pentecost that they were prepared to proclaim to the world without fear that he was the Christ, the Son of the living God.

The holy scriptures tell us that following his resurrection, the risen Lord was seen by Mary Magdalene at the sepulcher. (John 20:16.)

He appeared unto two of his disciples as they walked and went into the country, and they knew not that it was he.

He appeared to his apostles on several different occasions following his resurrection, and, according to Apostle Paul, he was seen by above five hundred brethren at once. (See 1 Cor. 15.)

Christ's visit to Nephites

Yes, and following his resurrection and ascension, he appeared to the people on this the American continent and established his church and proclaimed his gospel to the people.

Through his prophets on this continent, the Lord told the Nephites before he came into the world that at the time of his birth there would be great lights in heaven, insomuch that the night before his birth there would be no darkness and it would appear to man as if it were day. The record tells us that this is just what happened on this continent at the time of his birth. Christ, the light of the world, was born; the influence of that light permeated the whole earth.

The light of Christ

And then at the time of his death and crucifixion, as had been prophesied by Samuel the Lamanite, there was darkness upon this continent for three days while Christ's body lay in the tomb. There was thick darkness over the face of the entire land. The light of Christ had gone out of the world, and darkness, thick darkness, covered the earth.

And so it is with our own lives when we have the Spirit of the Lord, which we can only have if we keep his commandments. There is light in our souls; there is joy and happiness. But when we fail to keep the Lord's commandments and wickedness prevails, darkness comes into our lives, and great is the darkness when the Spirit of the Lord withdraws from us.

Appearance in our day

Nearly two thousand years have passed since that time, and in our dispensation the resurrected Christ, our Lord and Savior, has appeared to men again. The dispensation in which we live was introduced by the appearance of the Father and his Beloved Son to a boy in the woods near Palmyra, New York, in answer to sincere and humble prayer. The heavens were opened and he beheld with his eyes and heard with his ears the voices of God the Father and his Son Jesus Christ, two separate individuals. Light and knowledge were revealed to the boy regarding God and the restoration of his kingdom that could come from no other source. It was the introduction of the last dispensation of the gospel, the dispensation of the fulness of times.

The Savior has also appeared to men at other times in this dispensation. As recorded in the 76th section of the Doctrine and Covenants, he appeared to Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon in vision in February 1832, and they bear witness of this occasion to the following effect:

"And now, after the many testimonies which have been given of him, this is the testimony, last of all, which we give of him: That he lives!

"For we saw him, even on the right hand of God; and we heard the voice bearing record that he is the Only Begotten of the Father—

"That by him, and through him, and of him, the worlds are and were created, and the inhabitants thereof are begotten sons and daughters unto God." (D&C 76:22-24.)

And again:

"And this is the gospel, the glad tidings, which the voice out of the heavens bore record unto us—

"That he came into the world, even Jesus, to be crucified for the world, and to bear the sins of the world, and to sanctify the world, and to cleanse it from all unrighteousness;

"That through him all might be saved whom the Father had put into his power and made by him." (D&C 76:40-42.)

Then again, in the 110th section of the Doctrine and Covenants the Prophet Joseph and Oliver Cowdery relate this experience:

"The veil was taken from our minds, and the eyes of our understanding were opened.

"We saw the Lord standing upon the breastwork of the pulpit, before us; and under his feet was a paved work of pure gold, in color like amber.

"His eyes were as a flame of fire; the hair of his head was white like the pure snow; his countenance shone above the brightness of the sun; and his voice was as the sound of the rushing of great waters, even the voice of Jehovah, saying:

"I am the first and the last; I am he who liveth, I am he who was slain; I am your advocate with the Father." (D&C 110:1-4.)

Witness of the Holy Ghost

Others in this dispensation have seen the Lord. We are not restricted to the testimonies of Joseph Smith, Sidney Rigdon, Oliver Cowdery, and others who have seen the Lord in this day and time. We may and do know for ourselves that Jesus the Christ does live, that he is the mediator between us and the Father. We have that gift and power that Peter had when he said: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." (Matt. 16:16.)

We have had hands laid upon our heads by men of divine authority, men holding the priesthood of God, which has been restored to earth in our time, and have received the gift of the Holy Ghost, which is the spirit of prophecy and revelation. The Holy Ghost manifests and bears witness concerning the existence of the Father and the Son and the truth of the restored gospel of Christ.

Need for a prophet

Yes, the world needs contact with the heavens in this day and age. The world needs a prophet. Little does the world generally realize that the Lord is revealing his mind and will through his living prophets today. As Latter-day Saints and members of the Lord's church, we are truly a light set upon a hill, and it is our privilege and responsibility to assist in the great work of the Savior in bringing to pass the immortality and eternal life of man.

It is of the utmost importance that we as Latter-day Saints have the light of truth, which comes from the Lord himself, burning within our souls, and that that light shall so shine that others may be led to find the way to salvation, exaltation, and eternal life. Jesus has said: "I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." (John 8:12.)

The living Christ

Our message to the world, which we have been proclaiming for more than 140 years, is that God lives and that Jesus was and is the living Christ; that the heavens have been opened to man; that the Father and the Son have appeared in this dispensation; that the plan of life and salvation has been restored; that the time of the Savior's second coming is near at hand; that the Lord, through his church, is preparing the way for that appearance; and that the only way in which peace can come to the earth is through obedience to the restored teachings of Jesus Christ. Yes, I testify to you that he is the Prince of Peace, and it is his will that all mankind may hear this message and give heed thereto.

May the peace that passeth understanding come into the hearts of men and women everywhere through a knowledge of these things, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President N. Eldon Tanner

Elder Joseph Anderson, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve, has just spoken to us. We will now hear from Elder Bruce R. McConkie of the First Council of Seventy.

Elder Bruce R. McConkie

Of the First Council of the Seventy

I desire to give some rather plain and affirmative counsel as to how to worship the Lord. There is probably more misinformation and error in this field than in any other area in the entire world, and yet there is no other thing as important as knowing who and how we should worship.

Worship of God

When the Lord created men and placed them on earth, he gave "them commandments that they should love and serve him, the only living and true God, and that he should be the only being whom they should worship." (D&C 20:19.)

Jesus confirmed this most basic of all commands when he said: "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve" (Luke 4:8); and the constant cry of all the prophets of all the ages is: "O come, let us worship and bow down: let us kneel before the Lord our maker. For he is our God; and we are the people of his pasture, and the sheep of his hand" (Ps. 95:6-7).

As the spirit children of the Eternal Father, we have been placed on earth to be tried and tested, to see if we will keep his commandments and do those things which will qualify us to return to his presence and be like him.

And he has planted in our hearts an instinctive desire to worship, to seek salvation, to love and serve a power or being greater than ourselves. Worship is implicit in existence itself.

Worship in spirit and truth

The issue is not whether men shall worship, but who or what is to be the object of their devotions and how they shall go about paying their devotions to their chosen Most High.

And so, at Jacob's well, when the Samaritan woman said to Jesus, "Our fathers worshipped in this mountain; and ye say that in Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship," we find him answering: "Woman, believe me, the hour cometh, when ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, worship the Father.

"Ye worship ye know not what; we know what we worship; and salvation is of the Jews.

"And the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth; for the Father seeketh such to worship him. For unto such hath God promised his Spirit.

"And they who worship him, must worship in spirit and in truth." (Inspired Version, John 4:22-26.)

Thus our purpose is to worship the true and living God and to do it by the power of the Spirit and in the way he has ordained. The approved worship of the true God leads to salvation; devotions rendered to false gods and which are not founded on eternal truth carry no such assurance.

Truth essential

A knowledge of the truth is essential to true worship. We must learn that God is our Father; that he is an exalted and perfected personage in whose image we are created; that he sent his Beloved Son into the world to redeem mankind; that salvation is in Christ, who is the revelation of God to the world; and that Christ and his gospel laws are known only by revelation given to those apostles and prophets who represent him on earth.

There is no salvation in worshipping a false god. It does not matter one particle how sincerely someone may believe that God is a golden calf, or that he is an immaterial, uncreated power that is in all things; the worship of such a being or concept has no saving power. Men may believe with all their souls that images or powers or laws are God, but no amount of devotion to these concepts will ever give the power that leads to immortality and eternal life.

If a man worships a cow or a crocodile, he can gain any reward that cows and crocodiles happen to be passing out this season.

If he worships the laws of the universe or the forces of nature, no doubt the earth will continue to spin, the sun to shine, and the rains to fall on the just and on the unjust.

But if he worships the true and living God, in spirit and in truth, then God Almighty will pour out his Spirit upon him, and he will have power to raise the dead, move mountains, entertain angels, and walk in celestial streets.

Key to true worship

Now let us ask how we should pay our devotions to him who lives and rules and is. The key to true worship is contained in a revelation given to Joseph Smith in 1833 in which the Lord revealed anew the testimony of an ancient disciple.

This record certifies that Christ was "in the beginning" with the Father; that he is "the Redeemer of the world," and the light and life of men; that he "dwelt in the flesh" as "the Only Begotten of the Father"; that in his mortal progression "he received not of the fulness at the first, but continued from grace to grace"; and that finally, in the resurrection, "he received a fulness of the glory of the Father; And he received all power, both in heaven and on earth, and the glory of the Father was with him, for he dwelt in him."

Then the Lord said: "I give unto you these sayings that you may understand and know how to worship, and know what you worship, that you may come unto the Father in my name, and in due time receive of his fulness.

"For if you keep my commandments you shall receive of his fulness, and be glorified in me as I am in the Father; therefore, I say unto you, you shall receive grace for grace." (D&C 93:7-20.)

In other words, true and perfect worship consists in following in the steps of the Son of God; it consists in keeping the commandments and obeying the will of the Father to that degree that we advance from grace to grace until we are glorified in Christ as he is in his Father. It is far more than prayer and sermon and song. It is living and doing and obeying. It is emulating the life of the great Exemplar.

The specifics of divine worship

With this principle before us, may I now illustrate some of the specifics of that divine worship which is pleasing to him whose we are?

To worship the Lord is to follow after him, to seek his face, to believe his doctrine, and to think his thoughts.

It is to walk in his paths, to be baptized as Christ was, to preach that gospel of the kingdom which fell from his lips, and to heal the sick and raise the dead as he did.

To worship the Lord is to, put first in our lives the things of his kingdom, to live by every word that proceedeth forth from the mouth of God, to center our whole hearts upon Christ and that salvation which comes because of him.

It is to walk in the light as he is in the light, to do the things that he wants done, to do what he would do under similar circumstances, to be as he is.

To worship the Lord is to walk in the Spirit, to rise above carnal things, to bridle our passions, and to overcome the world.

It is to pay our tithes and offerings, to act as wise stewards in caring for those things which have been entrusted to our care, and to use our talents and means for the spreading of truth and the building up of his kingdom.

To worship the Lord is to be married in the temple, to have children, to teach them the gospel, and to bring them up in light and truth.

It is to perfect the family unit, to honor our father and our mother; it is for a man to love his wife with all his heart and to cleave unto her and none else.

To worship the Lord is to visit the fatherless and the widows in their affliction and to keep ourselves unspotted from the world.

It is to work on a welfare project, to administer to the sick, to go on a mission, to go home teaching, and to hold family home evening.

To worship the Lord is to study the gospel, to treasure up light and truth, to ponder in our hearts the things of his kingdom, and to make them part of our lives.

It is to pray with all the energy of our souls, to preach by the power of the Spirit, to sing songs of praise and thanksgiving.

To worship is to work, to be actively engaged in a good cause, to be about our Father's business, to love and serve our fellowmen.

It is to feed the hungry, to clothe the naked, to comfort those that mourn, and to hold up the hands that hang down and to strengthen the feeble knees.

To worship the Lord is to stand valiantly in the cause of truth and righteousness, to let our influence for good be felt in civic, cultural, educational, and governmental fields, and to support those laws and principles which further the Lord's interests on earth.

To worship the Lord is to be of good cheer, to be courageous, to be valiant, to have the courage of our God-given convictions, and to keep the faith.

Living the whole law

It is ten thousand times ten thousand things. It is keeping the commandments of God. It is living the whole law of the whole gospel.

To worship the Lord is to be like Christ until we receive from him the blessed assurance: "Ye shall be even as I am."

These are sound principles. As we ponder them in our hearts, I am sure we shall know increasingly of their verity.

True and perfect worship is in fact the supreme labor and purpose of man. God grant that we may write in our souls with a pen of fire the command of the Lord Jesus: "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve" (Luke 4:8); and may we in fact and with living reality worship the Father in spirit and in truth, thereby gaining peace in this life and eternal life in the world to come.

In the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

President N. Eldon Tanner

Elder Bruce R. McConkie of the First Council of Seventy has just spoken to us.

The congregation will please stand and join with the choir in singing, "Come, O Thou King of Kings."

After the singing, Elder Thomas S. Monson of the Council of the Twelve will speak to us.

The congregation and choir sang the hymn, "Come, O Thou King of Kings."

President Tanner

Elder Thomas S. Monson of the Council of the Twelve will now speak to us. He will be followed by Elder Hugh B. Brown of the Council of the Twelve.

Elder Thomas S. Monson

Of the Council of the Twelve

Yesterday each person assembled in this historic Tabernacle was given the privilege to raise his right hand to sustain, in the positions to which they have been called, the leadership of the Church. The upraised hand is an outward expression of an inner feeling. As one raises his hand, he pledges his heart.

Hand and heart

The Master frequently spoke of hand and heart. In a revelation given through the Prophet Joseph Smith at Hiram, Ohio, in March 1832, he counseled: "... be faithful; stand in the office which I have appointed unto you; succor the weak, lift up the hands which hang down, and strengthen the feeble knees.

"And if thou art faithful unto the end thou shalt have a crown of immortality, and eternal life in the mansions which I have prepared in the house of my Father." (D&C 81:5-6.)

As I ponder his words, I can almost hear the shuffle of sandaled feet, the murmurs of astonishment from listeners as they echo from Capernaum's peaceful scene. Here multitudes crowded around Jesus, bringing the sick to be healed. A palsied man picked up his bed and walked, and a Roman centurion's faith restored his servant's health.

Lifted others toward God

Not only by precept did Jesus teach, but also by example. He was faithful to his divine mission. He stretched forth his hand that others might be lifted toward God.

At Galilee there came to him a leper who pleaded: "Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean. And Jesus put forth his hand, and touched him, saying, I will; be thou clean. And immediately his leprosy was cleansed." (Matt. 8:2-3.) The hand of Jesus was not polluted by touching the leper's body, but the leper's body was cleansed by the touch of that holy hand.

In Capernaum, at the house of Peter, yet another example was provided. The mother of Peter's wife lay sick of a fever. The sacred record reveals that Jesus came "and took her by the hand, and lifted her up; and immediately the fever left her. . . ." (Mark 1:31.)

The daughter of Jairus

So it was with the daughter of Jairus, a ruler of the synagogue. Each parent can appreciate the feelings of Jairus as he sought the Lord, and, upon finding him, fell at his feet and pleaded, "My little daughter lieth at the point of death: I pray thee, come and lay thy hands on her, that she may be healed; and she shall live." (Mark 5:23.)

"While he yet spake, there cometh one from the [ruler's] house, saying to him, Thy daughter is dead; trouble not the Master.

"But when Jesus heard it, he answered him, saying, Fear not: believe only, and she shall be made whole." Parents wept. Others mourned. Jesus declared: "Weep not; she is not dead, but sleepeth.

"[He] . . . took her by the hand, and called, saying: Maid, arise.

"And her spirit came again, and she arose straightway. . . ." (Luke 8:49-50, 52, 54-55.)

Lived to minister

Once again, the Lord had stretched forth his hand to take the hand of another.

The beloved apostles noted well his example. He lived not so to be ministered unto, but to minister; not to receive, but to give; not to save his life, but to pour it out for others.

If they would see the star that should at once direct their feet and influence their destiny, they must look for it, not in the changing skies or outward circumstance, but each in the depth of his own heart and after the pattern provided by the Master.

Peter at gate Beautiful

Reflect for a moment on the experience of Peter at the gate Beautiful of the temple. One sympathizes with the plight of the man lame from birth who each day was carried to the temple gate that he might ask alms of all who entered. That he asked alms of Peter and John as these two brethren approached indicates that he regarded them no differently from scores of others who must have passed by him that day. Then Peter's majestic yet gentle command: "Look on us." (Acts 3:4.) The record states that the lame man gave heed unto them, expecting to receive something from them.

The stirring words Peter then spoke have lifted the hearts of honest believers down through the stream of time, even to this day: "Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk." Frequently we conclude the citation at this point and fail to note the next verses: "And he took him by the right hand, and lifted him up: . . . he . . . stood, and walked, and entered with them into the temple. . . ." (Acts 3:6-8.)

A helping hand had been extended. A broken body had been healed. A precious soul had been lifted toward God.

Charge to be a lifter

Time passes. Circumstances change. Conditions vary. Unaltered is the divine command to succor the weak and lift up the hands which hang down and strengthen the feeble knees. Each of us has the charge to be not a doubter, but a doer; not a leaner, but a lifter. But our complacency tree has many branches, and each spring more buds come into bloom. Often we live side by side but do not communicate heart to heart. There are those within the sphere of our own influence who, with outstretched hands, cry out: "Is there no balm in Gilead. . . ?" (Jer. 8:22.) Each of us must answer.

Edwin Markham observed: "There is a destiny that makes us brothers;

None goes his way alone:

All that we send into the lives of others

Comes back into our own."

—"A Creed"

Ebenezer Scrooge

One who lived much of his life ignoring his fellowmen and living for self alone was Dickens' immortal character, Ebenezer Scrooge. But there came that wintry night when the ghost of Jacob Marley appeared to Scrooge and lamented:

"Not to know that any Christian spirit working kindly in its little sphere, whatever it may be, will find its mortal life too short for its vast means of usefulness. Not to know that no space of regret can make amends for one life's opportunities misused! Yet such was I! Oh! Such was I!"

"Why did I walk through crowds of fellow-beings with my eyes turned down, and never raise them to that blessed Star which led the Wise Men to a poor abode! Were there no poor homes to which its light would conduct me!"

In an effort to comfort Marley, Scrooge proffered, "But you were always a good man of business, Jacob."

Lamented Marley, "Business! . . . Mankind was my business!" (A Christmas Carol.)

The change that then occurred in the life of Scrooge was miraculous indeed. He became overnight the most generous, the most lovable, the most kindhearted Christian soul. In his own words he described his condition: "I am not the man I was." So it ever is when one inclines his heart to the example of the Christ.

"... he that loveth not his brother abideth in death," wrote the apostle John 1900 years ago. (1 John 3:14.)

Love changes men

Some point the accusing finger at the sinner or the unfortunate and in derision say, "He has brought his condition upon himself." Others exclaim, "Oh, he will never change. He has always been a bad one." A few see beyond the outward appearance and recognize the true worth of a human soul. When they do, miracles occur. The downtrodden, the discouraged, the helpless become "no more strangers and foreigners, but fellowcitizens with the saints, and of the household of God." (Eph. 2: 19.) True love can alter human lives and change human nature.

This truth was stated so beautifully on the stage in My Fair Lady. Eliza Doolittle, the flower girl, spoke to one for whom she cared and who later was to lift her from such mediocre status: "You see, really and truly, apart from the things anyone can pick up (the dressing and the proper way of speaking, and so on), the difference between a lady and a flower girl is not how she behaves, but how she's treated. I shall always be a flower girl to Professor Higgins, because he always treats me as a flower girl, and always will; but I know I can be a lady to you, because you always treat me as a lady, and always will." (Adapted from Pygmalion, in The Complete Plays of Bernard Shaw, p. 260.)

Eliza Doolittle was but expressing the profound truth: When we treat people merely as they are, they will remain as they are. When we treat them as if they were what they should be, they will become what they should be. (Adapted from a quotation by Johann Wolfgang Von Goethe.)

In reality, it was the Redeemer who best taught this principle. Jesus changed men. He changed their habits and opinions and ambitions. He changed their tempers, dispositions, and natures. He changed their hearts. He lifted! He loved! He forgave! He redeemed! Do we have the will to follow?

Return of paroled convict

Prison warden Kenyon J. Scudder has related this experience: A friend of his happened to be sitting in a railroad coach next to a young man who was obviously depressed. Finally the man revealed that he was a paroled convict returning from a distant prison. His imprisonment had brought shame to his family, and they had neither visited him nor written often. He hoped, however, that this was only because they were too poor to travel and too uneducated to write. He hoped, despite the evidence, that they had forgiven him.

To make it easy for them, however, he had written them to put up a signal for him when the train passed their little farm on the outskirts of town. If his family had forgiven him, they were to put a white ribbon in the big apple tree which stood near the tracks. If they didn't want him to return, they were to do nothing, and he would remain on the train as it traveled west.

As the train neared his home town, the suspense became so great he couldn't bear to look out of his window. He exclaimed, "In just five minutes the engineer will sound the whistle, indicating our approach to the long bend which opens into the valley I know as home. Will you watch for the apple tree at the side of the track?" His companion changed places with him and said he would. The minutes seemed like hours, but then there came the shrill sound of the train whistle.

The young man asked, "Can you see the tree? Is there a white ribbon?"

Came the reply: "I see the tree. I see not one white ribbon, but many. There must be a white ribbon on every branch. Son, someone surely does love you."

The miracle of love

In that instant he stood cleansed by Christ.

His friend said, "I felt as if I had witnessed a miracle."

Indeed, he had witnessed a miracle appropriately described by the third verse of a favorite Christmas carol, "O Little Town of Bethlehem":

"How silently, how silently, The wondrous gift is given!
So God imparts to human hearts The blessings of his heaven.

"No ear may hear his coming; But in this world of sin, Where meek souls will receive him still, The dear Christ enters in."

—Hymns, no. 165

We, too, can experience this same miracle when we, with hand and heart, as did the Savior, lift and love our neighbor to a newness of life.

May we succor the weak, lift up the hands which hang down, and strengthen the feeble knees, thereby inheriting that eternal life promised by the Redeemer, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President N. Eldon Tanner

Elder Thomas S. Monson of the Council of the Twelve has just spoken to us.

Elder Hugh B. Brown of the Council of the Twelve will now speak to us.

Elder Hugh B. Brown

Of the Council of the Twelve

One of the compensations for going away from home is coming home again, where we receive such a warm welcome. We left here on the 22nd of September for a quick trip to the Holy Land, and with respect to that I would like to speak for just a moment. I shall not inflict upon you a travelogue but will refer to some of the places we visited and the effect upon us of such visits.

Visit to Holy Land

I was accompanied by Dr. Truman Grant Madsen of Brigham Young University, who has taken many trips over there with various groups and knows the country well and knows the story of the Christ remarkably well. The question arose as to the wisdom of my going on account of my weakened condition, but Dr. J. Louis Schricker of this city said he would personally accompany me and see that I was getting good care. So with these two fine men, I left via New York and Paris and went to Tel Aviv. From there we took an automobile down to Jerusalem and were booked in the Intercontinental Hotel on top of the Mount of Olives, which gave us a beautiful view of Jerusalem. The Mount of Olives was made famous and sacred by the frequent visits of the Christ; and when he comes again, this mount will be cleft in twain as he descends.

Birthplace of Jesus

We went out from there to Bethlehem, and as we stood in that beautiful, quiet little city, we could almost hear the voices of the angels and the hosts of heaven singing glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.

We thought of the declaration of war which was made by Beelzebub when this child was born. He seemed to have some knowledge of what it portended, and he declared war on this babe and all of his followers.

We went on from there to the tomb of Abraham near the Brook Cedron, and the next day went on to Jericho. You will remember that Jericho is that city where a military band must have played rather better than our bands do today, for we understand that because of the clarity of their horns the walls of Jericho tumbled to the ground.

The Good Samaritan

On the way to Jericho we passed through the place made famous by the words of the Master in answering the question, "Who is my neighbour?" He told the story of the Good Samaritan, where a man had the courage to step over race barriers and assist one whom it was not lawful for him to help. On the way to Jericho we passed by this place, and there is a little inn there called the Good Samaritan.

The Garden of Gethsemane

From Jericho we went down through the Jordan River Valley to the Dead Sea, and from there up to the tombs, the caves where the scrolls were found. It was a glorious trip, and upon returning to Jerusalem we took it upon ourselves to go again into the Garden of Gethsemane. Here it was that Jesus suffered his greatest anguish. Here it was that he sweat drops of blood; and as he knelt there in the garden alone, his disciples having remained outside, he said, "O my father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me: nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt." (Matt. 26:39.) I thought as I stood there and remembered those words, how wonderful it would be for all of us if we had the courage and the insight and the fortitude, whatever might happen to us, to say, "Not my will, but thine be done." That attitude makes any burden lighter. It makes any task less difficult.

We went up through the Via Dolorosa Road, where he carried his cross up to Golgotha. We are told of that struggle. While there is a great deal of disputation and disagreement as to just where this event happened, something seems to be quite sure, and that is, that he was crucified on this Hill of Skulls, as it is called.

The garden tomb

From there we went down into the garden and into the tomb. As we stood by the door of that tomb, I remembered the women who came there with their spices. These women who were the last at the cross and the first at the tomb could not believe but that they would be permitted to anoint his body; but when they saw that he had gone and the stone had been rolled away, the attendants in the tomb said, "Why seek ye the living among the dead? He is not here, but is risen." (Luke 24:5-6.) They could not comprehend the meaning of what they heard. And then Mary, turning, had a glimpse of the feet and ankles of someone standing near. She thought it was the gardener, and she said, "I have come to find the Master. Tell me where you have laid him, and I will take him away." (See John 20:15.)

Jesus reached forth his hand and said to her, in that voice which only he could use, "Mary." She looked up and saw the face of Jesus the Christ and was about to embrace him. It was a remarkable feeling we had as we stood and remembered these things; and we, the three of us, had prayer each day, praying God to guide us on our journey and help us to emulate the example of him who made that whole country so famous and so sacred.

Mount Tabor

After visiting other places in Jerusalem, we went north, starting at the Sea of Galilee. On the way up we visited Mount Tabor, believed to be the Mount of the Transfiguration, where Moses and Elijah met with Jesus and Peter, James, and John; and He was transfigured before them. While on this mount, Christ instructed them, and Peter, feeling that it was a good place to be, said, "Let us build a tabernacle, one for Moses, one for Elijah and one for thee." (See Matt. 17:4. See also James E. Talmage, Jesus the Christ, pp. 370-71.) That was not thought wise at the time, however.

The Sea of Galilee

From Mount Tabor we went on over the hill past Nazareth and came upon the Sea of Galilee. All of us gasped as we came over the hill and saw this beautiful little valley, green all around, and the quiet Sea of Galilee. And as we came down to it, we found accommodations in a small Jewish guest house near the hotel. We were impressed by the thought that here it was that Jesus walked on the water. Here it was that he stilled the tempest. Here it was that he performed many miracles.

In looking across one part of the sea, we saw the Mount of the Beatitudes, where it is alleged the Sermon on the Mount was preached. It was immensely impressive, and we went home that night with thanksgiving in our hearts to belong to the Church of Jesus Christ, he who led his people in that forbidding country and was led by them to the cross.

Nazareth

Upon returning to the Jordan Valley, we saw the cities on the hillside on both sides of the road. We were impressed as we came into Nazareth; it is also a city on a hill. Jesus lived there for a time, and because of that fact, he was known as a Nazarene. We went back into Jerusalem, and there day after day we visited points of interest in that great city.

Object of visit

I tell you these things to indicate the object of our visit, which was to get closer to him, to come home with increased devotion, increased commitment to his work, increased assurance that he is the Son of God, as Brother Anderson has told us this afternoon. Peter said what a lot of us would like to say when Jesus asked him, "... whom sayest ye that I am?" He said, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Jesus said, "Flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven." (Matt. 16:15-17.)

I want to tell you, my brethren and sisters, as is my calling as a witness of Christ, that I too know, and I know it from the same source that Peter knew it, for flesh and blood have not revealed that knowledge unto me, but our Father which is in heaven. And from the bottom of my heart I say to him and to you, as I think back over that trip through the Holy Land, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God," and I know it as I know that I live.

Following in Lord's footsteps

God bless you, my brethren and sisters, and all of us, as we devote ourselves to his work, to one another, that we may follow the example of those who have spoken in this great conference. Some of the sessions of the conference I viewed on television, and I remember the words of President Joseph Fielding Smith at the opening session when he gave the keynote address advising the Saints to follow in the footsteps of the Lord.

Let us, then, at this closing session, renew that plea and rededicate ourselves to the unfinished task of bringing to pass the immortality and eternal life of men. I bear this witness to you, and bring you this report on my activities, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President N. Eldon Tanner

He to whom we have just listened is Elder Hugh B. Brown of the Council of the Twelve.

We have just received a telegram from President Verden E. Bettilyon of the Argentina South Mission reading as follows: "Conference clear with excellent reception."

We should like to express our deep appreciation to the following who have furnished the singing for this conference:

The Tabernacle Choir for their excellent singing on the Saturday morning broadcast session and on both the morning and afternoon sessions today, and the Men's Chorus at the priesthood session Saturday evening.

The Promised Valley Chorus, who furnished the music for the morning session on Friday.

The Relief Society Chorus from the Blackfoot, Pocatello, and Pocatello North Regions, who furnished the music for the afternoon session on Friday.

The Ricks College Combined Choirs and Choruses, who furnished the beautiful music for the afternoon session on Saturday.

We also express thanks and deep appreciation to the conductors and organists for these various singing groups.

We express appreciation also to all who have in any way contributed to the success and inspiration of this great conference.

We again express appreciation to those who have provided these lovely flowers and their arrangement, which we have enjoyed during the whole of the conference.

We are especially grateful to the General Authorities who have delivered such timely and inspirational messages.

We appreciate the careful and efficient attention given by local and national press representatives, and by representatives of radio and television in reporting the sessions of this conference.

We again express our most grateful appreciation to the owners and managers of the many radio and television stations throughout the nation and in other countries, who have carried the session of this conference from coast-to-coast in the United States, to Hawaii, Alaska, Mexico, Central and South America, Japan and Canada.

We deeply appreciate the cooperation of city officials, the city traffic officers handling carefully and ably the increased traffic; the Fire Department and Red Cross, and others who have rendered assistance and service whenever and wherever needed.

We thank the Tabernacle ushers for their courtesy and consideration in seating the great audiences of these conference sessions.

The singing for this session has been furnished by the Tabernacle Choir, under the direction of Jay E. Welch, with Robert Cundick at the organ.

On behalf of all who have listened to the General Conference today, we express appreciation and our sincere thanks to the members of the Tabernacle Choir for the beautiful music they have rendered during these sessions today. God bless them for their desire to serve and to bring happiness to others.

Our beloved President Joseph Fielding Smith will be the concluding speaker of this conference.

The Tabernacle Choir will then favor us with "How Beautiful Upon the Mountains," and the benediction will then be offered by Elder Dale T. Tingey, former president of the Southwest Indian Mission.

The General Conference will then stand adjourned for six months.

President Joseph Fielding Smith

President, The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints

My dear brothers and sisters. As we come now to the closing moments of another great general conference of the Church, my heart is full of gratitude for the generous outpouring of the Spirit of the Lord which we have enjoyed.

We have been fed the bread of life, and our desires to serve the Lord and keep his commandments have increased. It has been good for us to be together under these very favorable circumstances.

Appreciation for counselors

May I express before you the profound appreciation I have for the faith, devotion, and service of the two great men who stand beside me in the First Presidency of the Church.

President Harold B. Lee is a spiritual giant with faith like that of Enoch. He has the spirit of revelation and magnifies his calling as a prophet, seer, and revelator.

President N. Eldon Tanner is also one of the noble and great ones who was prepared from eternity to render the important service he is now performing in this, the Lord's church. He is a man of surpassing ability and integrity.

Spirit of oneness

The First Presidency of the Church is united as one, and it is my prayer that we may ever be one, even as Jesus said that he and the Father and the Holy Ghost are one. And this same oneness should prevail in every stake presidency, every bishopric, and every priesthood quorum presidency.

I am also grateful for the labors and ministry of President Spencer W. Kimball and his associates in the Council of the Twelve, as well as those of all the General Authorities, and I want you to know that I love my brethren.

Blessings for faithful

I feel in my heart to bless the faithful members of the Church. Just as surely as they continue to walk in paths of truth and virtue, they shall have the desires of their hearts in righteousness and shall go on to eternal reward in our Father's kingdom in due course of time.

I have sought all my days to keep the commandments and do those things which will please the Lord, and I desire to bear testimony of his goodness to me and likewise his goodness to all his children who have made covenant to keep his commandments.

Divinity of the work

As I stand now, in what I might call the twilight of life, with the realization that in a not-far-distant day I shall be called upon to give an account of my mortal stewardship, I bear testimony again of the truth and divinity of this great work.

I know that God lives and that he sent his beloved Son into the world to atone for our sins.

I know that the Father and the Son appeared to the Prophet Joseph Smith to usher in this final gospel dispensation.

I know that Joseph Smith was and is a prophet; moreover, that this is the Lord's church, and that the gospel cause shall roll forward until the knowledge of the Lord covers the earth as the waters cover the sea.

I am sure that we all love the Lord. I know that he lives, and I look forward to that day when I shall see his face, and I hope to hear his voice say unto me: "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." (Matt. 25:34.)

And I pray that this may be the happy lot of all of us, in our own due time, and I say this in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

The number, "How Beautiful Upon the Mountains," was sung by the Tabernacle Choir.

Elder Dale T. Tingey, former president of the Southwest Indian Mission, offered the benediction.

After the benediction the Tabernacle Choir sang the hymn, "I Need Thee Every Hour."

The General Conference was then adjourned for six months.

SALT LAKE TABERNACLE CHOIR AND ORGAN BROADCAST

Sunday, October 3, 1971 — 9:30 to 10:00 a.m.

The following broadcast, written and announced by Richard L. Evans, and originating with Station KSL, Salt Lake City, Utah, was presented from 9:30 to 10 o'clock a.m., on Sunday, October 3, 1971 through the courtesy of the Columbia Broadcasting System's network throughout the United States, parts of Canada, and through other facilities to several points overseas.

Announcer: Once more we welcome you within these walls with Music and the Spoken Word from the Crossroads of the West.

CBS and its affiliated stations bring you at this hour the Tabernacle Choir from Temple Square in Salt Lake City, with Richard Condie conducting the Choir, Alexander Schreiner, Tabernacle Organist, and the Spoken Word by Richard Evans.

We hear LeRoy Robertson's worshipful setting for these wonderful, moving words: "How beautiful upon the mountain are the feet of Him that bringeth good tidings . . . that publisheth peace . . . that saith Unto Zion: Thy God reigneth."

(Choir: "How Beautiful Upon the Mountain"—Robertson)

Announcer: Next is a Mozart setting for the 110th Psalm: "God said, . . . Now be seated here at my right hand, . . ."

(Choir: "Dixit Dominus" [Psalm 110]—Mozart)

ANNOUNCER: With Alexander Schreiner at the Tabernacle Organ on Temple Square today we hear the echoing and answering sounds of the "Grand Chorus Dialogue" by Gigout.

(Organ: "Grand Chorus Dialogue"—Gigout)

Announcer: "The tumult and the shouting dies, the Captains and the Kings depart, Still stands thine ancient sacrifice, An humble and a contrite heart, Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet, Lest we forget. . . ."

(Choir: "Recessional"—de Koven arr. Nightingale)

"Just for today . . ."

By Richard L. Evans

"Lord, for tomorrow and its needs, I do not pray, . . . Just for today."¹

In time of stress or sorrow, not infrequently we hear someone say, "I don't know how I can face the future." Or someone who is overwhelmed by the burdens and complexity of life will sometimes say, "If I can only get through this day!" We all have problems and pressures—and sometimes sorrows. And on down days and dark nights we worry about symptoms; we worry about uncertainties, and tend to carry the weight of the future around with us, as well as the problems of the present. Sometimes we let ourselves become so cluttered with things undone, indecisive decisions, things not yet thought through, sorting out and shuffling, trying to do too much of everything all at once, with little completed, until we feel we can't carry on. Life will load itself as much as we will let it. But always we ought to live to do what needs to be done today—for anything that is overloaded both with today's and tomorrow's load is likely to break down or fail to perform its function. Give us this day our daily bread. Help us with this sorrow, with this problem. Help us not to yield to this temptation—the one that is near us, this one right now—not what "lies dimly in the distance." Life isn't livable all at once. And you who have lost loved ones, you who have problems, discouragement, who feel you can't carry the burden: Plan, prepare, work, hope, pray. Do this one task. Meet this one problem. Face this one sorrow. Make this decision. Do this day's duty—and have faith for the future.

Lord, for tomorrow and its needs, I do not pray;
Keep me, my God, from strain of sin,
Just for today.
Let me both diligently work, And duly pray.

Let me be kind in word and deed,
just for today.
Let me be slow to do my will,
Prompt to obey;
Oh keep me in Thy loving care,
Just for today.
Let me no wrong or idle word, Unthinking say,
Set Thou a seal upon my lips, Just for today.

* * *

So, for tomorrow and its needs; I do not pray;
But keep me, guide and love me,
Lord, Just for today.¹

(Choir: Just for Today"—Seaver arr. Protheroe)

Announcer: From his book of organ voluntaries, Alexander Schreiner recalls an old Choral melody: "Dearest Jesus We are Here."

(Organ: "Dearest Jesus We Are Here."—Ahle arr. Bach)

Announcer: "In seasons of distress and grief my soul has often found relief, and oft escaped the tempter's snare, by Thy return, Sweet Hour of Prayer. . . ."

(Men's Chorus: "Sweet Hour of Prayer"—Bradbury)

Announcer: Now with George Herbert's words and with music by David H. Williams, the Choir sings a song of our Lord and Savior: "King of Glory, King of Peace."

(Choir: "King of Glory, King of Peace"—Williams)

(As the Dew)

Announcer: Again we leave you within the shadows of the everlasting hills. May peace be with you this day—and always.

This concludes the two thousand one hundred ninety-eighth performance continuing the 43rd year of this traditional broadcast from the Mormon Tabernacle on Temple

¹Sybil F. Partridge, Just for Today

Square, brought to you by CBS and its affiliated stations, originating with KSL in Salt Lake City, Utah.

Richard Condie conducted the Tabernacle Choir, Alexander Schreiner was at the Organ, the Spoken Word by Richard Evans.

In another seven days, at this same hour, Music and the Spoken Word will be heard again from the Crossroads of the West.

This is the CBS Radio Network.

SUMMARY OF CONFERENCE MUSIC

The Salt Lake Tabernacle Choir furnished the choral numbers for the Saturday morning, the Sunday morning and the Sunday afternoon sessions of the conference, with Richard P. Condie, conductor, and Jay E. Welch, assistant conductor.

The Promised Valley Chorus, a group comprising present and former members of the annual Promised Valley presentation, with Crawford Gates conducting, furnished the special musical numbers at the Friday morning meeting.

The choral music for the Friday afternoon session was provided by the Relief Society Chorus, combined choruses of the Blackfoot, Pocatello, and Pocatello North Regions, conducted by Ellen Neilson Barnes.

The Ricks College Combined

Choirs and Choruses furnished special musical numbers at the Saturday afternoon meeting. Richard Robison and Clyde Luke served as conductors.

At the General Priesthood Session on Saturday evening, the choral numbers were sung by the Tabernacle Choir Men's Chorus, with Richard P. Condie conducting.

Richard P. Condie directed the singing of the Tabernacle Choir on the Choir and Organ Broadcast on Sunday morning, with Alexander Schreiner at the organ console.

Accompaniments on the Tabernacle Organ throughout the conference sessions were played by Alexander Schreiner, Robert Cundick, and Roy M. Darley, Tabernacle Organists.

Joseph Anderson
Francis M. Gibbons
Clerks of the Conference

Index

	Page
Anderson, Elder Joseph	162
True religion needed, 163; Savior's earthly mission, 163; Messiahship of Jesus, 163; Increased conviction, 164; Christ's visit to Nephites, 164; The light of Christ, 164; Appearance in our day, 164; Witness of the Holy Ghost, 165; Need for a prophet, 166; The living Christ, 166.
Ashton, Elder Marvin J. (Priesthood Meeting)	108
No way back, 109; You can get there, 109; God cares, 109; Friend at State Prison, 109; Determination to come back, 110; Missionary going forward, 110; Girls at detention home, 111; Finding the way back, 111; Challenge to priesthood bearers, 111; Field ready for harvest, 112.
Authorities and Officers Present, General	2
Authorities and Officers Sustained, General	79
Benson, Elder Ezra Taft	24
Effects of some popular music, 24; Uncompromising standards, 25; Prophetic warnings, 25; A standard for the nations, 25; Happiness for youth, 26; Satan's methods, 26; A state of confusion, 26; Ridicule and relativism, 27; Rock festivals, 27; Best and worst of times, 28; Influence of music, 28; Not of the world, 29.
Brockbank, Elder Bernard P.	38
The Ten Commandments, 38; Love of God, 39; Worship of false gods, 38; Evil conditions today, 39; Source of divine growth, 39; Sacredness of Sabbath day, 40; Other commandments, 40; Sexual sins, 40; Honesty enjoined, 40; A basic part of gospel, 41.
Brown, Elder Hugh B.	174
Visit to Holy Land, 174; Birthplace of Jesus, 174; The Good Samaritan, 174; The Garden of Gethsemane, 174; The garden tomb, 175; Mount Tabor, 175; the Sea of Galilee, 175; Nazareth, 176; Object of visit, 176; Following in the Lord's footsteps, 176.
Brown, Bishop Victor L.	92
Prison graduation exercise, 92; Story of Jim, 92; Conversion of Ed, 93; The way to freedom, 94.
Burton, Elder Theodore M.	72
People of South America, 72; Men speaking for God, 73; Voice of God needed, 73; Isaiah's words, 73; Need for true prophet, 74;

- Answer to simple prayer, 74; Priesthood power bestowed, 75; Counsel of living prophets, 75; Growth in South America, 75; Evidence of brotherhood, 76; Power of restored gospel, 76; A prophet's voice, 76.
- Christiansen, Elder ElRay L. ----- 35
A day of distress, 35; Devil the foundation, 35; Need for opposition, 36; Potential to overcome, 36; A time of sifting, 36; "Draw nigh unto God," 37; A perfect plan, 37; King Benjamin's promise, 37.
- Cullimore, Elder James A. ----- 88
Responsibilities of bishops, 88; Assurance of forgiveness, 88; Comfort from scriptures, 89; The call to repentance, 89; Confession and forsaking, 89; Steps in repentance, 90; Extent of forgiveness, 90; Penalties imposed, 90; The time of forsaking, 91; Atoning blood of Christ, 91.
- Dunn, Elder Loren C. ----- 16
Family relationships, 16; The father's role, 17; Conflict of standards, 17; Church responsibilities, 18; Closeness to family, 18; Interest in children, 18; Brevity of association, 19; Taking time to help, 19.
- Dunn, Elder Paul H. ----- 144
Charles B. Stewart, 144; New thoughts, 144; Teachers who care, 145; What a teacher is, 145; Teaching how to live, 146; Parables of the lost, 146; Application for today, 146; A positive gospel, 147; To be lived and shared, 147.
- Dyer, Elder Alvin R. ----- 148
Formulas for living, 148; Teachings of Joseph Smith, 148; Idleness, 148; Chastity, 149; Attitude toward others, 149; Sleep and rest, 149; Good and evil, 149; The sum result, 150; The practice of restraint, 150; The crowning achievement, 150; Obedience to God's will, 151; The gospel is true, 151.
- Evans, Elder Richard L. ----- 31
The Ten Commandments, 31; Freedom to choose, 32; Respect for word of God, 32; Quibbling about scripture, 32; Moral infractions condemned, 32; "Compensation," 33; Guideline to know truth, 33; Admitting mistakes, 34; Advice to youth, 34; Commandments to be reread, 34; Testimony, 34.
- Evans, Richard L. (The Spoken Word—Tabernacle Choir Broadcast) ----- 179
- First Day—Afternoon Meeting ----- 30

First Day—Morning Meeting	3
First Session	3
Fourth Session	77
General Authorities and Officers Present	2
General Authorities and Officers Sustained	79
General Priesthood Meeting	106
Hanks, Elder Marion D. (Priesthood Meeting)	116
Casualties, 116; Excerpt from Church history, 117; Prophet's advice to youth, 117; Relationships with youth, 118; Brokenhearted father, 118; The needs of youth, 119; Unconditional love, 119; A tragic story, 119; Example of good people, 119.
Hinckley, Elder Gordon B.	158
Duty and obedience, 158; Experience of President Grant, 158; God makes a way, 159; Obedience of prophets, 159; Feeling of inadequacy, 159; Call of Heber C. Kimball, 160; Distasteful assignments, 160; Missionary call, 160; Assignment from mission president, 161; Experiences as member of Twelve, 161; Exaltation in obedience, 162.
Hunter, Elder Howard W.	51
Parent-children relationships, 51; The prophet Elijah, 52; Elijah and the widow, 52; The prophets of Baal, 52; Elijah's appeal, 53; Encounter in the wilderness, 53; Mission of Elijah, 53; Gospel preached to spirits, 54; Work for the dead, 54; Appearance of Elijah, 54.
Hunter, Elder Milton R.	48
The great commandments, 48; Showing love for God, 48; Magnitude of God's love, 48; Christ's demonstration of love, 49; Central theme of gospel, 49; Love in marriage, 50; Harmony in the home, 50.
Kimball, President Spencer W.	152
Painting of portrait, 152; A glimpse of heaven, 152; The greatest success, 153; Home of stake president, 153; Supper made ready, 154; Love and harmony visible, 154; Heaven in Navajo hogan, 154; Temple at Laie, 155; Heaven in Europe, 155; Heaven a condition, 156; Portrait completed, 156.
Lee, President Harold B.	57
The Master's commission, 57; Expansion of the work, 57; Need for spiritual guidance, 57; Clamor for security, 58; Demand for

- Christian ideals, 58; Results of prosperity, 59; Foundation of truth, 59; Application of gospel principles, 59; Conference in Great Britain, 60; Growth of the Church, 60; Signs of second coming, 61; Readiness for his coming, 61; Earthquake in Peru, 62; Admonition to serve God, 62; Words of comfort, 62.
- Lee, President Harold B. (Priesthood Meeting) ----- 128
Priesthood activity figures, 129; The weight of responsibility, 129; Focus on individual, 129; Call for professional services, 130; Caring for others, 130; Joy from husband's activity, 139; Challenge to priesthood, 131.
- Lee, President Harold B. ----- 3, 4, 7, 11, 13, 16, 20, 23, 29, 30, 31, 35, 37, 41, 45, 48, 51, 55, 78, 82, 106, 107, 108, 112, 116, 120, 123, 124, 131, 132, 138, 144, 148, 152, 156
- McConkie, Elder Bruce R. ----- 166
Worship of God, 166; Worship in spirit and truth, 167; Truth essential, 167; Key to true worship, 168; The specifics of divine worship, 168; Living the whole law, 169.
- Mason, Dr. James O. (Priesthood Meeting) ----- 120
Leadership of General Authorities, 120; Commissioner of Health Services, 121; Cases of need, 121; Program to give help, 122; Health education, 122; A balanced program, 122; Need for skilled missionaries, 122.
- Monson, Elder Thomas S. ----- 170
Hand and heart, 170; Lifted others toward God, 170; The daughter of Jairus, 170; Lived to minister, 171; Peter at gate Beautiful, 171; Charge to be a lifter, 171; Ebenezer Scrooge, 172; Love changes men, 172; Return of paroled convict, 173; The miracle of love, 173.
- Music, Summary of Conference ----- 181
- Oaks, Elder Dallin H. (Priesthood Meeting) ----- 123
Gospel view of man, 123; Spiritual and secular knowledge, 123; Gratitude for gospel truth, 124.
- Packer, Elder Boyd K. ----- 7
One as good as another, 8; The only true Church, 8; A full keyboard, 9; Single keys used, 9; Fullness restored, 9; The great apostasy, 10; Single key investigators, 10; A hobby key, 10; Thinking and praying, 10; The right to know, 10.
- Petersen, Elder Mark E. ----- 63
Hypocrisy denounced, 63; Need for honesty, 64; Widespread tendency to lie, 64; The devil a liar, 65; Those to suffer hell, 65;

Worthiness to be Christians, 65; Existence of God, 65; Gospel to be lived honestly, 66; Sayings to be kept, 66; Avarice and greed, 66; A lighter burden, 67; Need of repentance, 67; Works of truth, 67.

Priesthood Meeting, General	106
--	-----

Rector, Jr., Elder Hartman	42
Qualifications for ministry, 42; "Doing our own thing," 42; Abraham's faith rewarded, 42; Example of Jesus, 43; Lecture on faith, 43; Modern sacrifices, 44; Blessings follow sacrifice, 44.

Richards, Elder Franklin D.	20
The purpose of trials, 20; Journey of Zion's Camp, 21; Lessons from Zion's Camp, 21; The Twelve and Seventies chosen, 21; Winter of 1838-39, 22; Liberty Jail experience, 22; Priesthood and Church government, 22; A refiner's fire, 23; Faith and endurance, 23; Personal witness, 23.

Richards, Elder LeGrand	82
Bread of life, 82; Foundation for faith, 83; Judgment according to works, 83; A rock foundation, 83; Eternity of marriage, 84; Reaction of Baptist minister, 84; "I wed thee forever," 85; Knowledge of life eternal, 85; Family ties to endure, 85; Impression on investigator, 86; Articles of Faith, 86.

Romney, Elder Marion G.	68
Society's sad plight, 68; A guiding light, 68; A light to break forth, 69; The times of the Gentiles, 69; Light not perceived, 69; Signs of second coming, 70; Promises to righteous, 70; The sure light, 71; Eternal purposes roll on, 72.

Salt Lake Tabernacle Choir and Organ Broadcast	179
---	-----

Second Day—Afternoon Meeting	77
---	----

Second Day—Morning Meeting	56
---	----

Second Session	30
-----------------------------	----

Seventh Session	157
------------------------------	-----

Sill, Elder Sterling W.	97
Making firm decisions, 97; Things not to do, 98; The kind of emphasis, 98; Thou shalt not, 98; Importance of Ten Commandments, 99; Cancelling virtues, 99; Present-day attitudes, 99; Robbing God, 100; Special witness for God, 100.

	Page
Simpson, Bishop Robert L. (Priesthood Meeting)	112
Reasons for attendance, 112; Five important factors, 113; Confirmation of truth, 113; ". . . few are chosen," 114; ". . . strengthen thy brethren," 114; Help of the Holy Ghost, 114; People helped by people, 115; Live beyond Satan's grasp, 115; A promise and a challenge, 115.
Sixth Session	132
Smith, Elder Eldred G.	14
Council in heaven, 14; Lucifer's plan, 14; An opposing force, 14; The power to resist, 14; The trials of Job, 15; Key to decision making, 15; Importance of Lord's help, 15; Asset of free agency, 16.
Smith, President Joseph Fielding	5
A position of strength, 5; Salvation in Christ, 5; Gospel for all men, 5; Strength of British saints, 6; Invitation to "come unto Christ," 6; Worship in spirit and in truth, 6; Love for God and his work, 6; Knowledge of Redeemer, 7.
Smith, President Joseph Fielding (Priesthood Meeting)	107
Greatest of all gifts, 107; Power of the priesthood, 107; Blessings through priesthood, 107; Responsibility to bless others, 108.
Smith, President Joseph Fielding	178
Appreciation for counselors, 178; Spirit of oneness, 178; Blessings for faithful, 178; Divinity of the work, 178.
Stapley, Elder Delbert L.	101
In Satan's power, 101; Protection promised, 101; Opinion of Scout leader, 102; Reasons for joining Church, 102; River symbolic of life, 104; Fortification against evil, 105.
Summary of Conference Music	181
Sustaining of General Authorities and Officers	79
Tabernacle Choir and Organ Broadcast	179
Tanner, President N. Eldon (Priesthood Meeting)	125
Visit to Far East, 125; Effective missionaries, 125; Work of servicemen, 126; Opportunity to serve, 126; Promise of blessings, 127; Problem with delayed recommends, 127; Returned missionaries, 128; Importance of a soul, 128.

INDEX

189

Page

Tanner, President N. Eldon	132
Purpose for man's existence, 133; Two plans presented, 133; Satan's plan, 133; "Where art thou," 134; Adam's reply, 134; Obedience by faith, 134; Nephi's obedience, 135; "Forbidden fruits," 135; Teaching our families, 136; Undisciplined homes, 136; Conflict between right and wrong, 136; Choosing the right, 137; Perilous times, 137; Influence of gospel living, 137; Atonement of Christ, 138; Appeal to youth, 138.
Tanner, President N. Eldon	-56, 63, 67, 68, 72, 77, 78, 82, 87, 91, 94, 97, 101, 105, 157, 158, 162, 166, 169, 170, 173, 176
Taylor, Elder Henry D.	11
Man's free agency, 11; Times of testing, 11; Peter the Rock, 12; Joseph Smith tested, 12; Temptations of our day, 13; Passing the test, 13.
Third Day-Afternoon Meeting	157
Third Day-Morning Meeting	132
Third Session	56
Tuttle, Elder A. Theodore	94
Recognizing the genuine, 98; ". . . the things of this world," 95; Neglect of children, 95; Meaning of fatherhood, 95; Responsibility to teach children, 96; Need for exemplary parents, 96; Cure for social ailments, 97.
Vandenberg, Bishop John H.	139
Our preexistence with God, 139; How to live, 139; Good and evil, 140; Evidence of God's existence, 140; Vision of Moses, 141; Purpose of creations, 142; The plan of salvation, 142; "The Child's Appeal," 142; Things that bring happiness, 143; A blessing to the world, 143.
Young, Elder S. Dilworth	45
Teachings on charity, 45; Opportunities for service, 46; Help for the lonely, 46; Showing love through deeds, 47; A personal obligation, 47; Pure religion and undefiled, 47.

ONE HUNDRED FORTY-SECOND ANNUAL

CONFERENCE

OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST
OF LATTER-DAY SAINTS

HELD IN THE TABERNACLE
SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH

APRIL 6, 8, 9, 1972

WITH REPORT OF DISCOURSES

Published by
The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints
Salt Lake City, Utah

OFFICIAL REPORT
of the
ONE HUNDRED FORTY-SECOND ANNUAL GENERAL CONFERENCE
of
THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST
OF LATTER-DAY SAINTS

held in the Tabernacle on Temple Square
in
Salt Lake City, Utah
APRIL 6, 8, 9, 1972

Published by
The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints

©1972 Corporation of the President
of
The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints

All Rights Reserved
Printed in USA by the
Deseret News Press
PBCT026 9/72

THE ONE HUNDRED FORTY-SECOND ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER-DAY SAINTS

The 142nd Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City, Utah, on Thursday, April 6, 1972, at 10 o'clock A.M.

The general sessions of the conference were held at 10:00 A.M. and 2:00 P.M. on Thursday, April 6, Saturday, April 8, and Sunday, April 9. The General Priesthood Meeting was held in the Tabernacle on Saturday, April 8, at 7 o'clock P.M.

President Joseph Fielding Smith was present and presided at all sessions of the conference. Under his direction, his counselors, Presidents Harold B. Lee and N. Eldon Tanner, conducted the sessions of the conference assigned to each of them.

All General Authorities of the Church were present with the exception of Elder Delbert L. Stapley who was excused because of illness.

To fill the vacancy caused by the death of Elder Richard L. Evans on November 1, 1971, Elder Marvin J. Ashton was sustained as a member of the Council of the Twelve Apostles.

The Presiding Bishopric was reorganized at this conference. Presiding Bishop John H. Vandenberg, his first counselor, Robert L. Simpson, and his second counselor, Victor L. Brown, were released with a vote of thanks for the excellent service they had rendered. The following brethren were sustained by the conference as the new Presiding Bishopric: Victor L. Brown, Presiding Bishop; H. Burke Peterson, first counselor; and Vaughn J. Featherstone, second counselor. Elders John H. Vandenberg and Robert L. Simpson were sustained as Assistants to the Twelve.

The proceedings of the conference sessions were given extensive coverage in the United States and Canada over many television and radio stations, coast to coast, originating with KSL in Salt Lake City.

By means of satellite transmission, the sessions of the conference were heard over radio in Australia and countries of South America.

Countries in Europe, South and Central America, Africa, and parts of Asia, totaling nearly two-thirds of the world were able to receive broadcasts of these proceedings over International Short-wave Radio Station WNYW, with studios in New York.

Through special arrangements the Saturday morning and the Sunday morning sessions were carried from the Tabernacle over direct oceanic cables to a large number of members and friends assembled in chapels throughout Great Britain, Germany, France, Holland, Belgium, and Austria. These sessions, in addition to being broadcast direct, were video-taped, and released to many television stations to be broadcast later to the eastern and central parts of the United States, Hawaii, and bases of the Armed Forces throughout the Pacific, and carried by radio to Vietnam.

Re-broadcasts of all sessions of the conference were sent over KSL Radio in Salt Lake City, KMBZ Radio at Kansas City, Missouri, and WNYW International Short-wave Radio in New York, beginning at midnight on Thursday, Saturday, and Sunday, April 6, 8 and 9, to many parts of the United States and the world.

The General Priesthood Meeting held on Saturday evening was transmitted over closed-circuit from the Salt Lake Tabernacle to over 170,000 men of the priesthood assembled in approximately 700 buildings throughout the United States and Canada, and via closed-circuit television to eight buildings in Salt Lake City, and to the Brigham Young University.

The report of the conference also includes the continuity of the Tabernacle Choir and Organ Broadcast over the Columbia Broadcasting System on Sunday morning from 9:30 to 10 o'clock, immediately preceding the general conference session.

GENERAL AUTHORITIES OF THE CHURCH PRESENT

The following General Authorities of the Church were present:

The First Presidency: Joseph Fielding Smith, Harold B. Lee, and N. Eldon Tanner.

The Quorum of the Twelve Apostles: Spencer W. Kimball, Ezra Taft Benson, Mark E. Petersen,¹ Marion G. Romney, LeGrand Richards, Hugh B. Brown, Howard W. Hunter, Gordon B. Hinckley, Thomas S. Monson, Boyd K. Packer, and Marvin J. Ashton.

Patriarch to the Church: Eldred G. Smith.

Assistants to the Twelve: Alma Sonne, ElRay L. Christiansen, Sterling W. Sill, Henry D. Taylor, Alvin R. Dyer, Franklin D. Richards, Theodore M. Burton, Bernard P. Brockbank, James A. Cullimore, Marion D. Hanks, Joseph Anderson, David B. Haight, William H. Bennett, John H. Vandenberg, and Robert L. Simpson.

The First Council of Seventy: S. Dilworth Young, Milton R. Hunter, Bruce R. McConkie, A Theodore Tuttle, Paul H. Dunn, Hartman Rector, Jr., and Loren C. Dunn.

The Presiding Bishopric: Victor L. Brown, H. Burke Peterson, and Vaughn J. Featherstone.

OTHER AUTHORITIES PRESENT

Other authorities of the Church in attendance at the conference included the officers of the Historical Department, members of the Church Board of Education; Church educational authorities and supervisors; Regional Representatives; Presidents of Stakes and their counselors; Presidents of Temples; Patriarchs; Bishoprics of wards; and presidencies and members of Melchizedek and Aaronic Priesthood quorums.

Many auxiliary officers, general, stake and ward, from all parts of the Church, were also in attendance.

¹Elder Delbert L. Stapley of the Council of the Twelve was excused on account of illness.

FIRST DAY MORNING MEETING

FIRST SESSION

The opening session of the conference convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City on Thursday, April 6, 1972, at 10 o'clock A.M. President Joseph Fielding presided at this session. President Harold B. Lee, first counselor in the First Presidency, conducting the meeting.

The special music for this session was provided by the Brigham Young University Combined Choruses, with Ralph Woodward conducting. Robert Cundick was at the organ.

President Lee made the following remarks at the opening of the conference:

President Harold B. Lee

We extend to all cordial greetings and welcome to this the opening session of the 142nd Annual Conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. We are convened in the historic Salt Lake Tabernacle on Temple Square.

During the past two days the general officers and teachers of the Primary Association of the Church have been convened in their annual conference. We are grateful to these sisters for the service they are rendering toward the welfare and development of the children of the Church. We pray that the Lord will bless them for their devotion and loyalty.

All of the General Authorities are in attendance at this conference with the exception of Elder Delbert L. Stapley, who upon the advice of the doctors is in the hospital, reported to be in satisfactory condition. They have advised against having visitors, however.

There is one who is missing this morning. It is with subdued hearts that we remember our beloved Richard L. Evans. His voice, his spirit, and his admonitions and counsel were one of the highlights of his association as a General Authority of the Church. Richard L. Evans didn't just belong to the Church; he belonged to the world, and they claimed him as such. We know that there are heavenly choirs, and maybe they needed an announcer, and one to give the Spoken Word. If so, maybe the need was so great that he is called to a higher service in that place where time is no more. We are grateful that his lovely Alice is with us this morning.

The proceedings of this General Conference will be telecast by closed-circuit color television in the Assembly Hall, and also in one of the auditoriums of the Salt Palace.

We are also pleased to announce that these proceedings will be given extensive coverage in the United States and Canada over many television and radio stations, coast to coast, originating with KSL in Salt Lake City.

By means of satellite transmission, sessions of this conference will be heard over radio in Australia and countries of South America.

Countries in Europe, South and Central America, Africa, and parts of Asia, totaling nearly two-thirds of the world, will be able to receive broadcasts of these proceedings over International Short-wave Radio Station WNYW, with studios in New York.

Thursday, April 6

Re-broadcasts of all sessions of the conference will be received over KSL Radio beginning at midnight tonight, and can be heard in many parts of the United States and the world.

Members of the Church will attend this conference from the stakes and missions covering most of the free world. In this connection we have in our audience this morning a great president, President Henry Burkhardt, who is the president of the Dresden Mission in the German Democratic Republic, with headquarters in Dresden. By permission of the German government in East Germany, and by the grace of the Almighty, this great man who heads our work has been permitted to come over to this country. We welcome President Burkhardt as one of the noblemen, in whose charge there is so much to be done, and he is doing it so well. May the Lord preserve him, and give him the stature he needs to do this great service.

The General Priesthood conference to be held Saturday night will be transmitted over closed-circuit from the Salt Lake Tabernacle to over 170,000 men of the priesthood assembled in approximately 700 buildings throughout the United States and Canada, and by way of closed-circuit television to eight buildings in Salt Lake City, and to the Brigham Young University.

We should like to express our appreciation to those responsible for the beautiful flowers that decorate the stand.

We have a patriarchs meeting, to be held for patriarchs appointed since the October Conference, this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in the auditorium on the third floor of the Church Office Building, which will be under the direction of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles. Stake presidents or their representatives and General Authorities are invited to attend.

Under the direction of the First Presidency a Welfare-Agricultural Meeting will be held in the Assembly Hall Saturday morning at 7:30 o'clock. Invited to attend this special session are all stake presidencies, high counselors, bishoprics, agricultural operating committees, stake Relief Society presidents, and others responsible for operating Welfare Production projects.

The music for this session will be rendered by the Brigham Young University Combined Choruses, with Ralph Woodward conducting and Robert Cundick at the organ.

We shall begin this service by the Brigham Young University Combined Choruses singing, "The Morning Breaks; the Shadows Flee."

The invocation will be offered by Elder John H. Groberg, Regional Representative of the Twelve.

The Brigham Young University Combined Choruses sang the anthem, "The Morning Breaks; the Shadows Flee."

The opening prayer was offered by Elder John H. Groberg, Regional Representative of the Twelve.

President Lee

The invocation was just offered by Elder John H. Groberg, Regional Representative of the Twelve.

You are pleased, of course, with us to see President Joseph Fielding Smith here, and all the proceedings of this conference are under his direction, and he has asked me to conduct this service.

The women of the Brigham Young University Combined Choruses will now favor us with, "We Ever Pray for Thee."

The hymn, "We Ever Pray for Thee," was rendered by the women of the Brigham Young University Combined Choruses.

President Lee

I am sure you recognize that lovely hymn as a salute to the prophets of the Lord in our day, which of course includes our own beloved president, Joseph Fielding Smith.

I am sure many of you have noticed the greatly improved lighting in the Tabernacle this morning. In this connection I might say to you that this was one of the projects that Richard L. Evans was greatly concerned with, and he worked with us and the lighting people in the consummation of this most beautiful result. We appreciate very much the efforts that have been made, and the greatly improved lighting which you observe here.

Elder Francis M. Gibbons, secretary to the First Presidency, will now present the Statistical Report of the Church for the year 1971. This will be followed by the reading of the Auditors Report by Elder Wilford G. Edling of the Church Finance Committee.

Elder Francis M. Gibbons

Statistical Report 1971

For the information of the members of the Church.

The First Presidency has issued the following Statistical Report concerning the membership of the Church at the end of the year 1971:

Number of Stakes of Zion at the Close of 1971	562
Number of Wards	4,342
Number of Independent Branches in Stakes	793
Total Wards and Independent Branches in Stakes at Close of Year	5,135
Number of Mission Branches at Close of Year	1,942
Number of Full-time Missions at End of Year	98

Church Membership, December 31, 1971

In the Stakes	2,622,439
In the Missions	468,514
Total Membership	3,090,953

Church Growth During 1971

Children Blessed in Stakes and Missions	68,659
Children of Record Baptized in Stakes and Missions	53,524
Converts Baptized in Stakes and Missions	83,514

Social Statistics for 1971

Birth Rate per Thousand	28.50
-------------------------------	-------

Thursday, April 6

Number of Persons Married per Thousand	15.12
Death Rate per Thousand	4.92

Priesthood:Members Holding the Aaronic Priesthood, December 31, 1971

Deacons	136,969
Teachers	98,814
Priests	152,886
Total Number Holding Aaronic Priesthood	388,669

Members Holding the Melchizedek Priesthood, December 31, 1971

Elders	252,051
Seventies	23,914
High Priests	88,416
Total Number Holding Melchizedek Priesthood	364,381

Grand Total, Members Holding Aaronic or Melchizedek Priesthood --- 753,050

An Increase of 23,824 During the Year 1971

Auxiliary Organizations:

Relief Society (Membership)	377,840
Sunday School (Enrollment)	2,387,509
Young Men's Mutual Improvement Association (Enrollment)	355,107
Young Women's Mutual Improvement Association (Enrollment)	386,735
Primary Association (Children Enrollment)	487,951

Welfare Plan: (Statistics for 1971)

Number of Persons Assisted	100,722
Number Placed in Remunerative Employment	12,048
Man-Days of Work Donated to the Welfare Plan	195,932
Unit-Days of Equipment Use Donated	5,589

Genealogical Society:

Names Cleared in 1971 for Temple Ordinances	1,750,416
Genealogical Records Microfilmed in 17 Countries During the Year Brought the Total to 712,945 One Hundred Foot Rolls of Microfilm for Use of the Church Which Are the Equivalent of Over 3,401,301 Printed Volumes of 300 Pages Each.

Temples:

Number of Ordinances Performed During 1971 in the 13 Operating Temples:

For the Living	62,672
For the Dead	6,898,428
Total Number of Ordinances	6,961,100

Church School System: (1970-71 School Year)

Total 1970-71 School Year Cumulative Enrollments in Church Schools, Including Institutes and Seminaries	235,861
--	---------

Those Who Have Passed Away

- Elder Richard L. Evans, member of the Council of the Twelve Apostles
- Jessie Evans Smith, wife of President Joseph Fielding Smith
- Leona Ballantyne Woolley Sonne, wife of Elder Alma Sonne, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve
- George R. Hill, former general superintendent of the Deseret Sunday School Union
- Albert B. Crandall, president of the Oklahoma Mission
- Harold M. Wright, former Regional Representative of the Twelve
- Bertha Anderson Kleinman, noted poetess and author
- George Dewey Clyde, prominent educator and civil engineer, and former governor of the State of Utah

Elder Wilford G. Edling

To the First Presidency of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints

Dear Brethren:

We have reviewed the report of the financial operations of the Corporation of the President of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, together with those of the auxiliaries and other organizations for which accounts are maintained in the Financial Department of the Church for the fiscal year ended August 31, 1971. Attention was given particularly to the accounting and auditing procedures followed as to funds received and to the manner in which expenditures are controlled. We have determined that the expenditures of such funds are authorized by the First Presidency and by budgetary procedures. The budget is authorized by the Council on Disposition of the Tithes comprised of the First Presidency, members of the Council of the Twelve and the Presiding Bishopric.

The Financial Department of the Church has kept pace with current technological developments in record keeping and employs the most modern data processing equipment in maintaining its accounts. Auditing techniques and procedures are keeping abreast of the increased use of data processing equipment.

A regular audit of the entities referred to above is conducted by the Church Auditing Department, which is completely independent of all other departments. Incorporated businesses owned or controlled by the Church, for which accounts are not maintained in the Financial Department, are audited by professional auditing firms or by governmental regulatory agencies.

Based upon our review of the financial reports of the Corporation of the President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and explanations made by the personnel of the Financial and Auditing Departments of the Church, we are of the opinion that the assets of the Corporation of the President have been properly accounted for and expenditures of funds during the fiscal year ended August 31, 1971, were made in accordance with the established procedures outlined herein.

Thursday, April 6

Respectfully submitted,

CHURCH FINANCE COMMITTEE

Wilford G. Edling
Harold H. Bennett
Glenn E. Nielson
Weston E. Hamilton
O. Leslie Stone

President Harold B. Lee

Too much cannot be said in great appreciation to Brother Edling and the Finance Committee for the excellent service they give to the Church in seeing to it that all of our financial transactions are handled properly.

President N. Eldon Tanner of the First Presidency will now present the business of the conference and the sustaining of the Authorities of the Church.

President N. Eldon Tanner

We shall now present the General Authorities, General Officers, and General Auxiliary Officers of the Church for the sustaining vote of the General Conference.

Before doing that, however, we desire to release with a vote of thanks for the excellent services they have rendered, the Presiding Bishopric of the Church: John H. Vandenberg, Presiding Bishop; Robert L. Simpson, first counselor; and Victor L. Brown, second counselor. These brethren have served ably and faithfully for many years, and we want them to know of our sincere appreciation for their valued service. Will those who would like to join with us in extending a vote of love and appreciation to them, signify it in the usual manner. (A vote of appreciation was extended to these brethren of the Presiding Bishopric by the uplifted hands of the congregation.)

President Tanner then presented the following General Authorities and Officers of the Church for the sustaining vote of the General Conference:

GENERAL AUTHORITIES AND OFFICERS OF THE CHURCH

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY

Joseph Fielding Smith, Prophet, Seer and Revelator, and President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints

Harold B. Lee, First Counselor in the First Presidency

Nathan Eldon Tanner, Second Counselor in the First Presidency

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL OF THE TWELVE APOSTLES

Harold B. Lee

ACTING PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL OF THE TWELVE APOSTLES

Spencer W. Kimball

QUORUM OF THE TWELVE APOSTLES

Spencer W. Kimball
Ezra Taft Benson
Mark E. Petersen
Delbert L. Stapley
Marion G. Romney
LeGrand Richards

Hugh B. Brown
Howard W. Hunter
Gordon B. Hinckley
Thomas S. Monson
Boyd K. Packer
Marvin J. Ashton

PATRIARCH TO THE CHURCH

Eldred G. Smith

The Counselors in the First Presidency, the Twelve Apostles, and the Patriarch to the Church as Prophets, Seers, and Revelators.

ASSISTANTS TO THE TWELVE

Alma Sonne
ElRay L. Christiansen
Sterling W. Sill
Henry D. Taylor
Alvin R. Dyer
Franklin D. Richards
Theodore M. Burton
Bernard P. Brockbank

James A. Cullimore
Marion D. Hanks
Joseph Anderson
David B. Haight
William H. Bennett
John H. Vandenberg
Robert L. Simpson

TRUSTEE-IN-TRUST

Joseph Fielding Smith

as Trustee-in-Trust for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints

THE FIRST COUNCIL OF THE SEVENTY

S. Dilworth Young
Milton R. Hunter
Bruce R. McConkie
A. Theodore Tuttle

Paul H. Dunn
Hartman Rector, Jr.
Loren C. Dunn

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC

Victor L. Brown, Presiding Bishop
H. Burke Peterson, First Counselor
Vaughn J. Featherstone, Second Counselor

REGIONAL REPRESENTATIVES

All Regional Representatives of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles as they are at present constituted.

HISTORICAL DEPARTMENT

Alvin R. Dyer, Managing Director
Leonard J. Arrington, Church Historian
Earl E. Olson, Church Archivist
Donald T. Schmidt, Church Librarian

GENERAL CONFERENCE

PRIESTHOOD WELFARE COMMITTEE

Victor L. Brown, Chairman
Junior Wright Child, Managing Director

PRIESTHOOD HOME TEACHING AND FAMILY HOME EVENING COMMITTEE

Boyd K. Packer, Adviser
James A. Cullimore, Managing Director

PRIESTHOOD MISSIONARY COMMITTEE

Spencer W. Kimball, Chairman of Executive Committee
Gordon B. Hinckley and Thomas S. Monson, Vice Chairmen
Bruce R. McConkie, Managing Director

PRIESTHOOD GENEALOGICAL COMMITTEE

Howard W. Hunter, Adviser
Theodore M. Burton, Managing Director

UNIFIED SOCIAL SERVICES

Marvin J. Ashton, Adviser
Robert L. Simpson, Managing Director

PHYSICAL FACILITIES DEPARTMENT

This includes the Building Committee and its activities, the Maintenance Department, and the Real Estate Department. They are headed by capable men, but we are coordinating the work of these three under the direction of

Marion G. Romney, Adviser
John H. Vandenberg, Managing Director

DEPARTMENT OF INTERNAL COMMUNICATIONS

Gordon B. Hinckley, Thomas S. Monson, and Boyd K. Packer, Advisers
J. Thomas Fyans, Managing Director

CHURCH BOARD OF EDUCATION

Joseph Fielding Smith
Harold B. Lee
Nathan Eldon Tanner
Spencer W. Kimball
Ezra Taft Benson
Mark E. Petersen
Delbert L. Stapley
Marion G. Romney
LeGrand Richards
Hugh B. Brown
Howard W. Hunter

Gordon B. Hinckley
Thomas S. Monson
Boyd K. Packer
Marvin J. Ashton
Alvin R. Dyer
Marion D. Hanks
A. Theodore Tuttle
Paul H. Dunn
Victor L. Brown
Belle S. Spafford

COMMISSIONER, CHURCH EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM

Neal A. Maxwell

COMMISSIONER, HEALTH SERVICES CORPORATION

Dr. James O. Mason

CHURCH FINANCE COMMITTEE

Wilford G. Edling
Harold H. Bennett
Glenn E. Nielson
Weston E. Hamilton
O. Leslie Stone

CHURCH AUDITOR

James A. Norberg

GENERAL AUXILIARY OFFICERS OF THE CHURCH

RELIEF SOCIETY

Belle Smith Spafford, President
Marianne Clark Sharp, First Counselor
Louise Wallace Madsen, Second Counselor
with all members of the Board as at present constituted.

SUNDAY SCHOOL

Russell M. Nelson, General Superintendent
Joseph B. Wirthlin, First Assistant Superintendent
Richard L. Warner, Second Assistant Superintendent
with all members of the Board as at present constituted.

YOUNG MEN'S MUTUAL IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION

W. Jay Eldredge, General Superintendent
George Richard Hill, First Assistant Superintendent
George I. Cannon, Second Assistant Superintendent
with all members of the Board as at present constituted.

YOUNG WOMEN'S MUTUAL IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION

Florence Smith Jacobsen, President
Margaret Romney Jackson, First Counselor
Dorothy Porter Holt, Second Counselor
with all members of the Board as at present constituted.

PRIMARY ASSOCIATION

LaVern Watts Parmley, President
Naomi Ward Randall, First Counselor
Florence Reece Lane, Second Counselor
with all members of the Board as at present constituted.

GENERAL CONFERENCE

TABERNACLE CHOIR

Isaac M. Stewart, President
 Richard P. Condie, Conductor
 Jay E. Welch, Assistant Conductor

TABERNACLE ORGANISTS

Alexander Schreiner, Chief Organist
 Robert N. Cundick
 Roy M. Darley
 Frank W. Asper, Organist Emeritus

President Tanner

I can see no opposing vote, so the vote is unanimous, President Smith.

President Harold B. Lee

Thank you, President Tanner. Will Bishop Peterson and Bishop Featherstone now come to their places, and will you Assistants to the Twelve, please take your places, and the other brethren will shift accordingly. We will demonstrate to the Church just how this takes place, as you make the change.

So that you will know something about the identity of these new brethren, Brother Peterson has been a regional representative of the Twelve, and formerly president of the Phoenix North Stake. Bishop Featherstone has been presiding and is now presiding over the Boise North Stake. This, I am sure, will bring joy to the hearts of the folks whom they have served and who love them so well.

It will now be our privilege to hear from our beloved President Joseph Fielding Smith.

President Joseph Fielding Smith

My dear brethren and sisters: We bid you welcome once again to a general conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

These conference sessions are solemn and sacred occasions on which we come together to wait upon the Lord, to seek his Spirit, and to be renewed in our desires to serve him and keep his commandments.

Open to truth

It is our prayer that all those who are present, and all those who hear the broadcasts, and all those who read the conference messages will have their hearts open to the great truths which will be presented and the words of wise counsel which will fall from the lips of those who shall speak to us.

All of our Church conferences are occasions to teach one another the doctrines of the gospel; to testify of the truth and divinity of those things which have come to us by the opening of the heavens; and to counsel together, and with the Lord, as to the things we should all do to fill the full measure of our creation.

We are the servants of the Lord. We have received light and truth and revelation from him. He has commanded us to proclaim his truths and live his laws. And so now, in harmony with his mind and will, and as guided by his Holy Spirit, we give counsel and direction to the Saints and to the world.

The last days

To the world I say: These are the last days. They are days of trouble and sorrow and desolation. They are days when Satan dwells in the hearts of ungodly men, when iniquity abounds, and when the signs of the times are being shown forth.

And there is no cure for the ills of the world except the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. Our hope for peace, for temporal and spiritual prosperity, and for an eventual inheritance in the kingdom of God is found only in and through the restored gospel. There is no work that any of us can engage in that is as important as preaching the gospel and building up the Church and kingdom of God on earth.

Invitation to all

And so we invite all our Father's children, everywhere, to believe in Christ, to receive him as he is revealed by living prophets, and to join The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. We call upon the world to repent, to worship that God who made them, and to believe the words of those whom he hath sent in this day to proclaim his gospel.

To the honest in heart in all nations we say: The Lord loves you. He wants you to receive the full blessings of the gospel. He is now inviting you to believe the Book of Mormon, to accept Joseph Smith as a prophet, and to come into his earthly kingdom and thereby become heirs of eternal life in his heavenly kingdom.

To those who have received the gospel we say: Keep the commandments. Walk in the light. Endure to the end. Be true to every covenant and obligation, and the Lord will bless you beyond your fondest dreams. As it was said by one of old: "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man." (Eccles. 12:13.)

Importance of family

To all the families in Israel we say: The family is the most important organization in time or in eternity. Our purpose in life is to create for ourselves eternal family units. There is nothing that will ever come into your family life that is as important as the sealing blessings of the temple and then keeping the covenants made in connection with this order of celestial marriage.

To parents in the Church we say: Love each other with all your hearts. Keep the moral law and live the gospel. Bring up your children in light and truth; teach them the saving truths of the gospel; and make your home a heaven on earth, a place where the Spirit of the Lord may dwell and where righteousness may be enthroned in the heart of each member.

Successful parents

It is the will of the Lord to strengthen and preserve the family unit. We plead with fathers to take their rightful place as the head of the house. We ask mothers to sustain and support their husbands and to be lights to their children.

President Joseph F. Smith said: "Motherhood lies at the foundation of happiness in the home, and of prosperity in the nation. God has laid upon men and women very sacred obligations with respect to motherhood, and they are obligations that cannot be disregarded without invoking divine displeasure." (Gospel Doctrine [Deseret Book, 1939], p. 288.) Also, "To be a successful father or a successful mother is greater than to be a successful general or a successful statesman." (Ibid., p. 285.)

Counsel to youth

To the youth of Zion we say: The Lord bless you and keep you, which most assuredly will be so as you learn his laws and live in harmony with them. Be true to every trust. Honor thy father and thy mother. Dwell together in love and conformity. Be modest in your dress. Overcome the world, and do not be led astray by the fashions and practices of those whose interests are centered upon the things of this world.

Thursday, April 6

Marry in the temple, and live joyous and righteous lives. Remember the words of Alma: "Wickedness never was happiness." (Al. 41:10.) Remember also that our hope for the future and the destiny of the Church and the cause of righteousness rest in your hands.

Service in Church

To those who are called to positions of trust and responsibility in the Church we say: Preach the gospel in plainness and simplicity as it is found in the standard works of the Church. Testify of the truth of the work and the doctrines revealed anew in our day.

Remember the words of the Lord Jesus Christ, who said, "I am among you as he that serveth" (Luke 22:27), and choose to serve with an eye single to the glory of God. Visit the fatherless and the widows in their affliction, and keep yourself unspotted from the sins of the world.

Now there is much more that the Lord would have us hear and know and do, and I shall rely upon President Lee and President Tanner, upon the members of the Council of the Twelve and the other General Authorities to counsel further with you by the power of the Spirit about these things.

Personal testimony

May I conclude by bearing personal testimony of the truth and divinity of the Lord's work on earth and of the eternal verity of those doctrines he has revealed through Joseph Smith and his associates.

I know by the revelations of the Holy Ghost to my soul that God our Heavenly Father lives; that he sent his Only Begotten Son into the world to work out the infinite and eternal atonement; and that he has restored in these last days the fullness of his everlasting gospel.

I know and testify that the Lord's purposes on earth shall prevail. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is here to stay. The Lord's work shall triumph. No power on earth can prevent the spread of truth and the preaching of the gospel in every nation.

I feel to thank the Lord for his goodness and grace, for all the blessings he has showered upon us so abundantly; and I pray that we may all be worthy to receive the eternal fullness which he offers his saints through the gospel of his Son, and I do this in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. □

President Harold B. Lee

Thank you, President Smith, for that powerful message, which will certainly be a keynote for this great conference.

We will now invite the congregation to stand and join with the Combined Choruses in singing, "We Thank Thee, O God, for a Prophet."

The congregation sang the hymn, We Thank Thee, O God, for a Prophet."

President Lee

It will now be our pleasure to hear from Elder Mark E. Petersen of the Council of the Twelve Apostles. He will be followed by Elder Loren C. Dunn of the First Council of Seventy.

Elder Mark E. Petersen

Of the Council of the Twelve

It was most fitting, my brethren and sisters, that we sing the glorious hymn that we have just sung ["We Thank Thee, O God, for a Prophet"], because we have just listened to the voice of the prophet of God.

He has spoken as the divinely appointed mouthpiece of the Lord here on earth.

Latter-day Saints revere him. They accept his word as coming by inspiration and revelation for their guidance in these troubled times.

Divine guidance

People who are not members of this church may not sense the great significance attached to his ministry. Even some Latter-day Saints have not yet discovered it. But the president of the Church is in fact a prophet raised up in these last days to give inspired guidance, not only to Latter-day Saints, but to all mankind everywhere.

The Almighty has said of him and the other prophets of this church:

"... they shall speak as they are moved upon by the Holy Ghost.

"And whatsoever they shall speak when moved upon by the Holy Ghost shall be scripture, shall be the will of the Lord, shall be the mind of the Lord, shall be the word of the Lord, shall be the voice of the Lord, and the power of God unto salvation." (D&C 68:3-4.)

President Smith is a prophet in the same sense as were Moses and Isaiah, Ezekiel, Jeremiah, Paul and Peter, and others who ministered anciently.

Prophets past and present

Every faithful person will agree that there were prophets in Israel during Old Testament times. Prophets also were a part of the church as established by the Savior in his day.

They too were like Moses and Isaiah, but they were even more—they were Christian prophets, chosen by the Lord for the Christian ministry to properly teach the saints and to protect them from false doctrines that could lead them astray.

Few modern people, whether Jewish or Christian, realize that there are living prophets on earth today, men who hold the same gifts and powers that characterized the prophets of old. But they are here, alive and alert. They are modern men, well educated and fully oriented to present-day conditions. They give the word of God as it is received now, just as Moses and Isaiah, Peter and Paul ministered in their day.

Revelation for our day

Try to realize it if you will. God does speak to us now. He manifests himself through prophets whom he has raised up for this day—for 1972—for present-day people—to help them to successfully combat the seductions of a decadent and blinded world.

Every one of you may have the full benefit of his heavenly guidance if you will but accept it. You can know God's will pertaining to your own self, given now—not two thousand years ago, but here and now.

Did not Moses minister to the particular needs of his people? Did not Jeremiah, Isaiah, and Ezekiel do likewise? Did not Peter and Paul give answers to the immediate problems of their day, tailored to fit the conditions that faced their own neighbors and friends?

Similar blessings are available now to all who will hear. They may be obtained through today's prophet with today's revelation to solve today's problems.

In this time of great wickedness,

Thursday, April 6

the Almighty is making a dramatic effort to save mankind before destruction comes upon the world, and he is doing so by giving a great new revelation of himself. He has appeared to modern mortal men who have seen his face and heard his voice.

No more is he an absentee God. No longer is he isolated from us. In the time in which we ourselves live he has shown himself to be a divine reality, physical as well as spiritual.

By showing himself literally to modern men, he has removed all doubt as to his existence. He lives, as does his divine Begotten Son, Jesus Christ.

Both have made themselves known by a great new revelation in our day!

Is that hard to believe? Do you doubt it? Does it seem incredible to you that God would appear to modern men?

He certainly revealed himself anciently. If he is unchangeable, as the scriptures say, should he not do as much for modern people as he did for the ancients?

In Bible times

Throughout Bible times he made himself known. Especially when his people began to drift astray did he manifest himself in power to bring them back to the fold.

This he did through new prophets whom he raised up from time to time, and to whom he gave new revelations, which revitalized and gave added meaning to the divine word previously given.

After long centuries of laboring through his prophets, he then sent his own Beloved Son, not to condemn the world but to save it.

To accomplish his purposes, the Lord founded his church and taught his gospel, and for a time many followed it. But since then mankind again has drifted from his precepts and neglected his commandments; hence the condition of the world today.

Final effort to save

But because he loves modern people as he did those of ancient times, the Lord is now making a final effort to save us. This he does by precisely the same means that he used anciently; that is, by giving new revelation and raising up new prophets through whom he speaks to mankind.

You may say that you have been taught that the Almighty no longer reveals himself, that no more revelation is needed, and that the Bible is sufficient.

It is admitted that for centuries revelation did stop. There were no more apostles and prophets on the earth. This is only too true and is most regrettable.

But the flow of revelation stopped only for the same reason that it ceased occasionally in Old Testament times. Isaiah explained it in this way:

"... the Lord's hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; neither his ear heavy, that it cannot hear:

"But your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid his face from you." (Isa. 59:1-2.)

However, in spite of wickedness, the scripture says that in the latter days there would come this new revelation of which we speak. Angels also were to visit the earth once more, giving divine direction to wandering mankind.

Is that hard to believe? Not if you accept the Bible.

New light from God

We Latter-day Saints announce that this new light has come. God has given a great new revelation. He has raised up new apostles and prophets to labor among the nations, even as did Peter and Paul. We are those apostles and prophets. We are his divinely called representatives for today.

But many will say that this cannot be.

It has come to pass nevertheless. It is an accomplished fact. And it is in direct fulfillment of Bible prophecy!

Some may say that God would never appear to a small sect hidden away in the Rocky Mountains. Others might say that the Latter-day Saints have peculiar religious ideas that need not be taken seriously.

But we are not a small group isolated in the Rocky Mountains. We are now worldwide, larger than many well-known denominations of Christendom, and steadily growing.

Neither are we religious extremists with peculiar ideas. We are realists. Do you suppose for one moment that religious malcontents could do what the Latter-day Saints have done in the world?

Accomplishments of Latter-day Saints

Our people are substantial citizens, law-abiding, intelligent, and progressive, as all who really know us will agree.

We rate high in education, believing as we do that the glory of both God and man is intelligence. We have produced great scientists and inventors, for example. Do you know that the television set through which you are now receiving this program came as a result of the inventive genius of a Mormon scientist, Dr. Philo Farnsworth?

You enjoy music on your stereo. Do you know that stereophonic sound came to you through the research of another Mormon scientist, Dr. Harvey Fletcher?

Some of the leaders in the United States space program have been members of this church. One of the astronauts now training is a Latter-day Saint. One of the men who reached the moon on one of America's most recent expeditions was a graduate of a Salt Lake City school.

Latter-day Saint men have achieved cabinet ranks in the United States government. Some have held high positions in other lands as well.

Latter-day Saint men have presided over some of the largest worldwide organizations of civic clubs, one of them being Lions International. A Mormon apostle was world president of Rotary International and was highly respected by its members everywhere.

Latter-day Saint culture is well known. Our music, as provided by various groups, is heard in many nations. Our Salt Lake Tabernacle Choir sings to millions every week, at home and abroad.

Some of our men have presided over important financial and business organizations, such as the American Bankers Association and the National Association of Manufacturers. A number from various states have served in the U. S. Congress and still continue to do so.

Some of our men hold high-ranking commissions in the military services. Recently I sat at dinner with three of them, two brigadier generals and one major general, all faithful Latter-day Saints.

The Air National Guard recently conferred upon the president of our church the title of honorary brigadier general.

Mormon women

And speaking of the liberation of women, be it known that Mormon women were among the first of all women everywhere and anywhere to receive the franchise to vote. This was conferred on them in the days of Brigham Young, one hundred and two years ago.

One organization of our women numbers nearly a half million. It is devoted to improving the status of women and children and operates in sixty-three nations of the world. Its president, Mrs. Belle S. Spafford, recently served as president of the National Council of Women of the United States. She also represented America as a delegate to the World Council of Women, in which council she also occupies a prominent position.

We have still another organization for younger women and teenage girls, which has a membership of some 400,000 devoted to the betterment of girls of that age. Its president, Mrs. Florence S. Jacobsen, has served also as a United States delegate to meetings of the World Council of Women.

Our men and women have taken active part in the White House conference for the betterment of children and are still engaged in that work.

Latter-day Saints are among the leaders of the Boy Scout movement internationally. It was a Mormon Eagle Scout who represented the six million Scouts of the United States a few weeks ago in presenting to President Nixon the membership card showing him to be honorary president of the Boy Scouts of America for 1972.

Could religious extremism produce a series of results like these? In no sense are our men and women carried away with emotionalism. They are practical, down-to-earth, well-balanced people of sound judgment.

Modern revelation

It is out of the depth of this great integrity that we solemnly declare that God has given a new revelation of himself in modern times and that we are the custodians of that message.

The original gospel of Christ has been restored to the earth in its pristine purity. It is here now. Divine authority to administer it has likewise been restored from heaven in our day.

This restored gospel can stop crime and delinquency among both parents and children.

It can put an end to immorality, debauchery, and drunkenness.

It can stop divorce and the collapse of the home.

It can cure all of the ills which now afflict us, if we will but live according to its teachings.

Every part of the gospel is practical. It produces positive results.

A return to God

It is past time to become realistic about our condition and to recognize that only through a return to God and his recently restored gospel can we ever achieve world happiness and peace.

We testify that God lives, that we are his servants duly appointed by divine power, and that we are commissioned of heaven to preach his revealed word to all mankind by the power of modern prophecy.

We appeal to you: Do not let prejudice blind you to the truth; open your hearts to this new revelation from God; study it and learn to live by its principles. We testify to you that it is indeed the way of life and salvation brought back to earth by God himself and by repeated angelic ministrations. And we bear you this testimony in the sacred name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen. □

President Harold B. Lee

Thank you, Elder Petersen, for that powerful address.

Elder Loren C. Dunn of the First Council of Seventy will now speak to us. He will be followed by Bishop Vaughn Featherstone, whom you have just sustained as the new second counselor in the Presiding Bishopric of the Church.

Elder Loren C. Dunn

Of the First Council of the Seventy

My brothers and sisters, I am very grateful to be a part of this conference, and I pray that the Spirit of the Lord might bear me up and inspire me to say those things that will be of some contribution to this conference.

Sustaining of officers

It has been our privilege this morning to once again sustain the general officers of the Church.

This is part of the revealed procedure in the gospel of Jesus Christ, which takes place from the general to the ward or branch level and which allows every member the opportunity of sustaining a person who has been called to office.

Sustaining, however, should not be confused with voting into office.

Joseph Smith made it clear how a person is called to a position in The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. In the fifth Article of Faith he says: "We believe that a man must be called of God, by prophecy, and by the laying on of hands, by those who are in authority to preach the Gospel and administer in the ordinances thereof."

When we sustain officers, we are given the opportunity of sustaining those whom the Lord has already called by revelation. The dictionary tells us that the word sustain means "to bear up, to support, to furnish sustenance for, to aid effectually, to hold valid, to confirm or corroborate."

The Lord, then, gives us the opportunity to sustain the action of a divine calling and in effect express ourselves if for any reason we may feel otherwise.

To sustain is to make the action binding on ourselves and to commit ourselves to support those people whom we have sustained. When a person goes through the sacred act of raising his arm to the square, he should remember, with soberness, that which he has done and commence to act in harmony with his sustaining vote both in public and in private.

If for any reason we have a difficult time sustaining those in office, then we are to go to our local priesthood leaders and discuss the issue with them and seek their help.

Called by God

Brigham Young, when speaking of Joseph Smith, made the following statement:

"Who called Joseph Smith to be a prophet? Did the people or God? God, and not the people called him. Had the people gathered together and appointed one of their number to be a prophet, he would have been accountable to the people; but inasmuch as he was called by God, and not the people, he is accountable to God only and the angel who committed the gospel to him, and not to any man on earth. The Twelve are accountable to the prophet, and not the Church, for the course they pursue." (Documentary History of the Church, vol. 5, p. 521.)

And then, of course, it was added that all members are accountable to the principles and teachings of the gospel.

If we are to take that same principle and apply it at the ward level, we can see that the bishop, who is considered the father of his ward and who leads his ward with judiciousness and love and patience and kindness, is nonetheless not answerable to the members of his ward, but instead is answerable to the Lord and to those priesthood leaders who preside over him. The bishop is answerable for the members of his ward but not necessarily answerable to the members of his ward.

Organized from top down

The Church of Jesus Christ, then, is organized from the top down.

In contrast, the usual man-made organizations are organized from the bottom up.

In this church the Lord raised up a prophet first, and then through the holy priesthood and through the power of revelation he revealed the organization and structure of his church from the highest to the least.

While the Lord gives us the opportunity of sustaining that which he has revealed, this does not constitute voting someone into office; instead, it is properly referred to as the law of common consent.

A man-made organization will establish its own laws by the vote of its membership, and by virtue of that act it becomes an organization that is governed by man.

As we said previously, the church and kingdom of God is organized from the top down by the power of revelation so that Jesus Christ himself can stand at the head and lead his own church through his apostles and prophets.

Assurance of divine calling

There are many in the Church who may not be as attentive to their duties as they might be, not because they haven't been called of God by revelation but because they did not fully realize that fact when they were called. Again, let me refer to the fifth Article of Faith: "We believe that a man must be called of God, by prophecy, and by the laying on of hands, by those who are in authority to preach the Gospel and administer in the ordinances thereof."

A calling in the Church is both a personal and a sacred matter, and everyone is entitled to know he or she has been called to act in the name of God in that particular position. Every person in this church has the right to know that he has been called of God. If he does not have that assurance, then I would suggest he give his calling serious, prayerful consideration so that he can receive what he has a right to receive.

Also, if a priesthood leader realizes that there are those under him who may not have this clear understanding, there is something he can do. He cannot call them again, but he can bring them in and reassure them of the divine nature of their callings.

I am most grateful for the great leaders of the Church who have helped me to feel and understand the divine nature of the callings to which I have been called over the years.

Personal callings

I can't ever remember coming away from a personal audience with a priesthood leader who was delivering a call to me but what I felt in my heart the realization and assurance that I had been called of God and that that priesthood leader was a servant of the Lord and acting in his own office and calling.

It was four years ago at April conference that I was first sustained as a General Authority. The sustaining was preceded by a divine calling from a prophet.

I can remember when I left President McKay's office that morning, as inadequate as I felt, I knew that I had been called of God by revelation; and I had confirmed again to me something that I already knew, and that was, that President McKay was a prophet of God and that this the Lord's church is led by apostles and prophets who are divinely guided.

Right atmosphere for call

What a marvelous thing it would be if, throughout the Church, after the inspiration was received and worthiness determined, priesthood leaders would take the time to create the right atmosphere for a holy and divine calling, to be extended in keeping with the fifth Article of Faith.

Such a calling, I suspect, would concentrate on the fact that the priesthood leader was delivering the Lord's call, so that if, in the future, we are asked, "Who called you?" our immediate response would be to say with conviction, "The Lord Jesus Christ," and secondly to say, "The call was delivered through Bishop Jones, or Stake President Green."

Perhaps in too many cases that gets reversed, and when we answer the question "Who called you?" the name of Bishop Jones comes first.

A legal administrator

In closing, I would like to quote these few words from the Prophet Joseph Smith: "All the ordinances, systems, and administrations on the earth are of no use to the children of men, unless they are ordained and authorized of God; for nothing will save a man but a legal administrator; for none others will be acknowledged either by God or angels." (DHC, vol. 5, p. 259.) Let me repeat that last phrase: "for nothing will save a man but a legal administrator; for none others will be acknowledged either by God or angels."

It is my testimony that at this conference this day we have raised our hands to sustain not only a prophet, seer, and revelator but a legal administrator in the rites and ordinances of the gospel of Jesus Christ; and because we have a prophet standing at the head, that which is done under his direction throughout the Church is binding not only on earth but in heaven.

Guarantee of eternal salvation

The fact that we have apostles and prophets and that we have the opportunity to sustain apostles and prophets allows us to do those things which will reach into eternity and will guarantee us our eternal salvation, and will guarantee to any man who will listen and who will humble himself before the Lord the opportunity to receive those ordinances and blessings which will allow him entrance into the kingdom of God.

My brothers and sisters, I bear to you my witness as to the reality of the gospel of Jesus Christ. I know God lives and that Jesus the Christ is our Savior and is the leader of his own church. I testify that the apostles and prophets whom we have sustained receive revelation from God for the ongoing work of the kingdom in this day. I bear my witness that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God, and that he saw what he said he saw, and that he is a true prophet, and that we are led by a prophet of God today, even Joseph Fielding Smith, for in the last few years I have had the opportunity to see him stand and speak in the name of Christ the Lord.

May the Lord so bless us now that we may sustain those whom he has called and do that which is expected of us, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. □

President Harold B. Lee

Elder Loren C. Dunn of the First Council of Seventy has now spoken to us.

I think we should say to Brother Vandenberg and Brother Simpson and to these new counselors that they have been called by the gift of prophesy, and will be ordained and set apart in the Lord's way.

Bishop Featherstone, we welcome you into the official circle of the Church, and pray the Lord's blessings upon you.

Bishop Vaughn J. Featherstone

Of the Presiding Bishopric

My beloved brothers and sisters of the great Church of Jesus Christ, I would like you to know how humble I am at this great opportunity. I kind of like Ed Gardner's story. His wife is hard of hearing and she wore a hearing aid; as they sat one evening in the living room, and she was knitting and looking down, he looked out over his newspaper and, speaking about his wife, he said, "You know, I am just kind of proud of you." And she looked up and said, "You know, I am getting tired of you, too."

When President Lee and President Tanner under the direction of President Joseph Fielding Smith talked to me on the phone, I wasn't exactly sure I heard what I thought I heard.

Integrity of brethren

For over twenty years now, I have been coming to the priesthood sessions of conference at about four o'clock. I watch the afternoon sessions at home on TV until about twenty to four and then drive down here and wait outside with my sons or with friends. We come inside to priesthood meeting when they open the doors and sit for two or three hours before the meeting starts.

During that time I have had one single purpose in mind. Along with hearing the words of the apostles and prophets and great General Authorities I have looked into their faces and studied them. And I am sure each time that I have found purity of heart. I have found integrity. I have found great love and understanding. I have found self-discipline. I have found all the fine qualities that a holder of the priesthood would like to have. And then I have gone back renewed and decided that I want to put the things I have seen in their faces into mine.

Aaronic Priesthood

After this call came the other day, I went out into the backyard, and in my mind's eye I could see hosts of Aaronic Priesthood bearers—young men who are fine and good and true, who are dedicated to the Lord with all their heart and soul, who want to put that same look into their face which we see in the faces of the brethren here before us today. And they were doing it and they were obedient and following their leaders.

And in my mind's eye, with great sadness, I saw another great group of Aaronic Priesthood bearers who were not able to put this into their faces because they were disobedient; they were being persuaded by friends and peers.

Then I saw a third group that troubled me even more, because these were they who would have been faithful had they had the leadership. If someone had reached out a hand and lifted them and picked them up and cared for them, they could have put integrity and love and purity of heart—all of these fine qualities—into their lives.

Gratitude for family

I am more grateful to my wife than I could ever express to you. She has to be the sweetest, kindest human being that I have ever known, and she has this look in her face that I have seen in the apostles and prophets and the General Authorities. And I have five sons. Two of them are on missions, one in the Gulf States and one in North Carolina-Virginia. Both of these boys are Eagle Scouts, and they both, at least from the words we get from them, are striving with all their might to serve the Lord in their mission calls.

I have two other boys at home—Joe and Scott—who are also Eagle Scouts, and we are very proud of them, and they are following and being obedient as they should be. Then I have a young son, eleven, Lawrence, who I believe has the stature of Mormon. He is a large and mighty young man, and I am very proud of him. Then we have one daughter, after the five boys, Jill, and I am sure she was sent as a special angel into our home.

Confidence of Bishop Brown

I am grateful for the confidence of Bishop [Victor L.] Brown. As I have considered this past week—and it's the longest week I have ever lived in my life—as I have considered the great souls that I know across the Church and the powerful influence and the great direction they have and the great willingness to follow the Lord, I am humble that he would call one such as I, or that the Lord would call me through him.

May I bear testimony to you. I should first mention that sweet mother of mine, and my in-laws. These are wonderful people. My sweet mother has pretty well raised our family alone. She has given the guidance and mental and physical ambition; she has bred this into us and wanted us to make something of ourselves, and I am so proud of her.

Conversion of Lamanite king

In closing let me just quote to you the words of the prophet in the book of Alma, when Aaron had spoken all the day long to the king of all the Lamanites, and finally the king believed; and these are the words:

"And it came to pass that after Aaron had expounded these things unto him, the king said: What shall I do that I may have this eternal life of which thou hast spoken? Yea, what shall I do that I may be born of God, having this wicked spirit rooted out of my breast, and receive his Spirit, that I may be filled with joy, that I may not be cast off at the last day? Behold, said he, I will give up all that I possess, yea, I will forsake my kingdom, that I may receive this great joy.

"But Aaron said unto him; If thou desirest this thing, if thou wilt bow down before God, yea, if thou wilt repent of all thy sins, and will bow down before God, . . . believing that ye shall receive, then shalt thou receive the hope which thou desirest.

"And it came to pass that when Aaron had said these words, the king did bow down before the Lord, upon his knees; yea, even he did prostrate himself upon the earth, and cried mightily, saying:

"O God, Aaron hath told me that there is a God; and if there is a God, and if thou art God, wilt thou make thyself known unto me, and I will give away all my sins to know thee. . . ." (Al. 22:15-18.)

Knowledge of God

There is a great host of Aaronic Priesthood bearers who would give away all their sins, they would give away all that the world would offer, and they would give away their riches, if they but knew that he was there. Our solemn responsibility today is to help these Aaronic Priesthood bearers understand and know the great callings, know that God does live, which I testify he does, and that we have living prophets upon the earth.

During those twenty years I have watched our beloved prophet and the Council of the Twelve come in, I know these are inspired men, these are holy men; they are prophets. I so testify in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. □

President Harold B. Lee

Bishop Featherstone has now spoken to us. We will now hear from Bishop H. Burke Peterson. He has just been sustained as the new first counselor in the Presiding Bishopric of the Church. We welcome you, Bishop, with all our hearts.

Bishop H. Burke Peterson

Of the Presiding Bishopric

Last Thursday evening I had just come home from the office. There was a long distance phone call awaiting me. The voice on the other end of the line introduced herself as "This is the secretary to President Lee. He and President Tanner would like to speak with you, but they aren't available right now. I am wondering where you will be this evening that they might call you back."

All of a sudden everything I was going to do that evening became insignificant, and I said, "I will be here." And then for the next thirty longest minutes of my life, I did many unimportant things, trying to keep busy.

Call to serve

The call came, and President Lee and President Tanner told me of this assignment from the Lord. I must apologize to them for not doing my part in carrying on the conversation that continued. All I was able to say for a while was "Thank you." It seems that my voice box and tear ducts did not know whose turn it was.

Finally President Lee said to me, "Brother Peterson, we want you to know that we have had a confirmation from the Lord that this is what he would have you do." It seemed when he said this that I too received that feeling. It seemed then that even though I didn't know how, and I still don't know how, I knew that everything would work out as the Lord would have it work out.

I am thankful to him for having called a prophet in this day. I am thankful to him for having called noble men to stand at the prophet's side. I appreciate their confidence.

I appreciate the confidence of Bishop Brown. I am thankful that the Lord directed him in the selection of his counselors. I will do everything I can to make this an enjoyable and profitable experience for him as he works with me.

Gratitude for blessings

After the phone call, I called in my wife, and I told her what had happened. We sat and visited for a while about how this would affect our lives, our five daughters, our business, our home that we just bought. And then it seemed that almost automatically we knelt together and thanked our Father in heaven for his confidence, for his love, and for the things that he has done for us. We thanked him for our children and for their love for their Father in heaven. And I thanked him for her, this eternal sweetheart of mine. I thanked him for allowing her to remain on the earth for another season. I thanked him for her faithfulness in all the calls that have come into our home.

Since the call last Thursday evening, I have had many things go through my mind—just why, just how this ever happened. I have thought and remembered back on my boyhood days, and I thanked him for parents who, by very simple means and very common undertakings, instilled in their sons a love for them and a love for their Father in heaven.

Faith and example of parents

I remember many times, it seemed like almost every week, that four little towheaded boys would stand with their faces against the windowpane or against the screen door and wave goodbye to their mother and dad as they would get in the car and go to the temple in Mesa.

We didn't know much about the temple, and we didn't know much about what went on in the temple, but we had been taught without any reservation that Mother and Dad loved us and that they would do anything for us. So, as we stood there and watched them go, we knew that something important must go on in that temple, to have these two people who loved us more than anything leave us as often as they did to go there. We gained an understanding in those tender years of the importance of the temple.

While we were growing up, our father was a ward clerk for fifteen years, and I remember that every Sunday evening he would come home after meeting and go into the dining room. He would pull down the blind and on the oak table he would put the money that he had gathered that day for the bishop—the tithes and offerings.

He would count it and account for it and put the ones and the fives and the tens in a pile; and then he would get the ironing board and an iron and a wet rag, and then our dad would take each of these paper bills and iron it smooth.

Now you would wonder what four little boys would recognize about this. The one thing they got from it was that whatever you do for the Lord, you do the very best that you know how. There is nothing that is too good for the Lord.

This humble man and his wife, who didn't have much of the world's goods, by some very simple experiences implanted in their sons a love for the Lord. And it is because of these experiences, and others like them, that I can stand here this morning and tell you that I know that God lives; that I know that Jesus is the Christ, and that I know that this is his church and that he organized it for the salvation of his children.

I know these things are true, and I testify of them in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. □

President Harold B. Lee

I am sure you brethren agree with me that the testimonies of these brethren indicate the inspiration of the Lord which brought them into these positions.

The concluding speaker at this session will be our beloved Spencer W. Kimball. I suppose it would not be amiss if we were to say to President Kimball that in the midst of some physical problems he may have that he may know with one united heart that the faith and prayers of the entire Church are sustaining him. President Kimball, we bless you with all our souls.

President Spencer W. Kimball

Acting President of the Council of the Twelve

My beloved brothers and sisters, it is always a frightening but joyous experience to stand before you and proclaim the everlasting gospel and bear witness to the divinity of the Church, of the Lord's mission, of the prophet, and of his leaders.

We miss terribly Brother Richard Evans, who has passed away since our last conference. We have a great stalwart as the twelfth member in the Council now, Brother Ashton. We welcome with all our hearts Brother Peterson and Brother Featherstone into the group of General Authorities. It will be a joy to work with them and with Bishop Vandenberg and his counselors in their new capacities.

Resurrection of Jesus

This is Easter week—a time when we solemnly remind each other of the unprecedented occurrence which took place in a small inner garden, in a rough-hewn tomb, in a caliche hill, outside the walls of Jerusalem. It happened there in an early morning and startled every soul who heard of it.

Thursday, April 6

Since it had never happened before on this earth, it must have been difficult for the people to believe, but how could they any longer doubt, when the resurrected Lord himself came to them and showed himself, and they felt the wounds in his hands and feet? Hundreds of his intimate believing friends bore witness.

This was Jesus of Nazareth, born in a manger, reared in a small village, baptized in the Jordan River, crucified on Golgotha, buried in a stone-cold roomlet in the cliff, and his resurrection attested to in a small, pleasant garden near the tomb.

Living the commandments

His suffering before and on the cross and his great sacrifice can mean little or nothing to us unless we live his commandments. For he says:

"... why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" (Luke 6:46.)

"If ye love me, keep my commandments." (John 14:15.)

Certainly if we fail to live his teachings, we lose communication with him.

Broken communication lines

In South America we saw once an example of broken communication lines.

We were riding far out in the northwest of Argentina. It was cattle country. The road was straight and narrow for numerous miles, and on either side was a four-wire barbed fence. Parallel to the fence line was a series of poles on which were strung the wires for telephone communication to the world. Upon each telephone pole was a crossbar, and strung from crossbar to crossbar were the communication lines.

As we traveled along where the grass had been heavy but now was burned, we found where some of the telephone poles, being in the wake of the fire, were burned off near the ground. Someone had carelessly thrown a lighted cigarette from a car window. It had ignited the grass, the telephone communications were ended or limited, and communication was down.

Nearly all the poles for a distance were scorched or burned. Some had been burned off the first few feet from the ground and were hanging by the top part in the air from the wires they were intended to support. Dangling in the air, these sagging wires had let the poles touch the ground as they were swinging in the wind, each time creating static on the line.

The poles had been set to hold up the lines, but here they were sagging.

Many a time during the three years that I was in charge of the work in South America, I tried to get long-distance calls through to these distant places. When the connection was made, almost invariably there would be static, and the words were cut in two and grating sounds were heard. In my mind's eye I could see the telephone line on the Salta Road swaying in the breeze, hitting the ground and occasionally breaking connection.

Communication impaired

I thought that telephone lines and telephone poles are a little like people. They are built for one purpose and sometimes serve another. They are designed to be firm and stout and to give support; but in many cases they are leaning and swaying and sagging until communications are greatly impaired, if not actually cut off.

In my experience I find that in a large number of marital cases, the problem is lack of communication; the wires are down, the poles are burned, husbands and wives are jangling, and there is static where there should be peace. There is growing disgust and hate where there should be love and harmony.

Inability to communicate

This typical young couple, only a few hectic years into their eternal marriage—only two children away from the eternal vows they had made in the holy temple of God—were each going a separate way. Their ideas of life were different as to spiritual matters (as well as many others)—one wishing to move along almost to what the other thought was fanaticism and the other moving along in a path that the other spouse thought to be almost apostasy; and both were wrong.

They talked about it and lost their tempers and drew farther and farther away from their common goal. Both were good people basically, but they needed unburned telephone poles and untangled wires of communication that were now sagging. Their inability to communicate in reasonableness led to anger, hard words, misunderstandings.

In time, each found another person and set up different communication lines for sympathy and understanding and comfort; and this disloyalty led to physical adventures that resulted in adulteries and two broken homes and disillusioned spouses and crushed hopes and injured children.

And all this because two basically good people let their communication lines get down and permitted the security poles to drag the ground. This is not one couple, it is tens of thousands of couples who started out in a blaze of glory, sweet felicity, and an inter-responsibility and with the highest of hopes.

Returned missionary

At a distant stake conference one Sunday I was approached after the meeting by a young man whose face was familiar. He identified himself as a returned missionary whom I had met out in the world a few years ago. He said he had not attended the conference but had come at its conclusion, wanting to say hello. Our greetings were pleasant and revived some choice memories. I asked him about himself. He was in college, still single, and fairly miserable.

I asked him about his service in the Church, and the light in his eyes went out and a dull, disappointed face fashioned itself as he said, "I am not very active in the Church now. I don't feel the same as I used to feel in the mission field. What I used to think was a testimony has become something of a disillusionment. If there is a God, I am not sure any more. I must have been mistaken in my zeal and joy."

Church inactivity

I looked him through and through and asked him some questions: "What do you do in your leisure? What do you read? How much do you pray? What activity do you have? What are your associations?"

The answers were what I expected. He had turned loose his hold on the iron rod. He associated largely with unbelievers. He read, in addition to his college texts, works by atheists, apostates, and Bible critics. He had ceased to pray to his Heavenly Father. His communication poles were burned, and his lines were sagging terribly.

I asked him now, "How many times since your mission have you read the New Testament?"

"Not any time," was the answer.

"How many times have you read the Book of Mormon through?"

The answer was, "None."

"How many chapters of scripture have you read? How many verses?"

Not one single time had he opened the sacred books. He had been reading negative and critical and faith-destroying things and wondered why he could not smile.

He never prayed any more, yet wondered why he felt so abandoned and so alone in a tough world. For a long time he had not partaken of the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, and he wondered why his spirit was dead.

Thursday, April 6

Not a penny of tithing had he paid, and he wondered why the windows of heaven seemed closed and locked and barred to him. He was not receiving all the things he could have had. And as he was thinking of his woes and his worn-down faith, his loneliness, and his failures, I was thinking of a burned-out pasture in northern Argentina and burned-off telephone posts and sagging wires and dragging posts.

Dwindling faith

Deeply disturbing are the numerous signs of dwindling faith in our world. Matches are dropped. The grass is burned.

The sagging in spiritual conviction is frightening. Morale is often low even among employees in their jobs—selfish “gimme” tactics. “How much can I get?” “How about a raise?” More holidays. Fewer hours. Poor morale among the employers.

We are too affluent. We have too much money and other things. We have so many things. Even many poorer people have many things, and “things” become our life, and our vocabulary has been invaded with, “Let me do my thing.”

Yet the Lord has said, “. . . seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you.” (Matt. 6:33.) Too often, though, we want the “things” first.

Laxity of prayers

We have a great generation of youth, but as I talk to many, I am amazed and surprised at the laxity of prayers among them, especially those who are in sin. Many have nearly ceased to pray. Their communication wires are down. Also numerous young people in their early married days cease to pray with regularity; their lines are sagging.

My first question to people in trouble is, “What about your prayers? How often? How deeply involved are you when you pray? And when you pray, are you humbly thanking or are you asking?”

Elijah and priests of Baal

Israel was in deep trouble—a sustained draught.

Israel’s King Ahab demanded of the prophet Elijah:

“Art thou he that troubleth Israel?”

“And he answered, I have not troubled Israel; but thou, and thy father’s house, in that ye have forsaken the commandments of the Lord, and thou hast followed Baalim.” (1 Kings 18:17-18.)

The spectacular drama portrayed on Mt. Carmel between Elijah the prophet and the ineffectual false priests of Baal is the story of sagging lines of communication. Great wickedness—and the Lord had sealed the heavens from rain. Elijah had said: “. . . if the Lord be God, follow him: but if Baal, then follow him. . . .” (1 Kings 18:21.)

The contest brought about by Elijah was to prove to Israel that the gods of stone and wood and metal were powerless. When the 450 priests of Baal could not influence their gods to burn the offering, and the Lord, through Elijah, brought down fire from heaven and consumed the bullock, then with a revival of faith on the part of Israel, the clouds came and a torrential rain fell. Weak Israel had now set up new poles; they had restrung their wires, and communication was reestablished.

Couples in sorrow

Two young couples from the Northwest came, bowed in sorrow. The husband of one and the wife of the other had lost themselves in frustration arising out of disloyally finding comfort where no association should have been tolerated. Their problems reached the maximum, and sorrow resulted.

It is generally the same. The two young people, unfaithful to their spouses, had conversed and confided too much; then secret meetings followed, then disloyal disclosures concerning the spouse of each. And finally, that which surely could not have been dreamed of—the transgression.

Both couples had reduced their activity, become casual in their churchgoing. They had joined a social group who were also turning to spiritual casualness like themselves. Their new way of living was beyond their means, and debts crowded out tithing.

Too busy they were for home evenings and too rushed for family prayer, and when the great temptations came, they were not prepared. Their grass had been consumed, and with it the poles had been burned off and the dangling charred stubs were hanging to the sagging wires.

Sin comes when communication lines are down—it always does, sooner or later.

A sagging world

We are living in a sagging world. There has been sin since Cain yielded to Satan, but perhaps never before has the world accepted sin so completely as a way of life. We shall continue to cry repentance from this and thousands of other pulpits. We shall continue to warn the people all too ready to accept the world as it pushes in upon them.

May we always repair our sagging lines and fulfill our total obligations and thus keep close to our Lord and Savior, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. □

President Harold B. Lee

Thank you, President Kimball.

We express our thanks and appreciation to the General Authorities who have spoken to us in this the first session of the conference.

The singing for this session has been furnished by the Brigham Young University Combined Chorus, with Ralph Woodward conducting. Robert Cundick is the organist. I wish the television audience in the whole world could look upon this group of young adults, beautifully groomed, beautifully dressed. This is the kind of judgment we would like to have rendered upon the youth of this Church. The Lord bless you beautiful, handsome, wonderful young people. You are a credit to the Church.

The chorus will now close this session by singing from the Messiah by Handel, "Behold the Lamb of God," after which the benediction will be offered by Elder Arthur S. Anderson, former president of the North Carolina-Virginia Mission, after which this conference will stand adjourned until two o'clock this afternoon.

The Brigham Young University Combined Chorus sang the number, "Behold the Lamb of God."

The closing prayer was offered by Elder Arthur S. Anderson, former president of the North Carolina-Virginia Mission.

The conference was adjourned until 2 o'clock P.M.

FIRST DAY AFTERNOON MEETING

SECOND SESSION

The second session of the conference convened at 2 P.M. on Thursday, April 6, 1972.

President Joseph Fielding Smith presided, and President N. Eldon Tanner, second counselor in the First Presidency, conducted this session.

The choral music for this session was provided by a Primary Leaders Chorus, combined choruses of the Utah North

Thursday, April 6

Regions, conducted by Patricia Maughan. Elder Roy M. Darley was at the organ console.

President Tanner made the following introductory statement:

President N. Eldon Tanner

Members of the Church are convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City, Utah, in the second session of the 142nd Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Sessions of this conference will be received by millions in the United States and Canada over hundreds of radio and television stations cooperating to provide the extensive coverage of this conference.

We extend a cordial welcome to our television and radio audience and to all present in this historic Tabernacle this afternoon—special guests, educational and government leaders, our regional representatives and stake presidencies from near and far, temple presidencies, bishoprics, and members of the General Auxiliary Boards.

The chorus of the leaders in our Primary organizations, who are responsible for directing to a very great extent the work of our young people, our children, made up of combined choruses of the Utah North Regions, conducted by Patricia Maughan, will begin this service by singing "Come, Come Ye Saints."

The invocation will be offered by Elder Raymond J. Pace, Regional Representative of the Twelve.

The Primary Leaders Chorus sang "Come, Come Ye Saints."

The invocation was offered by Elder Raymond J. Pace, Regional Representative of the Twelve.

President N. Eldon Tanner

The Primary Leaders Chorus, under the direction of Patricia Maughan, with Roy Darley at the organ, will now sing "Sweet Is the Work."

The Primary Leaders Chorus sang "Sweet Is the Work."

President Tanner

Elder Robert L. Simpson, newly appointed Assistant to the Council of the Twelve, will be our first speaker, and he will be followed by Milton R. Hunter of the First Council of Seventy.

Elder Robert L. Simpson

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

My beloved brothers and sisters, I am so grateful to my Heavenly Father for the spirit of this day and especially that I have been preceded by these lovely Primary sisters. The Primary has meant so much to me in my responsibilities of the past few years, and their singing has given me the peace and feeling that I need at this moment.

Overseas leaders

How thrilling it has been to sit here today and look down at our ever-expanding section of overseas leaders; and I am sure that the Lord's word is being fulfilled, as found in the 33rd section of the Doctrine and Covenants, when he said:

"And even so will I gather mine elect from the four quarters of the earth, even as many as will believe in me, and hearken unto my voice." (D&C 33:6.)

And how thrilling it is to see these leaders who have listened and who have hearkened and who have become faithful and true and are found worthy to be counted as leaders in their areas.

As we listened to the prophet this morning and as we listened to the other brethren who have responded, I was also struck by the great scripture that we hear so often: "What I the Lord have spoken, I have spoken, and I excuse not myself; . . . whether by mine own voice or by the voice of my servants, it is the same." (D&C 1:38.) Indeed, it is the same, and as a prophet of God talks to us, we are hearing the will of the Lord without question.

Personal tribute

May I just take a brief second to pay personal tribute to two of the greatest men I have known in my life, Bishop Vandenberg and Bishop Brown. These two great companions have meant so much and have given so much to me in my life, as they have given to you as they have traveled throughout the Church.

I have never known a man of greater courage and integrity than Bishop John H. Vandenberg. I have never been with a person so qualified in administrative and organizational ability as Bishop Victor L. Brown. These men are great assets to the work of the Lord, and I am so grateful for the blessing that came in my association with them.

Common judges in Israel

In traveling around the Church for the past ten and one-half years, what a joy it has been to meet so many of our bishops, stake presidents, men who have been designated as common judges in Israel, men who are guardians over the flock, men who have been given a charge and a responsibility that is second to none. May I take a few moments at this session of our conference to discuss what I believe is perhaps the most misunderstood meeting of all the meetings that convene in the Church. I refer to the bishop's court. I would like to begin by relating a story.

Verdict of church court

The brief episode I am about to relate is true, and the facts are accurate because those who were present will never forget them.

The hour was very late; the room was quiet except for the audible sobs of a young man who had just received the verdict of a Church court. Justice had taken its true course. There was apparently no alternative. The unanimous decision, following serious deliberation, fasting, and prayer, was excommunication.

After several minutes, a weary face looked up, and the young man's voice broke the silence as he said, "I have just lost the most precious thing in my life, and nothing will stand in my way until I have regained it."

The process leading up to the court was not an easy one. Certainly, courage is a most important factor for every person who has seriously slipped but wants to get back on the Lord's side.

After the meeting was finished, the communications that followed the young man's dramatic statement of hope for the future were so reassuring. From some there were firm promises of help during the ensuing months of continuing repentance; from others a pat on the back and a handshake, with an eye-to-eye assurance that conveyed a feeling of confidence and the hand of fellowship. There was complete knowledge among all present at that meeting that all could be regained in the life of this young man if it were done in the Lord's way.

The way back

This young man had just taken his first giant step back. As an excommunicated member of the Church and with his heart determined to make things right, he was far better off than just a few days before with his membership record intact but carrying deceit in his heart that seemed to shout the word hypocrite with every move he made toward doing something in the Church.

Thursday, April 6

This episode took place a few years ago. The young man's pledge has been fulfilled, and in my opinion, no member of the Church stands on ground more firm than the man who has had the courage to unburden himself to his priesthood authority and to set things in order with his Master. What a relief to have once again the peace of mind that "passeth all understanding."

Priesthood courts of the Church are not courts of retribution. They are courts of love. Oh, that members of the Church could understand this one fact.

The time to repent

The adversary places a fear in the heart of the transgressor that makes it so difficult for him to do what needs to be done; and in the words of James E. Talmage, "As the time of repentance is procrastinated, the ability to repent grows weaker; neglect of opportunity in holy things develops inability." (Articles of Faith, p. 114.) This simply means that doing what needs to be done will never be easier than right now. As in all other paths and guideposts that have been provided for us to achieve our eternal destiny of exaltation, there are no shortcuts.

Heavenly Father is not antiprogress: he is the author of eternal progression. In his own words, "For behold, this is my work and my glory—to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man." (Moses 1:39.)

Our achievement of eternal life adds glory to his name and is the only ultimate objective acceptable to a true Latter-day Saint.

Reduced to its simplest terms, our mission here in mortality is to overcome weaknesses of the flesh and all irregularities in our lives, to the point that our control of personal desires is sufficient to bring about a daily living and thinking pattern that will be compatible with his holy presence.

Be not disillusioned by doctrine of the adversary that there will likely be a magic point in eternity when all of a sudden selfish and improper actions are automatically eliminated from our being. Holy writ has confirmed time and time again that such is not the case, and prophets through the ages have assured us that now is the time to repent, right here in this mortal sphere. It will never be easier than now; and returning to Brother Talmage's thought, he who procrastinates the day or hopes for an alternate method that might require less courage waits in vain, and in the meantime, the possibilities grow dimmer. He is playing the game as Satan would have him play it, and exaltation in the presence of God grows more remote with each passing day.

Availability of bishops

Now bishops, be available to your people. Let them know about the kindness and compassion that dominates your soul. Don't become so caught up in the business affairs of your ward administration that you fail to convey to your people all of those wonderful attributes referred to in the 121st section of the Doctrine and Covenants. I am talking about the attributes of kindly persuasion, long-suffering, gentleness, meekness, and love unfeigned.

Bishops, learn the great principle of delegation so that your heart and your mind can be free to counsel with the Saints. You are their common judge. There is no one else in the entire ward so designated by the Lord. It is you they must turn to. You must be available to listen, and, equally important, you must live in such a way that the voice of heaven will find utterance through you for the blessing and edification of your people.

I am certain that a basic cornerstone of true justice is compassion. Perhaps even more important than the transgression itself is the sensitivity of a person's soul and his desire to repent and to follow the Master.

The need for help

It would be so much easier to talk about serious transgression to someone you had never seen before and would likely never see again; or better still, to talk in total seclusion to an unseen ear and receive your forgiveness then and there from unseen lips. But in such a process, who would then be at your side in the struggling months ahead, as you attempt with great effort to make your repentance complete, as you strive to prevent a tragic recurrence?

Few, if any, men have the strength to walk that hill alone, and please be assured, it is uphill all the way. There needs to be help—someone who really loves you, someone who has been divinely commissioned to assist you confidentially, quietly, assuredly—and may I reemphasize the word confidentially, for here again, Satan has spread the false rumor that confidences are rarely kept.

May I assure you that bishops and stake presidents are not in the habit of betraying these sacred confidences. Before being ordained and set apart, their very lives have been reviewed in that upper room in the temple by those divinely called as prophets, seers, and revelators. Without question, they are among the noble and great ones of this world and should be regarded as such by the Saints.

What a glorious plan this is! How reassuring to know that we all have hope for a total blessing, in spite of all the mistakes we have made; that there might be complete fulfillment; that we might enter his holy presence with our family units.

Process of true justice

Even excommunication from this church is not the end of the world; and if this process is necessary in carrying out true justice, I bear you my personal and solemn witness that even this extreme penalty of excommunication can be the first giant step back, provided there follows a sincere submission to the Spirit and faith in the authenticity of God's plan.

These processes can only be carried out in this church through properly designated priesthood authority, for his house is a house of order. All of this is made very clear in the Doctrine and Covenants. May I quote:

"And again, verily I say unto you, that which is governed by law is also preserved by law and perfected and sanctified by the same.

"That which breaketh a law, and abideth not by law, but seeketh to become a law unto itself, and willet to abide in sin, and altogether abideth in sin, cannot be sanctified by law, neither by mercy, justice, nor judgment. Therefore, they must remain filthy still.

"All kingdoms have a law given;

"And there are many kingdoms; for there is no space in the which there is no kingdom; and there is no kingdom in which there is no space, either a greater or a lesser kingdom.

"And unto every kingdom is given a law; and unto every law there are certain bounds also and conditions.

"All beings who abide not in those conditions are not justified." (D&C 88:34-39.)

In other words, brothers and sisters, all beings who abide not in those conditions, all who fail to correct infractions of the eternal law by proper priesthood procedures that have been established for such corrections, are not acceptable to the Lord and will likely never be eligible for his presence.

God bless us to accept eternal law and understand that there can be no other way is my humble prayer, and I ask it for each and every one in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen. □

Thursday, April 6

President N. Eldon Tanner

Elder Robert L. Simpson, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve, has just spoken to us.

We shall now hear from Elder Milton R. Hunter of the First Council of Seventy, and he will be followed by Elder Alvin R. Dyer, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve.

Elder Milton R. Hunter

Of the First Council of the Seventy

My dear brethren and sisters, I humbly ask that the Spirit of God attend me in what I may say today.

Miracle of missionary work

In my opinion, one of the great miracles in our generation is the miracle of missionary work of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

At the present time, the Church has ninety-eight missions, which cover most of the world. There are over 15,400 missionaries devoting their full time to proselyting activities. In addition to these, there are several thousand mature men and women from all professions serving on a part-time basis in the stake missions. These missionaries are either paying their own expenses or they are receiving financial support from their friends, relatives, or Melchizedek Priesthood quorums.

The vast majority of the full-time missionaries are young men nineteen to twenty-one years of age, a time of life in which young people, as a general rule, would not devote themselves to full-time church service.

It should be pointed out that these young men interrupt their education, put off marriage, and adjust their missions to their military obligations, so they can do missionary work for their church and their Savior.

Thus the miracle of missionary service is repeated over and over with every missionary who gives of his time and in the sacrifices made by those who supply the financial help.

Reasons for support

Why this modern miracle of missionary work?

First, this extensive missionary work is carried forward because those people who serve as missionaries and those who give them their financial support have strong testimonies in their hearts that they belong to Christ's true church, which he restored on earth in 1830. They are positive that The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is the only church in the world which possesses God's holy priesthood, his true doctrines and ordinances, and the power to bring people into celestial glory to dwell with their Creator. And so they go on missions in order that other people may receive the gospel and share the same joy and blessings that they have.

Second, the modern miracle of extensive missionary work occurs because in several revelations Jesus Christ commanded that it be done. For example, he commanded Church members as follows:

"Go ye into all the world, preach the gospel to every creature, acting in the authority which I have given you, baptizing in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost.

"And he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned." (D&C 68:8-9.)

Faith of young man

As I have toured missions, many missionaries, as well as converts, have reported to me unusual missionary experiences or miracles. A stake president in California told me the following missionary experience.

A young man in his stake from a well-to-do family had been taught the gospel by missionaries. His interest in the Church was very displeasing to his parents. They endeavored to persuade him not to join, but he still declared that he had a strong testimony that this was the true church of Jesus Christ and that he must join. Then, in desperation, the parents took the drastic step of telling him that if he became a member of the Mormon Church, he would be disinherited. In spite of this warning, the young man joined the Church and his parents literally turned him out of his home.

He was invited to live with a Mormon family. While he was there, the bishop and stake president asked him to go on a mission. He accepted the call. Before he left, however, his parents heard through a mutual friend that their son was going on a mission. They sent word to him that if he did, they would never write him a word, nor send him money, and that he was not to contact them.

About a year later, when the young man was in the mission field, the stake president was called on the telephone about one o'clock in the morning. The gentle voice of a woman on the other end of the line asked if he would please give her that missionary's address because she wanted to send him some money. Thus, it appears that the love of a mother had risen above her religious prejudice.

Choice of a mission

While touring a mission, I ran across a missionary who had been an all-American basketball star in college. Upon graduation from the university, he had turned down a high-paying contract to play professional ball so he could go on a mission.

Another missionary told me that when he graduated from high school he was offered $30,000 a year to play professional baseball. He refused the offer so he could go on a mission.

When a young man is faced with the choice of a mission or of playing professional ball at a high salary, it takes great faith and devotion to choose the mission; but many young Latter-day Saint men have made this choice.

Missionary in South America

Recently in South America, a lady missionary, who impressed me greatly, told me the story of her conversion to the LDS Church and her missionary call. Before coming on her mission she was a nurse. Her roommate was a Mormon girl. The nurse liked the girl's habits, was very pleased with her character and personality, and so she decided to study the LDS religion. The Mormon girl got two missionaries to teach the nurse the gospel.

When the nurse's parents heard that she was favorably inclined toward the Mormon religion, they thoroughly opposed her actions. They forbade her to join the Church, telling her that if she did she would be disinherited.

The Holy Ghost had borne witness to her so strongly that the Church of Jesus Christ was the true church that she asked the missionaries to baptize her even against the wishes of her parents, whom she loved dearly. It grieved her when her father and mother told her not to return home.

After joining the Church, she had a very strong desire to go on a mission and so she decided to work and save the money. It took her three or four years' time to save approximately $3,000. She was called to labor in South America, where she is doing an outstanding job in taking the gospel of Jesus Christ to the people of that land. When she returns home, she hopes to regain the love and favor of her parents.

Thursday, April 6

Results of missionary effort

Several years ago, after returning from touring a mission, I said to one of my friends, "Did you make any converts when you were on your mission in a certain town?" And I told him the name of the town.

He replied, "No, I didn't make a single convert there. My companion and I had very poor missionary success in that town."

I informed him that recently I had held a meeting in that town. Following the meeting, a woman approached the mission president and me and said, "When I was a girl two Mormon missionaries came to our home a number of times and talked with my mother. Each time the missionaries came to our home, I ran into the kitchen and peeked through the door and listened while they conversed with mother, who wasn't very interested. As soon as they had left, I would run into the living room, pick up the literature that they had left on the table, and go to my room and study it. I was very thrilled with what I was learning.

"Finally I obtained a copy of the Book of Mormon and read it. I became thoroughly converted to the Church of Jesus Christ, having a firm conviction that it was the true church. When I grew to maturity, two more Mormon missionaries came to town and I asked them to baptize me. After I had become a Church member, I taught the gospel to my friends and relatives. There are over fifty members in this branch who belong to the Church as a result of my conversion and baptism."

I then said to my friend, "You see, you and your missionary companion indirectly have over fifty converts in that town in which you thought you got none."

An answer to prayer

A missionary related an experience that illustrates one method that God has used to bring the searchers after truth into his true church. He stated that he and his companion had knocked on a door. A woman opened the door immediately, enthusiastically invited them in, and said to them, "You young men have come to my home today in answer to my prayers.

"For a long time I have been dissatisfied with the church to which I belong, feeling that it does not contain many of the doctrines that Christ taught while here upon the earth. I felt that it was not the true church that was founded originally by our Savior. I prayed earnestly and asked our Father in heaven to send somebody to me who would bring me the true gospel plan of salvation and make it possible for me to find the true church.

"After doing so, I had a dream that two young men knocked on my door and when I let them in they said to me, 'We have come to bring you the true gospel of Jesus Christ.' I recognize that you two young men are the same two young men I saw in my dream, and as in my dream, you announced yourselves by saying, 'We have come to bring you the gospel of Jesus Christ.' I know that you are the servants of our Master and that you will teach me his gospel."

The two missionaries were surprised at the reception but happy to have the privilege of teaching this good woman the gospel. She eagerly received it and soon thereafter was a baptized member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Thus, another modern miracle in missionary work had occurred.

Devotion of mission presidents

The faith and devotion of mission presidents and their wives and families present marvelous stories of sacrifice and service to spread the gospel of Jesus Christ and build up his kingdom.

When the First Presidency, serving as God's holy prophets, call a man and his wife to preside over a mission, regardless of their business situation or economic conditions, the answer is yes. All personal interests are pushed aside and they faithfully accept the call from the Lord through the First Presidency to preside over a mission for three years' time.

Each mission president's individual call, his experiences and faithfulness in accepting that call, adjusting his economic affairs, and completely readjusting the social life for himself and family, is a modern missionary miracle.

Response to mission call

For example, in a casual conversation I had recently with the president of one of the full-time missions of the Church, he told me that when he received his mission call from the First Presidency, he asked his employers for a leave of absence. Within three years his financial interest in the company in which he was employed would be large enough to support him and his family for the remainder of their lives.

His employers, being non-church members and unfavorable toward his going on a mission, refused to give him a leave of absence. Also, they informed him that he would lose all of his financial benefits in the company if he accepted the mission call. In spite of this terrific financial sacrifice and the loss of his job, he accepted the mission call and is now faithfully serving his church and his God.

I asked the mission president, "Why didn't you tell the First Presidency of the financial loss you would suffer if you went on a mission at that time and ask them to postpone your call for three years?"

He replied, "The Lord didn't call me on a mission for three years from now. He called me to serve now. My wife and I decided to obey the call of the Lord and trust that our financial affairs would be taken care of later."

Such a sacrifice to render Christian service is certainly astounding. It is a modern missionary miracle.

Testimony

In closing, I bear my testimony that the true Church of Jesus Christ has been restored to earth by the Savior and other heavenly beings to the Prophet Joseph Smith. Membership in this church and living in accordance with the revealed teachings therein is the only way back to God. This church marks out the pathway that mankind must follow to attain eternal life in the presence of the Father and the Son.

In the name of Jesus Christ.
Amen. ☐

President N. Eldon Tanner

Elder Milton R. Hunter of the First Council of Seventy has just spoken to us.

Elder Alvin R. Dyer, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve, will now speak to us.

Elder Alvin R. Dyer

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

I am both humbled and grateful, my brothers and sisters, for the confidence of the First Presidency and Council of the Twelve for the new assignment given me in the Historical Department of the Church. It is truly gratifying to be associated with men of the caliber of Leonard Arrington, the Church Historian; Earl Olson, the Church Archivist; and Donald T. Schmidt, Church Librarian.

Thursday, April 6

ian; and the other brethren who have been called to assist.

These are men of great spiritual devotion who have great capability in their respective fields. We shall seek the guidance of the Spirit of the Lord, and the counsel and direction of the Brethren, in the important task that lies ahead of us.

Association with the First Presidency and other leaders, and with you, my brothers and sisters, at conference time, is always a joy and a great spiritual influence.

The plan of life

The plan for a useful and successful life is contained in the gospel of Jesus Christ, given to us by the Redeemer of mankind, whose atoning sacrifice augments the plan and makes it possible for us to return to the presence of God our Heavenly Father.

When mortality, or the second estate of man, is completed, each individual will be prepared to continue his eternal journey into that place which the judgment of this life will place upon him. In this righteous, but penetrating, judgment, each of us shall go into the next estate of eternal existence for which we are best suited.

The principles of progression, or of retardation, judged by our behavior in the probation of mortality, are realities of concept, based upon revelation from God, both ancient and modern.

Darkness and enlightenment

In working out the plan of life and salvation down through the stream of time, men have developed among themselves periods of obedience to God's holy laws and, on the other hand, periods of rebellion against these same laws.

The declarations of the prophets of God contained in sacred historical writings tell of the changing conditions that have taken place among men. Clear reference is made to times of apostasy, when the rejection of truth has been so widespread that the holy priesthood of God, the channel through which God works in dealing with mankind, has been withdrawn from among men.

Oscillating from these periods of spiritual darkness have been periods of enlightenment when the will of God has been revealed unto man and has to some extent been adhered to. These periods of enlightenment are known as dispensations of the gospel of Jesus Christ, times when God dispenses the wisdom of the eternities unto mankind for their benefit and blessing.

Pure knowledge, meaning revelation from God, is greater than the limited reasoning of men. The method that God has chosen to convey this knowledge unto mankind is through his chosen prophets, unto whom he sends his messengers with divine instructions and upon occasion by the majesty of his own appearance.

Thus, on the whole, as the pages of history are observed, noting the depressions and then again the periods of enlightenment that have held sway over mankind as they move through mortality, we come to know, broadly, that times of apostasy and times of restoration are two opposite poles of human existence. They are conditions between which mankind has oscillated, as internal and external conditions bear sway.

Gospel not new

In the light of this concept, the gospel that Jesus Christ proclaimed during his earthlife was not new. It was actually a restoration of the same truths that had been declared in former dispensations. He himself declared these truths unto ancient prophets who had been chosen as his instruments. He was known unto them as Jehovah, and by that name he gave commandments to the children of Israel. He has directed the plan of salvation from the very beginning of mankind upon the earth, thereby establishing the dispensations of Adam, of Enoch, of Noah, of Moses and others, all bearing witness to a restoration by the divine dispensing of truths, making known unto mankind the redeeming principles of the gospel.

The willingness of God to dispense these truths unto mankind has ever been present, but there have been times when mankind, because of wickedness and rebellion, would not receive them.

In the depths of rebellion and apostasy, the masses of people are never responsive to gospel truths.

Suppression of freedom

The reflected lack of the principles of freedom in governments and institutions stands as a stumbling block to the furtherance of God's work among men. When the darkness and evil of apostasy have dominated the minds of men, apostasy has been fostered by the subjection of individual rights of freedom, and unrighteous dominion has been brought to bear by the institutions of men that know not God.

In these periods of darkness the forces of evil, under the direction of the evil one, the archenemy of Christ, implement doctrines of force, destroying the rights of the individual, making it almost impossible for those held in subjection to have the opportunity of repentance and regeneration. Without the spirit of freedom and the power of agency, there can be no functioning of the principles that would lead us to the gospel. It is difficult, if at all possible, to come to a state of regeneration so vital to progression and the fulfillment of the gospel plan.

The gospel of Jesus Christ will not flower or expand its influence under conditions where the will of the individual is suppressed. Those who have gained a conviction of the truth and have then been thrust into a condition of individual bondage may survive the ordeal on the strength of the truths that they have previously found and individually accepted, as did the early Christian martyrs or the martyrs in any age who have stood up in death rather than denounce the truths that they have taken unto themselves by the power of agency. But under godless systems, where the individual never comes to know the truth, he is held by darkness.

From the dark ages, that period of time following the death of the apostles of the Lord in the meridian dispensation—which continued for about eleven hundred years, during which time there was no intelligent glorification of the individual—hardly a painted picture emerged that portrayed this important concept. Everything was lost in relentless subjection of the masses to the evil power of unrighteous dominion.

The Renaissance

Then came that period known as the Renaissance, which gave to men an inward longing for liberation of thought with the courage to face the evil forces that held them in subjection. Man again began to seek for freedom and truth. The Master of men had said many years before, "... ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." (John 8:32.) But this and other scripture, for many years, they had not even been privileged to read.

But God began to work with men, and their hearts turned toward him; and whenever the spark of freedom was found, it was influenced and fed by the natural forces of agency. Soon the desire for freedom, matched with the courage to fight and die for it, spread among men.

The question might well be asked, Why does freedom need to be restored as a forerunner to a new dispensation of the gospel of Jesus Christ? The answer is a simple one, for well the Lord knows that without the spirit of freedom in the souls of men, there could be no willing response to the gospel plan. For it is in the culture of freedom and the use of agency in that freedom that men come to know the difference between good and evil. This progress leads to yearnings in the hearts of good men, and eventually to gospel dispensations. This is the pattern to be noted down through the era of the historical writings.

Thursday, April 6

A new dispensation

The continued longing for freedom led directly to the period known as the Reformation, which led to the foundation of America and the framing of the Constitution, concerning which the Lord has said:

"According to the laws and constitution of the people, which I have suffered to be established, and should be maintained for the rights and protection of all flesh, according to just and holy principles." (D&C 101:77.)

All of this in its proper order leads directly to the greatest period in the experience of man upon the earth, a new dispensation of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

This period was foreseen and referred to by the apostle Peter as the times of restitution or restoration of all things involving a new gospel dispensation. Here are his words as he speaks also of the coming of the Lord at this particular time:

"And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you:

"Whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." (Acts 3:20-21.)

Personal visitation

The significant feature of the present dispensation was the inauguration of the same by the personal visitation of God the Father and his Beloved Son, Jesus Christ, referred to in the sacred historical writings of this church as the Sacred Grove appearance, which occurred in the spring of 1820 near Palmyra, New York, 152 years ago.

Upon this occasion Joseph Smith became the first of the prophets of this new dispensation of the gospel; and by virtue of divine instruction given then and subsequent appearances of the Son of God and certain ancient prophets who hold keys of understanding pertaining to the gospel plan, he has caused to be established the kingdom of God upon the earth, that any of mankind may come unto it.

Last dispensation

The characteristics of this dispensation, as compared with other dispensations, are unique in that it is the last of all dispensations, concerning which the Prophet Joseph Smith received this divine information as contained in a revelation:

"Unto whom I have committed the keys of my kingdom, and a dispensation of the gospel for the last times; and for the fulness of times, in the which I will gather together in one all things, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth." (D&C 27:13.)

The apostle Paul, writing unto the Ephesian saints, speaks also of this important final dispensation in connection with the inheritances that will come to the faithful. I quote what he said and must have seen in vision:

"That in the dispensation of the fulness of times he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth; even in him." (Eph. 1:10.)

A dispensation of the gospel of Jesus Christ is now established with prophets, seers, and revelators. The church and kingdom of God has been established, and the inhabitants of the earth "may receive it, and be prepared for the days to come, in the which the Son of Man shall come down in heaven, clothed in the brightness of his glory, to meet the kingdom of God which is set up on the earth." (D&C 65:5.)

Of these things I bear my personal witness as conveyed to me by the power of the Spirit, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. □

President N. Eldon Tanner

We have just listened to Elder Alvin R. Dyer, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve.

The congregation will please stand and join with the chorus in singing "Oh Say, What Is Truth?"

After the singing, Elder ElRay L. Christiansen, Assistant to the Twelve, will address us.

The congregation and chorus sang "Oh Say, What Is Truth?"

President Tanner

Elder ElRay L. Christiansen, Assistant to the Council of Twelve, will now address us, and he will be followed by Elder James A. Cullimore, Assistant to the Twelve.

Elder ElRay L. Christiansen

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

First of all, my brothers and sisters, let me assure you that as far as ElRay L. Christiansen is concerned, God lives, and he is a compassionate, understanding Father; and his Son, Jesus Christ, came to earth, as the Bible tells us, and offered himself and actually gave his life that we might be redeemed from the grave and might have eternal life, salvation, which to us means exaltation in the celestial world.

I testify that Joseph Smith was selected by God and Jesus Christ to restore the gospel in this day and that Joseph Fielding Smith, whom we appreciate, is one of a succession of modern-day prophets, seers, and revelators.

Successful parenthood

Now, this is a world in difficulty and trouble, but we shouldn't merely bemoan the fact. We should, as far as our powers can help us, be anxiously engaged in rectifying it. Just before we sang, I wrote this down: If you and I are to help restore this sick world to its spiritual health, we must begin at the proper place—that is, with ourselves and with our families. This we can do!

One of the most rewarding of all human undertakings is that of making a success of marriage and of rearing children in a manner acceptable to the Lord. It calls for the best in all of us.

While many, both in and out of the Church, are eminently successful in rearing their families, it is clearly evident that there are fathers and mothers who are divesting themselves of their sacred obligation to counsel their children and to give them the parental warmth and interest that they deserve. Some parents are quite willing to let others tend, and teach, and train their most precious possessions—their children.

Did you hear the timely admonition of our president and prophet this morning, pleading for fathers to take their rightful places at the head of their households in righteousness?

Homes in serious trouble

An authenticated study shows that two million children in America live in homes where serious trouble exists between parents. Six and a half million children live with only one parent, and another million have been "farmed out" to relatives or friends or institutions.

Some worthy institutions have been developed to help improve the home and family life. But helpful as these agencies may be, I am convinced, and I believe you will agree, that there is not and never will be a better institution for improving the home than the home itself.

Parents cannot, without regrettable consequences, shirk the responsibility of teaching and showing their children through their example the attributes of character that lead them unhesitatingly to appreciate and accept the good, the decent, the beautiful, and help them to develop the desire and the courage to turn from that which is coarse or crude or wrong.

Family home evening

To help us develop desirable qualities in our children, we are provided with divinely given programs such as the family home evenings, and for the life of me I cannot understand why every single family in the Church doesn't grasp the opportunities provided through family home evening—it costs nothing; it isn't necessary to leave home; and yet it is one of the most effective ways of cementing the unity of our families that has ever come to us, and when consistently used, it has proven to be a marvelous means of making family life secure and meaningful.

A sacred trust

Parenthood is a sacred trust. It is an approach to the divine—a God-given privilege that, with its never-ending responsibilities, brings rich and lasting rewards.

President Joseph F. Smith made this significant statement: "The man, and the woman who are the agents, in the providence of God, to bring living souls into the world, are made before God and the heavens, as responsible for these acts as is God himself responsible for the works of his own hands. . . ." (Gospel Doctrine, p. 342.)

A home approved of God is not merely a place where children are born, but where their coming is received with joy and gladness by parents who strive with all their abilities to help their children develop such attributes as—

1. Faith in God, along with a desire to be obedient to his commandments,
2. Respect for and obedience to the laws of the land,
3. A determination to be truthful and honest, regardless of the circumstances,
4. Unselfishness by teaching (mostly by example), along with courtesy, respect, refinement, and good manners, for surely they are part of our religion.

After all,

"The sermon for a teenage child
That proves to be most ample
Is still the one that parents teach
By setting an example."

—Hal Chadwick

Family traditions

Success in family life calls for parents who take time to enjoy their children; who read with them; who play with them; who let them participate in planning special occasions, seeking to make wholesome family traditions a proud part of family life.

The case of a young man, the father of four children, whom we called upon to speak in a stake conference in eastern Utah, emphasizes the desirability of family traditions, special occasions, and warm family relationships.

On each anniversary of their marriage, this couple planned something special to do. Now they had looked forward as a family to observing their tenth anniversary. The father arranged his vacation to cover that period of time. But suddenly it became necessary for his wife to enter the hospital for surgery. He and the children felt sorry for her because she was in the hospital. At the same time she was sad, thinking that her husband and the children would be disappointed. But when she read the little note that came with a bouquet of flowers, she felt better, for it read: "Sweetheart, ten years with you have seemed like ten days, but ten days without you have seemed like ten years." Signed, "Bill."

Petty disputations

Another essential in successful parenthood is for fathers and mothers to avoid disputations. Such situations may seem harmless to the parents, but in the eyes of their children, the two most important people in the world are in conflict, and from their limited perspective, the whole world is in trouble. Situations thus created are an indication of immaturity and weakness on the part of those involved. Someone has said that one of the most important things a father can do for his children is to love and respect their mother.

I plead with parents to rise above pettiness and to spare their children the inglorious and painful insecurity of having to endure petty disputations and offensive situations.

Avenues of communication

It is important also to keep the avenues of communication open. It is wonderful when a father or a mother will sit down with a son or a daughter and discuss a personal problem (and they have their problems, which, if we are wise, we will not minimize). There are pressures, and enticements, and even unjust accusations against which our sons and daughters need to be fortified. It is even more wonderful when, because of the love and closeness that exists, children feel no hesitancy in taking their problems to their parents.

In such heart-to-heart talks, parents will help to set objectives for their children, such as:

1. A desire and determination to live clean, virtuous lives
2. A desire to associate with those who have their same high standards and ideals
3. A determination (for boys) to live so they may receive the priesthood in worthiness
4. To prepare for and be worthy of being called on missions, perhaps establishing a savings account early in life for this purpose
5. A determination to gain an education, to learn a trade or a profession, or to master a skill (and teach them the joy of working)
6. To prepare to be worthy and desirous of marriage in the temple, thus doing things the Lord's way
7. To prepare to become, in their own right, successful homemakers

Security in the home

We talk a good deal these days about security. My brothers and sisters, there is no security that we can give our children that is more essential than the security they gain in homes where families operate as families should, according to the gospel of Jesus Christ; where families kneel and offer prayers of thanksgiving and gratitude at the beginning and at the close of each day; where keeping the commandments of God is a part of daily life. In this way, they become fortified and enabled to meet the future without frustration and without fear.

Historians almost without exception point out that one of the greatest contributing factors in the downfall of nations is the disintegration of the home and family life.

A complete rebirth of satisfactory family life is needed. It is needed even in the so-called better homes. It must begin with proper love and respect between the husband and the wife and then, by their example, transferred to their children.

Faith in God

No nation can long endure unless the great majority of its families and its homes are made secure through faith in God—an active, living faith.

In The Scouter's Minute [YMMIA, 1969] I found these lines:

"So long as there are homes to which men turn at close of day;
So long as there are homes where children are, where women stay—

Thursday, April 6

If love and loyalty and faith be found across those sills—

A stricken nation can recover from its gravest ills.

"So long as there are homes where fires burn and there is bread [I think that means homemade bread];

So long as there are homes where lamps are lit and prayers are said;

Although a people falter through the dark—and nations grope,

With God Himself back of these little homes, we have sure hope."

To this I testify in the name of Jesus Christ, the Lord. Amen. □

President N. Eldon Tanner

Elder ElRay Christiansen, Assistant to the Twelve, has just spoken to us.

Elder James A. Cullimore, Assistant to the Twelve, will now address us, and he will be followed by Elder Ezra Taft Benson of the Council of the Twelve, who will be our concluding speaker.

Elder James A. Cullimore

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

I have been greatly impressed, my brethren and sisters, at the strength of the testimonies that have been borne this afternoon and this morning in these conference sessions. I thought the testimony of President Smith was so firm, so strong, so certain. How can anyone doubt! And then to have it followed by Brother [Mark E.] Petersen in his masterful way, and so sincere.
The testimonies of the other brethren, Bishop Featherstone and Bishop Peterson, so humble and so certain, a testimony in their lives, and the testimony of others that have been given. Brother Kimball, always so sweet and so sincere. These are the things that are important to us in our lives.

A valued possession

A testimony of the gospel is one of the most valued possessions of a member of the Church. The strength and unity of the Church depend upon each member so living that he comes to know for himself that the gospel is true.

The spiritual condition of the membership of the Church is determined by the degree to which the members live the gospel and are worthy of the companionship of the Holy Spirit in giving witness of the truth of this great work. It would follow that the prosperity of the Church is also measured to a great extent by the strength of testimonies of its members as demonstrated by their worthiness and righteous living.

Peter's testimony

One of the great testimonies of the scriptures is that given by Peter as he was brought before the judges after having healed the lame man at the temple gate.

"Then Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, said unto them, Ye rulers of the people, and elders of Israel,

"If we this day be examined of the good deed done to the impotent man, by what means he is made whole;

"Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand here before you whole.

"This is the stone which was set at nought of you builders, which is become the head of the corner.

"Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." (Acts 4:8-12.)

Testimony of Christ

A second great testimony was given by Peter of Christ.

"When Jesus came into the coasts of Cæsarea Philippi, he asked his disciples, saying, Whom do men say that I the Son of man am?

"And they said, Some say that thou art John the Baptist: some, Elias; and others, Jeremias, or one of the prophets.

"He saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am?

"And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.

"And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, Simon Barjona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my father which is in heaven.

"And I say also unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.

"And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." (Matt. 16:13-19.)

Secret of growth

In a day when churches are generally losing members and declining in popularity, many wonder what the secret is in the growth and stability of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

President McKay answered it: "The secret lies in the testimony, possessed by each individual who is faithful in the Church, that the Gospel consists of correct principles. . . .

"This testimony has been revealed to every sincere man and woman who has conformed to the principles of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, who has obeyed the ordinances, and has become entitled to and has received the Spirit of God, the Holy Ghost, to guide him." (Pathways to Happiness [Bookcraft, 1957], pp. 314-15.)

Influence of Holy Spirit

In an editorial in the Impact magazine, Brother William E. Berrett expressed well the great influence of the Holy Spirit in guiding and uniting the Church today:

"The great miracle of our day is that Spirit which unites the members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints with those multitudinous authorities appointed to lead them. For those appointed thus to lead speak a diversity of tongues, belong to a variety of races and cultures, and live in many different lands. Yet there is a unity which manifests itself in the obedience to Church calls, in the acceptance of basic doctrines, and in the belief that we are led by a living prophet of God.

"This unity is baffling to the world generally and is not understood by many whose names grace the Church rolls. The unifying influence is none other than the Holy Ghost, bestowed upon men by the authority of God, through his holy priesthood. Through the work of the Holy Ghost, men may come to know the truth, as it springs forth from the printed pages of scripture or from the lips of our living prophets. In the words of Brigham Young, 'the eloquence of angels never can convince any person that God lives, and makes truth the habitation of his throne, independent of that eloquence being clothed with the power of the Holy Ghost; in the absence of this, it would be a combination of useless sounds. What is it that convinces man? It is the influence of the Almighty, enlightening his mind, giving instruction to the understanding.'" (Impact, Spring 1970, p. 2.)

Thursday, April 6

Companionship of Holy Ghost

Every member of the Church is entitled to the companionship of the Holy Ghost. At the time of baptism, hands were placed upon our heads and it was said, "Receive the Holy Ghost." Based upon our worthiness, this gives us the right to the constant companionship of the Holy Ghost in which we can receive its revelations.

The blessings to those who have lived worthy of the companionship of the Holy Ghost were revealed to the Prophet Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon:

"For thus saith the Lord—I, the Lord, am merciful and gracious unto those who fear me, and delight to honor those who serve me in righteousness and in truth unto the end.

"Great shall be their reward and eternal shall be their glory.

"And to them will I reveal all mysteries, yea, all the hidden mysteries of my kingdom from days of old, and for ages to come, will I make known unto them the good pleasure of my will concerning all things pertaining to my kingdom.

"Yea, even the wonders of eternity shall they know, and things to come will I show them, even the things of many generations.

"And their wisdom shall be great, and their understanding reach to heaven; and before them the wisdom of the wise shall perish, and the understanding of the prudent shall come to naught.

"For by my Spirit will I enlighten them, and by my power will I make known unto them the secrets of my will—yea, even those things which eye has not seen, nor ear heard, nor yet entered into the heart of man." (D&C 76:5-10.)

And again the Lord told the Prophet:

"And the Spirit giveth light to every man that cometh into the world; and the Spirit enlighteneth every man through the world, that hearkeneth to the voice of the Spirit." (D&C 84:46.)

Special witnesses

The Twelve Apostles are special witnesses of the Savior. I don't know how many of them have actually seen a personage. They don't talk about it. But they don't have to, to receive their special witness that can come by the Holy Ghost.

President Harold B. Lee said to a group of young people, "Not many have seen the Savior face to face here in mortality, but there is no one of you who has been blessed to receive the gift of the Holy Ghost after baptism but that may have a perfect assurance of his existence as though you had seen." (Youth and the Church [Deseret Book, 1970], p. 51.)

President Smith's statement

The impact of the witness of the Spirit in our lives has been made clear by President Joseph Fielding Smith when he said:

"... the Lord has taught that there is a stronger witness than seeing a personage, even of the Son of God, in a vision. . . . The Savior said:

"Wherefore I say unto you, All manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men: but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men.

"And whosoever speaketh a word against the Son of Man, it shall be forgiven him: but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven him, . . . neither in the world to come." [Matt. 12:31-32.]

"Therefore the seeing, even the Savior, does not leave as deep an impression in the mind as does the testimony of the Holy Ghost to the spirit. Both Peter and Paul understood this. Here are the words of Paul:

"For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost,

"And have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come.

"If they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame." [Heb. 6:4-6.]

President Smith concludes: "... the impressions on the soul that come from the Holy Ghost are far more significant than a vision. It is where Spirit speaks to spirit, and the imprint upon the soul is far more difficult to erase. Every member of the Church should have the impressions on his soul made by the Holy Ghost that Jesus is the Son of God indelibly pictured so that they cannot be forgotten." (Seek Ye Earnestly [Deseret Book, 1970], pp. 213-14.)

The spirit of revelation

In our search for truth and in our pursuit of eternal life, the Lord has not left us without guidance. He said:

"Oliver Cowdery, verily, verily, I say unto you, that assuredly as the Lord liveth, who is your God and your Redeemer, even so surely shall you receive a knowledge of whatsoever things you shall ask in faith, with an honest heart, believing that you shall receive. . . .

"Yea, behold, I will tell you in your mind and in your heart, by the Holy Ghost, which shall come upon you and which shall dwell in your heart.

"Now, behold, this is the spirit of revelation." (D&C 8:1-3.)

Companionship of Spirit

We need the companionship of the Spirit in our lives to continually confirm to us the divinity of the gospel plan. Two things are vital to the assurance of the companionship of the Spirit:

1. Our lives must be in conformity to the gospel standards. "... the Spirit of the Lord doth not dwell in unholy temples." (Hel. 4:24.)

2. We must be engaged in the work. As the Pharisees listened to the bold teachings of the Savior, they said: "How knoweth this man letters, having never learned?" He answered them: "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." (John 7:15, 17.)

The Lord plainly told the Prophet Joseph Smith how one might obtain a witness of him:

"Verily, thus saith the Lord: It shall come to pass that every soul who forsaketh his sins and cometh unto me, and calleth on my name, and obeyeth my voice, and keepeth my commandments, shall see my face and know that I am;

"And that I am the true light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world." (D&C 93:1-2.)

Experience of Oliver Cowdery

Too often we ask the Lord for the direction of his Spirit before we've done all we can. The Lord gave Oliver Cowdery the key here when he attempted to translate and failed. He said: "But, behold, I say unto you, that you must study it out in your mind; then you must ask me if it be right, and if it is right I will cause that your bosom shall burn within you; therefore, you shall feel that it is right." (D&C 9:8.)

After we have done all we can, having studied it out and determined how best to solve our problems, then we take our decisions to the Lord; and if they are right, our bosoms will burn within us and we will have spiritual confirmation as to what to do.

Alma's testimony

The prophet Alma spoke regarding his testimony of certain gospel teachings. He said:

"And this is not all. Do ye not suppose that I know of these things myself? Behold, I testify unto you that I do know that these things whereof

Thursday, April 6

I have spoken are true. And how do ye suppose that I know of their surety?

"Behold, I say unto you they are made known unto me by the Holy Spirit of God. Behold, I have fasted and prayed many days that I might know these things of myself. And now I do know of myself that they are true; for the Lord God hath made them manifest unto me by his Holy Spirit; and this is the spirit of revelation which is in me." (Al. 5:45-46.)

Yes, "the Spirit enlighteneth every man that hearkeneth to the voice of the Spirit."

I bear testimony that by the witness of the Spirit one can come to know of the divinity of this great work, that God lives, that Jesus is the Christ, that Joseph Smith was divinely called, that President Joseph Fielding Smith is a prophet of God, and that this gospel is the great plan of life and salvation as instituted of the Lord. This is my personal testimony to you, my brethren and sisters, and I leave it in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. □

President N. Eldon Tanner

Elder James A. Cullimore, Assistant to the Twelve, has just addressed us. Elder Ezra Taft Benson of the Council of the Twelve will be our concluding speaker.

Elder Ezra Taft Benson

Of the Council of the Twelve

My beloved brothers and sisters, seen and unseen—and we are all brothers and sisters, children of the same Father in the spirit—humbly and gratefully I stand before you on this anniversary date of the organization of the restored church of Jesus Christ, 142 years ago. I love a general conference of the Church, except this particular part, and yet I rejoice in the opportunity to bear testimony to this the greatest work in all the world.

Persian anniversary

Last fall I was invited by Baron von Blomberg, president of the United Religions Organization, to represent the Church as a guest of the king of Persia at the twenty-five hundredth anniversary of the founding of the Persian Empire by Cyrus the Great. Advised by the First Presidency to accept the invitation, I left immediately following the October conference to join with representatives of twenty-seven world religions, some fifty monarchs, and other notables at this historic celebration in Iran.

King Cyrus

King Cyrus lived more than five hundred years before Christ and figured in prophecies of the Old Testament mentioned in 2 Chronicles and the book of Ezra, and by the prophets Ezekial, Isaiah, and Daniel. The Bible states how "the Lord stirred up the spirit of Cyrus, King of Persia." (2 Chron. 36:22.) Cyrus restored certain political and social rights to the captive Hebrews, gave them permission to return to Jerusalem, and directed that Jehovah's temple should be rebuilt.

Parley P. Pratt, in describing the Prophet Joseph Smith, said that he had "the boldness, courage, temperance, perseverance and generosity of a Cyrus." (Autobiography of Parley Parker Pratt [Deseret Book Company, 1938], p. 46.)

President Wilford Woodruff said:

"Now I have thought many times that some of those ancient kings that were raised up, had in some respects more regard for the carrying out of some of these principles and laws, than even the Latter-day Saints have in our day. I will take as an ensample Cyrus. . . . To trace the life of Cyrus from his birth to his death, whether he knew it or not, it looked as though he lived by inspiration in all his movements. He began with that temperance and virtue which would sustain any Christian country or any Christian king. . . . Many of these principles followed him, and I have thought many of them were worthy, in many respects, the attention of men who have the Gospel of Jesus Christ." (Journal of Discourses, vol. 22, p. 207.)

Use of good men

God, the Father of us all, uses the men of the earth, especially good men, to accomplish his purposes. It has been true in the past, it is true today, it will be true in the future.

"Perhaps the Lord needs such men on the outside of His Church to help it along," said the late Elder Orson F. Whitney of the Quorum of the Twelve. "They are among its auxiliaries, and can do more good for the cause where the Lord has placed them, than anywhere else. . . . Hence, some are drawn into the fold and receive a testimony of the truth; while others remain unconverted. . . . the beauties and glories of the gospel being veiled temporarily from their view, for a wise purpose. The Lord will open their eyes in His own due time. God is using more than one people for the accomplishment of His great and marvelous work. The Latter-day Saints cannot do it all. It is too vast, too arduous for any one people. . . . We have no quarrel with the Gentiles. They are our partners in a certain sense." (Conference Report, April 1928, p. 59.)

This would certainly have been true of Colonel Thomas L. Kane, a true friend of the Saints in their dire need. It was true of General Doniphan, who, when ordered by his superior to shoot Joseph Smith, said: "It is cold blooded murder. I will not obey your order. . . . and if you execute these men, I will hold you responsible before an earthly tribunal, so help me God." (Joseph Fielding Smith, Essentials in Church History, p. 241.)

We honor these partners because their devotion to correct principles overshadowed their devotion to popularity, party, or personalities.

Founding fathers

We honor our founding fathers of this republic for the same reason. God raised up these patriotic partners to perform their mission, and he called them "wise men." (See D&C 101:80.) The First Presidency acknowledged that wisdom when they gave us the guideline a few years ago of supporting political candidates "who are truly dedicated to the Constitution in the tradition of our Founding Fathers." (Deseret News, November 2, 1964.) That tradition has been summarized in the book The American Tradition by Clarence Carson.

The Lord said that "the children of this world are in their generation wiser than the children of light." (Luke 16:8.) Our wise founders seemed to understand, better than most of us, our own scripture, which states that "it is the nature and disposition of almost all men, as soon as they get a little authority . . . they will immediately begin to exercise unrighteous dominion." (D&C 121:39.)

Allegiance to Constitution

To help prevent this, the founders knew that our elected leaders should be bound by certain fixed principles. Said Thomas Jefferson: "In questions of power then, let no more be heard of confidence in man but bind him down from mischief by the chains of the Constitution."

These wise founders, our patriotic partners, seemed to appreciate more than most of us the blessings of the boundaries that the Lord set within the Constitution, for he said, "And as pertaining to law of man, whatsoever is more or less than this, cometh of evil." (D&C 98:7.)

Thursday, April 6

In God the founders trusted, and in his Constitution—not in the arm of flesh. "O Lord," said Nephi, "I have trusted in thee, and I will trust in thee forever. I will not put my trust in the arm of flesh; . . . cursed is he that putteth his trust in man or maketh flesh his arm." (2 Ne. 4:34.)

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., put it well when he said:

"God provided that in this land of liberty, our political allegiance shall run not to individuals, that is, to government officials, no matter how great or how small they may be. Under His plan our allegiance and the only allegiance we owe as citizens or denizens of the United States, runs to our inspired Constitution which God himself set up. So runs the oath of office of those who participate in government. A certain loyalty we do owe to the office which a man holds, but even here we owe just by reason of our citizenship, no loyalty to the man himself. In other countries it is to the individual that allegiance runs. This principle of allegiance to the Constitution is basic to our freedom. It is one of the great principles that distinguishes this 'land of liberty' from other countries." (Improvement Era, July 1940, p. 444.)

Patriotism

"Patriotism," said Theodore Roosevelt, "means to stand by the country. It does not mean to stand by the President or any other public official save exactly to the degree in which he himself stands by the country. . . .

"Every man," said President Roosevelt, "who parrots the cry of 'stand by the President' without adding the proviso 'so far as he serves the Republic' takes an attitude as essentially unmanly as that of any Stuart royalist who championed the doctrine that the King could do no wrong. No self-respecting and intelligent free man could take such an attitude." (Theodore Roosevelt, Works, vol. 21, pp. 316, 321.) And yet as Latter-day Saints we should pray for our civic leaders and encourage them in righteousness.

Support of candidates

". . . to vote for wicked men, it would be sin," said Hyrum Smith. (Documentary History of the Church, vol. 6, p. 323.)

And the Prophet Joseph Smith said, ". . . let the people of the whole Union, like the inflexible Romans, whenever they find a promise made by a candidate that is not practiced as an officer, hurl the miserable sycophant from his exaltation. . . ." (DHC, vol. 6, p. 207.)

Joseph and Hyrum's trust did not run to the arm of flesh, but to God and correct eternal principles. "I am the greatest advocate of the Constitution of the United States there is on the earth," said the Prophet Joseph Smith. (DHC, vol. 6, p. 56.)

The warning of President Joseph Fielding Smith is most timely: "Now I tell you it is time the people of the United States were waking up with the understanding that if they don't save the Constitution from the dangers that threaten it, we will have a change of government." (Conference Report, April 1950, p. 159.)

Another guideline given by the First Presidency was "to support good and conscientious candidates, of either party, who are aware of the great dangers" facing the free world. (Deseret News, November 2, 1964.)

Fortunately we have materials to help us face these threatening dangers in the writings of President David O. McKay and other church leaders. Some other fine sources by LDS authors attempting to awaken and inform us of our duty are: Prophets, Principles, and National Survival (Jerreld L. Newquist), Many Are Called But Few Are Chosen (H. Verlan Andersen), and The Elders of Israel and the Constitution (Jerome Horowitz).

But the greatest handbook for freedom in this fight against evil is the Book of Mormon.

Standard in scriptures

This leads me to the second great civic standard for the Saints. For in addition to our inspired Constitution, we have the scriptures.

Joseph Smith said that the Book of Mormon was the "keystone of our religion" and the "most correct" book on earth. (DHC, vol. 6, p. 56.) This most correct book on earth states that the downfall of two great American civilizations came as a result of secret conspiracies whose desire was to overthrow the freedom of the people. "And they have caused the destruction of this people of whom I am now speaking," says Moroni, "and also the destruction of the people of 'Nephi.'" (Eth. 8:21.)

Now undoubtedly Moroni could have pointed out many factors that led to the destruction of the people, but notice how he singled out the secret combinations, just as the Church today could point out many threats to peace, prosperity, and the spread of God's work, but it has singled out the greatest threat as the godless conspiracy. There is no conspiracy theory in the Book of Mormon—it is a conspiracy fact.

Then Moroni speaks to us in this day and says, "Wherefore, the Lord commandeth you, when ye shall see these things come among you that ye shall awake to a sense of your awful situation, because of this secret combination which shall be among you. . . ." (Eth. 8:24.)

The Book of Mormon further warns that "whatsoever nation shall uphold such secret combinations, to get power and gain, until they shall spread over the nation, behold they shall be destroyed. . . ." (Eth. 8:22.)

Dangers ahead

This scripture should alert us to what is ahead unless we repent, because there is no question but that as people of the free world, we are increasingly upholding many of the evils of the adversary today. By court edict godless conspirators can run for government office, teach in our schools, hold office in labor unions, work in our defense plants, serve in our merchant marines, etc. As a nation, we are helping to underwrite many evil revolutionaries in our country.

Now we are assured that the Church will remain on the earth until the Lord comes again—but at what price? The Saints in the early days were assured that Zion would be established in Jackson County, but look at what their unfaithfulness cost them in bloodshed and delay.

President Clark warned us that "we stand in danger of losing our liberties, and that once lost, only blood will bring them back; and once lost, we of this church will, in order to keep the Church going forward, have more sacrifices to make and more persecutions to endure than we have yet known. . . ." (CR, April 1944, p. 116.) And he stated that if the conspiracy "comes here it will probably come in its full vigor and there will be a lot of vacant places among those who guide and direct, not only this government, but also this Church of ours." (CR, April 1952.)

Word of living prophets

Now the third great civic standard for the Saints is the inspired word of the prophets—particularly the living president, God's mouthpiece on the earth today. Keep your eye on the captain and judge the words of all lesser authority by his inspired counsel.

The story is told how Brigham Young, driving through a community, saw a man building a house and simply told him to double the thickness of his walls. Accepting President Young as a prophet, the man changed his plans and doubled the walls. Shortly afterward a flood came through that town, resulting in much destruction, but this man's walls stood. While putting the roof on his house, he was heard singing, "We thank thee, O God, for a prophet!"

Thursday, April 6

Joseph Smith taught "that a prophet was a prophet only when he was acting as such." (DHC, vol. 5, p. 265.)

Promptings of Holy Spirit

Suppose a leader of the Church were to tell you that you were supporting the wrong side of a particular issue. Some might immediately resist this leader and his counsel or ignore it, but I would suggest that you first apply the fourth great civic standard for the faithful Saints. That standard is to live for, to get, and then to follow the promptings of the Holy Spirit.

Said Brigham Young: "I am more afraid that this people have so much confidence in their leaders that they will not inquire for themselves of God whether they are led by Him. . . . Let every man and woman know, by the whisperings of the Spirit of God to themselves, whether their leaders are walking in the path the Lord dictates, or not." (JD, vol. 9, p. 150.)

A number of years ago, because of a statement that appeared to represent the policy of the Church, a faithful member feared he was supporting the wrong candidate for public office. Humbly he took the matter up with the Lord. Through the Spirit of the Lord he gained the conviction of the course he should follow, and he dropped his support of this particular candidate. This good brother, by fervent prayer, got the answer that in time proved to be the right course.

We urge all men to read the Book of Mormon and then ask God if it is true. And the promise is sure that they may know of its truthfulness through the Holy Ghost, "and by the power of the Holy Ghost [men] may know the truth of all things." (Moro. 10:5.)

We need the constant guidance of that Spirit. We live in an age of deceit.

"O my people," said Isaiah in the Book of Mormon, "they who lead thee cause thee to err and destroy the way of thy paths." (2 Ne. 13:12.) Even within the Church we have been warned that "the ravaging wolves are amongst us, from our own membership, and they, more than any others, are clothed in sheep's clothing, because they wear the habiliments of the priesthood." (J. Reuben Clark, Jr., CR, April 1949, p. 163.)

The Lord holds us accountable if we are not wise and are deceived. "For they that are wise," he said, "and have received the truth, and have taken the Holy Spirit for their guide, and have not been deceived—verily I say unto you, they shall not be hewn down and cast into the fire, but shall abide the day." (D&C 45:57.)

Civic standards

And so four great civic standards for the faithful Saints are, first, the Constitution ordained by God through wise men; second, the scriptures, particularly the Book of Mormon; third, the inspired counsel of the prophets, especially the living president, and fourth, the guidance of the Holy Spirit.

God bless us all that we may use these standards and by so doing bless ourselves, our families, our community, our nation, and the world, I humbly pray, as I bear my witness to the truth of this great latter-day work, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. □

President N. Eldon Tanner

Elder Ezra Taft Benson of the Council of the Twelve has just addressed us.

The morning session Saturday, in addition to being broadcast direct, will be video-taped and released to many television stations Sunday morning to the eastern and central parts of the United States, Canada, Hawaii, and bases of the Armed Forces throughout the Pacific and carried by radio to Vietnam.

We express our thanks and appreciation to the owners and managers of over 350 television and radio stations for their generous cooperation in broadcasting the programs of this conference.

Rebroadcasts of all sessions of the conference will be received over KSL radio beginning at midnight tonight, and can be heard in many parts of the United States and the world.

The singing for this session has been furnished by the Primary Leaders Chorus of the Utah North Regions with Patricia Maughan conducting and Roy Darley at the organ.

We greatly appreciate the devotion of these faithful sisters who contribute so much to the welfare of our children throughout the Church.

On behalf of all who have listened to the singing during this session we express appreciation and our sincere thanks to the members of this chorus for furnishing us with their inspirational music.

The Primary Leaders Chorus will now favor us with "The 23rd Psalm."

The benediction will be offered by Elder Dee Lloyd Andreasen, former president of the Bannock Stake.

The general session of this conference will then be adjourned until 10:00 A.M. Saturday.

The Primary Leaders Chorus sang "The 23rd Psalm."

The benediction was offered by Elder Dee Lloyd Andreasen, former president of Bannock Stake.

The conference was adjourned until Saturday, April 8, at 10 o'clock A.M.

SECOND DAY MORNING MEETING

THIRD SESSION

The third session of the conference convened in the Salt Lake Tabernacle on Saturday, April 8, 1972, at 10 o'clock A.M.

With President Joseph Fielding Smith present and presiding, President Harold B. Lee, first counselor in the First Presidency, conducted this session.

The special music for this meeting was furnished by the Tabernacle Choir, directed by Richard P. Condie, with Alexander Shreiner playing the organ accompaniments.

Before the beginning of the meeting the Tabernacle Choir sang the hymn, "How Firm a Foundation."

President Lee then made the following statement:

President Harold B. Lee

President Joseph Fielding Smith, the president of the Church, is presiding over this session of the conference. He has asked me to conduct this service.

The Tabernacle Choir has just opened this third session of the 142nd Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

We extend a cordial welcome to all present this morning in this historic Tabernacle—special guests, educational and civic leaders, and thousands of members of the Church from far and near, together with the vast audience tuned to these proceedings by radio and television throughout many areas of the world.

Music for this session of the conference will be rendered by the Tabernacle Choir under the direction of Richard P. Condie, with Alexander Schreiner at the organ. The Choir will now render Handel's "Sing Unto God." Following the singing the invocation will be offered by Elder M. Elmer Christensen, former president of the Switzerland Mission.

The Choir sang "Lead Kindly Light" without announcement.

The Tabernacle Choir sang "Sing Unto God."

The opening prayer was offered by Elder M. Elmer Christensen, former president of the Switzerland Mission.

President Lee

President N. Eldon Tanner, second counselor in the First Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, will be our first speaker.

President N. Eldon Tanner

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

The other day, as I overheard one neighbor criticizing another, I was reminded of these lines:

"Wouldn't this old world be better
If the folks we meet would say:
'I know something good about you,'
And then treat us that way?"

Then I thought of the words of one of our hymns:

"Let each man learn to know himself;
To gain that knowledge let him labor,
Improve those failings in himself
Which he condemns so in his neighbor.
How lenient our own faults we view,
And conscience's voice adeptly smother;
Yet, oh, how harshly we review
The selfsame failings in another! . . .
So first improve yourself today
And then improve your friends tomorrow."

—Hymns, no. 91

Judging others

It seems common practice for people to talk about their friends and neighbors and to criticize their seeming peculiarities and weaknesses. In fact, it is so general that one would think that gossiping about and judging others was the thing to do. How often have we heard of young men who were criticized, judged, and ridiculed because of their peculiarities and yet who eventually became leaders in their different fields of endeavor.

Unjust criticism

Let me give you one or two examples of unjust criticism and judging without the facts.

There is a little story about Sister McKay, the wife of President David O. McKay, when she began teaching school. As the principal introduced her to the class, he pointed to a certain boy and said he was a troublemaker. She sensed the boy's embarrassment and feared he would live up to his reputation, so she wrote a note and slipped it to him as she passed his desk. It said, "Earl, I think the principal was mistaken about your being a bad boy. I trust you, and know that you are going to help me make this room the best in the school." Earl not only became a paragon of scholastic virtue but also one of the town's most important people.

I should like to give you another example. One of our most respected community-minded citizens began to act as though his feelings had been hurt and to stay away from socials where, in the past, he had gone and taken a most active part. People started accusing him of being a sorehead, a poor sport, anti-social, etc., and even evaded him whenever possible. Later, a medical diagnosis showed he was suffering from a brain tumor, which had been the cause of his lack of interest in activities that he had previously attended and even sponsored.

Prejudgment

Let me give you another example or two of what I would call unrighteous judgment. First, a bishop who needs additional officers sees a member of his ward who, though not active, seems to have ability, but he says to himself, "Oh, he wouldn't be interested. He wouldn't want to accept a position." So he does not approach him, and the man remains inactive for years.

A new bishop is called to the ward, asks the man if he would be willing to accept a position, and finds that he is really ready and anxious to work.

Don't prejudge, but give the person an opportunity. Let him decide for himself to accept or decline.

On the other hand, we hear a man say to his family and to others, "I don't see why the bishop does this or that. You would think he would know better." Here he is judging the bishop without the facts, which, if known to him, would be full justification for the action taken. The man's judgment was not only unrighteous, but it had probably prejudiced his children and caused them to lose respect for the bishop and had weakened their faith.

"Judge not . . ."

These examples show how important it is that we do not judge, but encourage rather than denounce. Jesus Christ, some 2,000 years ago, realizing man's tendency to make unrighteous judgment, said:

"Judge not, that ye be not judged.

"For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged: and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again.

"And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye?

"Or how wilt thou say to thy brother, Let me pull out the mote out of thine eye; and, behold, a beam is in thine own eye?

"Thou hypocrite, first cast out the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye." (Matt. 7:1-5.)

Samuel's experience

It seems he is saying that unless we are without fault, we are not qualified to judge. By referring to Samuel's experience while choosing a king, we may get a better understanding of the fact that man is not qualified to judge. The Lord had rejected Saul as king of Israel and instructed the prophet Samuel to choose a new king. He told him to go to the house of Jesse, who had eight sons, and that while there the anointed one would pass before him and Samuel would know who was to be chosen. When the first son, Eliab, came before him, Samuel thought he was the chosen one, but the Lord refused him and then gave the prophet Samuel the key as to how to judge:

"Look not on his countenance, or on the height of his stature; because I have refused him: for the Lord seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart." (1 Sam. 16:7.)

Each of the seven sons then passed before Samuel and was rejected. Then David, the youngest, was sent for and was approved by the Lord.

Judging fairly

The reason, therefore, that we cannot judge is obvious. We cannot see what is in the heart. We do not know motives, although we impute motives to every action we see. They may be pure while we think they are improper.

It is not possible to judge another fairly unless you know his desires, his faith, and his goals. Because of a different environment, unequal opportunity, and many other things, people are not in the same position. One may start at the top and the other at the bottom, and they may meet as they are going in opposite directions. Someone has said that it is not where you are but the direction in which you are going that counts; not how close you are to failure or success but which way you are headed. How can we, with all our weaknesses and frailties, dare to arrogate to ourselves the position of a judge? At best, man can judge only what he sees; he cannot judge the heart or the intention, or begin to judge the potential of his neighbor.

Saturday, April 8

Looking for weaknesses

When we try to judge people, which we should not do, we have a great tendency to look for and take pride in finding weaknesses and faults, such as vanity, dishonesty, immorality, and intrigue. As a result, we see only the worst side of those being judged.

Our news media today also seem to be interested mainly in controversial subjects or someone who is being attacked; and regardless of the ninety-nine good things one may do, it is the one weakness or error that alone is emphasized and heralded to the world.

We are too prone to listen to, accept, and repeat such adverse criticism, such maliciously spoken or printed words, without stopping to realize the harm we may be doing to some noble person; and, as is done so often, we excuse and justify ourselves by saying, "Well, where there is so much smoke, there must be some fire," whereas in reality we are adding to the smoke, when the fire referred to may be only the fire of malice started by some envious person.

Sometimes even when our friends are accused of wrongdoing or gossip is started about them, we disloyally accept and repeat what we hear without knowing all the facts. It is sad indeed that sometimes friendships are destroyed and enmity created on the basis of misinformation.

Suspending judgment

If there be one place in life where the attitude of the agnostic is acceptable, it is in this matter of judging. It is the courage to say, "I don't know. I am waiting for further evidence. I must hear both sides of the question."

Only by suspending judgment do we exhibit real charity. It is hard to understand why we are ready to condemn our neighbors and our friends on circumstantial evidence while we are all so determined to see that every criminal has a fair and open trial. Surely we can try to eliminate pride, passion, personal feeling, prejudice, and pettiness from our minds, and show charity to those around us.

Let us look for the good rather than try to discover any hidden evil. We can easily find fault in others if that is what we are looking for. Even in families, divorce has resulted and families have been broken up because the husband or wife was looking for and emphasizing the faults rather than loving and extolling the virtues of the other.

Improving ourselves

Let us remember too that the further out of line or out of tune we ourselves are, the more we are inclined to look for error or weaknesses in others and to try to rationalize and justify our own faults rather than to try to improve ourselves. Almost invariably, we find that the greatest criticism of Church leaders and doctrine comes from those who are not doing their full duty, following the leaders, or living according to the teachings of the gospel.

An outstanding example of this can be found in the story of Cain and Abel. Cain neglected his own stewardship and became so bitter over Abel's righteousness and favor in the eyes of the Lord that his insane jealousy caused him to murder his brother. How much better would his situation have been had he congratulated and honored his brother and set about to improve himself and correct his own failings.

Let us examine our own lives and actions, bring ourselves in tune with righteous principles, and never attack or spread misinformation about others.

Gossip

Gossip is the worst form of judging. The tongue is the most dangerous, destructive, and deadly weapon available to man. A vicious tongue can ruin the reputation and even the future of the one attacked. Insidious attacks against one's reputation, loathsome innuendoes, half-lies about an individual are as deadly as those insect parasites that kill the heart and life of a mighty oak. They are so stealthy and cowardly that one cannot guard against them. As someone has said, "It is easier to dodge an elephant than a microbe."

The golden rule

What a different world it would be if we would put into practice what we have all heard so many times: "... whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets." (Matt. 7:12.) Instead, we are all so inclined to judge others by a standard different from the one by which we would wish or be willing to be judged.

When the woman accused of adultery was brought before Christ, he was indignant because of the accusers' injustice. They were wanting the woman to be judged on the basis of standards different from those by which they were willing to be judged and on a matter of which some were guilty.

He said: "He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her." Then, after stooping and writing in the sand, he looked up and said, "... where are those thine accusers?" (John 8:7, 10.)

If Jesus were to stand by and be asked to judge those whom we accuse and should say to us, "He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her," and then should stoop and write in the sand, how many of us would feel to steal away ashamed, convicted in our own conscience? How sound is his counsel!

Forgiving one another

If we could accept and practice the second great commandment, "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself" (Matt. 22:39), and really learn to love our neighbors, there would be no vicious gossip or bearing false witness. In the Lord's prayer, we have these words: "And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors," and then he says: "For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you: But if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses." (Matt. 6:12, 14-15.)

Christ is our greatest example of forgiveness. To the woman brought before him accused of adultery, he said, "Neither do I condemn thee: go, and sin no more." (John 8:11.)

Then on the cross he prayed: "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do." (Luke 23:34.)

Regardless of our ego, our pride, or our feeling of insecurity, our lives would be happier, we would be contributing more to social welfare and the happiness of others, if we would love one another, forgive one another, repent of our wrongdoings, and judge not.

It is true that we must have appointed judges to deal with the laws of the land and judges in the Church to deal with its members; and they are given the heavy duty and responsibility of judging, which they must not neglect, but they must give righteous judgment according to the law of the land and of the Church.

Political campaigns

This being election year, there will be much campaigning; we will hear and argue the pros and cons of many questions; we will have strong opposing views. Each must try to understand the questions and then stand firm by his convictions. But let us determine now that in the heat of the campaign we will not indulge in the vituperative talk of personalities that we so often hear. We must not rail against our brother and accuse him of lying and cheating or being dishonest or immoral.

Let us stand on principle—high principle. Also, it is most important that all of us, including our politicians, strive to live so that our actions will be above reproach and criticism.

We never gain anything or improve our own character by trying to tear down another. We have seen close friendships destroyed through words spoken and accusations made in the heat of a campaign. Tirades against men in office or against one's opponent tend to cause our youth and others to lose faith in the individual and others in government and often even our form of government itself.

Influence of the home

As parents, we have the responsibility in our homes to guard against any of these things. Also, we must realize that every word and every act influences the thinking and attitude of the child. It is in the family that the child picks up the elementary lessons in getting along with people and the virtues of love, compassion, and concern. These lessons will have been well taught if parents can bring up their children without prejudicing them by precept or example against any other children on the grounds of color, race, religion, social status, or intellectual capacity, and if they teach them to love the Lord. I am so thankful that my parents, through their tolerance, were able to accomplish this with their children.

May I humbly say in all sincerity that I love the Lord with all my heart and that I love my fellowmen. I hold no hard feelings of any kind toward any man, and I sincerely pray for forgiveness wherein I have offended anyone. I realize, as the Savior said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." (Matt. 25:40.)

A witness and a challenge

To all the world, and especially to those who do not understand but who ridicule the teachings of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, I wish to bear my witness and issue a challenge that you judge not until you know and understand those teachings which are contained in the restored gospel. We believe, with you, that God lives and that Jesus Christ is his Only, but truly, Begotten Son in the flesh, who came and gave his life and was resurrected so that all mankind might enjoy immortality.

He said, "... this is my work and my glory—to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man" (Moses 1:39), and he gave us the gospel plan by which we can prepare ourselves to go back into his presence and enjoy eternal life.

Yes, the gospel in its fullness is restored and is here upon the earth today. I bear witness that the Bible is the word of God, given to us through his prophets, and also that the Book of Mormon is the word of God and is a translated and true record of God's dealings with the ancient American people, containing the gospel in its fullness. It was written by way of commandment and also by the spirit of prophecy and by revelation, to the convincing of the Jew and the gentile that Jesus is the Christ, the Eternal God, manifesting himself unto all nations.

A prophet of God

I also wish to bear testimony that I know that Joseph Fielding Smith, the President of the Church, is a prophet of God through whom the Lord speaks, and I express my sincere and deep appreciation for the opportunity I have of working so closely with him.

These things I know, and I humbly bear my testimony that they are true; and I invite and encourage each and every one of you to investigate and to read the Book of Mormon, to test and enjoy the promise contained therein, which is:

"And when ye shall receive these things, I would exhort you that ye would ask God, the Eternal Father, in the name of Christ, if these things are not true; and if ye shall ask with a sincere heart, with real intent, having faith in Christ, he will manifest the truth of it unto you, by the power of the Holy Ghost.

"And by the power of the Holy Ghost ye may know the truth of all things." (Moro. 10:4-5.)

This promise, and my testimony, I leave with you in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. □

The Choir sang "Come O Thou King of Kings" without announcement.

President Harold B. Lee

For the benefit of the television and radio audience who have just joined with us, we are gathered in the historic Mormon Tabernacle on Temple Square in this, the third session of the 142nd Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

President N. Eldon Tanner, second counselor in the First Presidency of the Church, has just spoken to us. We might say as the Master said, "For out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." President Tanner practices as he preaches.

The Tabernacle Choir will now sing "Arise, Shine, Thy Light Is Come."

Following the singing, Elder Marvin J. Ashton, newly sustained as a member of the Council of the Twelve, will speak to us.

The Choir sang "Arise, Shine, Thy Light Is Come."

President Lee

Elder Marvin J. Ashton of the Council of the Twelve will now address us.

Elder Marvin J. Ashton

Of the Council of the Twelve

A few weeks ago while in England, I had the opportunity to do some traveling by train. Weather and time schedules indicated this to be the most satisfactory method of transportation.

What is your destination?

One day as the train rolled from Manchester to Leicester, after about an hour and a half of reading, I put down my books, looked out the window, and wondered if we were getting close to the station. A few minutes later the door to the compartment opened and the conductor entered. He greeted me with, "What is your destination?"

Inasmuch as I had been giving some thought to arrivals, departures, and stops, I answered, "I have an appointment in Leicester."

To this he responded with, "We shall be at your destination in ten minutes." He punched my ticket and made his way to check others.

After he left, I pondered his comments, "What is your destination?" and "We shall be at your destination in ten minutes." He seemed convinced that every time the train stopped and dozens or hundreds of people got off, they had arrived at their destinations. Apparently he has been announcing this to his passengers for years.

However, I knew, despite his comments, that I needed to be in Leicester for two days for quarterly stake conference sessions but that it was not my destination. Stops in other English cities were not my destinations either. They were all assignments along the way. I had not arrived when I reached any of them.

Confusion about destinations

As a result of this experience on the train, and having given this thought some consideration over the years, I am concerned that many of us are confused in our life's travels with destinations, arrivals, stops, calls, stations, and assignments. It appears to me that some of us may be lost today because we think we have arrived.

I would like to share with you some observations and raise some questions within the framework of this question, What is your destination?

Temple marriage

Have you arrived when you go to the temple? Is temple marriage your destination? Over the years, I have heard hundreds of my young associates say, "I want to make the temple. A temple marriage is my goal."

To qualify one's self to go to the temple is a lofty ambition, a worthy achievement. We need to remind ourselves of its eternal purposes. However, we have not arrived when we share the blessings of the temple. Oftentimes there are real dangers in our lives when we allow lofty ideals and goals, such as temple marriage, to become an end instead of a means. All of our priorities must be properly placed within the framework of eternity if we are to avoid the stagnations of arriving.

I think it was Louis J. Halle who said, "To snatch the passing moment and examine it for signs of eternity is the noblest of occupations." To gain exaltation after celestial marriage, continued devotion and righteousness are required. It is a continuing process, not a state of arrival.

Call to mission field

Have you arrived when you receive your call to serve in the mission field? Have you reached your destination when you have completed an honorable mission? May we emphatically state that a worthily completed mission is a signal accomplishment along life's journey. It should be fortification for greater personal service and strength. It should more firmly entrench the feet of the missionary in the paths that continue onward and upward to eternal happiness. It should prepare him for the enjoyment of pure religion.

"Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." (Jas. 1:27.)

I am reminded of a missionary friend who had difficulty remaining busily engaged the last six months of his mission. He had been assigned to labor in a district as a senior companion after having been an assistant to the mission president. In his own words, "I reached my goal when I held that high position of assistant to the president." He had lost his effectiveness temporarily because he had allowed himself to think he had arrived.

What an important day it is in the life of a missionary when he realizes that an honorable release is a commencement. To our fellow missionaries, past and present, we humbly pray that you will never allow yourselves the dangerous luxury of self-declaring, "I have given my two years to the Church." If a returned missionary will set his sights high for life, he will generally take the proper steps to get there. A mission can be the happiest two years in a missionary's life if he not only serves his God and fellowmen selflessly but if he is also walking in truth and preparing himself for eternal progress, which I declare is underway today.

"I have no greater joy than to hear that my children walk in truth." (3 John 4.)

May we emphasize that the joy is in the walking and in the traveling in truth, and not in anticipated arrival.

Testimony of gospel

Have you reached your destination when you receive a testimony of the truthfulness of the gospel of Jesus Christ by revelation from the Holy Ghost? We are sorry to observe that some, having received a testimony, feel and respond as if they had arrived. What a sad day in the life of any individual when he fails to use this knowledge and conviction of a testimony for dedicated and continued service. A testimony grows as it is shared. With the possession of a testimony comes the obligation to bear witness to the world of this, the Lord's work. A testimony is not a destination; it is a possession for performance.

Have you reached your destination when you are baptized, become an elder, a bishop, a stake president, a Relief Society officer, a seventy, or an apostle? In these days of needed performance and service it is hoped all of us will emphatically respond to this question with a resounding no!

Destination still ahead

Satan and his forces were never more strongly arrayed than today. He is cunning. He is successful. One of the most subtle and effective tools he is using among us today is the convincing of some that they have arrived, they have reached their destination, they have earned a rest, they aren't needed anymore, they are out of danger, they are beyond temptation, and they can take pride in their accomplishments.

"And thus he flattereth them, and leadeth them along until he draggeth their souls down to hell; and thus he causeth them to catch themselves in their own snare.

"And thus he goeth up and down, to and fro in the earth, seeking to destroy the souls of men." (D&C 10:26-27.)

Since my recent call to serve as a member of the Council of the Twelve Apostles, a number of friends associated with my father, who passed away some years ago, have commented: "Your father must be smiling with a great deal of pleasure at your appointment." To this, I have often thought, "If I know my father, and I think I do, he would take more time to suggest, 'Son, you have not arrived. You have not reached your destination. Your great test lies ahead of you. Strive to live worthy of the great trust placed in you.'"

May I this day thank you, my fellow associates in this The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, for your confidence and sustaining support. I assure you I have but one desire, and that is to walk worthily in his paths.

Elder in wheelchair

Let me tell you about a friend of mine who presently is traveling the true road with purpose and courage. I was visiting in the mission field when Elder Dennis Dean reached the Arizona Mission. His arrival in one of our first meetings created an electrifying influence on all present when he guided himself in his wheelchair down the aisle of the chapel. An expression of humble confidence covered his face.

His associates soon learned why he had been found worthy and able to serve a full-time mission. I recall his testimony that day when he let us all know that this was part of his life's hopes and ambitions. He said, "I will do my best to make myself worthy of your trust and confidence. Don't feel sorry for me. Just help me to do what I know I can do with the Lord's help."

His message carried. Later on in the day, his newly assigned companion warmly approached me and asked, "What do you do to be a good companion to a wheelchair-restricted elder?" My response after having spent part of the day with Elder Dean was, "You will do well to keep up with him. The real test in the weeks ahead is for you—not him."

Elder Dean, with the love and companionship of an excellent mission president and fellow missionaries, served as a district leader during his two years, bringing the gospel message to hundreds and leading forty-eight to the waters of baptism. Today Dennis enthusiastically carries on his studies and learning at Brigham Young University. He presently serves in the BYU 38th Ward as a home teacher and a Sunday School teacher. He has recently been to my office, where we had a good visit, and I was again impressed with this unusual example of a good man on the move.

Two prison inmates

As we continue our thinking along the lines of plans, destinations, goals, arrivals, and commitments, we can learn from two more of my friends. Some of my friends are unusual. They come from unusual places. Last Tuesday evening, as I was clearing my desk prior to leaving for home, the telephone rang: "Brother Ashton, I have permission from the prison authorities to come and visit with you. Will you wait until I get there?"

Frank came. We talked. In response to the questions, "Now that you are going to be released from the prison in one week, what are your plans? What are you going to do? What are your goals?" he answered, "I have an apartment. I have a full-time job. I have a wonderful sweetheart. I am going to continue my education. I have a church assignment. I have a lot of things I need to do. I am thirty-two years old and I am only a teacher in the priesthood. I want to be an elder before too long."

He ended his friendly visit with a request: "Brother Ashton, if I keep myself squared away, will you go to the temple with me in a few months and perform my marriage?"

Contrast this, if you will, with another conversation with a member of the same institution. I spoke to him during a visit some months ago. As I think back, I selected him to talk to because no one else was speaking to him.

"What are you going to do when you get out of this place?" I said. "All I want is out," he snarled back. "I'm in here on a phony rap, and I want out." No plans, no goals, no aims, no preparation. All he wants is out, and I am afraid from his attitude he doesn't care how he accomplishes it.

Steps in eternal progression

I humbly bear witness to you today that an honorably completed mission, a celestial marriage, a valued testimony, a position of major responsibility in the Church are not destinations in the lives of true Latter-day Saints. They can be important aids in eternal progression. They will not save you and me in the kingdom of God. Only living the life of a faithful Latter-day Saint will make that possible.

"If thou wilt do good, yea, and hold out faithful to the end, thou shalt be saved in the kingdom of God, which is the greatest of all the gifts of God; for there is no gift greater than the gift of salvation." (D&C 6:13.)

Eternal life

As we pursue our journeys, let us ever bear in mind that in train travel and in life, there are stations, there are departures, calls, schedules, and opportunities for being side-tracked and diverted. Wise is the individual who follows in his, the Savior's, paths. Safety and joy belong to those who will come and follow him. I bear witness to you today that God is eternal. We are eternal, and God never intended for us to travel alone.

What is your destination? I humbly pray our Heavenly Father to help each one of us realize it is eternal life, exaltation in our Father's kingdom. I bear you my witness that the gift of salvation is possible through this, the gospel of Jesus Christ, as we continue faithful, and I say it in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. □

Following Elder Ashton's talk, the Choir sang "How Lovely Are the Messengers" without announcement.

President Harold B. Lee

Elder Marvin J. Ashton of the Council of the Twelve Apostles of the Church has just spoken to us. He was followed by the Tabernacle Choir singing from Mendelssohn's St. Paul, "How Lovely Are the Messengers."

The Choir and congregation will now join in singing "The Spirit of God Like a Fire Is Burning."

The Choir and congregation sang "The Spirit of God."

President Lee

For the benefit of the television and radio audience who have just joined us, we again announce that we are gathered in the historic Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City, Utah, in the third session of the 142nd Annual Conference of the Church.

Elder Hartman Rector, Jr. of the First Council of Seventy will now address us. Following Elder Rector we will hear from Elder Franklin D. Richards, Assistant to the Twelve.

Elder Hartman Rector, Jr.

Of the First Council of the Seventy

Good morning, my brothers and sisters and friends. I deem it a privilege and a great honor to greet you in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. We meet in his name. It is because of him that we are here, and everything we do in this life, if it is really worthwhile, comes through him.

Christians

We are Christians. We want the whole world to know that we are. Sometimes we are accused of not being Christians, but such is not the case. In the words of the great prophet Nephi, "... we talk of Christ, we rejoice in Christ, we preach of Christ, we prophesy of Christ, and we write according to our prophecies, that our children may know to what source they may look for a remission of their sins." (2 Ne. 25:26.) We look to Christ as the Author and Finisher of our faith. He is our Redeemer.

Apostles and prophets

In the meridian of time, his church was established upon a foundation of apostles and prophets, holy men whom he knew in the flesh while he walked upon the earth. They received his teachings. He ordained them and gave them authority to act for him in all things with respect to the salvation of mankind. He knew he was not going to remain upon the earth for very long, for he so stated: "... the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many." (Matt. 20:28.)

Therefore, he needed men to remain here upon this earth who could receive communication from him from heaven, where he would be. This kind of communication is known as revelation, and those who receive it are designated prophets by God. In the beginning of his ministry, he chose twelve special witnesses, who were with him in mortality. But after his crucifixion, he chose others by revelation, who may not have known him in mortality. Certainly Paul was one of these.

The dark ages

For a time, these men presided over the church and handled problems, set the affairs of the church in order. But over a time the church became corrupt. The members refused to follow the inspired counsel of the apostles. Paul wrote many letters trying to bring them back to the fold. Persecution became intense, and the apostles, who were prophets, were killed or otherwise taken from the earth. And when they were gone, the light of revelation went out. Even secular history records this period as the dark ages.

A new day

But as had been prophesied by the apostles and the prophets of old, a new day dawned and God once again spoke from heaven and called a new prophet in this day and time. He was but a lad in his fifteenth year. His name was Joseph Smith, Jr. God called upon him in a great vision in the year 1820. He spoke unto him from heaven and gave him commandments, and also gave commandments to others, that they should proclaim these things unto the whole world, and all this that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophets:

The weak things of the world shall come forth and break down the mighty and strong ones, that man should not counsel his fellow man, neither trust in the arm of flesh—

"But that every man might speak in the name of God the Lord, even the Savior of the world;

"That faith also might increase in the earth;

"That mine everlasting covenant might be established;

"That the fulness of my gospel might be proclaimed by the weak and the simple unto the ends of the world, and before kings and rulers." (D&C 1:19-23.)

And so we have a new witness for God in modern America.

We are not Protestants, because we are not protesting against any person or group or organization. We have no quarrel with other churches. We do not write tracts nor propaganda against other churches, and we never will, because we are not in the business of tearing down men's faith and belief, but rather of building it up.

To Protestant friends

To our Protestant friends, and we have many, who believe that salvation is by grace through faith alone, we say, "We understand your emphasis on faith. We believe it too. Without faith it is impossible to please God, but there is more to it than just faith. There are certain ordinances you must receive, and certain authority that you must possess, and there are certain works that you must perform, so come, let us reason together. Let us share with you the fullness of the gospel of Jesus Christ."

This was in accordance with the teachings of the Master. To the Jews who were sure he had come to condemn and tear down their religion, he said: "Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil (Matt. 5:17.) And again, he found no fault whatsoever with their righteous acts, for he said: "... these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone." (Matt. 23:23.) And so we say to our Protestant friends.

To Catholic friends

To our Catholic friends who believe in salvation by grace through the sacraments of the church, we say, "We understand your emphasis on the sacraments or the ordinances of the church. We believe it too. Did not the Master say, 'Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God' (John 3:5)? Baptism by one who holds authority to act is essential to salvation.

"But there is more to salvation than just the ordinances of the gospel. There are certain acts of faith that you must manifest. There are certain works you must perform, and certain authority that you must possess that gives you the right to act in the name of the Lord, which can come only through a living prophet. So come—let us share with you the fullness of the gospel of Jesus Christ. We won't take anything from you that you have that's true; we will just add to what you have, and we will do it in love, with no compulsion, no force; only love and sacrifice can bring people to a knowledge of the truth."

Principles revealed

And now it would seem that we have sorted through the many different religions of the world and taken from them the very best parts of each of the churches. It would seem this way, but such is not the case. We can show that each principle that we teach is taught in the Holy Bible, which is a record of God's dealings with his people, particularly the Hebrews and the Jews, generally speaking. But if all the Bibles on earth had been destroyed in the year 1830 (when this church was organized), it would still be organized exactly as it is organized today.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is distinguished from the church that the Master organized in the meridian of time by the phrase "Latter-day Saints." These principles did not come from the Bible, but they came through revelation from God through a modern prophet, Joseph Smith.

Message for honest in heart

We have a message for all good men everywhere. To those who are honest in their hearts, the Lord has commanded us to declare glad tidings. "... yea," he has said, "publish it upon the mountains, and upon every high place, among every people that thou shalt be permitted to see."

Further, the Lord has commanded that "thou shalt do it with all humility, trusting in me, reviling not against revilers.

"And of tenets thou shalt not talk, but thou shalt declare repentance and faith on the Savior, and remission of sins by baptism, and by fire, yea, even the Holy Ghost." (D&C 19:29-31.)

And so we go forth in love, for God, for our fellowmen, pleading with them to listen, and offer in sacrifice the message of the restoration. There are in the mission fields of the Church today throughout the world over 15,000 full-time missionaries from this church who are giving of their time and talents and substance freely, paying their own way, to carry this message to their fellowmen.

"And they shall go forth and none shall stay them, for I the Lord have commanded them." (D&C 1:5.)

And again he said, "... the voice of the Lord is unto all men, and there is none to escape; and there is no eye that shall not see, neither ear that shall not hear, neither heart that shall not be penetrated." (D&C 1:2.) It is a message of hope, for we declare that God our Heavenly Father lives, that he hears and answers prayers, that Jesus is the Christ, and that he lives.

Church reestablished

He has reestablished his Church upon the earth in our own day and time, and it is for all men, for all who will. And he has called special witnesses, ordained them, and sent them forth to preach the gospel of truth, to gather out the elect, those who would hear this message.

We have the fullness of the gospel of Jesus Christ. He is so generous and kind to us in this day and time when we so desperately need it. He has given us a living prophet of God, who still makes the important decisions in the church and kingdom of God, under the direction of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, whose church it really is.

And we bear this witness to you in all soberness, leaving you our love and our blessings, and our most fond affection. We love you, we want you, and we do it in the name of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, who is our Redeemer. Amen. □

President Harold B. Lee

Elder Hartman Rector, Jr. of the First Council of Seventy has just spoken to us.

Elder Franklin D. Richards, Assistant to the Twelve, will now address us.

Elder Franklin D. Richards

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

My dear brothers and sisters, this has indeed been a wonderful conference—another inspiring spiritual experience. I have been deeply impressed and strengthened by the prayers, the music, and the spoken word.

We have prayed that the Spirit of the Lord would be with us, and our prayers have been answered. Prayer plays a vital part in our worship, our religious thinking, and our daily lives.

Importance of prayer

In the time allotted to me today I would like to further consider with you the importance of prayer.

Implanted in the heart of every person, regardless of his or her race or color, is the desire to worship, in some manner, a divine being. The Prophet Joseph Smith observed that "it is the first principle of the gospel to know for a certainty the character of God, and to know that we may converse with Him as one man converses with another. . . ." (Documentary History of the Church, vol. 6, p. 305.)

With the knowledge that we can converse with God as one man converses with another, we also understand that we not only have a divine spark within us, but that we are actually spirit children of our Father in heaven.

Prayer, being the primary method of communication between God and man, plays an important part in practically every religion, whether Christian or otherwise. This is particularly true in The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Prayer opened new dispensation

Prayer opened the heavens to the Prophet Joseph Smith and thus opened the dispensation of the fulness of times. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is truly a monument to prayer.

I am most grateful to the Prophet Joseph Smith for his simple belief in prayer. The answer to his prayer restored light and truth to mankind regarding the Godhead and many other great truths.

I know that God lives, that Jesus is the Christ, that Joseph Smith was and is a prophet of God, and that through him the power to act in the name of God has been restored to the earth.

I likewise bear witness that President Joseph Fielding Smith is a prophet of God and directs The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints on the earth today.

I have, throughout my life, had my prayers answered very directly many times. Prayer has been a great blessing to me and to my family.

The Lord has repeatedly told us to pray always and that he will pour out his Spirit upon us and bless us greatly. (See D&C 19:38.) I have frequently contemplated what "pray always" really means and how this injunction can be effectively applied in our lives.

Doing our part

Brigham Young, in his realistic manner, stated: "You know that it is one peculiarity of our faith and religion never to ask the Lord to do a thing without being willing to help him all that we are able; and then the Lord will do the rest." (Journal of Discourses, vol. 5, p. 293.)

"Please, Lord, help me to help myself." I am convinced that this prayer for increased personal powers—spiritual strength, greater inspiration, and greater confidence—is one that God always answers. We can learn to solve our problems with God's help, making him our partner.

Supplementing prayer

This being the case, what can we do to supplement prayer, or what is our part? Let me suggest a few examples:

As we pray for wisdom and knowledge, our part can be to study and apply ourselves.

As we ask for health and strength of body and of mind, we can supplement prayer by living the Word of Wisdom.

As we ask for protection, our part could well be to use good judgment, such as driving carefully, if we are traveling by car.

When we pray for inspiration, we should live close to the Lord by keeping his commandments. The Savior said, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." (John 14:15.)

When we pray for direction, remember the counsel of the Lord given to Oliver Cowdery in the ninth section of the Doctrine and Covenants: Study your problems out in your own mind. Make a decision and then ask the Lord if your decision is right; if so, you will receive a burning of your bosom or a good feeling; if not, you will receive a stupor of thought or a questionable feeling. Then whatever the feeling you receive, have the courage to follow it. This is doing your part.

The question is frequently asked, What should one pray for? Well, prayer being the soul's sincere desire, uttered or unexpressed, pray for your righteous desires. But never forget that whatever our prayers are, we can supplement our heavenly request with some positive action on our part.

How to pray

We members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, who make prayer a part of our lives, sometimes fail to recognize that many honest souls throughout the world are wondering how to pray, when to pray, and where to pray.

Let's consider for a moment how to pray. The Savior told us how when he said:

"After this manner therefore pray ye: Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name.

"Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven.

"Give us this day our daily bread.

"And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors.

"And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil: For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen." (Matt. 6:9-13.)

This sample prayer envisions appreciation, simplicity, and the avoidance of vain repetitions. Our prayers should simply be our soul's sincere desire. In our church worship there are only three set prayers: the baptismal and two sacramental prayers. We are also directed to close all of our prayers to our Heavenly Father in the name of Jesus Christ.

When to pray

Now, when to pray: Generally, I think we might say that we should pray in secret, with our families, and in worship meetings and public assemblies.

Secret prayer should have a place in every person's life. Again the Savior gave us the pattern when he said: "... when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly." (Matt. 6:6.)

The Prophet Joseph Smith, speaking on this subject, stated: "We would say to the brethren, seek to know God in your closets, call upon him in the fields. Follow the directions of the Book of Mormon, and pray over, and for your families, your cattle, your flocks, your herds, your corn, and all things that you possess; ask the blessing of God upon all your labors, and everything that you engage in." (DHC, vol. 5, p. 31.)

The Prophet Joseph Smith here amplifies the admonition to pray always.

Family prayer

Now with reference to family prayer: This should be a part of our daily worship. It should express our appreciation to our Father in heaven for our many blessings as well as our love for him. Here we should ask for our daily needs, as the Savior did in the Lord's Prayer.

The holding of family prayer is a powerful influence for good in every home where it is a regular practice. Morning and evening prayers, as well as the blessing on our food, bring us a sense of unity in our family as well as a closeness to our Father in heaven. Family prayer is indeed a stabilizing influence in our lives.

President John Taylor asked the Saints, "Do you have [family] prayers in your family? . . . And when you do, do you go through the operation like the guiding of a piece of machinery, or do you bow in meekness and with a sincere desire to seek the blessing of God upon you and your household? That is the way that we ought to do, and cultivate a spirit of devotion and trust in God, dedicating ourselves to him, and seeking his blessings." (JD, vol. 21, p. 118.)

Now regarding public prayers: Public prayers are a part of our worship services and many other public gatherings. These prayers again put us in a frame of mind to be inspired, strengthened, and motivated.

Our sacramental and baptismal prayers, of course, are certainly a very important part of our worship services.

Charge to parents

The Lord has also charged parents "to teach their children to pray, and walk uprightly before the Lord." (D&C 68:28.)

President Heber J. Grant, in referring to this matter, said, "I have little or no fear for the boy or the girl, the young man or the young woman, who honestly and conscientiously supplicate God twice a day for the guidance of His Spirit. I am sure that when temptation comes they will have the strength to overcome it by the inspiration that shall be given to them." (Gospel Standards, p. 26.)

As parents, it is clearly our duty and privilege to teach our children to pray, and regular family prayers set the pattern.

Approach in prayer

The Lord has promised to show mercy and to give comfort and strength to all who love him and keep his commandments. However, it is most important to remember that our attitude and approach in prayer should be similar to that of the Savior, in one of his last prayers in which he said, "Father, if thou be willing, remove this cup [ordeal] from me: nevertheless not my will, but thine, be done." Three times he prayed in this manner. And then "there appeared an angel unto him from heaven, strengthening him." (Luke 22:42-43.)

As we approach our Father in heaven with the spirit, "thy will be done," and as we personally do all we can to have our prayers answered, the Lord will do the rest, as President Brigham Young so aptly stated.

Laws governing prayer

It is important to recognize that the laws governing prayer are as immutable as those governing science. Response is predicated upon our having the proper attitude and so living that we are entitled to the whisperings of the Spirit. We must keep ourselves in tune with the Holy Ghost.

Yes, as we do our part or magnify our callings, the Lord will make us equal to the task by blessing us with strength of body and of mind far beyond our normal capacities.

May we this day commit ourselves to so live that we may go before the Lord with a clear conscience and ask for his divine guidance and assistance. As we do this, we will truly appreciate the words of the beautiful hymn: "O how praying rests the weary! Prayer will change the night to day." (Hymns, no. 31.)

May the choice blessings of our Father in heaven attend you, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. □

Following Elder Franklin D. Richards, the Choir sang "How Wondrous and Great" and "Keep My Words" without announcement.

President Harold B. Lee

Elder Franklin D. Richards, Assistant to the Twelve, has just spoken to us, followed by the singing of the Tabernacle Choir.

Following a brief interlude Elder Thomas S. Monson of the Council of the Twelve will be our concluding speaker.

Alexander Schreiner played a short interlude of organ music.

President Lee

We welcome those joining with us on television and radio in this third session of the 142nd Annual Conference of the Church.

Elder Thomas S. Monson of the Council of the Twelve, will be our concluding speaker.

Elder Thomas S. Monson

Of the Council of the Twelve

"Finishers Wanted"

On sunlit days during the noon hour, the streets of Salt Lake City abound with men and women who for a moment leave the confines of the tall office buildings and engage in that universal delight called window shopping. On occasion I, too, am a participant.

One Wednesday I paused before the elegant show window of a prestigious furniture store. That which caught and held my attention was not the beautifully designed sofa nor the comfortable-appearing chair that stood at its side. Neither was it the beautiful chandelier positioned overhead. Rather, my eyes rested upon a small sign that had been placed at the bottom right-hand corner of the window. Its message was brief: "Finishers Wanted."

The store had need of those persons who possessed the talent and the skill to make ready for final sale the expensive furniture that the firm manufactured and sold. "Finishers Wanted." The words remained with me as I returned to the pressing activities of the day.

In life, as in business, there has always been a need for those persons who could be called finishers. Their ranks are few, their opportunities many, their contributions great.

The race of life

From the very beginning to the present time, a fundamental question remains to be answered by each who runs the race of life. Shall I falter or shall I finish? On the answer await the blessings of joy and happiness here in mortality and eternal life in the world to come.

We are not left without guidance to make this momentous decision. The Holy Bible contains those accounts, even those lessons, which, if carefully learned, will serve us well and be as a beacon light to guide our thoughts and influence our actions. As we read, we sympathize with those who falter. We honor those who finish.

The apostle Paul likened life to a great race when he declared: "Know ye not that they which run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize? So run, that ye may obtain." (1 Cor. 9:24.)

And before the words of Paul fell upon the ears of his listeners, the counsel of the preacher, even the son of David, king in Jerusalem, cautioned: "... the race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong. . . ." (Eccles. 9:11.)

David's failure to finish

Could the son of David have been referring to his own father? Judged by any standards, the greatest king Israel ever had was David. Anointed by Samuel, he was honored by the Lord.

In the first flush of his incredible triumphs, David rode the crest of popularity. As he achieved fresh victories, the women greeted him with a new song: "... Saul hath slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands." (1 Sam. 18:7.) In adoration the people exclaimed: "Behold, we are thy bone and thy flesh." (2 Sam. 5:1.)

Power he won. Peace he lost.

It happened one evening when David was walking upon the roof of the king's house that he saw from the roof a woman bathing, and the woman was very beautiful.

"And David sent and inquired after the woman. And one said, Is not this Bathsheba, . . . the wife of Uriah the Hittite?" So "David sent messengers, and took her. . . ." (2 Sam. 11:3-4.)

The gross sin of adultery was followed by yet another: "... Set ye Uriah in the forefront of the hottest battle, and retire ye from him, that he may be smitten, and die." (2 Sam. 11:15.) Lust and power had triumphed.

David's rebuke came from the Lord God of Israel: "... thou hast killed Uriah the Hittite with the sword, and hast taken his wife to be thy wife. . . . Now therefore the sword shall never depart from thine house. . . ." (2 Sam. 12:9-10.)

David commenced well the race, then faltered and failed to finish his course.

The rich young man

Lest we lull ourselves into thinking that only the gross sins of life cause us to falter, consider the experience of the rich young man who came running to the Savior and asked the question: "Good Master, what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life?"

Jesus answered him: "If thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments.

"He saith unto him, Which?"

To Jesus' enumeration of the commandments, "The young man saith . . . All these things have I kept from my youth up: what lack I yet?"

"Jesus said unto him, If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, . . . and come and follow me.

"But when the young man heard that saying, he went away sorrowful: for he had great possessions." (Matt. 19:16-18, 20-22.)

He preferred the comforts of earth to the treasures of heaven. He would not purchase the things of eternity by abandoning those of time. He faltered. He failed to finish.

Betrayal of Christ

So it was with Judas Iscariot. He commenced his ministry as an apostle of the Lord. He ended it a traitor. For thirty paltry pieces of silver, he sold his soul. At last, realizing the enormity of his sin, Judas, to his patrons and tempters of his crime, shrieked: "I have sinned in that I have betrayed the innocent blood." (Matt. 27:4.)

Remorse had led to despair, despair to madness, and madness to suicide. He had succeeded in betraying the Christ. He had failed to finish the apostolic ministry to which he had been divinely called.

Lust for power, greed of gold, and disdain for honor have ever appeared as faces of failure in the panorama of life. Captivated by their artificial attraction, many noble souls have stumbled and fallen, thus losing the crown of victory reserved for the finisher of life's great race.

Concerning those who fall short, John Greenleaf Whittier's words seem particularly fitting:

"For of all sad words of tongue or pen,
The saddest are these: 'It might have been!'" —"Maude Muller"

Job, a finisher

May we turn from the lives of those who faltered and consider for a moment some who finished and won the prize.

There was a man in the land of Uz whose name was Job, and that man was perfect and upright and one that feared God and eschewed evil. Pious in his conduct, prosperous in his fortune, Job was to face a test that would tempt any man.

Shorn of his possessions, scorned by his friends, afflicted by his suffering, even tempted by his wife, Job was to declare from the depths of his noble soul: "... behold, my witness is in heaven, and my record is on high." (Job 16:19.) "... I know that my redeemer liveth. ..." (Job 19:25.)

Job did not falter. Job became a finisher.

Paul's example

Following the earthly ministry of the Lord, there were many who, rather than deny testimony of him, would forfeit their lives. Such was Paul the apostle. The impulse of his father to send him to Jerusalem opened the door to Paul's destiny. He would pass through it and help to shape a new world.

Gifted in his capacity to stir, move, and manage groups of men, Paul was a peerless example of one who nobly made the transition from sinner to saint. Though disappointment, heartache, and trial were to beset him, yet Paul, at the conclusion of his ministry, could say: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." (2 Tim. 4:7.) Like Job, Paul was a finisher.

He admonished us to "lay aside . . . sin" and to "run with patience the race . . . , Looking [for an example] unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith. . . ." (Heb. 12:1-2.)

Work finished

Though Jesus was tempted by the evil one, yet he resisted. Though he was hated, yet he loved. Though he was betrayed, yet he triumphed. Not in a cloud of glory or chariot of fire was Jesus to depart mortality, but with arms outstretched in agony upon a cruel cross. The magnitude of his mission is depicted in the simplicity of his words.

To his Father he prayed, "... the hour is come. . . . I have glorified thee on the earth: I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do." (John 17:1,4.) "... into thy hands I commend my spirit. . . ." (Luke 23:46.)

Mortality ended. Immortality began.

Marks of the finisher

Times change, circumstances vary, but the true marks of a finisher remain.

Note them well, for they are vital to our success.

1. The Mark of Vision. It has been said that the doorways of history turn on small hinges, and so do people's lives. We are constantly making small decisions. The outcome determines the success or failure of our lives. That is why it is worthwhile to look ahead, set a course, and at least be partly ready when the moment of decision comes. True finishers have the capacity to visualize their objective.

2. The Mark of Effort. Vision without effort is daydreaming, effort without vision is drudgery; but vision, coupled with effort, will obtain the prize.

Needed is the capacity to make the second effort when life's challenges lay us low.

"Stick to your task 'til it sticks to you;
Beginners are many, but enders are few.
Honor, power, place and praise
Will always come to the one who stays.

"Stick to your task 'til it sticks to you;
Bend at it, sweat at it, smile at it, too;
For out of the bend and the sweat and the smile
Will come life's victories after a while."

—Author Unknown

3. The Mark of Faith. Long years ago the psalmist wrote: "It is better to trust in the Lord than to put confidence in man: It is better to trust in the Lord than to put confidence in princes." (Ps. 118:8-9.) Recognize that faith and doubt cannot exist in the same mind at the same time, for one will dispel the other.

4. The Mark of Virtue. "... let virtue garnish thy thoughts unceasingly. . . ." (D&C 121:45.) This counsel from the Lord will provide staying power in the race we run.

5. The Mark of Courage. Courage becomes a living and attractive virtue when it is regarded not as a willingness to die manfully, but the determination to live decently. Have the courage—

"To dream the impossible dream;
To fight the unbeatable foe;
To bear with unbearable sorrow:
To run where the brave dare not go.

"To right the unrightable wrong;
To love, pure and chaste, from afar;
To try when your arms are too weary
To reach the unreachable star."¹ —and you will thus become a finisher.

6. The Mark of Prayer. When the burdens of life become heavy, when trials test one's faith, when pain, sorrow, and despair cause the light of hope to flicker and burn low, communication with our Heavenly Father provides peace.

These, the marks of a true finisher, will be as a lamp to our feet in the journey through life. Ever beckoning us onward and lifting us upward is he who pleaded, "... come, follow me." (Luke 18:22.)

Experience with missionary

Frequently his help comes silently —on occasion with dramatic impact. Such was my experience of some years ago when, as a mission president, I was afforded the privilege of guiding the activities of precious young men and women, even missionaries whom he had called.

Some had problems, others required motivation; but one came to me in utter despair. He had made his decision to leave the mission field when but at the halfway mark. His bags were packed, his return ticket purchased. He came by to bid me farewell. We talked; we listened; we prayed. There remained hidden the actual reason for his decision to quit.

As we arose from our knees in the quiet of my office, the missionary began to weep. Flexing the muscle in his strong right arm, he blurted out, "This is my problem. All through school my muscle power qualified me for honors in football and track, but my mental power was neglected. President Monson, I'm ashamed of my school record. It reveals that 'with effort' I have the capacity to read at but the level of the fourth grade. I can't even read the Book of Mormon. How then can I understand its contents and teach others its truths?"

¹Joe Darion, "The Impossible Dream," Sam Fox, Publisher, New York, 1965.

The silence of the room was broken by my young nine-year-old son, who, without knocking, opened the door and, with surprise, apologetically said, "Excuse me. I just wanted to put this book back on the shelf."

He handed me the book. Its title: A Child's Story of the Book of Mormon, by Dr. Deta P. Neeley. I turned to the foreword and read these words: "This book has been written with a scientifically controlled vocabulary to the level of the fourth grade." A sincere prayer from an honest heart had been dramatically answered.

My missionary accepted the challenge to read the book. Half laughing, half crying, he declared, "It will be good to read something I can understand." Clouds of despair were dispelled by the sunshine of hope. He completed an honorable mission. He became a finisher.

Prize of eternal life

Today I think I shall once more walk by that furniture store in our city and again gaze at the small sign in the large show window, that I may indelibly impress upon my mind the true meaning of its words: "Finishers Wanted."

I pray humbly that each one of us may be a finisher in the race of life and thus qualify for that precious prize: eternal life with our Heavenly Father in the celestial kingdom. I testify that God lives, that this is his work, and ask that each may follow the example of his Son, a true finisher, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. □

Following Elder Thomas S. Monson's address, the Choir sang "Praise the Lord" without announcement.

President Harold B. Lee

Elder Thomas S. Monson of the Council of the Twelve has just given the concluding address.

We are grateful for the managers and operators of many television and radio stations who have offered their facilities as a public service to make the proceedings of this conference available to millions throughout North America, South America, the Far East, and many other areas of the world.

These proceedings are being broadcast over stations in countries of Latin America and Australia by means of satellite transmission.

Through special arrangements of the Armed Forces Radio and Television Network this session will be televised to bases of the Armed Forces throughout the Pacific and heard by radio in Vietnam.

We shall now conclude this session of the conference with the Tabernacle Choir singing from the "Requiem" by Brahms, "Redeemed of the Lord."

Following the singing, the benediction will be pronounced by Elder Raymond P. Larson, former president of the Morgan Stake of the Church.

This conference will then be adjourned until two o'clock this afternoon.

The Choir sang "Redeemed of the Lord."

The benediction was offered by Elder Raymond P. Larson, former president of the Morgan Stake.

The conference was then adjourned until 2 o'clock P.M.

SECOND DAY AFTERNOON MEETING

FOURTH SESSION

The fourth session of the conference convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square on Saturday, April 8, 1972, at 2 o'clock P.M.

President Joseph Fielding Smith was present and presiding. President N. Eldon Tanner, second counselor in the First Presidency, conducted the meeting.

The special music for this session was rendered by the Combined Seminary Chorus of the Salt Lake Valley with Jay Welch conducting, Paul Hanks, assistant, with Roy M. Darley at the organ.

President Tanner made the following introductory comments:

President N. Eldon Tanner

As we are convened in this historic Tabernacle in Salt Lake City on Temple Square, we extend to all cordial greetings and welcome to this the fourth session of the 142nd Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

We are pleased to announce that this morning's session, in addition to being broadcast direct, was video-taped, and will be released to many television stations tomorrow morning to the eastern and central parts of the United States, Hawaii, and bases of the Armed Forces throughout the Pacific and carried by radio to Vietnam.

By means of satellite transmission, sessions of this conference will be heard over radio stations in Australia and countries of South America.

We deeply appreciate and thank the owners and operators of the radio and television stations for their cooperation in making possible such an extensive coverage of the proceedings of this conference, originating with KSL in Salt Lake City.

Proceedings of this General Conference are being telecast by closed-circuit color television in the Assembly Hall, and also in one of the auditoriums of the Salt Palace.

The General Priesthood Meeting to be held this evening will be transmitted over closed-circuit from the Salt Lake Tabernacle to over 170,000 men of the priesthood assembled in approximately 700 buildings throughout the United States and Canada, and by way of closed-circuit television in eight buildings in Salt Lake City and to many assembled at the Brigham Young University.

The music for this session will be rendered by the Combined Seminary Chorus of the Salt Lake Valley with Jay Welch conducting, Paul Hanks, assistant, with Roy M. Darley at the organ. In this connection, we are pleased to acknowledge the presence this afternoon of 63 division and district coordinators of our seminaries and institutes from almost every area in the world where the program is underway.

We shall begin this service by the chorus singing, "An Angel from on High."

The invocation will be offered by Elder G. LaMont Richards, Regional Representative of the Twelve.

The hymn, "An Angel from on High," was sung by the Combined Seminary Chorus.

Elder G. LaMont Richards, Regional Representative of the Twelve, offered the opening prayer.

President Tanner

The combined Seminary Chorus, with Jay Welch conducting, will now sing, "By the Waters of Babylon," after which Elder Gordon B. Hinckley of the Council of the Twelve will speak to us.

The Combined Seminary Chorus sang the number, "By the Waters of Babylon."

Elder Gordon B. Hinckley

Of the Council of the Twelve

In the hope that some may be listening, I wish to direct my remarks to two groups of men who have lost contact with the Church: those who are nominally members, but who are out of touch; and then men everywhere—doubting, hard-headed, thoughtful men who ask searching questions and want pragmatic answers.

I do so under the question, "What will the Church do for you, a man?" My answer:

A great fraternity

First, it will bring you into the greatest fraternity in the world.

Every man hungers for brotherhood. That desire finds a degree of fulfillment in many service clubs, trade associations, social groups, and similar organizations. And while all of these may be beneficial, there is none quite like the brotherhood of the priesthood of God.

Here will be found hundreds of thousands of men, from all honorable walks of life, endowed with authority to act in the name of God and obligated under the very nature of the sacred gift each has received to strengthen and assist one another. The words of the Lord to Peter are pertinent to their situation. Declared he: "Simon, . . . Satan hath desired to have you, that he may sift you as wheat: But I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not:

President Tanner

We shall now hear from Elder Gordon B. Hinckley of the Council of the Twelve. He will be followed by Elder Henry D. Taylor, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve.

and when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren." (Luke 22:31-32.)

This is one of the great purposes of quorum organization in the priesthood of the Church—to bring an awareness of the needs of others and an opportunity and a vehicle to strengthen one another.

Solution of problems

A local Church officer called me one day. He was a lawyer and said that one of his neighbors had come seeking his help in getting a divorce. He said that his marriage was in serious trouble. He and his wife had been living far beyond their means, they were hopelessly in debt, money problems had led to constant bickering, and the marriage had deteriorated to a point where they could not go on together.

We discussed the case, and the end result was that three of the man's priesthood quorum members were assigned to work with this brother and his wife toward a solution of their problems. One was a lawyer, one was a banker, and one was an accountant. The couple agreed to place their affairs in the hands of these, their neighbors and brethren.

With the expertise that came of their professional and business experience, the committee went to work. They called on the man's creditors, who, with confidence in the ability of this committee, agreed to give them time to work out his problems. These problems had been entirely beyond his ability to manage, but they were only one more challenge for his experienced brethren.

Saturday, April 8

Order was brought out of chaos. Peace was restored in the home. A new sense of security came into his life. His wife developed for him a respect she had never previously shown. Over a period of two or three years his creditors all received what was due them. And the man and his wife learned principles that qualified them to manage a home as it should be managed.

Said Paul to the Romans: "We then that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak," and then he added, "and not to please ourselves." (Rom. 15:1.) This is the spirit of this great brotherhood of men—to bear the infirmities of one another, not necessarily to please themselves, but in fulfillment of a divine obligation.

Motivation for clean living

Second, active membership in the Church will motivate a man to clean up his life, if that is necessary.

There are in the aggregate experiences of this church thousands upon thousands of cases of men who, under the uplifting impulses of the gospel of Jesus Christ and under the inspiration of association with good men, have received the strength to lay aside habits that held them in bondage for many years.

I stood one day some years ago with a Japanese businessman in Hiroshima, beside the monument that marks the events of that tragic August 6, 1945, when in a matter of minutes some 85,000 people were killed. He told me that he had been a member of the Japanese Imperial Army, that out of that experience had come a hatred for all Americans.

One day two of our missionaries knocked on his door. He was too intoxicated to talk with them. All purpose had gone from his life, and his only refuge was drink. Not recognizing them for what they were, he invited them back, and there followed some weeks later his baptism.

With his conversion came purpose into his life, the will to forsake old habits, the strength to turn completely around. He spoke of appreciation for the young men who had taught him and the motivation they had cultivated within him.

At the time of our conversation he was serving as a member of the branch presidency and as an active member of an elders quorum. His case, in essence, can be multiplied thousands of times. There is no other power like the reforming power of the gospel of Jesus Christ to give men the desire and the will to change their lives.

Growth through responsibility

Third, activity in the Church will afford you growth through responsibility.

It is an axiom as true as life itself that we grow as we serve. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is, among other things, a great school for the development of leadership. I have told groups of our missionaries, as I have met with them in various parts of the world, "You're not much to look at, but you're all the Lord has." And the miracle is that as they serve the Lord, they become giants in capacity and in achievement.

And so it is with each of us. If the work of the Lord is to go forward, it must be done by such as you and me. There is a constant need for men in this church to fill positions of responsibility. They must be taken as they are. And the marvelous thing is that as they serve, taking advantage of the great training programs and magnified by the Spirit of God, they become effective and powerful.

I recall speaking with a young man who first came to this community while in military service. One Sunday he wandered through Temple Square. Conversations begun here eventually led to his baptism.

Four or five years later I was interviewing him to become an elders quorum president. He told me of his childhood as an orphan, pushed from one place to another, of the loneliness and desolation of his life, of all opportunities for education and growth foreclosed against him. Then he came into the Church and received first one assignment and then another, each just a little beyond his capacity at the time; but as he served, his capacity increased.

And now he was prepared for a major responsibility. His entire life had changed. Today he is an officer in the Church, a valued employee in a position of responsibility, a good husband, an exemplary father, an excellent neighbor.

Robert Browning said, "A man's reach should exceed his grasp." Growth comes as we constantly seek to achieve that which is just beyond our immediate capacity. One of the noteworthy aspects of the Church program is that it constantly motivates men to stretch themselves, to reach a little higher.

A spiritual dimension

Fourth, membership in the Church and active participation therein will give a new dimension to your life, a spiritual dimension that will become as a rock of faith, with an endowment of authority to speak in the name of God.

In the opening of this work, in this dispensation of time, the Lord declared one of the purposes of the restoration of the gospel to be "that every man might speak in the name of God the Lord, even the Savior of the world." (D&C 1:20.)

Blessed is the man who prays with the assurance that prayers are heard and answered. Blessed is the man whose companion is the Holy Spirit. Blessed is the man who possesses the authority to speak in the name of God.

When King Belshazzar gathered about him his friends in a night of feasting and revelry, the fingers of a man's hand appeared and wrote upon the wall. The astrologers and the soothsayers were called to interpret the writing, and they could not, and the king was greatly troubled.

And the queen said, "There is a man in thy kingdom, in whom is the spirit of the holy gods; and in the days of thy father light and understanding and wisdom, like the wisdom of the gods, was found in him. . . ." (Dan. 5: 11.)

Daniel was brought before the king, and by virtue of the power in him he interpreted the writing on the wall.

I should like to suggest that every man who holds and magnifies the priesthood may have within him "light and understanding and wisdom, like the wisdom of the gods."

What will active membership in the Church do for you, a man? It will verily add a spiritual dimension to your life with which to bless your family, your associates, and yourself.

Governance of home

Fifth, it will assist you in the governance of your home.

How much stronger the nation would be—any nation—if there were presiding in each home a man who looked upon his wife as an eternal companion, engaged with him in a partnership with God in bringing to pass divine, eternal purposes, and who looked upon his children as children of our Heavenly Father, who has given to earthly parents a stewardship for those children.

Action is born of attitude, and in such a home, where true gospel principles become the guidelines of governance, there will be mutual appreciation, respect, deference, courtesy, and honor, for the father will look upon those for whom he is responsible as blessings divinely given, to be cherished, nurtured, protected, and loved.

Saturday, April 8

A convert to the Church once said, "As a father I believed in caning my children. The slightest infraction of a rule was answered with prompt physical punishment. Then the gospel came into our home. I saw my children in a new light. They were my children, yes, but they were also children of our Eternal Father. How could I abuse a child of God? I began to develop an entirely new point of view toward my children, and they reciprocated with a new attitude toward me.

"Do we have discipline in our home? Yes, but of an entirely different kind. We are no longer adversaries. There are still some penalties for wrongdoing, but such penalties are of a different nature and are accepted as properly deserved, and not resented with bitterness as they once were. Now there is respect for one another, and more than that, love. What a difference the gospel makes," he concluded.

"Yes," I added, "what a difference the gospel makes when it is accepted and lived."

To bind for eternity

Finally, the Church makes it possible for you, a man, to bind to you for eternity those you love most.

No other relationship in life is so sacred, so satisfying, so important in its consequences as the family relationship. Then how tragic are the implications of those words so often spoken on the day of marriage—"Till death do ye part."

As certainly as there has been a joining together in marriage with such a ceremony, there also has been decreed a separation and cancellation of family relationships in death. To think of eternal life without eternal love is to construct a paradox, a contradiction.

A loving Eternal Father, with concern for his children, has made possible a continuation of those sacred relationships. Declared the Lord to his chosen Twelve, "And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven. . . ." (Matt. 16:19.)

That same power, to bind in heaven what is bound on earth, is in this church today. It is exercised in holy temples, and there, under the authority of the priesthood of God, father and mother and children are sealed together under a covenant and in a relationship that time cannot break and death cannot destroy.

Reassurance in death

I spoke not long ago at the funeral of a prominent man in this community. It was a time for mourning, yes. But it was also a time for reassurance. And shining through the tears of the wonderful little woman and her children who that day were bereaved was a smile of peace that came of an overriding conviction that their husband and father had merely gone hence to prepare for reunions that will follow.

Following that service I received a letter from a business leader in the community, a man not of our faith, who wrote: "You people have a positive approach that is truly impressive. You come to comfort and not to mourn—to praise life rather than curse death. The depth of your faith surely must tide you over many of the vicissitudes of life, not the least of which is death."

What will the Church do for you, a man? It will give you the assurance, as certain as life itself, that death is but a graduation, and that those most precious to you may be yours through all eternity.

An invitation to see

To our brethren everywhere, to those who have become careless and who have drifted away, and to those who have not yet made inquiry, I extend an invitation to come and see. God in his wisdom has set up his organization to enrich your lives, to bring peace into your hearts and joy and love into your homes—and the assurance that those you love now may be yours forever.

My brethren, the door is open. You will be warmly welcomed, and you will find many good men anxious to help you. Furthermore, as a servant of the Lord, I do not hesitate to promise that you will come to know a joy that you have never previously experienced.

I bear witness of these things in soberness and with appreciation, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. □

President N. Eldon Tanner

He to whom we have just listened is Elder Gordon B. Hinckley of the Council of the Twelve.

We shall now hear from Elder Henry D. Taylor, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve, and he will be followed by Elder S. Dilworth Young of the First Council of Seventy.

Elder Henry D. Taylor

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

After Adam had been created by the Lord in his image and after his own likeness, the Lord pointed out that it was not good for man to be alone. So Eve was created and given to Adam to be his wife, his companion and helpmeet.

Your brother's keeper

Adam and Eve received many instructions from the Lord. Among them was the mandate to multiply and replenish the earth, or in other words, to bring children into the world. Without hesitation they followed that injunction, and in due time children were born to them. How proud, how thrilled and delighted they must have been with their offspring. Undoubtedly, they had wonderful dreams and high hopes for them. When one son was born they gave him the name of Cain. Later they were blessed with another son, who was called Abel.

The boys differed noticeably in temperament and disposition. As they matured and reached manhood, Cain became a tiller of the soil and Abel chose to become a keeper of sheep. The scriptures reveal that Abel loved the Lord. He was obedient and hearkened unto his voice. Cain was rebellious and loved Satan more than God. Out of selfishness and in a fit of jealousy, Cain rose up and slew his brother, Abel.

When the Lord inquired of Cain, "Where is Abel, thy brother?" Cain arrogantly replied with the question, "Am I my brother's keeper?" (Moses 5:34.)

Over the years that question has been asked numerous times. To that question, many today would respond with firm conviction, "Yes, Cain, you are your brother's keeper, and not only you, but each one of us is our brother's keeper."

Opportunities to serve

Those who labor so diligently and unselfishly with aching backs and blistered hands on welfare projects are doing so because they love their brothers and sisters and do not want them to suffer from cold nor hunger.

The home teachers and visiting teachers who faithfully visit their assigned families regularly to determine if all is well and in order surely believe, Cain, that they are their brother's keeper.

When one visits the houses of the Lord, the temples, he is impressed by the dedicated members of the Church who have sought out their deceased loved ones through research. They attend the temples often to perform vicarious ordinances for them that will make exaltation and eternal life possible. Truly they believe that they are their brother's keeper.

As we observe the sincere and enthusiastic labors of the thousands of missionaries throughout the world declaring the restored truth, not for their individual benefit, but to teach the glorious principles of the gospel to the peoples of the earth for their blessing, we are again impressed, Cain, that they have a conviction that they are their brother's keeper.

There are over 5,000 American Indian children, coming from fifty tribal backgrounds, living with Latter-day Saint families during the school year. They receive the same love and attention given to their foster brothers and sisters—a true act of love and brotherhood on the part of these families, with no reward other than the knowledge that they are helping a choice son or daughter of our Heavenly Father take his or her rightful place in the world. They too are their brother's keeper.

Teaching of Jesus

In teaching his followers, Jesus often used the scriptural terminology of neighbor in designating his brother.

At one time a certain lawyer asked the Savior what he must do to inherit eternal life. The Master asked him what he read in the law. The lawyer pondered a moment and then replied: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbour as thyself." (Luke 10:27.)

He was assured his answer was correct. In order to justify himself, he then posed the question: "And who is my neighbour?"

Jesus, the Master Teacher, then told of a certain man who was traveling from Jerusalem to Jericho. Thieves fell upon him, stripping him of his clothing, beating him brutally, and leaving him half dead. By chance a priest came along and, observing the wounded man, turned his head, crossed the road, and passed by on the other side. Soon a Levite came along, and when he saw the injured person, he also passed by on the opposite side of the road.

But a Samaritan riding along was filled with compassion when he viewed the unfortunate man. Stopping his animal, he bound up the victim's wounds and poured oil and wine into the afflicted parts. Placing the suffering man upon his beast, he took him to a nearby inn, where he further ministered unto him.

On the morrow when he departed, he took some money from his purse and handed it to the innkeeper, requesting him to care for the injured man and promising that he would compensate him for any additional expense incurred when he returned from his journey.

The Savior then posed the question: "Which now of these three, thinkest thou, was neighbour unto him that fell among the thieves?" To this the lawyer readily answered: "He that shewed mercy on him." The Savior said unto him: "Go, and do thou likewise." (Luke 10:36-37.)

Scene in Carthage jail

One of the most beautiful and tender accounts of brotherly love, concern, and devotion took place in Carthage Jail on the afternoon of the martyrdom. "The afternoon was sultry and hot. The four brethren [Joseph and Hyrum Smith, John Taylor, and Willard Richards] sat listlessly about the room with their coats off; and the windows of the prison were open to receive such air as might be stirring. Late in the afternoon Mr. Stigall, the jailor, came in and suggested that [in view of threats made by the radical and blood-thirsty mob] they would be safer in the cells. Joseph told him that they would go in after supper. Turning to Elder Richards the Prophet said: 'If we go into the cell will you go with us?'

Elder Richards answered, "Brother Joseph, you did not ask me to cross the river with you [referring to the time when they crossed the Mississippi, en route for the Rocky Mountains]—you did not ask me to come to Carthage—you did not ask me to come to jail with you—and do you think I would forsake you now? But I will tell you what I will do; if you are condemned to be hung for 'treason,' I will be hung in your stead, and you shall go free."

With considerable emotion and feeling Joseph replied, "But you cannot," to which Brother Richards firmly replied, "I will." (B. H. Roberts, A Comprehensive History of the Church, vol. 2, p. 283.)

In these words Brother Richards displayed his concern for Joseph, who was his beloved brother and neighbor. The Savior taught: "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." (John 15:13.)

Brotherhood of man

As Latter-day Saints, we firmly believe that we are brothers and sisters, spiritual offspring of heavenly parents, members of a royal family who once dwelt and associated together. There is a beautiful song that our children sing called "I Am a Child of God," which teaches that our Heavenly Father has sent us here and has given us a home on earth with kind and dear parents. The song contains the prayer that our Father in heaven will direct us, inspire us, and teach us what we must do to again live with him some day.

With the dawning of each new day, there will be opportunities for all of us to help our neighbors, who are our brothers, in their hour of need.

How will we respond? Will we be like the priest and like the Levite described by the Savior, and turn our heads, walk across the road, and proceed in an unconcerned and selfish way?

Or will we follow the example of the Good Samaritan and thoughtfully and sympathetically assist our neighbors and brothers in their time of trial, and thus receive approbation and the blessings of our Heavenly Father?

The choice is ours to make. May the Lord bless us that our decisions will be correct and righteous ones, for which I humbly pray, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen. □

President N. Eldon Tanner

Elder Henry D. Taylor, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve, has just addressed us.

We shall now hear from Elder S. Dilworth Young of the First Council of Seventy.

Elder S. Dilworth Young

Of the First Council of the Seventy

In my mind's eye I see Russell Nelson, Jr., newly arrived from his home in heaven and staring up into the eyes of his father as though to say to him (as Joseph Smith said to Newel K. Whitney), "You prayed me here; now what do you want of me?"

Early mission preparations

I do not know that his father, who is the general superintendent of the Sunday School and the father of nine daughters, wants him to become a famous surgeon. I believe he will lead his son wisely as to what his earthly vocation will be, but I am sure he will want this boy to go on a mission, that hope of great adventure which comes into the early life of all Latter-day Saint boys. If this is the father's desire, he will start early to prepare his son.

The first prayers the baby will hear will be that he will grow up to go on a mission and to be married in the temple. Both of the words "mission" and "temple" he will not understand; but later, when comprehension comes, they will be so ingrained in his memory that they will be a part of his being. Later, as he lisps his own prayer, he will find the words "make me worthy to go on a mission" easy to say. Neither will he stumble over the words "marry" or "temple."

Stories of missionary work

If his father is wise, his boy's early years will be filled with stories of the experiences of the missionaries of the past. He should begin by telling of his own ancestors, to give the boy knowledge that mission adventures are not the exclusive property of the leaders but that the followers had equally miraculous adventures. But, of course, he will want to learn of the heroic journey of Samuel H. Smith and his companion from Far West on an eastern missionary journey. He will want to learn of the missionary journey of Heber C. Kimball and Brigham Young when they, ill from fever, arose from their beds and started out, how Brother Kimball was poisoned and was saved by the loyal work of his companion, and how they miraculously found money in the purse, just enough for each day's journey. But he will need to know, too, that today with our affluence he may not find money; he will find something far richer—the great joy that comes from seeing people's lives miraculously changed as they accept the gospel.

Physical stamina

He will need to know that he must develop physical stamina, not for athletics but for his mission. He will play basketball to develop wind and limb to serve the Lord.

As he grows, he will need to talk man-to-man, or rather boy-to-man, why all this should be. His father will say, "For your mission, son, you will need to learn by heart many things. And so we shall now start."

Learning truth

Then his father will teach him the simple truths that are important. They will memorize the prophecy in the book of Nephi about the descendant of Joseph who, bearing the name of his ancestor, would do great things. And then his father will tell him the story of the modern Joseph, the fulfillment of that prophecy—what he did to be a great boy. He will learn that boys do not need to wait until they are men to be great.

He will thrill with the ancient prophecy of the angel who would fly through the heavens having the everlasting gospel to preach to all the world and how this prophecy was actually fulfilled through angelic visits to the young boy prophet.

Study of great literature

In the same manner they will comb the scriptures, doctrine by doctrine, and learn those vital to missionary work. They will read together the great boy-literature of the world. The chivalry at the court of King Arthur will be mirrored in his treatment of girls and, later, young women. And he will learn the place of animals in his life when he runs the Trail of the Sand Hill Stag with Seton and will learn the immense power of nature as he survives a ride down a snow avalanche with Enos A. Mills.

He will also learn of the winter journey to rescue the handcart company, victim of the Wyoming blizzards. His father will see to it that he gets the feel of a real blizzard and the helplessness of the brave people who had only the Lord to depend on for deliverance. He will be taught these lessons at the home evening, at the dinner table, at bedtime, in camp, on hikes and journeys. And driven home at all these stages will be the theme that the greatest adventure a boy can have is to go on a mission and learn to depend on the Lord when faced with a bitter, cold, or hostile world, and that the greatest joy he can experience is to give of his all in the service of the Master in bringing souls unto him.

Application of truth

Having seen and heard his father pray, he will want to pray too and will soon learn about the whisperings of the Spirit, which comes into his "feeling," as Nephi pointed out to his rebellious brothers. (See 1 Ne. 17:45.)

He will need to learn also of the important principle of obedience. Teach him that the Lord Jesus Christ was completely obedient to his father and that if your son would be a successful missionary, he must be completely obedient to those in authority over him. Faithfully learning this lesson before he goes into the mission field will equip him for his work there.

Give him responsibility, and teach him to forget himself in service to others. These, coupled with obedience, will help him to find true humility—all of which are vital factors for his reception of the Holy Ghost.

And so, through his growing years he will apply the truth of all things.

Lay the foundation well, Brother Nelson; it begins at birth and its effects cease not until the mission of life is complete.

Training from mother

Meanwhile, his mother will have a hand in his growth also. Faith-building begins in the cradle and ends not at the grave. In the formative years your boy will need to learn how to give and take, how to get along, how to put up with inconveniences, how to be patient and tolerant, how to resolve differences with playmates and, later, with missionary companions.

He will need long training in neatness and in the handling of his clothing. He will need to know the "rubbing board" techniques of washing his clothes and how to keep them white and clean. Ironing and pressing should be second nature. He will need to learn that bodily cleanliness goes with spiritual cleanness and that the body is the expression of the spirit.

He will need to know how to cook—how to make the food he prepares taste good and at the same time meet his many nutritional needs. Nothing will buoy up a missionary like a tasty meal. Why shouldn't this boy learn to cook well? And while he is about it, he should learn that the dusty, ill-kept room with its unmade bed is the devil's best means of discouragement.

Spiritual growth

Just as surely as he walks, his manner, his attitude, his clothing, his complete self will be concrete evidence of what he is in his soul. He cannot conceal himself. Teach him, then, that these things reveal his spirit and show what he really is and that the success of his mission will be found in how his spirit speaks to the spirits of those he meets.

In the process of his growing, make sure that he will learn how the Church came to be and where it has gone from there. And let him learn to know that faith in the Lord Jesus Christ will give men reason for their repentance from sin, which is the great doctrine that brings hope; that baptism by immersion is both a covenant and a sign of acceptance; and that the gift of the Holy Ghost is what makes him, and his father and his mother, different from the world; and that it will make those he converts different also.

He will not consider the Book of Mormon dull reading if you will make it live for him while he is growing. And if he learns that reading scripture by the Spirit with an open heart and a searching mind is indeed hearing the voice of the Lord, as the Lord told the Twelve it is (see D&C 18:34-36), you will have him on his way to becoming a missionary.

He began to prepare for his work here before he came to earth, when he repudiated Satan and all of his subtle sophistries. Now he is to prove that he can live in a body and control its earthly tendencies and temptations as he did as a spirit before his arrival here in mortality.

Training opportunities

As with Russell Nelson, Jr., so it is with all boys—and girls too. Let us not leave out the girls—they also may go on missions. These young folks may become great of themselves, but with the faith and teaching of their fathers and mothers they will become greater. The Eternal Father taught his Only Begotten Son. He depends on us to teach our children truth that they may better serve the Father of their spirits and live.

To those who may not have had these training opportunities in their childhood, through humility and diligent effort in their teen years, they can still achieve the same thing.

Joys of missionary service

Two years on a mission will give the experience and practice in the great virtues of which I speak. It will confirm that the Lord truly speaks in this day, for he will constantly whisper the truth of this great latter-day work into the soul of the valiant missionary.

Later he will know this whispering in the affairs of his adult years and, following it, will find the true entrance to the things which will give him eternal life in the kingdom of our Lord.

The Lord has said that to bring one soul to him brings joy and that to bring many souls gives proportionately greater joy. The prepared youth will find that joy on his mission. It will sustain him through his life.

The greatest gift any of us can have is the knowledge, borne of the Spirit, that God our Father sent his Son Jesus Christ to atone for the sins of all of us in the world from the beginning to the end, that they both live, corporeal, glorified, and anxious that all of us may desire to come into their presence. I have that knowledge. Joseph Smith was the modern prophet through whom the Lord restored his work in these last days. Joseph Fielding Smith is the worthy recipient and holder of the same keys of authority to speak to the people on behalf of the Lord.

I bear this witness in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen. □

President N. Eldon Tanner

The congregation and chorus will now join in singing, "Now Let Us Rejoice."

After the singing, Elder Theodore M. Burton, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve, will address us.

The congregation sang the hymn, "Now Let Us Rejoice."

President Tanner

Elder Theodore M. Burton, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve, will now address us.

He will be followed by Elder Joseph Anderson, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve.

Elder Theodore M. Burton

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

As I listened to the radio a few days ago, I heard a minister tell his listeners: "Confess Christ and you shall be saved. Admit Christ into your heart and he will save you."

Then he quoted Ephesians 2:8 for his clinching argument: "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God."

Then he gave his final advice: "Is this too much to ask of you? Thousands and hundreds of thousands have found lasting peace and happiness by accepting Christ as their Savior. Join with us in Christian faith and you shall be saved."

Already saved

I wonder how many people have been lulled into a false sense of security by such teaching. As a missionary knocking at the doors of people, I had literally hundreds of people tell me that they were not interested in learning more about Jesus Christ, for they were already saved. The shocking thing about this is that they were right. What that minister said was true, but the difficulty is that it was not the whole truth.

I am personally concerned about this problem because I realize how much damage partial truth can do. Limited knowledge is a dangerous thing. What we need is more truth—unlimited truth—until finally we know all things.

General salvation

What does it mean when people say, "I am saved"? Generally it means they are saved from death. This type of general salvation comes to all people by the grace of God alone. General salvation comes regardless of obedience to gospel principles or laws and results solely in resurrection from the dead. In this respect, salvation is synonymous with immortality, in that the resurrected person will live forever.

Resurrection comes to every person born into this world through the sacrifice made by Jesus Christ, whether one confesses Christ or not. Whether a person is wicked or righteous, each person will receive the gift of immortality through Jesus Christ.

As Paul explained to the Corinthian Greeks:

"But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the firstfruits of them that slept.

"For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead.

"For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." (1 Cor. 15:20-22.)

Sons of perdition

All mankind will thus receive general salvation, excepting the sons of perdition. Following their resurrection, "they shall return again to their own place, to enjoy that which they are willing to receive, because they were not willing to enjoy that which they might have received." (D&C 88:32.)

These sons of perdition (perhaps only few in number) will be resurrected but will not be redeemed from the power of Satan because they are still filthy; as the prophet Alma said of them: "... they shall be as though there had been no redemption made; for they cannot be redeemed according to God's justice; and they cannot die, seeing there is no more corruption." (Al. 12:18.)

I suppose that having a body and not being able to do anything with it will be a true hell. All other persons will be saved by the grace of God from death, hell, the devil, and endless torment.

Individual salvation

The true value of the sacrifice of Christ means much more than this general salvation which comes to all mankind. There is an additional salvation that God has planned for his children. This additional salvation is an individual salvation and is conditioned not only upon grace, but also upon obedience to gospel law. One of the prophets in the Book of Mormon explained why he and his associates were so concerned about teaching more about Jesus Christ, as he wrote:

"For we labor diligently to write, to persuade our children, and also our brethren, to believe in Christ, and to be reconciled to God; for we know that it is by grace that we are saved, after all we can do." (2 Ne. 25:23.)

Exaltation

That full reconciliation to God is extremely important to me. It is the idea of a personal atonement or reconciliation that can bring me back into the presence of God as one of his covenant sons that appeals to me. That kind of conditional salvation I call exaltation.

Exaltation comes as a gift from God, dependent upon my obedience to God's law. No works I do solely of my own power can bring this to pass. Only by the grace of God has this course been opened to me, but only through obedience to the laws of God can I claim my inheritance in the celestial kingdom of my Heavenly Father as a son within his family. I cannot be exalted in my sins, but must work until I overcome them.

Amulek's teaching

Amulek the prophet explained this most clearly as he said of God:

"And I say unto you again that he cannot save them in their sins; for I cannot deny his word, and he hath said that no unclean thing can inherit the kingdom of heaven; therefore, how can ye be saved, except ye inherit the kingdom of heaven? Therefore, ye cannot be saved in your sins." (Al. 11:37.)

Then Amulek spoke of the reason for the coming of Christ:

"And he shall come into the world to redeem his people; and he shall take upon him the transgressions of those who believe on his name; and these are they that shall have eternal life, and salvation cometh to none else.

"Therefore the wicked remain as though there had been no redemption made, except it be the loosing of the bands of death; for behold, the day cometh that all shall rise from the dead and stand before God, and be judged according to their works." (Al. 11:40-41.)

Those works, which follow the true exercise of faith, include repentance, baptism, receipt of the Holy Ghost, and continued righteousness to the end of our lives.

Eternal family relationship

I have a cousin, Rodney Moyle, who lives near Boise, Idaho. When he comes to Salt Lake City he usually drops into my office to say hello. I love to visit with him, for he always leaves me with a new gem of thought. On his last visit he asked me, "If you had your heart's desire and could take it with you out of this world, what would you take?"

The answer for me was obvious: "My family and loved ones!" I can take them with me through obedience to God's laws. Only through obedience to gospel law is that higher degree of salvation possible which will include both me and my family.

That possibility of an eternal family relationship is what is meant by exaltation and eternal life. This eternal preservation of my family relationship can be my inheritance in God's kingdom if I will pay the price to achieve it. Even those in the celestial kingdom who have not paid the full price of obedience to attain such further exaltation will have immortality only and not eternal life within God's family organization.

Full salvation

Thus, full salvation in its true and full meaning is synonymous with exaltation and eternal life. This inheritance within the actual family of God the Eternal Father, through Jesus Christ, is the burden of the scriptures and should be the goal of every man, woman, and child born upon this earth. This full salvation is obtained only in and through the family unit preserved throughout eternity.

When the angel Moroni came to give Joseph Smith his first instruction in restoring the gospel in this dispensation, he quoted the prophet Malachi with a little variation from the way it is written in the Bible:

"For behold, the day cometh that shall burn as an oven, and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly shall burn as stubble; for they that come shall burn them, saith the Lord of Hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch." (Joseph Smith 2:37.)

In order to understand this passage of scripture, for root read "progenitors" or "ancestors" and for branch read "posterity" or "children." Unless, then, through obedience to the laws of God you can qualify yourself to go to the temple and have your family sealed to you, you will live forever separately and singly in an unmarried state. It seems to me that would be a very lonesome type of existence—to live without the warming influence of family life among those you love, who in turn love you.

Ministering servants

God said of those who were not willing to pay the full price of exaltation through full obedience to his whole law: "Therefore, when they are out of the world they neither marry nor are given in marriage; but are appointed angels in heaven, which angels are ministering servants, to minister for those who are worthy of a far more, and an exceeding, and an eternal weight of glory.

"For these angels did not abide in my law; therefore, they cannot be enlarged, but remain separately and singly, without exaltation, in their saved condition, to all eternity; and from henceforth are not gods, but are angels of God forever and ever." (D&C 132:16-17.)

Family exaltation

It is for this reason that the Lord promised that he would reveal unto us the priesthood by the hand of Elijah the prophet before the second coming of the Lord, to plant in our hearts the promises that were made to our fathers so that our hearts could be turned to our fathers and to our children. If we cannot achieve this goal of eternal family exaltation, our lives on this earth will be utterly wasted when Christ shall come the second time.

It is well, then, for you to think of your families and how you can have your inheritance in the Lord sealed upon you and those you love. In Rodney's words, let me ask you, "If you had your heart's desire and could take it with you out of this world, what would you take?"

May God bless you to choose well, for I testify to you that God lives and that his priesthood power is on this earth, by means of which you can obtain your exaltation in his kingdom as his covenant sons and daughters through full obedience to his law. This I testify in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. □

President N. Eldon Tanner

Elder Theodore M. Burton, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve, has just spoken to us.

Elder Joseph Anderson, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve, will now address us, and he will be followed by Elder William H. Bennett, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

Elder Joseph Anderson

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

It has been truly said that the greatest asset of a man or a nation is faith, that the men who built this country and made it prosper during its darkest days were men with unshakable faith, men of courage, men of vision, men who always looked forward and never backward.

The same can be said in truth of those who established this church under the inspiration and revelation of the Lord and of those who have built upon the foundation they laid. They too were and are men of un-failing testimony and unwavering faith.

I think perhaps there has never been greater need for faith than is the need today, particularly faith in divine leadership. Members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, as a general rule, have faith in divine leadership, but the world needs faith in God, that he rules the world; and the people of this nation and the world need that faith, faith in the God of this land and faith in the God of the world, who is Jesus Christ.

Man's eternal horizon

Many of us have had the experience of being on a ship traveling on the ocean. As we look in the various directions, we can see nothing but water. As far as the mortal eye can see, the sky comes down and meets the water. The sun comes up on the horizon, and in the evening the sun sets on the horizon. The same is true when we are on the ground; the limit of our vision is the horizon. Is it not true also that the limit of our spiritual perception is the horizon we see?

What about our spiritual horizon? Is it limited to our present struggle for the things of this world? Is it limited to an acquisition of things of the flesh? Is our horizon limited to our competition with a money-mad world, to the obtaining of the worldly things of life, or does it reach out to an eternity with God and our loved ones in the life to come?

Our horizon should extend to an unlimited future beyond death—out beyond those things of a temporal nature. Our horizon of the future should not be confused with the close-up horizon of present conditions.

Our philosophy of life contemplates an eternity of life—life without beginning before we came here, life without end hereafter. Our happiness here and hereafter depends upon our actions here. We should therefore seek the finer things of life. The road leading to eternal life must be paved with obedience to the commandments of the Lord.

Earth life

We once dwelt in the presence of our Father, in the spirit, and we rejoiced at the opportunity to come to earth and take upon ourselves mortality and pass through the experiences we here encounter, that we might prove ourselves worthy of greater experiences and greater blessings.

While here we are not to enjoy the presence of our Father, but we can communicate with him, and we can hear his voice if that becomes necessary. The Holy Ghost is given to us as our guide and companion and monitor, if we live worthy of that blessing.

Communication with God

It seems difficult for some to have faith in an eternal being and that he can communicate with man, that he hears and answers our prayers, that he is the Father of our spirits, for we are dual beings, spiritual and physical; that he loves us; that he has given us commandments which, if we accept and live them, will result in mortal as well as eternal blessings to us.

There was a time when men would have laughed to scorn anyone who would have said that in time to come we would be able to sit in our homes and watch and see and hear by means of television and radio things that are transpiring today in our own country, in Europe or Asia, South America or Africa; that these conference proceedings would be telecast to the listening world by means of remarkable electronic devices.

In our time we have seen men walk on the moon and heard the messages they have sent over the great expanse of space between us and the moon and witnessed pictures they were transmitting.

These things have been accomplished by faith, by work, and by intelligence.

Can we talk with God?

Can our prayers, even in thought as well as word, ascend to the Father of us all, and does he have the power to make answer thereto?

Long-distance horizon

We lived by sight in the spirit state before we came here; we are walking by faith in this mortal existence. The Spirit of God bears witness to the spirit of man that we are God's children; that he loves us; and that there is a purpose to earth life, a great and mighty purpose, a glorious purpose; that by keeping the commandments that he has given us we may gain knowledge and understanding; that we may gain experience by overcoming the opposition with which we must contend; that we shall resurrect from the grave in the due time of the Lord and eventually return into his presence if we live worthily. This is the long-distance horizon we should keep in view.

Alma's teachings

Alma, a Book of Mormon prophet, relates an experience in his time about a people who were cast out of the synagogues because of the coarseness of their apparel, a people who were poor as to the things of this world and were also poor in heart. They came unto Alma, explaining their situation, and asked what they should do. Alma answered by explaining to them the principle of faith and teaching them the word of God.

Concerning faith he states that "faith is not to have a perfect knowledge of things; therefore if ye have faith ye hope for things which are not seen, which are true." (Al. 32:21.)

Alma then goes on to compare his words, which are truly the word of God and the gospel of salvation, to a seed that a man plants in the soil. He suggests that if we will give place that a seed may be planted in our hearts, and not cast it out or resist the Spirit of the Lord, if it is a true seed it will swell within the breast; and when one feels this swelling motion he cannot do otherwise than admit that the seed is a good seed, for it enlargeth the soul and beginneth to enlighten one's understanding, and it becomes delicious to the individual. Further, when the seed, or the word, or the gospel, swells and sprouts and begins to grow in your soul, you know it is a good seed, and therefore your knowledge is perfect; it is no longer faith but knowledge.

People sometimes say that one cannot know that the gospel is true. As indicated by Alma, if, when you hear the word of God, you do not cast it out by unbelief or resist the Spirit of the Lord, the swellings within your breast, its enlargement of your soul and its enlightening of your understanding are of such a nature that they cause you to know that it is the truth.

Nourishing the seed

However, this is only a beginning. You must nourish the seed; in other words, you must nourish the testimony that you have that it is true, by living the teachings of the gospel.

If you will do this, this ancient prophet tells us, the seed will grow into a tree and bring forth fruit. But if the tree is neglected, it will not take root; and when the heat of the sun cometh and scorcheth it, it will wither and die. This is not because the seed or the word of God was not true nor because the fruit thereof would not be desirable, but it is because the ground was barren and the plant or the tree was not nourished, in which event one cannot have the fruit thereof that he otherwise would obtain.

Fruits of faith

If, however, you have faith and patience to nourish the word, or the tree, as time goes on you may pluck the fruit thereof, which is most precious and delicious to the taste.

I testify to you that if you do these things—truly try this experiment regarding the word of God as contained in the gospel of Jesus Christ and live in accordance with the commandments therein set forth, nourishing the truths of the gospel—you shall have the privilege of feasting upon this fruit; your faith will be fully rewarded and will develop into a sure knowledge of the truth of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

We testify that when occasion requires, the voice of God can be heard by the Lord's latter-day prophets; that they can tune in through the instrument of faith; and that even you and I can see beyond the veil, if it is in accordance with the Lord's will and if we are in tune with the Infinite.

A fullness of joy

The Latter-day Saints believe and teach that without the experience of mortal life, its problems and accomplishments, and without a resurrected body, the spirit of man cannot have a fullness of joy. Our philosophy of life contemplates an eternity of existence—life without beginning in the preexistent world and life hereafter throughout the eternities.

Our happiness in this life and in the life to come depends upon our actions here. If we are to attain the goal of eternal salvation and exaltation in the kingdom of our Heavenly Father, we must hold fast to the iron rod, which is the word of God, and render obedience to the commandments of the Lord.

Keeping all commandments

It is reported that on one occasion when Sir Isaac Newton was thinking seriously concerning the nature of light, he cut a hole in a window blind and a ray of light entered his room. He held a triangular piece of glass in the range of the light, and there were reflected in great beauty all the colors of the rainbow. And for the first time man learned that all of the glorious colors of the universe are locked up in a ray of white light.

It is important that we live all the principles of the gospel and obey all the commandments that the Lord has given us if we are to grow more nearly like our Father and his Beloved Son. We cannot say, "Oh, I believe in missionary work—it is important; I am thoroughly converted to the welfare plan or the wonderful social program of the Church for its young people; but I don't believe that Joseph Smith was a prophet or that our present prophets are guided by revelation from the Lord."

Some may say, "I believe the Book of Mormon, but I can't believe that it was received from an angel as Joseph said it was."

With a wavering faith of that kind, how can such a person expect to have the true light of Christ, the true understanding and light of the gospel? How can he expect to receive the blessings that the Lord has promised to the faithful? If he leaves out any one of these principles, he does not get pure white light. If he fails to have faith in all the principles of the gospel and does not have faith to live in accordance therewith, he cannot expect to get the pure light of the gospel in his heart.

Horizon extended

If you truly have faith in God sufficient to impel you to keep his commandments, you will draw nearer to him and he will come nearer to you, and your faith will become knowledge, and the limit of your horizon will extend into the eternal world.

May we grow in faith through the love and blessing of our Lord and Savior. May we keep the commandments that he has given us, that we may ultimately find salvation and exaltation in his celestial kingdom, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. □

President N. Eldon Tanner

Elder Joseph Anderson, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve, has just addressed us.

We shall now be pleased to hear from Elder William H. Bennett, Assistant to the Twelve, and he will be followed by Elder Howard W. Hunter of the Council of the Twelve.

Elder William H. Bennett

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

It was two years ago, my brothers and sisters, when I was called to be an Assistant to the Council of the Twelve. These years have brought new challenges and many choice and wonderful experiences. Today I should like to begin my message by expressing gratitude to my Father in heaven, to the leaders of the Church, and to my loved ones, for their confidence in me and for their support and sustaining hand.

Missionary assignment

Now I have received a new assignment from the First Presidency, to preside over the Florida South Mission. Along with my call, a call was issued to Sister Bennett to serve at my side as my companion and to be the supervisor of the activities of the women and children in the mission. We are deeply grateful for this call and accept it without reservations. It is our desire to direct the affairs of the mission in accordance with the instructions of the First Presidency. We ask for an interest in your faith and prayers.

Purpose of gospel

As I thought about what I might say today, I reminded myself of the mission of the Church and the purpose of the gospel of Jesus Christ. Specifically, my mind went back to some statements made by the Savior. In the Pearl of Great Price we read, "For behold, this is my work and my glory—to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man." (Moses 1:39.)

Then in his Sermon on the Mount, the Savior said, "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect." (Matt. 5:38.) In these words I find an expression of hope and confidence as well as a challenge from our Savior.

I then thought about how the Church and the gospel can help men and women in reaching these great objectives. The words of President David O. McKay came to mind: "The purpose of the gospel is to make bad men good and good men better—to change men's lives."

Saturday, April 8

I also contemplated the day-to-day operations of the Church and the performance of Church members in the stakes, wards, and missions as revealed in stake activity reports, genealogy reports, mission reports, etc.; and I realized that, while the Church and its members have moved forward and upward in many ways, there is much more that needs to be done.

Two missionary needs

It has been my privilege to tour a number of the full-time missions. I have also witnessed firsthand the work of many stake missions. As I have done so, I have become keenly aware of two great needs that should receive attention if we are to raise performance in missionary work both at home and abroad.

First, members of the Church everywhere should remind themselves that the gospel is to be preached and taught by example and not just by word of mouth. The lives of all Church members should be shining examples of the gospel of Jesus Christ in action.

Second, as members of the Church, it is our responsibility to assist the missionaries in finding investigators to whom the message of the gospel can be taught. The missionary program needs the help of all of us—young and old—and it needs our help now.

"There are chances for work all around just now,

Opportunities right in our way;
Do not let them pass by, saying,
'Sometime I'll try,'

But go and do something today.

" 'Tis noble of man to work and to give,

Love's labor has merit alone;
Only he who does something is worthy to live,

The world has no use for the drone.

"Then wake up, and do something more

Than dream of your mansion above;

Doing good is a pleasure; a joy beyond measure,
A blessing of duty and love."

—Hymns, no. 58

There are opportunities all around us if we are but alert to them. To illustrate this, I should like to share with you several personal experiences I have had over the years that bear this out and that have strengthened my own testimony, enriched my life, and enabled me to explain the gospel to others.

Obstacle to success

The question, "What is the main obstacle to success in stake missionary work?" was asked by President S. Dilworth Young of a group of stake missionaries in the East Cache Stake some years ago. A lady missionary's prompt reply was, "The failure of too many Latter-day Saints to live the gospel as Latter-day Saints should."

As I have attended stake conferences, I have observed that this also applies to other stakes in the Church. We can and ought to do something to change this situation. We can change it by letting our lives be shining examples of the gospel of Jesus Christ in action.

Experience of infantry patrol

During World War II, while serving with the 31st Infantry Division in the Dutch East Indies, I was placed in command of a patrol charged with the responsibility of searching out and destroying enemy supply bases.

As we proceeded on one particular patrol behind enemy lines, a native dog fell in with our group; and try as we would, we couldn't get that dog to leave. I became concerned about this. Later on, however, its alertness caused us to be suspicious to the point where we took extra precautions as we proceeded on to lower ground after coming to a fork in the trail. Therefore, when the enemy opened fire shortly thereafter, we were not caught completely by surprise. Four men were wounded in the initial burst of fire, but not a single man lost his life. We were able to evacuate the wounded and withdraw to the rear under heavy machine gun and rifle fire without losing a single man.

Sergeant Leslie E. Milam of Natchitoches, Louisiana, the only other Mormon in my company, was with me on this patrol. After we returned to the rear, he was contacted by Sergeant Dabbs, our platoon guide, who said that he was aware that Sergeant Milam and I had been meeting on Sundays, whenever conditions would permit, for short religious discussions. He indicated that he knew that our lives had been miraculously saved in this patrol, and he requested permission to meet with us in our next religious discussion. He did meet with us, and he was just as sincere as we were in expressing gratitude to our Father in heaven for his protection and watchful care.

Shortly after this ambush, Private Collins, who went through the ambush with us, sought me out one night after dark and said, "Lieutenant Bennett, I think we had some help from on high out there the other day."

I replied, "Well, I don't know just how you feel about it, Collins, or how the other boys feel; but as far as I'm concerned, I know we did."

He then said, "And I know we did, Lieutenant Bennett, and there is something else I want to say. I've been a rough character in the past. I've done most of the things I shouldn't have done, but it's going to be different in the future. I'm a changed man."

I have thought about this choice experience many times, for it provided me with a great opportunity to explain the gospel message to Private Collins under conditions where his heart and his mind were open.

Sharing gospel teachings

Just prior to going overseas during World War II, while we were on maneuvers in the Louisiana-Texas area, my platoon sergeant, Sergeant Tiffin, came to me during a ten-minute break and said, "Lieutenant Bennett, you know and I know that we will be going overseas in the near future, and that when we go overseas it will not be long until we find ourselves in combat. When we get into combat, sooner or later some of us will be required to take the life of one or more of the enemy. I have been taught that if this should happen, I will be held responsible for the blood which I shed, even though I am a victim of circumstance. This is bothering me. Lieutenant, I know that you are a Mormon. What does your church teach regarding this matter?"

What an excellent opportunity for me to share with Sergeant Tiffin the statement of the First Presidency to all LDS servicemen throughout the world, which statement was part of the servicemen's kit given to each LDS soldier who entered military service. Similar instructions are found in the servicemen's kits that are made available to our servicemen today.

For the balance of that day, whenever we had a ten-minute break, Sergeant Tiffin and I continued the discussion. Each time we met, he brought others with him; and when we went into the bivouac area at night, the discussions continued into the wee hours. What a tremendous opportunity to share the teachings of the gospel of Jesus Christ!

The Book of Mormon

One evening on board ship, while sailing from Yokohama, Japan, to Seattle, Washington, after the end of World War II, I began talking to the officer in the bunk next to me about the Book of Mormon. He was not a member of the Church, but he lived in the Worland, Wyoming, area, and so he knew quite a bit about the Mormons. We had a lengthy but interesting discussion.

The next morning the officer in the bunk above me, who had listened the night before but hadn't joined in the discussion, came to me and said, "Where can I get a copy of that Book of Mormon you were talking about last night?"

I said, "Give me your address, and I'll send you a copy just as soon as I return to Salt Lake City."

I sent it along with a few tracts and had his name referred to the missionaries, that he might be contacted.

Missionary referrals

While I was touring the South Africa Mission a little over a year ago, President Harlan Clark and I boarded the plane at Johannesburg to fly to Port Elizabeth, there to meet with the missionaries. President Clark took a seat next to a businessman, and I took one next to a nurse. We both received referrals, which were passed on to the missionaries for appropriate follow-up.

A few years ago I was assigned to the Tampa Stake conference in Florida. I had to change planes in Chicago. As I boarded the plane after making the change, I found that I had been assigned a seat next to a young lady who was very busily engaged in reading the newspaper. When I sat down, I did not disturb her. But all at once she said, "This is disgusting."

I replied, "What is disgusting?"

She said, "The point of view that so many people have today that they should look to the government to satisfy every want and need."

I responded, "You must be a Mormon."

"No, I'm not a Mormon," she replied, "but I have heard about the welfare program of the Mormon Church, and I think it is just wonderful."

This too provided an opportunity to explain the gospel. Before I reached my destination, she had given me her name and address and permission to send her a copy of the Book of Mormon, some Church welfare pamphlets, and other Church literature.

Many missionary opportunities

These examples of true experiences in my life indicate that the door is wide open and that many opportunities are available for doing missionary work—if we are just alert and will put forth a little effort. The joys associated with going the extra mile to open the door and reach the hearts of people with respect to the gospel message can be illustrated by quoting a few sentences from a letter I received from a friend of mine just a few months ago:

"I love the gospel very much. My testimony is my most prized possession, and I couldn't live without it. My greatest happiness has been through participating in Church activities . . . and in missionary work. I have served for seven years as a stake missionary, and I have supported a total of eight full-time missionaries in the field. I have a special love for missionary work."

May we all feel more dedicated to this great, unselfish service of love that we refer to as missionary work, and may we be willing in our hearts to make a greater contribution to its forward progress.

I bear you my testimony that this work is true. God lives, and his Son Jesus Christ is indeed our Savior, the Redeemer of mankind. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is the true church, and I bear you this testimony in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. □

President N. Eldon Tanner

Elder Howard W. Hunter will speak to us now. He is a member of the Council of the Twelve.

Elder Howard W. Hunter

Of the Council of the Twelve

Observing the clock, I fold the notes that I have prepared and place them in my inside pocket. But let me take just a moment to mention a little incident that made an impression upon me when I was a boy. This came to my mind when it was mentioned that there are with us this afternoon a large group of dedicated people who teach our youth.

A teacher

It was on a summer day early in the morning. I was standing near the window. The curtains obstructed me from two little creatures out on the lawn. One was a large bird and the other a little bird, obviously just out of the nest. I saw the larger bird hop out on the lawn, then thump his feet and cock his head. He drew a big fat worm out of the lawn and came hopping back. The little bird opened its bill wide, but the big bird swallowed the worm.

Then I saw the big bird fly up into a tree. He pecked at the bark for a little while and came back with a big bug in his mouth. The little bird opened his beak wide, but the big bird swallowed the bug. There was squawking in protest.

The big bird flew away, and I didn't see it again, but I watched the little bird. After a while, the little bird hopped out on the lawn, thumped its feet, cocked its head, and pulled a big worm out of the lawn.

God bless the good people who teach our children and our youth, I humbly pray, in Jesus' name. Amen. □

President N. Eldon Tanner

Brother Hunter heard me ask President Brown if he would like to bear his testimony. President Brown said he would, so we would like to hear from President Brown now, please.

Elder Hugh B. Brown

Of the Council of the Twelve

May I express my appreciation to the First Presidency for permitting me to say a word here this afternoon, and it will be just a word.

Many things have been said about missionaries and missionary work. That has been the first love of my life, and I have been reminded of several things that happened sixty-eight years ago when I went to England. One I should like to relate.

A missionary and his message

I had gone to a certain house several times and had been rejected and warned not to come back again, but I was prompted to go again and again.

And then as I was attempting to walk past that house, I was prompted to go in and try again to make contact. I used the big brass knocker on the English door without any response. I could see a lady in the front room knitting, and I made considerable noise with that knocker. She did not come out, and I went around to the back door. There was no knocker on that door so I used my walking stick, and I knocked with considerable vigor; in fact, it echoed through all the house.

Very soon the lady came out, and her coming out reminded me of my early days on the farm when I teased a setting hen off the nest. (I see some of you have had farm experience.) You know that a setting hen when she is teased off the nest comes off with her feathers going in the wrong direction, with her beak in perpetual motion, and this woman reminded me of that.

Saturday, April 8

I apologized and said, "I am sorry to have interrupted you and have insisted upon an interview, but, my dear sister, I have come over six thousand miles to bring you a message which the Lord wants you to have. He sent me here to give you that message. I am going back to Canada in a few days, and I must tell you what the Lord wants you to know."

She said, "You mean the Lord sent a message to me!"

I said, "That is right; he did."

I told her of the restoration of the gospel, the organization of the Church, and the message of the restoration. She was quite impressed by what I told her. And I said when I left, "I am sorry to have disturbed you, but I could not refuse to carry out the message and the mission that was given to me when I came here. When we meet again, and we will meet again, you are going to say, 'Thank you for coming to my back door. Thank you for loving me enough to carry the message of the Lord to me. When you left I could hardly contain myself. I was worried, disturbed, and wondered what it was all about. I finally went to the mission home, got some literature, studied, and became a member of the Church with my family.'"

Fruits of labor

Ten years later I was in England again, this time as a soldier, and at the end of the meeting a lady came up with two grown daughters. She said, "I do thank God and thank you that you came to my door with that message many years ago. I and my daughters joined the Church and we are going to Utah in a short time, and we thank God that you had the courage, the fortitude, and the faith to come to me with that divine message and to leave it with me in the name of the Lord."

Divinity of the work

My brethren and sisters, I want to bear witness to you as to the divinity of this work. From the center of my heart to the ends of my fingers and toes, I know that this is the work of God. I know that the gospel has been restored. I know that the men who are leading the Church are inspired and directed by him who appointed them. I know the gospel will roll forth until it fills the whole earth, and I am looking forward to the time when all of us will be united on the other side and carry on the great work that we have so falteringly tried to do here on earth.

I leave this testimony with you, and my blessing. I pray God to bless all who are here, and all who are listening; in fact, all men everywhere. O Father, bless these people that they may catch the spirit of this work and devote themselves assiduously to spreading the gospel of Jesus Christ to all the world.

I leave this testimony and this message and this prayer with you, humbly, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. □

President N. Eldon Tanner

We have just heard the testimony of Elder Hugh B. Brown.

We should like to advise you that the Sunday morning session will be broadcast by many radio and television stations in the western United States, and by short-wave over Radio New York Worldwide to Europe, South America, Central America, Africa, and parts of Asia.

Over 70 radio stations will broadcast conference in Spanish Sunday morning to major cities of Mexico and Central America, and by satellite to countries of South America, together with Spanish programming stations in this country to a potential Latin American audience of 42 million people.

Radio stations in Brazil will broadcast conference in Portuguese, also by means of satellite, to a potential Brazilian audience of 14 million.

Through special arrangements sessions of this morning and Sunday will be carried from the Tabernacle over direct oceanic cables to a large number of saints assembled in many chapels throughout Great Britain, Germany, France, Holland, Belgium, and Austria on Sunday.

The CBS Radio Network Tabernacle Choir Broadcast tomorrow morning will be from 9:30 to 10 A.M. Those desiring to attend this broadcast must be in their seats no later than 9:15 A.M.

On behalf of all who have listened to the singing during this session of the General Conference, we express our appreciation and sincere thanks to the members of this Combined Seminary Chorus for the beautiful music they have rendered. They are very choice, talented young people, prepared to use their talents to contribute to the enjoyment of others.

Under the the direction of Jay Welch, with Roy M. Darley at the organ, this chorus will now sing, "Dear to the Heart of the Shepherd."

The benediction will then be offered by Elder C. Leland Davey, former president of the Ontario-Quebec Mission.

This conference will then be adjourned until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The Combined Seminary Chorus sang the hymn, "Dear to the Heart of the Shepherd."

The closing prayer was offered by Elder C. Leland Davey, former president of the Ontario-Quebec Mission.

The general sessions were then adjourned until Sunday morning at 10 o'clock.

GENERAL PRIESTHOOD MEETING

FIFTH SESSION

The General Priesthood Meeting of the Church convened at 7 o'clock P.M. Saturday, April 8, 1972, with President Joseph Fielding Smith presiding. President Harold B. Lee, first counselor in the First Presidency, conducted the meeting.

The Brigham Young University Faculty Priesthood Chorus furnished the choral music for this session. A. Harold Goodman served as the conductor, and Alexander Schreiner was at the organ.

President Lee made the following introductory statement:

President Harold B. Lee

This is the General Priesthood session of the 142nd Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

These services are being transmitted over closed-circuit wire and will reach members of the priesthood gathered in the Assembly Hall on Temple Square and in approximately 700 other separate locations. Approximately 170,000 men of the priesthood will participate in this meeting throughout the United States and Canada.

We extend our greetings and blessings to all the priesthood members assembled here in the Tabernacle and Assembly Hall and in the various buildings throughout the United States and Canada.

The singing during this session will be furnished by the Brigham Young University Faculty Priesthood Chorus, with A. Harold Goodman conducting, and Alexander Schreiner at the organ. We shall begin this service by the chorus singing, "Praise to the Man," after which Elder Allen M. Swan, Regional Representative of the Twelve, will offer the invocation.

Saturday, April 8

The Brigham Young University Faculty Priesthood Chorus sang the number, "Praise to the Man."

The opening prayer was offered by Elder Allen M. Swan, Regional Representative of the Twelve.

President Lee

The chorus will now favor us with the hymn, "How Great the Wisdom and the Love," following which we shall be privileged to hear from our beloved leader, President Joseph Fielding Smith.

The Brigham Young University Faculty Priesthood Chorus sang the hymn, "How Great the Wisdom and the Love."

President Lee

The first speaker at this General Priesthood Session will be President Joseph Fielding Smith.

President Joseph Fielding Smith

My dear brethren of the priesthood: I greet you in love and in fellowship and in thanksgiving for the many blessings which the Lord has showered upon us.

Call of General Authorities

May I say that it is a source of particular satisfaction to me that the Lord, through me, has called some of our brethren to new positions of service among the General Authorities. As you know, he called Bishop John H. Vandenberg and Bishop Robert L. Simpson to serve as Assistants to the Twelve. Each of them has been assigned important responsibilities in connection with his new calling. And as you also know, the Lord has called Victor L. Brown to be the Presiding Bishop of his church, with H. Burke Peterson to serve as the first counselor and Vaughn J. Featherstone as the second counselor in the Presiding Bishopric.

All five of these brethren are able and faithful, and their special talents are now needed in the building up of the kingdom in the fields of their assignments. They may all rest assured that the Lord will bless and prosper them in their new callings of trust and of responsibility and of service.

The right of presidency

Now I shall say a few words to you about the priesthood and those keys which the Lord has conferred upon us in this final gospel dispensation.

We hold the holy Melchizedek Priesthood, which is the power and authority of God delegated to man on earth to act in all things for the salvation of men.

We also hold the keys of the kingdom of God on earth, which kingdom is The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

These keys are the right of presidency; they are the power and authority to govern and direct all of the Lord's affairs on earth. Those who hold them have power to govern and control the manner in which all others may serve in the priesthood. All of us may hold the priesthood, but we can only use it as authorized and directed so to do by those who hold the keys.

This priesthood and these keys were conferred upon Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery by Peter, James, and John, and by Moses and Elijah and others of the ancient prophets. They have been given to each man who has been set apart as a member of the Council of the Twelve. But since they are the right of presidency, they can only be exercised in full by the senior apostle of God on earth, who is the president of the Church.

Keys belong to Presidency

May I now say—very plainly and very emphatically—that we have the holy priesthood and that the keys of the kingdom of God are here. They are found only in The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

By revelation to Joseph Smith, the Lord said that these keys “belong always unto the Presidency of the High Priesthood” (D&C 81:2), and also, “Whosoever receiveth my word receiveth me, and whosoever receiveth me, receiveth those, the First Presidency, whom I have sent” (D&C 112:20).

In this same connection the Prophet Joseph Smith said: “You must make yourselves acquainted with those men who like Daniel pray three times a day toward the House of the Lord. Look to the Presidency and receive instruction.”

Guidance for saints

Now, brethren, I think there is one thing which we should have exceedingly clear in our minds. Neither the President of the Church, nor the First Presidency, nor the united voice of the First Presidency and the Twelve will ever lead the Saints astray or send forth counsel to the world that is contrary to the mind and will of the Lord.

An individual may fall by the way-side, or have views, or give counsel which falls short of what the Lord intends. But the voice of the First Presidency and the united voice of those others who hold with them the keys of the kingdom shall always guide the Saints and the world in those paths where the Lord wants them to be.

The Lord said very plainly to Joseph Smith “that it shall not be given to any one to go forth to preach my gospel, or to build up my church, except he be ordained by some one who has authority, and it is known to the church that he has authority and has been regularly ordained by the heads of the church.” (D&C 42:11.)

Keys of the kingdom

And also: “The keys of the kingdom of God are committed unto man on the earth, and from thence shall the gospel roll forth unto the ends of the earth, as the stone which is cut out of the mountain without hands shall roll forth, until it has filled the whole earth.” (D&C 65:2.)

Now, brethren, these things are true. The Lord is with his people. The cause of righteousness shall prevail. Our cause is just, and the Lord will guide and direct us and bring us off triumphant in the end.

I testify that if we shall look to the First Presidency and follow their counsel and direction, no power on earth can stay or change our course as a church, and as individuals we shall gain peace in this life and be inheritors of eternal glory in the world to come. And I say this to you, my good brethren, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen. □

President Harold B. Lee

President Joseph Fielding Smith has just spoken to us in that remarkable and powerful address that sets the keynote for this meeting.

Bishop Victor L. Brown, newly sustained as Presiding Bishop of the Church, will now address us.

Bishop Victor L. Brown

Presiding Bishop

My dear brethren, my spirit is subdued and my heart is full tonight as I stand before this great body of priesthood and realize that there are thousands upon thousands in other gatherings throughout the Church, and as I contemplate the responsibilities that have been placed on my shoulders.

New calling

After receiving my call the other day, I was asked by President Lee if I was shocked. I had difficulty replying. Being shocked was an understatement. I might say that the aftershocks have been much more severe than the original. Notwithstanding this, I have faith and look forward with great anticipation and enthusiasm to the future.

I do this because I know that God lives. I know that his Son, Jesus Christ, the Savior of mankind, is the head of this Church and that he is actively directing the affairs of this, his Church today, through his prophet, President Joseph Fielding Smith, who has just borne witness in such a powerful way of his calling and also of mine.

I also know I have been called by the Lord through his prophets, as President Smith announced, and that if I will repent of my sins, He will bless me and strengthen me for the tasks ahead. If I did not know these things to be true, I would not have the courage nor the temerity to accept such a call. Even knowing this, it is frightening to contemplate assuming such a sacred trust.

Tribute to former leaders

The last ten and one-half years under the direction of a great leader, Bishop John H. Vandenberg, have been wonderful indeed. I have been associated with him as a member of my stake presidency when I served as bishop of the Denver Fourth Ward, as a fellow counselor in the Denver Stake presidency, and now for more than ten years as one of his counselors in the Presiding Bishopric. I want him and you to know that I love and appreciate him. He is a man of great ability. I am deeply grateful for having had the privilege of being his counselor.

Bishop Simpson, as first counselor in the Presiding Bishopric, has made a great contribution to the Church, as evidenced by the love the people everywhere have for him. He is a man without guile.

Response of counselors

And now I am deeply grateful to two wonderful high priests for their dedication and total commitment to the Lord, which caused them to respond to the call to complete the Presiding Bishopric as my counselors.

In approaching the task of selecting counselors, I sought the inspiration of the Lord in prayer. I reviewed hundreds of names of worthy brethren, any of whom could have been called. The two who were called were the ones the Lord wanted. You witnessed confirmation of this truth as you listened to their testimonies in the first session of this conference.

Duties of Presiding Bishopric

We recognize our dependence on our Heavenly Father in assuming the responsibility as your Presiding Bishopric. We have but one desire and that is, to accomplish the work of the Lord in his own way and in his own time, for we recognize that this is his Church. We are his servants called to assist him in accomplishing his purpose, which is "to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man." (Moses 1:39.)

The Presiding Bishopric functions under the supervision and direction of the First Presidency, who constitute the presidency of all the priesthood throughout the world. Under their direction and through their delegation, the Presiding Bishopric presides as the presidency of the Aaronic Priesthood throughout the world.

The Aaronic Priesthood is the lesser priesthood. It is a preparatory priesthood preparing its holders for the greater or Melchizedek Priesthood. Therefore, the Presiding Bishopric's responsibility is to support and sustain the presidency of the Melchizedek Priesthood by assisting in the preparation and qualifying of young men to receive the Melchizedek Priesthood.

In this regard we sustain the inspired prospective elders program that has just been introduced. There are tens of thousands of wonderful adult male members of the Church who hold the Aaronic Priesthood or who have not been ordained whose spiritual welfare has now been assigned to the elders quorum presidencies of the Church. This program is, and will become even more so, a great blessing to these brethren.

Blessings through Aaronic Priesthood

As I now reflect on the responsibility that has come to me as the president of the Aaronic Priesthood, I recall some of my feelings as a boy. I am humbled by the many blessings the Lord has granted me through the Aaronic Priesthood.

I remember with some clarity the thrill of passing the sacrament as a deacon in the Cardston Second Ward, Alberta Stake, in Canada. That same thrill returns each time I am invited to pass the sacrament to the General Authorities in our monthly meeting in the Salt Lake Temple.

I remember how I considered it an honor to participate in such a sacred service. I remember so well how my parents taught me that my hands and heart should be clean and pure so that I would be worthy to participate in this ordinance.

The greatest of all lessons was the example my father and mother set for me. Next was the example of my deacons quorum adviser, who was also my Scoutmaster. Brother Ben Wood was the epitome of what leaders of boys should be. Every boy under his leadership felt his great love. His influence was not limited to Sunday morning or Tuesday evening; it was felt all through the week. I shall ever be grateful to my deacons adviser for the lessons of life he taught me as a twelve-year-old deacon, lessons that have helped me from that day until now.

Many young men throughout the world are having experiences today similar to those I had as a twelve-year-old boy. All of you, whether you are twelve years of age or older, have the opportunity to experience these wonderful things.

A son of God

The foundation on which each boy begins is recognition that he is in very deed a son of God, with something of the divine in his soul. All men are children of God, but you have something more. You have the authority to act in his name. This sets you apart from the rest of the world. It does not automatically make you better than others, but it gives you the responsibility to live a better life than others.

Because you know you are a child of God and hold his priesthood, more is expected of you than of those who do not have this great blessing.

I have been thrilled as I have met young men of the Aaronic Priesthood throughout the Church who have a comprehension of the great blessing and honor that is theirs by virtue of this priesthood and who have consequently begun to build their lives on a sure foundation.

Experience in Pago Pago Stake

I was in the Pago Pago Stake in American Samoa. President Peters, the stake president, invited me to accompany him to one of the ward sacrament meetings. We arrived unannounced, so there were no special arrangements made.

It was a hot, humid day. As we approached the humble, one-room chapel with no air-conditioning, I suggested it might be appropriate to leave our jackets off. President Peters was quick to tell me that they wore jackets in sacrament meeting in their stake—no matter what the temperature—as a means of showing the Lord that they not only worshiped him but they also honored and respected him by being dressed in their very best.

As I took my place on the stand, there sat the priests and deacons at the sacrament table. Each had on a shirt, tie, and jacket. It was so hot and humid.

The normal dress of the islands is very casual, as you know, but in the eyes of these wonderful Samoan leaders and their Aaronic Priesthood boys, participating in the sacred sacrament service was not a casual experience. It was a sacred duty. They felt that their appearance helped show the respect and reverence they had for the Lord. I shall never forget their influence of reverence in that meeting. Surely their understanding of their relationship with Heavenly Father is an important step in magnifying their priesthood.

Scripture contest

One day several years ago, I attended the finals of an Aaronic Priesthood scripture contest in Sao Paulo, Brazil. These were the finals in a mission-wide contest held under the direction of President Wayne Beck. Sitting on the stand, acting as judges, were the district counselors. Gathered in small groups through the chapel were the contestants. As they were called up before the judges, they were challenged to repeat from memory scriptures selected at random by the judges and then to explain the meaning of each scripture.

I witnessed as much enthusiasm and excitement among these teams of young men of the Aaronic Priesthood as one normally sees at a basketball or soccer game. Because of the location, it was not as vocal, but it was just as intense. It was fun for them to make the scriptures become a part of themselves.

Honor of priesthood ordination

After a meeting with some of our servicemen in Da Nang, South Vietnam, one man in battle dress came up to me and asked if I would write a letter to his parents, who were nonmembers, explaining to them the great honor that had come to him that day. He said they knew nothing about the Church and asked, "Bishop Brown, would you mind telling them what a great honor it was for me to be ordained a priest in the Aaronic Priesthood today?"

Some time ago in New York City a fine-looking young man said to me, "It isn't easy to be a Jew and a Mormon." When this young man was baptized, his parents were so displeased they held a formal funeral. As far as they are concerned, their son is dead.

How important it is that all young men of the Aaronic Priesthood recognize their responsibility as priesthood holders and, as President McKay used to say, act accordingly.

Cause of youth

And now a word to fathers, bishops, and other Aaronic Priesthood leaders, with emphasis for the fathers. With a feeling of brotherhood and love, we the Presiding Bishopric lock arms with you in the great causes of youth. Never has there been a finer generation of young people.

I have a conviction that the spirits of this generation were held back by the Lord to come forth at this time because they are special spirits. And yet the world into which they have come is filled with evil and temptation. Satan is at work with his legions. We who have been called—in the home and in the Church—to lead the youth have a sacred responsibility to them.

Parental responsibility

Regarding the home, the Lord has said in the Doctrine and Covenants:

“And again, inasmuch as parents have children in Zion, or in any of her stakes which are organized, that teach them not to understand the doctrine of repentance, faith in Christ the Son of the living God, and of baptism and the gift of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of the hands, when eight years old, the sin be upon the heads of the parents.

“And they shall also teach their children to pray, and to walk uprightly before the Lord.” (D&C 68:25, 28.)

The first responsibility rests with the parents. The position of the Church is to aid the parents and the family, not to replace them.

Charge to leaders

Bishops, you are the presidents of the priests quorums, and with your counselors you are the presidency of the Aaronic Priesthood in your wards. These young men need your leadership. They need your attention, for you have a special calling with a special blessing. You have the power of discernment. You are common judges in Israel.

If you will take the time to become involved with these young people and see that they become involved with you, you can become saviors on Mount Zion to many. You are the ones, along with the other leaders in the wards and branches, who make the difference.

We want you to know of our love and support for you. We are grateful to the Lord for each of you and pray our Heavenly Father's blessings upon us all that, through our united and devoted leadership, we may help every young man in this church honor his priesthood so that not one of these precious children of God will be lost. I pray this humbly in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. □

President Harold B. Lee

I am sure that you would wish me to extend to Bishop Brown and his counselors your support, your blessing and your prayers for their ministry in this great responsibility.

Bishop Victor L. Brown, the Presiding Bishop of the Church, has just spoken to us.

Elder J. Thomas Fyans, managing director of the Department of Internal Communications, will now address us. He will be followed by Elder Paul H. Dunn of the First Council of Seventy.

Elder J. Thomas Fyans

Director of Internal Communications

In the 64th section of the Doctrine and Covenants, verse 34, we are told, “Behold, the Lord requireth the heart and a willing mind. . . .” There are many such people, both on a church-service basis and some giving their full time, who are responding to the challenge of getting the materials to you on time.

Department of Internal Communications

Under the direction of the First Presidency and the Council of the Twelve, a Department of Internal Communications has been organized. Three members of the Council of the Twelve are advisers to this organization. They are Elder Gordon B. Hinckley, Elder Thomas S. Monson, and Elder Boyd K. Packer. We are grateful to them for their continuous inspiration.

The Department of Internal Communications has assignments in four major areas: instructional materials, magazines, administrative services, and distribution and translation.

The director of instructional materials, Daniel H. Ludlow, and all who work at his side have the responsibility to coordinate curriculum planning, to supervise the writing of curriculum materials, and to direct the correlation of these materials. Meetings are held with representatives of all of the priesthood committees and the executives of the auxiliary organizations that influence the lives of the members of the Church. These are top-level planning meetings, and there are beyond these meetings innumerable hours, days, weeks, months spent in the actual creation and correlation of these materials that are produced under the direction of these committees and organizations.

Magazines

The director of magazines, Doyle L. Green, and those who assist him have the responsibility to supervise the publication of the ENSIGN, the NEW ERA, the FRIEND, and the non-English magazines.

Let us look within the covers of the April ENSIGN and accompany President Harold B. Lee as he "walked today where Jesus walked." He begins by saying, "For three glorious days we walked on sacred ground and felt the influence of the greatest person who ever lived upon this earth, Jesus the Christ, the very Son of the living God."

May we visit with President Lee the Church of the Nativity in Bethlehem and hear him tell us, "There seemed to be in this place a kind of spiritual assurance that this was indeed a hallowed spot."

May we just pick up his final paragraph: "I came away from some of these experiences never to feel the same again about the mission of our Lord and Savior. I had impressed upon me, as I have never had it impressed before, what it means to be a special witness. I say, with all the conviction of my soul, I know that Jesus lives. I know that he was the very Son of God. And I know that in this church and in the gospel of Jesus Christ is to be found the way to salvation."

This we find within the covers of the April issue of the ENSIGN. What a tool for the use of the home teachers or to be shared in family home evening!

The magazines will become more and more vital because they will be interwoven into the curriculum of the Church. There will be a discernible move of the magazines into a role of aiding the family in family home evenings.

Administrative services

The director of administrative services, James M. Paramore, and his associates supervise the budgeting within our organization. Their responsibility is to assure that we utilize these sacred funds with the deference they are due. They are charged with production coordination as well and will keep us informed of any item that is falling behind the predetermined schedule so that corrective action can be taken immediately.

The first publication of this dispensation was the Book of Mormon, the result of a translation of ancient records given to Joseph Smith by Moroni, who had hid them for the coming forth in our day. The first distribution—namely, the Book of Mormon—was when the Prophet Joseph Smith's brother Samuel went forth to declare that the Lord had spoken again and that the book he had was the evidence of the fulfillment of prophecy. This was prior to the organization of the Church just 142 years ago this past Thursday.

Translation and distribution

The translation and distribution in our day are directed by John E. Carr. He and his able assistants have charge of warehousing and distributing all of the English materials as well as having the responsibility of translating, printing, warehousing, and distributing the non-English materials of the Church throughout the world. To accomplish this task of bringing these hundreds of items to those who require them, members of the Church are working in twenty-eight languages that reach sixty countries.

Distribution goals

By tonight catalogs of the 1972-73 materials together with pre-printed order forms have been mailed to you who are in the United States and Canada. A similar procedure is being followed by the distribution centers in all parts of the world.

May we give you a report of the present status of the materials for use beginning in September. We have in the warehouse as of tonight 55 percent of the materials that will be used by you beginning September 1. Additional materials are arriving daily. Dozens of printers are working vigorously to complete the balance by early May.

It is our intent to begin shipping to Canada and the eastern part of the United States on Monday, May 15; to the Midwest beginning June 1; to the West Coast the last two weeks in June; to the intermountain states July 1; and the last two weeks of July to the Wasatch Front. This schedule will place these materials in the hands of the units of the Church by the first part of August, so that you will have approximately thirty days for local orientation with the materials prior to the beginning of the curriculum year on September 1.

We have a goal, and hopefully it includes you, and it is: "to provide for the members and organizations of the Church approved material and literature of high quality and sufficient quantity on time and at the most reasonable cost." Our major emphasis this year will be on time.

You can be instrumental in achieving this goal by returning your pre-printed purchase orders, properly filled out, by the date suggested in the letter of transmittal that is on the way to you bishops, stake presidents, mission presidents, and branch presidents tonight.

The distribution department processes hundreds of orders each day. Their goal is to process these orders within twenty-four hours. We want to maintain this kind of service with the normal flow of orders along with this major general shipment, the date of which I have just announced.

Magnitude of task

Let me indicate to you the magnitude of handling just one item. The Family Home Evening Manual requires thirteen carloads of paper. If we placed the pages of the Family Home Evening Manual end to end in a roll and attached the end of the roll at the Salt Lake Airport to a jet as it takes off to the east, the jet could fly to Denver, Colorado, and still have paper left in the roll at the Salt Lake Airport. The jet could continue on to Chicago, and then to New York and to London, then to the Holy Land, across India to Bangkok, to Saigon, to Hong Kong, to Tokyo, to San Francisco, and back to Salt Lake City. We could then cut the paper and attach the two ends together to form a ribbon around the entire circumference of the world. The hundreds of miles of paper that would be left over in the roll might be used to tie a bow.

This is just one item, brethren, of the hundreds of items in the catalog. For weeks we will be shipping many truckloads of material every day.

Materials to be ready

Within moments of the public announcement of this organization on January 3 of this year, President Harold B. Lee was giving me counsel. His first words penetrated to the very core. You judge their motivational impact. These words were, "Tom, are you prepared to be shot at sunrise?"

We have learned that this execution date is at daybreak Friday, September 1, 1972. As we have distributed this message to our organization throughout the world, one small three-letter word has been added. "Are you prepared NOT to be shot at sunrise?" This is our international slogan.

Saturday, April 8

From the status report, you recognize that many people have been and are "anxiously engaged in a good cause." We hope that each of you on that September morning at daybreak can rest peacefully knowing that you have the materials and that on Sunday, September 3, the beginning of the correlated year in the Northern Hemisphere, these materials will be utilized.

In the 90th section of the Doctrine and Covenants, verse 11, we read: "For it shall come to pass in that day, that every man shall hear the fulness of the gospel in his own tongue, and in his own language."

The inspiration of the First Presidency in bringing together in one organization the responsibilities of internal communications has made possible the progress reported tonight and an important move toward the fulfillment of this scripture.

I sustain the First Presidency and the Council of the Twelve with all my heart—and bear witness that they are in very deed prophets, seers, and revelators, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. □

President Harold B. Lee

He to whom you have just listened is Elder J. Thomas Fyans, managing director of the Department of Internal Communications.

We shall now hear from Elder Paul H. Dunn of the First Council of Seventy.

Elder Paul H. Dunn

Of the First Council of the Seventy

My brethren, this is an awesome occasion for me, and I need your support and the Spirit of my Heavenly Father. As Brother Fyans was describing the length of the materials going around the world, I thought back to an English literature text I had in high school that was about that long and deep.

I am so honored to be here on this wonderful occasion, to sit at the feet of a prophet of the Lord, to hear his counsel and direction, and to feel his spirit. I was particularly impressed with a number of the younger priesthood bearers in the audience who were taking notes, listening to a prophet. I would hope that you young priesthood bearers tonight have the sensitivity to go home and record what has happened in your life on this wonderful occasion. Think how many people in the world would be so honored, to sit in a special meeting with prophets, seers, and revelators.

Parents never let go

I salute you fathers who have brought your sons to this meeting, and to others in buildings throughout the country. You young priesthood bearers might as well learn early that your dads and moms will never let you go. This was brought very vividly to my attention several conferences ago when one of the sessions in which I was a speaker was televised to California. My mother resides there.

When I got back to the office after the session was over, there was a note to "call your mother." And so I did, and I thought, "Well, she is calling to congratulate her son." When I reached her on the phone I asked, "Mom, how are you?"

She said, "Paul, I just saw you on TV. Young man, you are not getting enough sleep. You look terrible." Thank God for parents who care and who never let go!

Priesthood leaders

I am grateful for you priesthood leaders, you wonderful bishops and counselors, stake presidencies, others who have precious priesthood assignments. I think of many bishops and other leaders in my life as I look out over this great audience.

Not long ago I had an opportunity to speak in Portland, Oregon. Lo and behold, in the audience was my former bishop, Raymond Kirkham. He was my bishop when I was an Aaronic Priesthood boy. I had the courage to call on him—and you know that can be risky, to call on a bishop who remembers you when you were a boy. I reminded him as he took the pulpit, "Remember, I am the last speaker."

He got bold and told those young people of some interesting experiences involving my youth. He said, "I knew this young man was destined for a position of leadership. He is the only deacon I ever had who, after passing the sacrament, could crawl under a bench and get out the back door before I recognized he was gone." He said, "I knew he was going all the way, because he took the whole quorum with him."

Now you young priesthood bearers, I have repented; and I am grateful for bishops who stood at the back door and redirected my paths.

I have been impressed here tonight with a number of things. I have reflected upon the great talks of this conference, wonderful sermons, good counsel and advice. Tonight I would like to summarize my feelings, directed to you, the Aaronic Priesthood, for what value it might have in your lives.

I think if I could give a whole sermon in just six words it would be these: Socrates said many years ago, "Know thyself," Cicero said, "Control thyself," and the Savior said, "Give thyself." Now will you write that down, young brethren; contemplate the meaning while I just share a thought concerning each one.

Know thyself

To know thyself is to come to know that you and I as priesthood bearers are literally the offspring of Deity; and that means, young men, that you and I were born to succeed; that in the pre-existence you and I earned a right by our faithfulness and by our commitment to worthy principles to come into mortality in order that we might learn through the priesthood how to become like our Father.

That means, if I understand the gospel correctly, that there isn't one single failure among us. The word can't is false doctrine in the Mormon Church. When a young man says to me, "I can't do it," I become concerned because in a sense he is saying, "I don't understand the gospel." He may not be motivated; he may have discouragements; there may be barriers in his life; but you can succeed.

I promise you young priesthood bearers that if you really come to know who you are through the scriptures and through the revealed doctrine of this church, you can accomplish anything you want in this life.

I don't mean to suggest by this that you won't stumble a time or two. That is a part of the growing process. The lives of many great men will testify to you that oftentimes they have many failures, and there is no disgrace in falling down; the disgrace is lying there. To get up one more time than you fall is to be a winner. To stay down is to be a loser.

Babe Ruth's experience

I think of that great immortal athlete, Babe Ruth, when I talk about the principle of success and particularly failure. Let me just share a little experience from his life.

It was a beautiful Saturday afternoon in the summer of 1927, and 35,000 wildly excited baseball fans packed Shibe Park. They were giving Babe Ruth the "razzberry"—and good! Lefty (Bob) Grove, one of the greatest left-handed pitchers of all time, had just struck out Babe Ruth on three consecutive pitched balls for the second successive time. Two runners were stranded on the bases.

Saturday, April 8

As the great slugger returned to the bench, amidst wild and abusive jeering, he looked up into the stands with an unruffled smile, just as he did the first time, gave his cap a polite little tip from his perspiring brow, stepped down into the dugout, and calmly took a drink of water.

In the eighth inning, when he came up for his third time at bat, the situation was critical. The Athletics were leading the Yankees, 3-1. The bases were full and two were out. As Babe selected his favorite bat and started toward the plate, the crowd rose in a body, as if by signal. The excitement was tremendous!

"Strike 'im out again!" pleaded the fans to Grove. Strutting around the pitcher's box, it was easy to see that the big southpaw believed he was just going to do that.

As the mighty batter took his position, the crowd became hysterical. There was a pause. Mickey Cochrane, the A's great catcher, crouched to give the signal. Grove threw one with lightning speed. Ruth swung; it was a foul tip. "Str—like one!" roared the umpire. Again the signal, and the pitch was too fast to follow. Again, Babe took that magnificent swing—and missed. "Str—i-i-ke two!" was the call.

Ruth staggered and went down. He had literally swung himself off his feet. There was a cloud of dust as the big fellow sprawled on the ground. The crowd was going mad. Finally, regaining his feet, the "Bambino" brushed the dust off his trousers, dried his hands, and got set for the next pitch. Grove delivered the ball so fast not a single fan could see it. Babe swung—but this time he connected! It was only a split second before everybody seemed to realize what had happened. That ball was never coming back.

It disappeared over the scoreboard and cleared the houses across the street

—one of the longest hits ever recorded.

As Babe Ruth trotted around the bases and across the plate behind the other runners—with what proved to be the winning run—he received a wild ovation from the crowd.

Ruth doffed his cap with that little smile, and the expression on his face was exactly like the one he wore on his first two trips, when he had gone down swinging.

A batting slump

Later in the season, after the Yanks clinched the American League pennant, Grantland Rice, interviewing the Babe, asked, "What do you do when you get in a batting slump?"

Babe replied: "I just keep goin' up there and keep swingin'. I know the old law of averages will hold good for me the same as it does for anybody else, if I keep havin' my healthy swings. If I strike out two or three times in a game, or fail to get a hit for a week, why should I worry? Let the pitchers worry; they're the guys who're gonna have to pay for it later on."

This unshakable faith in making the law of averages work for him enabled Babe Ruth to accept his bad breaks and failures with a smile. This simple philosophy had much to do with making him baseball's greatest slugger. His attitude of taking both good and bad in stride made him one of the game's greatest heroes.

Why is it, when we read about great athletes or men in other professions, we are seldom told about their failures? For example, we now read of the amazing record of the immortal Babe Ruth, with his total of 714 home runs; but another unapproached world's record of his is carefully buried, and that is that he struck out more times than any other player in history—1,330 times!

One thousand three hundred and thirty times he suffered the humiliation of walking back to the bench amidst jeers and ridicule. But he never allowed fear or discouragement or failure to keep him down.

Someone has said that success consists not in never falling, but in rising every time you fall. Get up one more time than you go down, young people, and you will win. Stay down, and you lose.

My father used to say, "Paul, there are dozens of rules for success, but none of them work unless you do."

Control thyself

Cicero said, "Control thyself." I had the opportunity in World War II to bat against the immortal Bob Feller in a servicemen's game. If you ever want a lesson in humility, bat against Feller. Bob Feller had a unique distinction as a sixteen-year-old boy. He could take a 9½-inch, 5-ounce baseball and throw it from 60 feet 6 inches, 105 miles an hour.

Now that may not impress you, but you go to bat and you're very impressed. To those of you who may not understand that velocity, a 9-inch baseball is the size of an aspirin tablet at 60 feet 6 inches, at 100 miles per hour. I submit to you, it makes a difference which side of the plate he throws it.

Bob Feller at age sixteen had a problem. He lacked control. He was a great athlete. He had tremendous capacity. He was born to succeed. He knew himself, but he hadn't disciplined his great talent of speed, so that it was questionable as to whether he would stick in the majors.

But Bob Feller became the great athlete he was because he listened to wise counsel. He had great coaches, and one of them took him aside one day and said, "Bob, it really doesn't matter whether you throw 105 miles an hour or 95. If you will take a little speed off your pitch and put the ball where it belongs you will succeed!"

To learn control

We call that control in baseball, and you little leaguers know how important control is to a pitcher. Bob listened and became the strike-out artist of his era.

You don't know Jim Rusick, I think, unless you are related to him. I played ball with Jim. Jim Rusick was a sixteen-year-old boy on the Hollywood High School baseball team. He could throw a 9½-inch baseball 105 miles an hour, but he wouldn't listen to counsel. He didn't learn to control the talent that he had, and Jim has never been heard of since.

It's one thing to be born with ability to succeed; it's another thing to harness it and to control it.

My young brethren, this is the purpose of the gospel of Jesus Christ, to control that which we have been born with. That is the purpose of the Church and its programs. We need to learn how to control that which God has given us.

Give thyself

Finally, the Savior said, Take all that I have given you, harness it, discipline it, and then give it to the world. Give thyself.

Let me just conclude with a little experience I had recently in New England.

I think one of the greatest thrills that a mission president experiences is to receive a new missionary. I received notice from the First Presidency that eight young men were to be assigned to New England. Shortly they arrived. This was a great treat for Jeanne and me, as we greeted these new missionaries in the mission home. One by one, as they came in, we tried to set them at ease.

The first one was a brilliant-looking boy. I won't describe him, but I thought, "Thank heaven he is here." The second was just like him, and the third and the fourth. Now this, I thought, will put our mission on top.

Assignment of missionary

Then I got down to number seven, and I don't mind telling you some of the concerns of my heart. I thought, This will be a challenge. I couldn't believe it; and unlike the counsel that President Tanner gave us not to judge our neighbors, here I was judging him. I thought, This kid just doesn't have the image.

My wife gave me a glance, and her look said, "Good luck for the next two years."

Let me just describe him to you. He was wearing a shirt that was size 17; his neck was an 11. I could have pulled out his collar and put another elder in it. He had on a coat that he inherited from his dad, and you couldn't see his hands. He had a trench coat that he got from an uncle from World War I, and he had a haircut that was an Idaho original.

The New England Mission contains six of the United States and four provinces of Canada, including Labrador. As my wife and I lay in bed that night, she said, "What are you going to do with him?"

I said, "It's time to open up Labrador." I thought I had to protect the Church's image from this interesting-looking elder.

Well, that morning before I made my assignments, I knelt in prayer—thank the Lord for prayer—and I asked the Lord what I should do now; and the Spirit whispered, "Keep him in Cambridge."

And I said, "Spirit, I won't." I said, "I am the president of this mission."

And the Spirit seemed to respond with the counsel, "Yes, but you will keep him in Cambridge."

Cambridge is a very sophisticated area, with all of those universities and art centers. Well, I kept him. When I went down to breakfast, my two assistants were sitting there; and they said, "What are you going to do with him?"

I said, "We are going to keep him in Cambridge."

And they said, "President, you are kidding."

I said, "I have been seeking guidance all night, and we will keep him in Cambridge."

Conversion of professor

Two days later I got a call from a distinguished professor. I haven't time to give you the details. He said, "Paul, Friday night may I be baptized?"

I questioned him a bit. He had been through several score of missionaries the past nine years. I said, "What happened?"

He said, "This little fellow you sent me." (He was referring to my new elder.) And then he described the experience.

He said, "No sooner had he and his companion entered the office and shook my hand when he asked, 'Would you mind if we had a word of prayer?' " (This was a meeting over in his school office.) The professor said, "Not if it will do you any good." Then he remarked, "Before I could get back to my desk, this little fellow fell on his knees and started to talk to the Lord." And he said, "Paul, I looked up three times to see if the Lord was standing there." He said, "I don't know what happened to me; you describe it, but I had the most wonderful feeling come over me, and I now know what the Spirit is. I want to be baptized."

We baptized him, and he is doing a fine work for the Church and is a great asset on campus. It was all accomplished because this young elder from Idaho, whom I had misjudged, guided by the Spirit, gave himself to the Lord.

And I learned as President Tanner has taught us. Don't judge! "Within the oyster shell uncouth, the purest pearl may hide, but oft you'll find a heart of truth within a rough outside."

The Lord bless us, young brethren, to remember who we are, to control ourselves, and to give it to the Lord, to which I testify, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. □

President Harold B. Lee

He to whom we have just listened is Elder Paul H. Dunn of the First Council of Seventy.

The congregation and chorus will now join in singing "Do What Is Right." After the singing, Elder Marion G. Romney of the Council of the Twelve will address us.

The congregation sang the hymn, "Do What Is Right."

Elder Marion G. Romney

Of the Council of the Twelve

Brethren, this is a great occasion. Tens of thousands of bearers of the holy priesthood are gathered together to hear instructions from the presidency of the Church.

Counsel of President Grant

I was greatly impressed by the President's remarks. I am glad he said what he did. Listening to him, I was taken back in my thoughts a quarter of a century to an experience I had with President Heber J. Grant. We were discussing some criticism that had been directed against an action taken by him in his official capacity. Putting his arm across my back and resting his hand on my left shoulder, he said, "My boy, you always keep your eye on the President of the Church, and if he tells you to do something wrong, and you do it, the Lord will bless you for it."

And then he added, "You don't need to worry, however; the Lord will never let his mouthpiece lead his people astray."

I haven't forgotten his counsel. I think I have been faithful to that charge ever since.

A covenant people

We brethren in this meeting hold the priesthood. We are a covenant people. The Lord, entering into a covenant with Abraham, promised him a great posterity, saying:

"... in thy seed ... shall all the families of the earth be blessed, even with the blessings of the Gospel, which are the blessings of salvation, even of life eternal." (Abr. 2:11.)

Covenant of the priesthood

Ever since the days of Abraham, his descendants have been known, by those who have understood the gospel, as children of the covenant. One of the covenants that we have entered into with the Lord is the covenant "which belongeth to the priesthood." The 84th section of the Doctrine and Covenants talks about the priesthood. It says that "the sons of Moses and also the sons of Aaron [meaning the bearers of the Melchizedek and the bearers of the Aaronic Priesthoods] shall [yet] offer an acceptable offering and sacrifice in the house of the Lord . . . in this generation . . .

"And the sons of Moses and of Aaron shall be filled with the glory of the Lord, upon Mount Zion in the Lord's house, whose sons are ye; . . .

"For whoso is faithful unto the obtaining these two priesthoods of which I have spoken [the Aaronic and Melchizedek], and the magnifying their calling, are sanctified by the Spirit unto the renewing of their bodies." (D&C 84:31-33.)

Change wrought in men

I believe that is true. I think that men and boys who magnify their callings in the priesthood have a change wrought in their bodies. This morning while President Lee was talking in the welfare meeting, he told about someone, some stranger, who saw President McKay and said to him, "Are you a prophet of God?" President McKay's answer was, "You look into my face and get the answer."

I heard a story once about President

Saturday, April 8

Joseph F. Smith, the father of our present beloved leader, who was down in Arizona attending some function with the governor and other prominent men. Some of them wanted to have their pictures taken with the President of the Church. President Joseph F. Smith graciously consented and stood with them while their pictures were taken. When they stepped back into the crowd, the governor was heard to say, "You know, when I stood out there by that man, I felt like a thief." He could feel the power in a great man who was magnifying his calling in the priesthood.

"... whoso is faithful unto the obtaining these two priesthoods of which I have spoken, and the magnifying their calling, are sanctified by the Spirit unto the renewing of their bodies.

"They become the sons of Moses and of Aaron and the seed of Abraham, and the church and kingdom, and the elect of God." (D&C 84:33-34.)

The Prophet Joseph Smith used to repeatedly urge the brethren of the priesthood to make their calling and election sure. If we want to do that, we will have to magnify our callings in the priesthood.

To receive the kingdom

The revelation continues:

"And also all they who receive this priesthood receive me, saith the Lord." (Vs. 35.)

I think this statement refers to those who receive the officers of the priesthood who are appointed to represent the Lord.

"And also all they who receive this priesthood receive me, saith the Lord;

"For he that receiveth my servants receiveth me;

"And he that receiveth me receiveth my Father;

"And he that receiveth my Father receiveth my Father's kingdom; therefore all that my Father hath shall be given unto him.

"And this is according to the oath and covenant which belongeth to the priesthood." (D&C 84:35-39.)

President Smith frequently says in prayer and in counsel that he prays for and hopes that we will be true and faithful to every covenant and responsibility that rests upon us. That the obligations of "the oath and covenant which belongeth to the priesthood" rest upon each of us there is no doubt, because the Lord says that "all those who receive the priesthood, receive this oath and covenant of my Father, which he cannot break, neither can it be moved." (D&C 84:40.)

Breaking covenant

So, we have entered into a covenant with the Lord in which he has promised us eternal life, if we keep our part of the covenant, which is, to magnify our callings in the priesthood.

The revelation says that the Lord cannot break his part of the oath and covenant. But we can break our part of it, and many priesthood bearers do so. Of them the revelation says:

"But whoso breaketh this covenant after he hath received it, and altogether turneth therefrom, shall not have forgiveness of sins in this world nor in the world to come." (Vs. 41.)

Now, I do not think this means that all who fail to magnify their callings in the priesthood will have committed the unpardonable sin, but I do think that priesthood bearers who have entered into the covenants that we enter into—in the waters of baptism, in connection with the law of tithing, the Word of Wisdom, and the many other covenants we make—and then refuse to live up to these covenants will stand in jeopardy of losing the promise of eternal life.

Witness

I have a witness to the truth of what President Smith said tonight about the leadership of this church, and their representing the Savior of the world here on earth. I know that there is power in the priesthood and that we can draw from heaven the power to do our work, if we do the work as best we can ourselves.

God help us to understand this, and the great honor he has placed upon us by giving us the priesthood, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. □

President Harold B. Lee

Elder Marion G. Romney of the Council of the Twelve has just spoken to us.

President N. Eldon Tanner of the First Presidency will now address us.

President N. Eldon Tanner

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

As I try to envision the large body of priesthood present in this building and other different buildings throughout the Church, it makes me appreciate more fully the song "Behold! A Royal Army." We are the only people in all the world that hold the priesthood of God, the power to speak and act in his name. What a tremendous force and influence for good, as we discipline ourselves and fully magnify our priesthood. What a privilege and what a responsibility!

A peculiar people

As fathers and sons and holders of the priesthood we must always be humble, proud, and never ashamed of the priesthood we hold. We are different, a peculiar people, and must remain different in the cause of truth and righteousness. Never adopt a "holier than thou" attitude, but always live up to the standards of the Church and never waver.

Some seem to fear they will lose prestige, or fear ridicule. Surely we don't need to try to be like the world and try to please or cater to the sinful ways of the world. Be in the world but not of it. My experience has shown me beyond any question of doubt that one never needs to be ashamed of the priesthood that he holds or of living according to its teachings and magnifying that priesthood.

Priesthood a plus

I was talking to a very successful businessman just yesterday, who is a devout member of this church, who magnifies his priesthood. I said, "Have you ever found it at any time in your life to be a detriment to you?"

He said, "President Tanner, it has always been a plus."

Some seem to think that with the looseness and trends in the world today affecting the thinking of some of our youth and even some of our bishops and stake presidents, we are altogether too strict in the teaching of morals when we see what is going on all around us. In fact, we are accused of being prigs, which to me means narrow-minded persons who assume superior virtue and wisdom. Judged by the ways of the world, probably we are prigs.

Are we going to lose faith, deny modern revelation, modernize our way of life to be like the world? Or are we going to be a peculiar people and honor and magnify our priesthood and do our duty?

Humbly proud of priesthood

We are different from the world. We have the revealed gospel and the priesthood. We must be exemplary wherever we are.

Or are we as Esaias said: "Nevertheless among the chief rulers also many believed on him; but because of the Pharisees they did not confess him, lest they should be put out of the synagogue:

"For they loved the praise of men more than the praise of God." (John 12:42-43.)

Saturday, April 8

I would like to say to the young men who are listening in tonight (I wish I could talk to every young man who holds the priesthood, if it could be effective), we never need to be ashamed of the gospel of Jesus Christ, and we should always be humbly proud of the priesthood that we hold.

Cause of interest in Church

I was talking to a young man who is going to be baptized next month, the only member of his family to be baptized, and I said, "What caused you to be interested in the Church?"

And he replied, "The young man I was associating with in school was a member of your church, and the way he lived interested me. He was different from the rest of the boys. He was happy, and he invited me to his home; and when I saw the love in that home and how that family lived, I was more interested. He took me to church, and then I joined the ball team, and I found in that church a different feeling than I had found any other place. Then that ball team, those fine fellows all keeping the Word of Wisdom and living good clean lives, impressed me, and I determined that I would join the Church."

He went on to say: "I came with that friend out to Brigham Young University to attend one semester. I wanted to get acquainted with the people out here. I found most of those young people down there living the way they should, but if I hadn't determined to be a member of this church before I met some of the others, I don't know what effect it would have had on me."

I think, young men, wherever you are, you must keep this in mind. Your actions may be keeping people out of the Church, and I am sure you wouldn't be happy about that.

Offer of position

Just the other day I was talking to the father of another young man who was leaving this city of ours to go to New York to accept a position as a lawyer. The president of this organization, which is one of the large organizations in the country, knew one of our Church members in the East who was vice-president of a large company; and the president of this company asked him, knowing who he was, if there were any young man whom he could recommend. He said, "We want someone who will live as your young men live, somebody we know will not carouse, who will be on the job, whom we can depend on."

Now that is no reflection on others, but it is a recommendation to our young men who will live as they should. It will be a plus in their lives all the time.

And this man who was the vice-president of the company said, "I know a young man in Salt Lake City." They invited the young man to come to New York and paid his way back there, interviewed him, offered him a job, paid his way back, and offered to pay his wife's fare to go there also to find a place to live.

I can't overemphasize to you young men the importance of living the way you should, for your good, for your own success, for your own happiness, and for the influence you will have on those boys with whom you associate. They expect you to do what you are professing to do; to be what you profess to be; and, if you don't you let them down, other boys who don't have the priesthood have the opportunity for that influence on their lives.

Visit of Jaycee President

I was impressed the other day when the national president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce of America came with his wife and two other couples into my office, brought in for a courtesy call by a local Jaycee who was a member of the Church. After we had talked about things in the world and about the responsibility of this young man, who was president of the Junior Chamber, I said, "Maybe you would like to know something about the Church."

He said, "Yes, I would."

Then I turned to the young man who had brought them in and said, "Will you tell them something about it?"

He said, "Well, President Tanner, I thought you would."

I said, "No, you tell them about the Church."

He looked this other young man in the eye and said, "I want to tell you a little bit about the Book of Mormon, in which we believe, and which we know is the word of God." He told them what it was, how it was obtained by the Prophet, and how it was translated; and as he gave them this information he said, "And I want to tell you that I know it is true, and I bear my testimony to you people here today that that book is true, that it is the word of God, and I would like to refer you to the promise in that book"—which promise you all know.

Then he said, "Would you like to have a copy of the book?"

And the Jaycee president said, "I surely would. I am interested."

That young man who gave that testimony was Richard Moyle.

Young men, wherever we are, with whomever we are, let us remember that we are sons of God. We hold the priesthood of God, and we have a responsibility to live according to its teachings.

Testimony

I would like to bear my testimony to you this night that I know the gospel is true. I know it's true as well as I know anything else in the world. I know that God lives, that Jesus is the Christ, his Son, and that they appeared to Joseph Smith; that the gospel has been restored and the Church reestablished here upon the earth. I should like to say to you young men who feel that you might not have a testimony of the gospel, accept the convincing testimonies that you have heard this night and that you hear from our leaders, while at the same time, through prayer and study and keeping the commandments, you will gain a testimony for yourselves, the greatest blessing one can enjoy.

"... this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent." (John 17:3.)

May we honor our priesthood and enjoy the blessings that it affords and do our part to help in bringing to pass the immortality and eternal life of man, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. □

President Harold B. Lee

First Counselor in the First Presidency

I feel impressed by something that has been said to repeat an experience. There are a number who are listening in tonight, and one particularly who will remember this very vividly—an incident that took place a number of years ago in Japan. I want you to pay particular attention to a part of this, to show how a mistake in your early life can blight the possibilities of your future opportunities for service in the kingdom of God.

Talk of serviceman

It was just after the war; things were tense. We were at one of the upper camps where the planes could take off, and within half an hour they could be over on the Russian side. We were holding a noon meeting with our servicemen. They called on a young man to speak first. He announced his text from the prayer of the Master when he prayed for his disciples: "I pray not that thou should-est take them [my disciples] out of the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from the evil." (John 17: 15.) Then this lad delivered one of the finest talks on chastity that I have ever heard. He closed by saying, "Rather than lose my virtue, I would die and have my body sent home in a pine box and my dog tags follow after."

Saturday, April 8

There was a hush over that audience of servicemen, and then he bore his testimony; and as he started to leave the pulpit, he stumbled and fell, draped over the pulpit. We lifted him off the pulpit and worked with him until he was revived, and then took him down in the audience.

As they carried him down, the mission president said to me, "I wonder if he has a bad heart." And I said, "You know, I have had a feeling that there is something quarreling inside of him against what he has been saying to us."

Proof of pledge

When it came my time to speak, I said to him, "Now, my boy, you have made a profound impression upon all of us. You have said you would rather die than lose your virtue. But remember, the devil heard you, as we heard you, and if I don't miss my guess, he is going to make you prove that you would give your life before you would lose your virtue. You had better be on guard."

The group leader took me aside when the meeting was over, and he said, "You were hitting close to the mark, because up at the Chitose Air-base there has grown up one of the most filthy, rotten cities filled with prostitutes to try to entrap our men, and we have tried to keep them out of their clutches. But this boy had made a date with one of these hussies, as they called them, patriotic hussies; and we found out before he kept the date and said, 'Now look, we are not going to let you keep that date. Think of your mother; think of your sweetheart; think of your sisters. Now we will go down with you and help you break that date honorably.'"

This they did, and kept him under their surveillance for two weeks. They assigned him to do ward teaching, or home teaching, as they call it now; that meant, visit all the inactive boys in the camp. And two weeks later they assigned him to talk on the subject of chastity.

Results of passing test

So the years passed. We were with President McKay at the dedication of the Los Angeles Temple. Between sessions I walked out to get some fresh air. As I walked up the west side of the building, I saw on the upper elevation a young man who seemed familiar to me, and I got closer to this young man that I had seen in Hokkaido, Japan. As he recognized me, he came running down the steps and threw his arms around my neck, and said, "Guess what! They have called me to be a worker in the Los Angeles Temple."

There was a lump in my throat because I was there at the crossroads when he almost made a fatal step that probably would have forfeited him the right to be a worker in the Los Angeles Temple.

More years passed, and then I was out at a conference where he lived; and I saw a young couple walking down the aisle, the man holding in his arms a beautiful child, and a beautiful girl holding on to his arm, whom he introduced as his wife. As they uncovered the face of their new baby, I thought there was pride in the face of that young man because he knew as a young father that in the blood of his own child there was clean, pure blood. That is the reward that comes to one who passes the test.

Meeting temptation

One of the things we must do in teaching our young people is to condition them on how to meet a temptation that comes in an unguarded moment. When we teach our young boys going out into military service, we bring in those who have had experience to talk about some actual experiences they have gone through and say, "Now if you were faced with this or that temptation, what would you do? How would you react?" And there is a discussion as to just how he would react. How important that is in this day of wickedness!

The one who has the chief responsibility is the father of the boy. This doesn't mean that the father should wake up some morning and call his boy to his bedside and in fifteen minutes tell him all the facts of life. That isn't what the boy needs. He needs a father to answer when he wants to ask questions of a delicate nature. He is hungering to know; he is curious about things.

If his father will be frank and honest, and tell him up to the limit of his intelligence as he grows up, that father will be the one to whom the son will return for counsel in the years that follow. That father will be an anchor to that boy's soul, as the father takes from his book of experience lessons that he can give to his son to help condition him against the possibility of falling into that fatal trap in an unguarded moment.

Magnifying priesthood

I want to talk about another thing. As we study the various activities like family home evening and the activities pertaining to temple marriage, home teaching, and what not, we have discovered that we never make any headway by mere exhortation and trying to pressure people into holding home evenings or home teaching. We are discovering that the only way to get home teaching over, or to get family home evening going, or attendance at sacrament meeting, or to have more temple marriages or temple attendance, is to make sure that the holder of the priesthood in the home magnifies his priesthood; and until he can realize the importance of the priesthood of God, which gives him the power of Almighty God to act through him, that home is not going to be secure.

We must impress upon every father that he will be held responsible for the eternal welfare of his family; that means coming into the Church with his family; that means going to sacrament meeting with his family; that means holding family home evenings to keep his family intact; it means preparing himself to take them to the temple, so that there can be prepared thereby the steps that will make for an eternal family home.

It is a high responsibility to impress upon priesthood holders how they magnify their priesthood by living and doing as the Lord has commanded.

Spiritual suicide

We talk about Suicides Anonymous. I am convinced that there are many in the Church who are committing spiritual suicide, and they are calling for help, just like those who are going to commit suicide physically. They tell us that there is a cry of distress that if recognized in time could save a life.

There are many among us today who are giving the signal, the cry of distress, because they are in danger of spiritual suicide. And if we can only recognize the cry of distress in time, we will be the means of saving souls.

The hand of fellowship

One thing more I should like to state. We are having come into the Church now many people of various nationalities. We in the Church must remember that we have a history of persecution, discrimination against our civil rights, and our constitutional privileges being withheld from us. These who are members of the Church, regardless of their color, their national origin, are members of the church and kingdom of God. Some of them have told us that they are being shunned. There are snide remarks. We are withdrawing ourselves from them in some cases.

Now we must extend the hand of fellowship to men everywhere, and to all who are truly converted and who wish to join the Church and partake of the many rewarding opportunities to be found therein. To those who may not now have the priesthood, we pray that the blessings of Jesus Christ may be given to them to the full extent that it is possible for us to give them. Meanwhile, we ask the Church members to strive to emulate the example of our Lord and Master Jesus Christ, who gave us the new commandment that we should love one another. I wish we could remember that.

Divine witness

Now finally, just one more thought. President Smith's talk tonight has impressed something else. I heard someone say something that I have learned is an absolute fact. When I sat in as a younger member of the Council of the Twelve, the first Church reorganization I was permitted to participate in was when President Grant passed away. As we met in the temple for a long discussion, as is the usual custom before the votes are taken and the decisions reached as to the selecting of the president of the Church, I was thinking there had been some rumors as to who might be the counselors and who might not be the counselors, as is always the gossip that attends such reorganizations. But as the president named his counselors and they took their places at the head of the room, down inside me I had a witness that these were the men that the Lord wanted to be the presidency of the Church. It came to me with a conviction that was as though that truth was being trumpeted in my ears.

Faith in leadership

Now I want to impress this upon you. Someone has said it this way, and I believe it to be absolutely true: "That person is not truly converted until he sees the power of God resting upon the leaders of this church, and until it goes down into his heart like fire." Until the members of this church have that conviction that they are being led in the right way, and they have a conviction that these men of God are men who are inspired and have been properly appointed by the hand of God, they are not truly converted.

So I bear you my witness that I know with all my soul, as I knew on that occasion, that those whom the Lord chooses are the ones he needs for a particular time. I heard Elder Orson F. Whitney, a member of the Twelve, say from this pulpit that he didn't believe that these men are necessarily the best living men in the Church, but that there may be many others who live just as righteous lives, or maybe more so, but one thing he did know: that when there is a vacancy and the Lord has need for a person, he looks around and finds the person who is best qualified to fill the position at a given time.

I have lived long enough now in these thirty-one years as a member of the General Authorities to know that is true; and I bear witness that the Lord is guiding this church, and we see daily and constantly in the councils of this church that there is divine guidance. I bear that humble witness in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen. □

President Harold B. Lee

The CBS Radio Tabernacle Choir Broadcast will be from 9:30 to 10:00 tomorrow morning. Those desiring to attend must be in their seats before 9:15 A.M.

The music for this session has been furnished by the Brigham Young University Faculty Priesthood Chorus. We are grateful to these brethren and extend our appreciation to them.

We shall now conclude this meeting with the chorus, conducted by A. Harold Goodman, with Alexander Schreiner at the organ, singing, "The Soul of Man Is Free," following which President George C. Ficklin, president of the Bear River South Stake, will offer the benediction.

This conference will then be adjourned until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

The number, "The Soul of Man Is Free," was sung by the Brigham Young University Faculty Priesthood Chorus.

President George C. Ficklin of the Bear River South Stake offered the closing prayer.

The conference was adjourned until Sunday morning at 10 o'clock.

THIRD DAY MORNING MEETING

SIXTH SESSION

The sixth session of the conference convened in the Tabernacle on Sunday, April 9, 1972, at 10 o'clock A.M.

With President Joseph Fielding Smith presiding, President N. Eldon Tanner, second counselor in the First Presidency, conducted the meeting.

The Tabernacle Choir, under the direction of Richard P. Condie, with Alexander Schreiner at the organ, furnished the special music for this session.

Before the opening of the meeting, the Tabernacle Choir without announcement sang "Guide Us, O Thou Great Jehovah."

President Tanner then made the following remarks:

President N. Eldon Tanner

President Joseph Fielding Smith, who presides at this conference, has asked me to conduct this sixth session of the 142nd Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and to extend his welcome and blessings and warmest greetings to all present this morning in this historic Tabernacle.

We welcome also special guests, government, educational, and civic leaders, and thousands of members of the Church and many friends everywhere tuned to these proceedings by radio and television throughout many areas of the world.

The Tabernacle Choir, under the direction of Richard P. Condie, with Alexander Schreiner at the organ, will open these services by singing "With a Voice of Singing," following which Elder Milton J. Hess, Jr., formerly president of the Australia West Mission, will offer the invocation.

The Tabernacle Choir sang "With a Voice of Singing."

The invocation was offered by Elder Milton J. Hess, Jr., formerly president of the Australia West Mission.

After the invocation the Choir sang "O Divine Redeemer" without announcement.

President Tanner

The Tabernacle Choir has sung "O Divine Redeemer."

Our first speaker this morning will be President Harold B. Lee, first counselor in the First Presidency of the Church.

President Harold B. Lee

First Counselor in the First Presidency

This year is again a most important year of decision for our day. Some have even said that this is the most critical period in the history of this nation and of the world.

I believe it is an illusion to say that this is the most critical, decisive time. Write it upon the hearts of all of us that every dispensation has been just as decisive, and likewise that every year has been the most decisive year and time for ourselves, for this nation, and for the world. This is our day and time when honorable men must be brought forward to meet the tremendous challenges before us.

Political activity

This is the beginning of an intense political activity, when men of every persuasion in the political arena will be clamoring for attention and acceptance by the electorate. There will be controversy, debate, conflict, and contention, which seem to be the order of a political campaign.

In its loftiest sense, controversy may mean disputations because of honest differences of opinion. In its most degrading sense it may mean quarreling, strife, and name-calling. An example of that which degrades is the bitter personal abuse that so frequently is heaped upon an opposing candidate. Name-calling is continued throughout the whole season until listeners are left with doubt and mistrust that honor and integrity are to be found in any of those who may eventually be elected. The obvious hazard is that when these elected leaders have been maligned and downgraded, the seeds of disrespect to authority and law and order are sown in the minds of youth, particularly, instead of respectful obedience to counsel and to the laws enacted by those whose integrity and honesty have been thus impugned.

Support of nation's leaders

The story, presumably authentic, is told that during the Civil War when the fortunes of the Union armies, under the command of General Grant, were going badly, some concerned ministers called on President Abraham Lincoln at the White House and forcefully urged the dismissal of Grant.

To these men he is alleged to have said: "Gentlemen, General Grant has under his command all that we hold dear in this nation. Instead of criticism, you too should get down on your knees and pray God that he would see this nation through to victory."

We related this story to a president of the United States some years ago and assured him that no matter what his name or his political party, we too were frequently on our knees, praying God that he and the leaders of this nation and of the world would bring us through the crises of the present.

We were heartened by the president's reply when he said, "I think that every president of this country during his term of office has been frequently on his knees praying to Almighty God."

During these years of extreme tension, you may constantly have in mind the admonition of the Lord himself: "Wherefore, be subject to the powers that be, until he reigns whose right it is to reign, and subdues all enemies under his feet," and likewise he reminds us that "he that keepeth the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land." (D&C 58:22, 21.)

Conflicting dominions

We have recorded the angelic refrain at the time of the Savior's birth as recorded by Luke: "... on earth peace, good will toward men." (Luke 2:14.)

In seeming contradiction to that message are the recorded words of the Master: "Think not that I am come to send peace on the earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword. For I am come to set a man at variance against his father. . . . And a man's foes shall be they of his own household." (Matt. 10:34-36.)

How can these seemingly contradictory quotations be reconciled?

The earliest revelations of this dispensation speak of two so-called conflicting dominions on the earth today. One is spoken of as the dominion of the devil, "when peace shall be taken from the earth." (D&C 1:35.)

In the book of Revelation, as well as in other scriptures, we read that before the earth was peopled "there was war in heaven." (Rev. 12:7.)

One of the ambitious sons of God's spiritual creations in the premortal world promised salvation for all mankind without effort on their part, provided he would be given almighty power, even to the dethroning of God himself, whose divine right it is to reign over the earth. Intense bitterness ensued between that son, who became Satan, and those who followed after him, and the beloved Son of God and those who followed after him, whose plan of salvation, by contrast, would give to every soul the right of choice, and the glory be to the Father. He even offered himself as "the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world" (Rev. 13:8), that by the redemption of his atoning sacrifice, "all mankind may be saved, by obedience to the laws and ordinances of the Gospel" (Article of Faith 3).

Satan and his hosts were cast out because he set about to destroy the agency of man, and he became the author of falsehood to deceive and to blind men and to lead captive all who would not hearken to the words and teachings of God's eternal plan.

The other dominion in the earth today of which the scriptures speak is the Lord's dominion, when he "shall have power over his saints, and shall reign in their midst." (D&C 1:36.)

Demands to exercise self-will

Today we are constantly hearing, from the unenlightened and misguided, who demand what they call free agency, by which they apparently mean, as evidenced by their conduct, that they have their agency to do as they please or to exercise their own self-will to determine what is law and order, what is right and wrong, or what is honor and virtue.

These are frightening expressions when you reflect upon what I have just quoted from the revealed word of God. A moment's reflection will help you to see that when one sets himself up to make his own rules and presumes to know no law but his own, he is but echoing the plan of Satan, who sought to ascend to God's throne, as it were, in being the judge of all that rules mankind and the world. There has ever been, and ever will be, a conflict between the forces of truth and error; between the forces of righteousness and the forces of evil; between the dominion of Satan and the dominion under the banner of our Lord and Master, Jesus Christ.

True free agency

The true meaning of free agency is clearly set forth by a father who explained to his son:

"Wherefore, men are free according to the flesh. . . . And they are free to choose liberty and eternal life, through the great mediation of all men [meaning the atonement of the Savior], or to choose captivity and death, according to the captivity and power of the devil. . . ." (2 Ne. 2:27.)

". . . the Lord God gave unto man that he should act for himself. Wherefore, man could not act for himself save it should be that he was enticed by the one or the other." (2 Ne. 2:16.)

What would it be like if we were to live in a vacuum, with everything coming our way without any effort or struggle on our part to overcome these obstacles?

Sunday, April 9

Proposal to college student

One of my esteemed colleagues told me of his efforts to aid a young college student who was feeling sorry for himself, who was lacking motivation and had no sense of responsibility. My friend made an attractive proposal to this young man. In a conversation that went something like this, he said, "Son, I'm going to take over full responsibility of your affairs from now on and relieve you of your worries. I'll pay your tuition at college, buy your clothes, furnish you an automobile and a credit card for gasoline. When you get ready to marry, don't worry about it; I'll look for a wife for you, and I will supply you with a house that is furnished. I'll support you and your family thereafter without any effort on your part. What do you think of my offer?"

After a moment of sobered thinking the young man replied, "Well, if you did that, what would there be for me to live for?"

Then my friend replied, "That is what I'm trying to make you see, my boy. That is the purpose of life—there is no joy without struggle and the exercise of one's own natural abilities."

Meaning of truth

Now in the exercise of the God-given right of free agency, or freedom of choice, how may one distinguish between what is truth and what is error?

A noted columnist wrote: "Truth is the logic of the universe. It is the reasoning of destiny; it is the mind of God. And nothing that man can devise can take its place." (Frank Crane.)

Another man of wisdom added: "There is no progress in fundamental truth. We may grow in knowledge of its meaning and in the modes of its application, but its great principles will forever be the same." (Hamilton Wright Mabie.)

At the time of Christ's arraignment before Pilate, the Master declared that his whole mission was to bear witness of the truth. Pilate then asked: "What is truth?"

Whether or not the Savior answered that question on that occasion, we have no record; but in our day the Lord himself has answered, as he might have answered Pilate at that time, and I quote his words: "And truth is knowledge of things as they are, and as they were, and as they are to come; And whatsoever is more or less than this is the spirit of that wicked one who was a liar from the beginning." (D&C 93:24-25.)

The Light of Christ

Now, may I for a few moments speak of certainties upon which one may depend in his search for truth.

The first of which I would speak is that which is referred to in the scriptures as the Light of Christ, the Spirit of Truth, or Spirit of God, variously spoken of, which in essence means the influence of Deity that proceeds forth from the presence of God, that which quickens the understanding of man. (See D&C 88:49.) The apostle John spoke of it as "the true Light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world." (John 1:9.)

A president of the Church makes this further explanation: "There is not a man [or person] born into the world, but has a portion of the Spirit of God, and it is that Spirit of God which gives to his spirit understanding, . . . each in accordance with his capacity to receive the light . . . [which] will never cease to strive with man, until man is brought to the possession of the higher intelligence." (Joseph F. Smith, Gospel Doctrine, pp. 63, 62.)

To those not acquainted with the language of the scriptures, it might be explained that the Light of Christ could be described as one's conscience, or the voice of the divine within one's own soul.

Counsel to public officials

As a public official in my young manhood, I was given some wise counsel by a Church leader. He said: "The only thing we will ever ask you to do is to vote for that which in your heart you feel is right. We would rather many times over that you would make a mistake doing that which you felt was right, than to vote for policy sake."

I pass these wise words of counsel to others in public office for what they are worth and strongly urge that those of you having heavy responsibilities in public office or elsewhere should meditate prayerfully and give the Lord a chance to aid you in solving the problems of life.

"Expedients are for an hour," someone has said, "but principles are for the ages." (Henry Ward Beecher.)

Positive teachings of gospel

Now another certainty of which I would speak:

The Constitution of the United States has been mentioned several times by speakers in this conference as the basis of wise decisions in fundamental principles as applied to all matters pertaining to law and order, because it was framed by men whom God raised up for this very purpose. But in addition to that inspired document, we must always keep in mind that the greatest weapons that can be forged against any false philosophy are the positive teachings of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

We constantly impress upon all who go out as true ambassadors of the kingdom of God to follow the wise counsel of the apostle Paul, one of the ablest defenders of the faith of all time. In his declaration to the Corinthians he has given us his counsel if we would be as powerful as he in our ministry. This was his secret in combating evil:

"And I, brethren, when I came to you, came not with excellency of speech or of wisdom, declaring unto you the testimony of God.

"For I am determined not to know any thing among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified.

"That your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God." (1 Cor. 2:1-2, 5.)

Teaching the truth

It has been well said that one does not teach honesty by telling a man how to burglarize a safe, nor do we teach chastity by telling a youth all about sexual activities.

So, likewise, it is inspired wisdom that our efforts must be spent in teaching truth by the power of Almighty God, and thus we can forge the most powerful of all weapons against the vicious doctrines of Satan.

The Prophet Joseph Smith was asked how he governed the Church members in his day. His answer in one sentence was, "Teach them correct principles and they will govern themselves."

If we overemphasize the philosophies of the enemies of righteousness instead of teaching forcefully the principles of the gospel of Jesus Christ, such overemphasis can only serve to stir up controversy and strife and thus defeat the very purpose of our missionary work in all the nations of the world.

The voice of the people

Now a third certainty:

Those who have served as public officials soon learn that there is always the imperative necessity of deciding whether or not demands on a controversial issue are being made by a well-organized loud minority or by a greater majority of those who might be less vocal but whose cause is just and in accordance with righteous principles. Always we would do well to reflect upon the counsel of a wise king of ancient times: "Now it is not common that the voice of the people desireth anything contrary to that which is right; but it is common for the lesser part of the people to desire that which is not right; therefore . . . do your business by the voice of the people." (Mosiah 29:26.)

Let this counsel of that wise ancient king be our counsel to our Church members and the honorable of the earth everywhere. Be alert and active in your business and political interests. The great danger in any society is apathy and a failure to be alert to the issues of the day, when applied to principles or to the election of public officials.

Statesmanlike leaders

The fourth certainty to keep in mind in our civic responsibilities is to choose those to govern us as "civil officers and magistrates [who will] enforce the laws . . . and . . . administer the law in equity and justice" (D&C 134:3), as we are admonished by inspired men of God.

In a word, we must seek for statesmanlike men who will ask, "Is it right and is it good for the country or the community?" instead of those who may merely ask, "Is it politically expedient?"

Remember always our declaration of political faith: "We believe in being subject to kings, presidents, rulers, and magistrates, in obeying, honoring, and sustaining the law." (Article of Faith 12.)

Wherever you are, wherever you live, pray for the leaders of your country, for remember that they too hold in their hands all that you hold dear. Again I repeat the Lord's injunction: ". . . be subject to the powers that be, until he reigns whose right it is to reign, and subdues all enemies under his feet." (D&C 58:22.)

God's eternal plan

And now, finally, the supreme of all certainties is God's eternal plan as given in the gospel of Jesus Christ. Here we have given us the never-failing principles that will keep our feet firmly planted on the path of safety. By these eternal principles we can readily detect truth from error. In the earliest revelations of our dispensation we were told that the gospel teachings were given that "inasmuch as they have erred it might be made known; And inasmuch as they sought wisdom they might be instructed." (D&C 1:25-26.)

By the light of gospel truths we can be shown that "every thing which inviteth to do good, and to persuade to believe in Christ . . . ye may know with a perfect knowledge it is of God." (Moro. 7:16.)

But also we may know that "whatsoever thing persuadeth men to do evil, and believe not in Christ, and deny him, and serve not God, then ye may know with a perfect knowledge it is of the devil" (Moro. 7:17), whether it be labeled religion, philosophy, science, or political dogma.

Trust in God

What a wonderful feeling of security can come in a crisis to one who has learned to pray and has cultivated listening ears so that he can "call, and the Lord shall answer"; when he can cry and the Lord shall say, "Here I am." (Isa. 58:9.)

The supreme commander of the Allied forces during World War II, General Eisenhower, when faced with some of the most momentous military decisions that were to change the course of the world, made his humble acknowledgment: "This is what I found out about religion: It gives you courage to make the decisions you must make in a crisis and then the confidence to leave the result to a Higher Power. Only by trust in God can a man carrying responsibilities find repose."

There you have it, all you who are leaders in high places, in business, in government, or in the Church, or for that matter in any walk of life: the constant reminder that God is in his heaven and all can be right with the world, if we seek for him and find him, "though he be not far from every one of us: for in him we live, and move, and have our being; . . . For we are also his offspring." (Acts 17:27-28.)

Personal witness

Now, may I in all humility bear my own witness to the power of these guidelines in my life. I have learned by my own experience that the heavier the responsibilities, the greater is my dependence on the Lord.

In some measure I begin to understand the import of the declaration of Moses, who, after his great spiritual experience, said: "Now . . . I know that man is nothing, which thing I never had supposed." (Moses 1:10.)

But through the lights and shadows of my life, I also have the assurance that aided by God's holy power, doubts can be resolved into certainties, burdens can be lightened, and a literal rebirth can be realized as the nearness to my Lord and Master becomes more certain—to all of which I bear humble witness in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen. □

Following President Lee's remarks, the Choir sang "King of Glory, King of Peace" without announcement.

President N. Eldon Tanner

We have just heard a most powerful address by President Harold B. Lee, first counselor in the First Presidency, followed by the Tabernacle Choir singing "King of Glory, King of Peace."

Many on television and radio have just tuned in on this conference, and we wish to extend to them a cordial welcome.

Elder Marion D. Hanks, Assistant to the Twelve, will now address us.

Elder Marion D. Hanks

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

I am honored to be able to express my convictions and offer my testimony this morning.

I would like to talk about happiness.

Reasons for unhappiness

On my desk at this moment is the cover of a leading news journal with this headline: "Good Times—But People Are Unhappy."

The story within reported the results of a survey made to determine why people are unhappy in good times. The reasons given are substantially the same as those produced by any responsible inquiry: lack of meaning or purpose in life, anxiety, fear, poor self-image, doubting one's capacity to love or worthiness to be loved, not accomplishing anything, bad conscience, inability to form lasting relationships, unsatisfactory home life, loneliness, no sense of belonging, little giving of self, and the summation of them all: lack of life-directing relationships with God and Christ.

In considering this, I remembered the day some time ago when I stood before a bulletin board in the Student Union Building on an Arizona university campus, where I had been invited to speak to a convocation during their "Religion in Life Week." On my way into the auditorium, thinking of the implications of their theme, which was "Something Missing," my attention was drawn to a short advertising notice, posted and signed by a student in the lobby. Line by line it read:

For Sale
1929 Ford
Two-Door Sedan
Nice Body and Fenders
New Paint Job
No Engine
$20.00
See Bob

There was in truth "something missing" in this automobile, and that something happened to be the one indispensable element that gave the rest meaning, without which it was but an empty shell, having the appearance of wholeness but lacking the capacity to accomplish the purposes of its creation.

Men without God and the living Christ in their lives lack center, and thus lack joy they could have.

Willful ignorance

Hundreds of years before Christ, God confronted the willful ignorance of Israel in these words: "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge: because thou hast rejected knowledge, I will also reject thee . . . seeing thou hast forgotten the law of thy God. . . ." (Hos. 4:6.)

The knowledge for lack of which they suffered is plainly explained by Hosea:

" . . . the Lord hath a controversy with the inhabitants of the land, because there is no truth, nor mercy, nor knowledge of God in the land.

"For I desired mercy, and not sacrifice; and the knowledge of God more than burnt offerings." (Hos. 4:1, 6:6.)

In a poem of pessimism which he wrote soon after World War I, Yeats described the widening circle—the gyre—in which the falcon flew away from the falconer. He wrote:

"Turning and turning in the widening gyre

The falcon cannot hear the falconer;
Things fall apart; the center cannot hold.

The best lack all conviction, while the worst

Are full of passionate intensity."

—"The Second Coming"

When the falconer is not heard, the falcon is lost. So are men when they cannot or will not hear the voice of the Master. Things fall apart in human life, the center cannot hold, trouble is born, and the "worst," who are "full of passionate intensity," do their own thing, follow their own base appetites and wayward wills, and impose upon those who are less intense and involved—and particularly upon the young—false constructions and interpretations of the meaning of life.

Men to be happy

It is well to consider where we are with respect to our Creator. If we are out of touch, if we have moved away from him, then we are not as happy as we could be. Something is missing. Epictetus said: "God hath made all men to be happy." And a prophet wrote: ". . . men are, that they might have joy." (2 Ne. 2:25.)

Wherein have we erred if we are not happy? Why are we less happy than we could be? How can we have more joy?

May I offer six observations.

Our need for God

1. When I was a boy growing up in a home with a widowed mother, I heard a story that touched me and that has had a lot more meaning since I have had the blessing of having a son of my own.

A youngster was assigned by his father to see to the moving of a large rock. He tugged and pushed, and he lifted and struggled without avail. Some friends were enlisted, but together they could not move it. Reluctantly he reported to his father that he could not budge the rock.

"Have you done all you could?" asked the father.

"Yes," said the little boy.

"Have you tried everything?" persisted the father.

"Yes," said the boy. "I've tried everything."

"No, son, you haven't," said his dad. "You haven't asked me."

Why do so many of us, "heirs of God, joint heirs with Christ," fail to go to him, to keep in touch with our Father? He is anxious to help. But he wants us to learn our need for him, to open the door to him.

"And therefore," said the prophet, "will the Lord wait, that he may be gracious unto you, and therefore will he be exalted, that he may have mercy upon you. . . ." (Isa. 30:18.)

World too much with us

2. For some of us, a reason for unhappiness is that "the world is too much with us; late and soon, Getting and spending, we lay waste our powers," as the poet said. (William Wordsworth.)

Material objectives consume too much of our attention. The struggle for what we need or for more than we need exhausts our time and energy. We pursue pleasure or entertainment, or become overinvolved in associations or civic matters. Of course, people need recreation, need to be achieving, need to contribute; but if these come at the cost of friendship with Christ, the price is much too high.

"For my people have committed two evils," said the Lord to Israel; "they have forsaken me the fountain of living waters, and hewed them out cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water." (Jer. 2:13.)

The substitutions we fashion to take the place of God in our lives truly hold no water. To the measure we thus refuse the "living water," we miss the joy we could have.

Luke records Christ's well-known story to the Pharisees:

"A certain man made a great supper, and bade many:

"And sent his servant at supper time to say to them that were bidden, Come; for all things are now ready.

"And they all with one consent began to make excuse. The first said unto him, I have bought a piece of ground, and I must needs go and see it: I pray thee have me excused.

"And another said, I have bought five yoke of oxen, and I go to prove them: I pray thee have me excused.

"And another said, I have married a wife, and therefore I cannot come." (Luke 14:16-20.)

Other guests were invited to take their places at the supper.

Arrogance and pride

3. Some of us may be less happy than we should be or could be because of arrogance or pride. We think we are sufficient unto ourselves. We think we do not need God or his Christ. We may be, as President Joseph F. Smith once wrote, lazy, or "among the proud and self-vaunting, who read by the lamp of their own conceit, interpret by rules of their own contriving . . . become a law unto themselves, and so pose as the sole judges of their own doings. . . ."

To recreant Israel God said, ". . . this is a rebellious people, lying children, children that will not hear the law of the Lord: Which say to the seers, See not; and to the prophets, Prophecy not unto us right things, speak unto us smooth things, prophesy deceits." (Isa. 30:9-10.)

From the prophet Jacob in the Book of Mormon comes this sobering warning, well known to students in the Church:

"O that cunning plan of the evil one! O the vainness, and the frailties, and the foolishness of men! When they are learned they think they are wise, and they hearken not unto the counsel of God, for they set it aside, supposing they know of themselves, wherefore, their wisdom is foolishness and it profiteth them not. And they shall perish.

"But to be learned is good if they hearken unto the counsels of God." (2 Ne. 9:28-19.)

This morning President Lee quoted Paul to the Corinthians—Paul, the brilliant author who wrote the letters which constitute the major part of the New Testament. Paul wrote to the Corinthians that he had been sent not to satisfy those who required a sign or were seeking after worldly wisdom.

Sunday, April 9

He determined, we have been reminded, to preach nothing but Jesus Christ and him crucified, and he did, so he said:

"... in weakness, and in fear, and in much trembling.

"... in demonstration of the Spirit and of power:

"That your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God." (1 Cor. 2:3-5.)

It is not enough, is it, to know the scriptures about prayer or the motions of prayer or the words of prayer. The man who will not humble himself—really humble himself—before the Lord "receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God," wrote Paul, "for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." (1 Cor. 2:14.)

The truths of eternal life, a prophet has written, "are only to be seen and understood by the power of the Holy Spirit, which God bestows on those who love him, and purify themselves before him; To whom he grants this privilege of seeing and knowing for themselves." (D&C 76:116-17.)

Enduring trials

4. There are those who have lost faith because of personal tragedies or troubles. Faced with problems akin to Job's, they have in effect accepted the invitation to curse God and die rather than to love God and gain the strength to endure their trials. There is, of course, in the promises of God no warrant that we will avoid the very experiences which we came here to undergo and through which we can learn reliance on the Lord. Jesus said, "In the world ye shall have tribulation: but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." (John 16:33.) He had tribulation, and he overcame. And so may we, with his help.

Some years ago I became acquainted with the story of a young family whose little son was tragically ill with cancer. Every night the father sat with his boy, holding him in his arms. The pain seemed less when daddy held him close.

The father slept on a mattress on the floor beside his son so that he could reach him whenever the boy cried out. The parents bore their sorrow with courage. They prayed, they loved, they served. Faith gave them strength to meet the test.

Frailties of others

5. Sometimes we turn from the Lord because other people have made or are making mistakes. I don't want to forget the story of the farmer who felt he had been wronged in the distribution of irrigation water and that the watermaster was at fault.

Having angered himself into distraction over the seeming unfairness, he sought out the watermaster, grasped him by the shirt bitterly, and said, "Tom, as long as you are watermaster, I won't take another drop out of that ditch."

What happened to that farmer? Well, he was a stubborn man. He kept his foolish vow. And he and his property dried up and blew away.

That we have not found perfection in men or organization, or that we hear reports of imperfection—these are no reasons to cease seeking or serving or worshipping.

The frailties or failings of others can never be appropriate reasons for our loss of the blessings we might have if we ourselves are doing our duty.

Our own mistakes

6. And finally, perhaps the saddest of all reasons for failing ourselves and the Lord is that we choose to disqualify ourselves because of our own mistakes. We know that sin and failure of obedience tend to keep us from God and prayer. We refuse to receive the soul-saving gift of forgiveness, because we have sinned.

But this is the larger failure. To reject the Lord and his love and his redeeming sacrifice is to deny the efficacy of God's love and his graciousness. All men are capable of mistakes, and have made some, but all of us too can have the cleansing forgiveness that comes with repentance and devotion.

We are all like Paul—sometimes tortured by an inability to do consistently and faithfully that which we know we should do. You remember, “. . . to will is present with me,” he said; “but how to perform that which is good I find not. For the good that I would I do not: but the evil which I would not, that I do.” (Rom. 7:18-19.)

But Paul knew Jesus. He knew him as the Lord, and he accepted his pardon, gave him his life, and died for him.

Nephi's trust in the Lord

Perhaps the most personal and encouraging expression of all, to me, comes from Nephi, sincere servant of God, who, bearing his witness of gratitude and delight in the Lord, is honest enough to say: “Nevertheless, notwithstanding the great goodness of the Lord, in showing me his great and marvelous works, my heart exclaimeth: O wretched man that I am! Yea, my heart sorroweth because of my flesh; my soul grieveth because of mine iniquities.

“I am encompassed about, because of the temptations and the sins which do so easily beset me.

“And when I desire to rejoice, my heart groaneth because of my sins. . . .” (2 Ne. 4:17-19.)

And then he cried out to the Lord for help:

“. . . Wilt thou make me that I may shake at the appearance of sin?

“O Lord, I have trusted in thee, and I will trust in thee forever. I will not put my trust in the arm of flesh. . . .” (2 Ne. 4:31, 34.)

Nephi gave his life to the Lord.

Our strength and our peace and our happiness are in the Lord. In this world of trial and affliction, we have need of the comforting and qualifying assurances that come with faith in God and repentance and service to his cause. If we will acknowledge him, be thankful, serve him, love his children, and accept the responsibilities of being truly Christian, we will be happy, notwithstanding problems or troubles.

Said the apostle John, “If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them.” (John 13:17.)

There is no lasting joy in possessions. There is no peace here or hereafter in pride. There is comfort and understanding in the loving arms of him whose every act of courage, of mercy, and of love was performed in the shadow of a cross he knew was ahead for him, and in a world shot through with moral flaws.

We cannot permit the mistakes of others to mislead us from our own joy, nor can we disqualify ourselves because of our own mistakes. Jesus died for our personal sins. He is the Savior and Redeemer to whom we belong.

Faith in God

Faith in God and Christ makes for righteousness in the world and for happiness. One who knows has said: “God exists in the world. He exists wherever men let him in. Perhaps it is only humble men, men in search of him, men with a great need for him, who really let him in. And God comes to such men not only because of their great need for him, but also because of his great need for them as his allies in the divine task of creating a better world, a better human society, a real kingdom of God.” (P. A. Christensen.)

Martin Buber helps us: “You know always in your heart that you need God more than anything else. But do you not know too that God needs you . . . in the fullness of His eternity He needs you?”

Said the Lord to ancient Israel: “. . . if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me . . . for all the earth is mine.” (Exod. 19:5.)

Sunday, April 9

"World, O world, of muddled men,
Seek the Peace of God again:
In the humble faith that kneels,
In the hallowed Word that heals;
In the courage of a tree,
In the rock's integrity;
In the hill that holds the sky,
The star you pull your heart up by;
In the laughter of a child,
Altogether undefiled;
In the hope that answers doubt,
Love that drives the darkness out. . . .
Frantic, frightened, foolish men,
Take God by the hand again."

—Joseph Auslander

I know that God lives. I know that Jesus is the Christ. I pray for all of us that we may have the joy that comes in that knowledge, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. □

President N. Eldon Tanner

He to whom we have just listened is Elder Marion D. Hanks, Assistant to the Twelve.

The congregation will now join with the Choir in singing "Come, Come Ye Saints," following which we shall have a brief interlude listening to the Choir.

The Choir and congregation sang "Come, Come Ye Saints."

The Choir then sang "I Stand All Amazed."

President Tanner

To those of the television and radio audience who have just joined us in this sixth session of the 142nd Annual Conference of the Church, we are convened in the historic Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City, Utah.

We shall now hear from Elder David B. Haight, Assistant to the Twelve. He will be followed by Elder Bruce R. McConkie, of the First Council of the Seventy.

Elder David B. Haight

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

I humbly ask an interest in your faith and prayers as I occupy this historic pulpit.

Broken homes

A few days ago a heartbroken young man came into my office. It was evident from his appearance and troubled look that he was seeking help. He had been a student at the Brigham Young University, married for two years, and now his wife was requesting a divorce. They had a young son.

Filled with remorse, he told me how he had been unsuccessful in holding numerous jobs, had tampered with drugs, had taken a so-called treatment at a commune-type ranch, and had not assumed his responsibility of providing for his wife and infant son.

As I visited with him, I found he had never worked at a paying job or assumed any responsibility prior to his college and marriage. His parents had separated. This young man was the product of a home where the parents ignored the teachings of the Church.

Influence of family

I know of another young man who recently returned from Vietnam. He told of the close bond of love in his family. He said, "My buddies tried to persuade me to go into Saigon and 'live it up.' This went on day after day, but I kept thinking of my family and their influence and the memories of our family home evenings and of my patriarchal blessing. It seemed to give me the courage I needed to resist them."

He then said, "I got out my blessing and read it and reread it. It promised me a temple marriage if I was worthy. After a while, my buddies were impressed with my conviction. They started to respect me and then wanted to know more."

Building on sand

The Savior warned mankind of what could happen to our homes if we failed to heed his counsel. He said:

"Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock.

"And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell not: for it was founded upon a rock.

"And every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand:

"And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell: and great was the fall of it." (Matt. 7:24-27.)

Couldn't you imagine that if a family purposely built their house on sand, their neighbors would come running to their aid, would probably warn them and try to persuade them not to make such a critical error? But we are actually witnessing this tragic mistake taking place. Some houses are being built on sand.

Teaching our children

We all know of families that seem to be unified with love for one another, respect for the parents, active in church assignments; but as the children grow older, the roof seems to start leaking, the family grows apart, their beliefs now seem to differ. The rains of other influences are beating and beating hard on their homes.

"And ye will not suffer your children that they go hungry, or naked," said King Benjamin; "neither will ye suffer that they transgress the laws of God . . . and serve the devil. . . . But ye will teach them to walk in the ways of truth and soberness; ye will teach them to love one another, and to serve one another." (Mosiah 4:14-15.)

Remember, this scripture says to teach our children. How can we teach them if we don't get together as a family (and not just as a place to exchange the car keys)?

Family night

All over the world Monday evening has been set aside by the First Presidency as family night. A night of participation, involvement, and wholesome fun. The importance of the family unit cannot be overemphasized. Every home in the Church has been instructed to build a solid foundation for sound citizenship and active church participation.

Some of my warmest memories are of my childhood home. My parents were concerned with the activities of each child. They planned fun evenings at home. We would watch the honey candy boil, then pour it out so it could cool, and then we would all stand around and pull it into strings so we could cut it and enjoy it. This was great fun!

I remember our family around the piano singing and trying to learn harmony. It was at these home nights that I had my first experiences with the children's stories of the Bible.

The activities and teaching at family home evening can be the vehicle for the building of strong faith and character.

One sure solution

You are aware, as I am, of the comments of juvenile court judges, law enforcement officers, social workers, and educators who seem to unanimously indicate that there is only one sure solution to our present moral challenge. They all point to the home, not more laws. They say, "If only the father would take command! If only father and mother unitedly would guide their children with love and affection!"

Sunday, April 9

The evidence is overwhelming and the need so critical for a strong bond of respect and admiration in our homes. The trend is growing more acute daily. Latter-day Saint parents must analyze the foundation on which their homes are being built, for the rains of evil are descending. Parents must prayerfully prepare for their particular family needs.

Trust officers

Banks hold in trust valuable worldly assets of individuals. They are entrusted with things of value that belong to someone else. How well equipped are we as parents to be the trust officers of the most precious of God's possessions—innocent young spirits? They are in your charge during eighteen or twenty of these critical years. This is your opportunity and responsibility to help them gain a testimony and prepare for celestial life.

But chances are it will not happen accidentally. Dad and Mom are the trust officers, the planning officers, and the careful organizers of a family master plan. They establish family goals and determine the best methods of achieving these family objectives.

To hold regular and effective family home evenings takes desire and some hard decision-making on the part of parents. Our homes are all different, with different challenges, different personalities; but parents must have the determination and the will to make some personal sacrifices so as to really make it work.

Henry Ward Beecher wrote: "We are not born as the partridge in the wood, or the ostrich of the desert, to be scattered everywhere; but we are grouped together, and brooded by love and reared day by day in that first of churches, the family."

Pressures on youth

We are all aware that our youth are being pressured from all sides with bizarre sensationalism that attempts to present a new morality—even a non-family concept—that is in complete opposition to the true teachings of the gospel. The words to some of the rock music, some of the films, and the pictures in some of the magazines indicate with a resounding ring that the rains are pouring, not just on your neighbor's family, but also upon yours.

Now, if some of you are finding resistance in getting your families together each week and are tempted to give up, please find strength in these words of Elder Marion G. Romney: "It is not enough to do our best. Unless we do all we can, we do less than we ought. We must succeed in doing what is necessary. Unless we get the job done, it is not enough."

Stronger family foundations

A few days ago we witnessed a little family, with the grandmothers and grandfathers and some of the uncles all united to participate, as a loving father conferred the Aaronic Priesthood on his oldest son. This was a special and sacred occasion and an opportunity to teach and strengthen this little family's foundation.

Elder James E. Talmage wrote: "We regard children literally as gifts from God, committed to our parental care, for whose support, protection, and training in righteousness we shall be held to a strict accounting." (The Marriage Institution [pamphlet, Church Historian's Department], pp. 4-5.)

Wisdom of Church leaders

With our own God-given desire and intelligence, we will find solutions to today's pressing issues, but we must be willing to draw from the wisdom and the strength of our Church leaders, who continually seek and receive divine guidance.

Years ago President Joseph F. Smith gave us an answer and a promise when he said, "If you will gather your children around you once a week and instruct them in the gospel, they will not go astray."

The prophet Nephi's counsel applies today as it did in days of old. He admonished:

"... remember that it is upon the rock of our Redeemer . . . that ye must build your foundation; that when the devil shall send forth his mighty winds, . . . when all of his hail and his mighty storm shall beat upon you, it shall have no power over you . . . because of the rock upon which ye are built, which is a sure foundation, a foundation whereon if men build they cannot fall." (Hel. 5:12.)

May this be so with your family, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. □

President N. Eldon Tanner

We have just listened to Elder David B. Haight, Assistant to the Twelve.

Elder Bruce R. McConkie of the First Council of Seventy will now address us.

Elder Bruce R. McConkie

Of the First Council of the Seventy

I asked the Lord what he would have me say on this occasion and received the distinct and affirmative impression that I should bear testimony that Jesus Christ is the Son of the living God and that he was crucified for the sins of the world.

I have what is known as "the testimony of Jesus," which means that I know by personal revelation from the Holy Spirit to my soul that Jesus is the Lord; that he brought life and immortality to light through the gospel; and that he has restored in this day the fullness of his everlasting truth, so that we with the ancients can become inheritors of his presence in eternity.

Source of a testimony

Now a testimony comes from the Spirit of God. There is no other source. And when a testimony is borne, it has to be borne by the power of the Spirit. And so I desire and pray fervently that I may be guided by that power on this occasion, so that what I say will be the mind and will and voice of the Lord.

I desire to bear testimony to myself, to you as members of the Church, and to all the world. As I speak by the power of the Spirit, if my testimony is to sink into your hearts and be in you a well springing up unto eternal life—if your hearts are to burn within you, so that you will know of the truth and divinity of the words spoken—you must be guided by the power of the same Spirit, and so I pray that your hearts may be opened and that your souls will burn within you and you will know of the verity of what is said.

I shall take the liberty, both by way of testimony and to set the tone for what is involved, to read these words of my own composition:

I Believe in Christ

I believe in Christ, he is my king;
With all my heart to him I'll sing;
I'll raise my voice in praise and joy,
In grand amens my tongue employ.

I believe in Christ, he is God's Son;
On earth to dwell his soul did come;
He healed the sick, the dead he raised,
Good works were his, his name be praised.

I believe in Christ, O blessed name,
As Mary's Son he came to reign
'Mid mortal men, his earthly kin,
To save them from the woes of sin.

I believe in Christ, who marked the path,
Who did gain all his Father hath,
Who said to men: "Come, follow me,
That ye, my friends, with God may be."

I believe in Christ—my Lord, my God—
My feet he plants on gospel sod;
I'll worship him with all my might;
He is the source of truth and light.

I believe in Christ, he ransoms me;
From Satan's grasp he sets me free,
And I shall live with joy and love
In his eternal courts above.

I believe in Christ, he stands supreme;
From him I'll gain my fondest dream;
And while I strive through grief and pain,
His voice is heard: "Ye shall obtain."

I believe in Christ; so come what may,
With him I'll stand in that great day
When on this earth he comes again,
To rule among the sons of men.

The plan of salvation

Now, salvation originates with God our Heavenly Father. Indeed, salvation is to be like him, to inherit, possess, and receive what he enjoys. If we are to know God, we must believe as he believes, think as he thinks, and experience what he experiences.

The great plan of salvation was created by our Heavenly Father, to enable us to advance and progress and become like him. But salvation is centered in Christ. The plan called for the creation and peopling of this earth, so that we might come here and gain experiences that were not available in any other way.

We dwell with our Father in the eternities that preceded this life. We were present when the great cry went forth from him through the midst of eternity: "Whom shall I send to be my son, to work out the infinite and eternal atoning sacrifice, to put in full force and operation the terms and conditions of my eternal plan?" We were there, and in the poetic language of Elder Orson F. Whitney, we beheld:

"A stature mingling strength with grace
Of meek though Godlike mien,

The glory of whose countenance
Outshone the noonday sheen.
Whiter his hair than ocean spray,
Or frost of alpine hill.
He spake:—attention grew more grave,
The stillness e'en more still.

"'Father!'—the voice like music fell,
Clear as the murmuring flow
Of mountain streamlet trickling down
From heights of virgin snow.
'Father,' it said, 'since one must die,
Thy children to redeem,
Whilst earth, as yet unformed and void,
With pulsing life shall teem;

"'And mighty Michael foremost fall,
That mortal man may be,
And chosen Savior Thou must send,
Lo, here am I—send me!
I ask, I seek no recompense,
Save that which then were mine;
Mine be the willing sacrifice,
The endless glory Thine.'"

—Joseph Fielding Smith,
Way to Perfection, p. 52.

Centered in Christ

Now salvation is centered in the Lord Jesus Christ. In the language of the angel who came to King Benjamin: ". . . salvation was, and is, and is to come, in and through the atoning blood of Christ, the Lord Omnipotent." (Mosiah 3:18.)

Joseph Smith was asked, "What are the fundamental principles of your religion?" He answered: "The fundamental principles of our religion are the testimony of the Apostles and Prophets, concerning Jesus Christ, that He died, was buried, and rose again the third day, and ascended into heaven; and all other things which pertain to our religion are only appendages to it." (Documentary History of the Church, vol. 3, p. 30.)

That is to say, the atoning sacrifice of the Lord is the center of all things, as far as we are concerned. God our Heavenly Father created us, without which we would have no existence. And Christ the Son has redeemed us, without which there would be neither immortality nor eternal life.

Now the glorious thing that has happened in this day is that the heavens have been opened; that God has spoken again; that he has called living oracles, men who are apostles and prophets, to be his mouthpiece, to declare his mind and his purpose and his will to the world; and his message is the restored gospel of Jesus Christ; and it is administered in the Church which bears his name.

Testimonies of many

Now, my voice is the voice of testimony. I bear record of the truth and divinity of this work. But my voice is not alone. It is not one voice crying in a wilderness.

The testimony that I bear is just an echo of the testimonies that have been borne by faithful people from the spring of 1820, when the Father and the Son appeared to usher in this last great dispensation of eternal truth. And the testimony that I bear is but a harbinger of that testimony which yet will be borne by ten thousand times ten thousand people, redeemed out of every nation and kindred and tongue and people, redeemed by obedience to the message that God restored through the instrumentality of Joseph Smith in this day.

Saving power

And if there is one wondrous thing about this work, it is that it is true; that there is saving efficacy and virtue and force in the gospel of Jesus Christ; and that the power of God unto salvation is found here in the tops of these everlasting hills; and this glorious truth is spreading out to all the nations of the earth as rapidly as people in them accept the testimony and witness that is borne and believe the truths that our fellow representatives proclaim. This is a day of which God has said that all of gathered Israel shall be witnesses of his name. "... ye are my witnesses, saith the Lord, that I am God." (Isa. 43:12.)

This is a day when he has said that every elder in his kingdom, everyone who holds the holy priesthood, has power to speak in his name, to have the Holy Ghost bear record and enlighten his mind, and to proclaim the truths of salvation.

I proclaim these truths and desire in my heart to have men believe and obey. I think I can say with Nephi that the fullness of mine intent is to persuade men to come unto the God of Abraham and the God of Isaac and the God of Jacob and be saved—because the work is true, because salvation is in Christ. And God being our witness, it is true. In the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. □

Following Elder McConkie's address, the Choir sang "We Are Watchmen" without previous announcement.

President N. Eldon Tanner

We have just listened to Elder Bruce R. McConkie of the First Council of Seventy bear that powerful testimony. He was followed by the Tabernacle Choir singing "We Are Watchmen." The words of this song were written by President Joseph Fielding Smith.

Elder Boyd K. Packer of the Council of the Twelve will be our concluding speaker.

Elder Boyd K. Packer

Of the Council of the Twelve

Surely all of us have been conscious of the fact that there has been a very powerful spirit with us in this session this morning. Few times, I suppose, have I desired so much the sustaining power of the Spirit as I discuss a very delicate and difficult subject.

Why stay morally clean

There are many young people in our audience today. It is to them, particularly to the teenagers, that I speak. The subject should be of great interest to you: Why stay morally clean.

I approach the subject with deepest reverence. This may surprise some, for this subject is the most talked about, sung about, and joked about of any subject. Almost always it is talked about immodestly.

I intend to sustain modesty, not to offend it, as I venture to speak on this delicate subject.

Young people, my message is of very deep importance to you. It concerns your future happiness. Some things that I say may be new to you who have not read the scriptures.

Plan for mortal life

In the beginning, prior to your mortal birth, you lived with our Heavenly Father. He is real. He actually lives. There are those living upon the earth who bear witness of his existence. We have heard his servants do so in this session. He lives, and I bear testimony of it.

He knew you there. Because he loved you, he was anxious for your happiness and for your eternal growth. He wanted you to be able to choose freely and to grow through the power of correct choice, so that you may become much as he is. To achieve this, it was necessary for us to leave his presence. Something like going away to school. A plan was presented, and each agreed to leave the presence of our Heavenly Father to experience life in mortality.

Two great things were in store for us as we came into this world. One, we would receive a mortal body, created in the image of God. Through it, by proper control, we might achieve eternal life and happiness. Two, we would be tried and tested in such a way that we could grow in strength and in spiritual power.

Now this first purpose is wonderfully important, for this body given us will be resurrected and will serve us through the eternities.

Under the accepted plan, Adam and Eve were sent to the earth as our first parents. They could prepare physical bodies for the first spirits to be introduced into this life.

Power of creation

There was provided in our bodies—and this is sacred—a power of creation, a light, so to speak, that has the power to kindle other lights. This gift was to be used only within the sacred bonds of marriage. Through the exercise of this power of creation, a mortal body may be conceived, a spirit enter into it, and a new soul born into this life.

This power is good. It can create and sustain family life, and it is in family life that we find the fountains of happiness. It is given to virtually every individual who is born into mortality. It is a sacred and significant power, and I repeat, my young friends, that this power is good.

You who are teenagers, like every other son and daughter of Adam and Eve, have this power within you.

The power of creation—or may we say procreation—is not just an incidental part of the plan: it is essential to it.

Without it the plan could not proceed. The misuse of it may disrupt the plan.

Use of creative power

Much of the happiness that may come to you in this life will depend on how you use this sacred power of creation. The fact that you young men can become fathers and that you young women can become mothers is of utmost importance to you.

As this power develops within you, it will prompt you in the search for a companion and empower you to love and to hold him.

I repeat, this power to act in the creation of life is sacred. You can some day have a family of your own. Through the exercise of this power you can invite children to live with you—little boys and little girls who will be your very own—created, in a way, in your own image. You can establish a home, a dominion of power and influence and opportunity. This carries with it great responsibility.

This creative power carries with it strong desires and urges. You have felt them already in the changing of your attitudes and your interests.

Strong and constant feelings

As you move into your teens, almost of a sudden a boy or a girl becomes something new and intensely interesting. You will notice the changing of form and feature in your own body and in others. You will experience the early whispering of physical desire.

It was necessary that this power of creation have at least two dimensions: one, it must be strong; and two, it must be more or less constant.

This power must be strong, for most men by nature seek adventure. Except for the compelling persuasion of these feelings, men would be reluctant to accept the responsibility of sustaining a home and a family. This power must be constant, too, for it becomes a binding tie in family life.

You are old enough, I think, to look around you in the animal kingdom. You soon realize that where this power of creation is a fleeting thing, where it expresses itself only in season, there is no family life.

It is through this power that life continues. A world full of trials and fears and disappointments can be changed into a kingdom of hope and joy and happiness. Each time a child is born, the world somehow is renewed in innocence.

Importance of marriage

Again I want to tell you young people that this power within you is good. It is a gift from God our Father. In the righteous exercise of it as in nothing else, we may come close to him.

We can have, in a small way, much that our Father in heaven has as he governs us, his children. No greater school or testing place can be imagined.

Is it any wonder, then, that in the Church marriage is so sacred and so important? Can you understand why your marriage, which releases these powers of creation for your use, should be the most carefully planned, the most solemnly considered step in your life? Ought we to consider it unusual that the Lord directed that temples be constructed for the purpose of performing marriage ceremonies?

Enticements of evil one

Now there are other things that I will tell you as a warning. In the beginning there was one among us who rebelled at the plan of our Heavenly Father. He vowed to destroy and to disrupt the plan.

He was prevented from having a mortal body and was cast out—limited forever from establishing a kingdom of his own. He became satanically jealous. He knows that this power of creation is not just an incident to the plan, but a key to it.

He knows that if he can entice you to use this power prematurely, to use it too soon, or to misuse it in any way, you may well lose your opportunities for eternal progression.

Sunday, April 9

He is an actual being from the unseen world. He has great power. He will use it to persuade you to transgress those laws set up to protect the sacred powers of creation.

Changed tactics

In former times he was too cunning to confront one with an open invitation to be immoral. But rather, sneakily and quietly he would tempt young and old alike to think loosely of these sacred powers of creation. To bring down to a vulgar or to a common level that which is sacred and beautiful.

His tactics have changed now. He describes it as only an appetite to be satisfied. He teaches that there are no attendant responsibilities to the use of this power. Pleasure, he will tell you, is its sole purpose.

His devilish invitations appear on billboards. They are coined into jokes and written into the lyrics of songs. They are acted out on television and at theaters. They will stare at you now from most magazines. There are magazines—you know the word, pornography—open, wicked persuasions to pervert and misuse this sacred power.

You grow up in a society where before you is the constant invitation to tamper with these sacred powers.

Words of counsel

I want to counsel you and I want you to remember these words.

Do not let anyone at all touch or handle your body, not anyone! Those who tell you otherwise proselyte you to share their guilt. We teach you to maintain your innocence.

Turn away from any who would persuade you to experiment with these life-giving powers.

That such indulgence is widely accepted in society today is not enough! For both parties to willingly consent to such indulgence is not enough!

To imagine that it is a normal expression of affection is not enough to make it right.

The only righteous use of this sacred power is within the covenant of marriage.

Never misuse these sacred powers.

And now, my young friends, I must tell you soberly and seriously that God has declared in unmistakable language that misery and sorrow will follow the violation of the laws of chastity. "... wickedness never was happiness." (Al. 41:10.)

These laws were set up to guide all of his children in the use of this gift.

He does not have to be spiteful or vengeful in order that punishment will come from the breaking of the moral code. The laws are established of themselves.

Crowning glory awaits you if you live worthily. The loss of the crown may well be punishment enough. Often, very often, we are punished as much by our sins as we are for them.

Cleansing power

I am sure that within the sound of my voice there is more than one young person who already has fallen into transgression. Some of you young people, I am sure, almost innocent of any intent, but persuaded by the enticements and the temptations, already have misused this power.

Know then, my young friends, that there is a great cleansing power. And know that you can be clean.

If you are outside the Church, the covenant of baptism itself represents, among other things, a washing and a cleansing.

For those of you inside the Church there is a way, not entirely painless, but certainly possible. You can stand clean and spotless before Him. Guilt will be gone, and you can be at peace. Go to your bishop. He holds the key to this cleansing power.

Righteous family life

Then one day you can know the full and righteous expression of these powers and the attendant happiness and joy in righteous family life. In due time, within the bonds of the marriage covenant, you can yield yourselves to those sacred expressions of love which have as their fulfillment the generation of life itself.

Someday you will hold a little boy or a little girl in your arms and know that two of you have acted in partnership with our Heavenly Father in the creation of life. Because the youngster belongs to you, you may then come to love someone more than you love yourself.

This experience can come, insofar as I know, only through having children of your own or perhaps through fostering children born of another and yet drawn close into family covenants.

Some of you may not experience the blessings of marriage. Protect nonetheless these sacred powers of creation, for there is a great power of compensation that may well apply to you.

Meaning of fatherhood

Through this loving one more than you love yourself, you become truly Christian. Then you know, as few others know, what the word Father means when it is spoken of in the scriptures. You may then feel something of the love and concern that he has for us.

It should have great meaning that of all the titles of respect and honor and admiration that could be given him, God himself, he who is the highest of all, chose to be addressed simply as Father.

Key to Happiness

Protect and guard your gift. Your actual happiness is at stake. Eternal family life, now only in your anticipations and dreams, can be achieved because our Heavenly Father has bestowed this choicest gift of all upon you—this power of creation. It is the very key to happiness. Hold this gift as sacred and pure. Use it only as the Lord has directed.

My young friends, there is much happiness and joy to be found in this life. I can testify of that.

I picture you with a companion whom you love and who loves you. I picture you at the marriage altar, entering into covenants that are sacred. I picture you in a home where love has its fulfillment. I picture you with little children about you and see your love growing with them.

I cannot frame this picture. I would not if I could, for it has no bounds. Your happiness will have no ends if you obey his laws.

I pray God's blessings upon you, our youth. May our Heavenly Father watch over you and sustain you, that in the expression of this sacred gift you may draw close to him. He lives. He is our Father. Of this I bear witness in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. □

Following Elder Packer's remarks, the Choir sang "The Voice of God Again Is Heard" without announcement.

President N. Eldon Tanner

We express our appreciation to the General Authorities who have spoken to us, and to the Tabernacle Choir for their inspirational music.

We are grateful to the owners and managers of over 300 television and radio stations for offering their facilities as a public service to make the proceedings of this conference available to millions throughout many areas of the world.

This session has been carried from the Tabernacle over direct oceanic cables to a large number of members and friends assembled in chapels throughout Great Britain, Germany, France, Holland, Belgium and Austria.

We shall conclude this sixth session of the conference with the Tabernacle Choir singing "The Hallelujah Chorus," after which the benediction will be pronounced by President G. Marion Hinckley, president of the Utah West Stake. This conference will then stand adjourned until 2:00 this afternoon.

The Tabernacle Choir sang "The Hallelujah Chorus."

President G. Marion Hinckley of the Utah West Stake offered the closing prayer.

The conference was adjourned until 2 o'clock P.M.

THIRD DAY AFTERNOON MEETING

SEVENTH SESSION

The seventh and concluding session of the General Conference began at 2 o'clock P.M. on Sunday, April 9, 1972.

President Joseph Fielding Smith presided, and President Harold B. Lee, first counselor in the First Presidency, conducted the meeting.

The choral numbers were provided by the Tabernacle Choir, with Jay E. Welch conducting, and Robert Cundick at the organ.

President Lee made the following remarks at the beginning of the session:

President Harold B. Lee

Members of the Church are convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City, Utah in the seventh and last general session of the 142nd Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

This afternoon many television and radio stations throughout the western part of the United States will carry the proceedings of this session of the conference.

Sessions of this conference have been received by millions in the United States and Canada over hundreds of radio and television stations cooperating to provide the extensive coverage of this conference.

Relayed broadcasts of both sessions today will be scheduled by Radio Stations KSL, KIRO at Seattle, KMBZ at Kansas City, and WRFM at New York City.

We extend a cordial welcome to all present this afternoon—special guests, educational leaders, our regional representatives and stake presidencies, temple presidencies, bishoprics, members of the Church, and many friends everywhere who are listening in by radio and television.

The Tabernacle Choir, with Jay E. Welch conducting and Robert Cundick at the organ, will begin this service by singing, "The Seer, Joseph the Seer."

The invocation will then be offered by Elder Wilburn C. West, Regional Representative of the Twelve.

The Tabernacle Choir sang the number, "The Seer, Joseph the Seer."

The invocation was offered by Elder Wilburn C. West, Regional Representative of the Twelve.

President Lee

The Tabernacle Choir, under the direction of Jay E. Welch, will now sing, "Oh How Lovely Was the Morning," after which Elder LeGrand Richards of the Council of the Twelve will speak to us.

The hymn, "Oh How Lovely Was the Morning," was sung by the Tabernacle Choir.

President Lee

We shall now hear from Elder LeGrand Richards of the Council of the Twelve. He will be followed by Elder Eldred G. Smith, Patriarch to the Church.

Elder LeGrand Richards

Of the Council of the Twelve

I feel it a great honor, brothers and sisters, to share with you a few moments in this the last session of this inspired conference. I am sure, as we have listened to the messages of our brethren during these various sessions, we can't help but feel a deep appreciation in our hearts that the Lord saw fit to institute in his restored Church the practice of holding conferences.

Inspiring counsel

Just think of the inspiring counsel and advice we have had here to help us put our own lives in order, the lives of our loved ones, of our families, and of the young people. It has taught us how to treat our neighbors and friends, and in all that has been said here today, we have learned of the responsibilities that are ours in the political affairs in which we should participate in our own communities.

We have just listened to this lovely song, so beautifully rendered by our choir, "Oh, How Lovely Was the Morning." Just think, that is the most important message to go out to all the world today. In President Smith's opening address he said, "The Lord's work shall triumph. No power on earth can prevent the spread of truth and the preaching of the gospel in every nation."

In the general priesthood meeting last night he added, "The gospel shall roll forth until it shall fill the whole earth." If the gospel is going to roll forth and fill the whole earth, what a responsibility we Latter-day Saints have, with our families, in helping it to roll forth into all the earth. There is no message in this world today that could be told that would be as valuable to our neighbors and our friends who are not members of this church as to bear witness of this great event, about which the choir has just sung.

A chosen generation

I think of the words of the apostle Peter of old. He said to the saints of his day:

"... ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; [Why?] that ye should shew forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvellous light." (1 Pet. 2:9.)

We have been admonished in this conference to let our light so shine, as Jesus said, that others seeing our good works may be led to glorify our Father which is in heaven. (See Matt. 5:16.)

Paul tells us: "... faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." (Rom. 10:17.)

"... and how shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach, except they be sent? ..." (Rom. 10:14-15.)

Gospel to be preached

Therefore, there rests upon this people the great responsibility of bearing witness to the entire world of what the Lord has done in restoring his truth to the earth in this dispensation.

When Jesus was asked by his disciples for the sign of his second coming, you will recall he told them about the wars and rumors of wars, and pestilence, and earthquakes, and famine, and that nation should rise against nation. And then he added:

Sunday, April 9

"And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." (Matt. 24:14.)

Where would one look today to find that gospel of the kingdom that Jesus referred to? Not according to man's interpretation of the scriptures, but where the divine power rests, such as Jesus gave to his Twelve when he said:

"Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you. . . ." (John 15:16.)

". . . and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven. . . ." (Matt. 16:19.)

Power and authority

Anybody could organize a church and take from the scriptures certain passages and base their church upon that, but how can they take a living branch from a dead tree? How can they put in it the power and the authority to act in the name of the Lord?

They couldn't do that any more than they could act for the mayor of the city, the governor of the state, or the president of the United States, without being duly commissioned so to do. Neither can any work effectively in the kingdom of our Father in heaven unless they have divine authority given to them by those who have the right to so convey it.

And so we stand here as witnesses of the restoration of the gospel and bear our witness to all the world that we do know that Christ lives, that our Father lives, that they have visited this earth. As was sung in that song about the Prophet Joseph, he announced that in answer to his inquiry as to which of all the churches he should join, he was told he should join none of them, for they taught for doctrines the commandments or precepts of men.

Orson F. Whitney's experience

I think if people were just open-minded, it wouldn't be so hard for them to know where to find the truth. Of course, we take the Bible as our guide to help us in our search for the truth. I have always been greatly impressed by the experience that Elder Orson F. Whitney had. He was a member of the Quorum of the Twelve, and he related this in one of our conferences. I would like to read it to you. He said:

"Many years ago a learned man, a member of the Roman Catholic Church, came to Utah and spoke from the stand of the Salt Lake Tabernacle. I became well-acquainted with him, and we conversed freely and frankly. A great scholar, with perhaps a dozen languages at his tongue's end, he seemed to know all about theology, law, literature, science and philosophy. One day he said to me: 'You Mormons are all ignoramuses. You don't even know the strength of your own position. It is so strong that there is only one other tenable in the whole Christian world, and that is the position of the Catholic Church. The issue is between Catholicism and Mormonism. If we are right, you are wrong; if you are right, we are wrong; and that's all there is to it. The Protestants haven't a leg to stand on. For, if we are wrong, they are wrong with us, since they were a part of us and went out from us; while if we are right, they are apostates whom we cut off long ago. If we have the apostolic succession from St. Peter, as we claim, there is no need of Joseph Smith and Mormonism; but if we have not that succession, then such a man as Joseph Smith was necessary, and Mormonism's attitude is the only consistent one. It is either the perpetuation of the gospel from ancient times, or the restoration of the gospel in latter days.'" (LeGrand Richards, A Marvelous Work and a Wonder [Deseret Book Co., 1950], pp. 3-4.)

It seems to me that if people would just think, they must come to the conclusion that this is a correct statement, if they want to find the gospel that Jesus said is the everlasting gospel that should be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations before he would come again to the earth.

Apostasy predicted

One can't study the holy scriptures without knowing that the prophets have declared an apostasy from the original church. When John the Revelator was banished on the Isle of Patmos, the angel of the Lord appeared to him and said to him: "Come up hither, and I will shew thee things which must be hereafter." (Rev. 4:1.)

Then he showed him all things from the war in heaven to the final winding-up scene, and he showed him the power that would be given to Satan to make war with the saints (and the saints were the followers of Christ in his church); and he said that power was given him over all kindreds and tongues and nations. (See Rev. 13:7.) Why should that be in the holy scriptures if the gospel was to remain upon the earth from the days of St. Peter down to the present time?

Paul was constantly warning the people in his day that they should not look for the coming of Jesus until there should be a falling away, and the man of sin would be revealed. (See 2 Thess. 2:1-4.) And others of the prophets have likewise testified of the day when there should be a famine in the land. The prophet Amos said:

"Behold, the days come, saith the Lord God, that I will send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the Lord:

"And they shall wander from sea to sea, and from the north even to the east, they shall run to and fro to seek the word of the Lord, and shall not find it." (Amos 8:11-12.)

Why? Because it was not upon the earth to be found.

If the gospel were to remain upon the earth, then when the angel of the Lord showed John that Satan would make war with the saints and overcome all kindreds and tongues and nations, he would have had to make an exception for those who still possessed the everlasting gospel. That is a witness that the truth should not be upon the earth at that time.

Promises of restoration

The scriptures are replete with promises of a restoration in the latter days. I like the statement by Peter following the day of Pentecost, when he said to those who had put to death the Christ:

"Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord;

"And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you:

"Whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." (Acts 3:19-21.)

If Peter was a prophet of God, we can't look forward to the second coming of Christ, and neither can the world, without a restitution—and not a reformation. There is a great difference between remodeling an old house and building a new one. As far as I know, in all the missionary work that I have done, there is no other church in this world that claims a restitution of all things, as was spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began.

This event we heard sung by the choir—for the coming of the Father and the Son—was followed by Moroni, a prophet who lived upon this earth 400 years after the time of Christ, and he brought the plates from which the Book of Mormon was translated.

Priesthood restored

John the Baptist, who was beheaded for the testimony of Jesus, returned as a resurrected being and conferred upon Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery the Aaronic Priesthood, with power to baptize by immersion for the remission of sins. He told them that later the Melchizedek Priesthood would be restored, which would be the power to administer the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost.

Sunday, April 9

Peter, James, and John, the apostles of the Lord Jesus Christ, who were with him on the Mount of Transfiguration, returned and brought back that Melchizedek Priesthood. Could all the money in the world buy things that would mean as much to the children of our Father in heaven as these events that transpired? And what could come to us individually, and to our families and to our friends and our loved ones, like the coming of these holy messengers?

Coming of Elijah

And that isn't all. Then there came Elijah the Prophet, of whom Malachi spoke, that were it not for his coming before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord, the whole earth would be utterly wasted at his coming. He said:

"And he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse." (Mal. 4:6.)

That opened the door for an understanding of the words of the apostle Paul, when he said that the Lord had revealed the mystery of his will unto him.

"That in the dispensation of the fulness of times he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth. . . ." (Eph. 1:10.)

We live in the dispensation of the fulness of times, and the coming of Elijah has brought the keys of his mission, and that is why we build these holy temples. That is why we have this great genealogical program, the like of which can't be found anywhere in all this world. And so the prophets have foreseen the coming of these holy prophets.

John's vision

John, while he was on the Isle of Patmos, didn't only see the power that Satan would have to make war with the saints and to reign over them all, but he "saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people." (Rev. 14:6.)

This would not have been necessary if there had been a continuation of the gospel. And then he said: "Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come. . . ." (Rev. 14:7.) And we live in the day of his judgment.

Then he adds: ". . . and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters." (Rev. 14:7.)

The true and living God

At the time that Joseph Smith had his marvelous vision, there wasn't a church in the world worshipping the God who made the heavens and the earth and the sea and the fountains of waters, and created man in his own image. They worshiped an essence everywhere present. They described him as being without body, parts, or passions, who sits on the top of a topless throne, and that is about the best explanation of nothing as a person could write. If he doesn't have a body, how could he speak? How could he hear? How could he understand and talk?

Moses made mention of this when he was leading the children of Israel into the promised land. He told them that they would not remain there long, but that they would be scattered among the nations, and then he said: "And there ye shall serve gods, the work of men's hands, wood and stone, which neither see, nor hear, nor eat, nor smell." (Deut. 4:28.)

That is the kind of god this world was worshipping at the time Joseph Smith had his marvelous vision.

But Moses saw something more. He saw that in the latter days (and we live in the latter days), if his people would search for him, they should surely find him. (See Deut. 4:29.) And Joseph Smith, answering that admonition in James, "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him" (Jas. 1:5), went and sought after him, as Moses advised, and he found the true and the living God. We have a testimony to bear to all of the world to this event.

The true gospel

I think of the words of the apostle Paul when he said that he determined to know nothing but Jesus and him crucified. (See 1 Cor. 2:2.) That doesn't mean that he didn't know the old prophets or appreciate them, but a new day had come.

The Son of God had come, of whom the prophets had spoken, and then he said: "... for necessity is laid upon me; yea, woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel!" (1 Cor. 9:16.)

In that same sense, we know nothing but the restoration of the gospel, that it was brought by the Son of Man himself, so that there is no separation from the prophets of this dispensation, and woe be unto us if we share not these marvelous truths with the world!

Brothers and sisters, I know that this is the work of God the Eternal Father. It is the greatest movement in all the world today. There isn't an honest man or an honest woman in this world, who really loves the Lord, who wouldn't join this church if they would take time to find out what it is and would ask God the Eternal Father, who will not mislead them.

That is my witness and testimony to you, and I leave it in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen. □

President Harold B. Lee

We have just listened to Elder LeGrand Richards of the Council of the Twelve, and one of the great missionaries of our time.

We shall now hear from Elder Eldred G. Smith, Patriarch to the Church. He will be followed by Elder A. Theodore Tuttle of the First Council of Seventy.

Elder Eldred G. Smith

Patriarch to the Church

In that upper room in Jerusalem where the Last Supper was held, Jesus gave his disciples considerable instructions. Among many things he taught them, he said: "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." (John 14:27.)

Again he said: "These things I have spoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation: but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." (John 16:33.)

Peace

Peace is a much-used word nowadays. We hear it on every side, in every newspaper, in every magazine. Men are truly running to and fro all over the earth looking for peace. We think of it as a modern form of salutation, but it is as old as mankind.

The people of biblical lands have always greeted each other with "Peace be unto you" or "Peace be with you." Yet that little section of the earth has always been torn by wars and by captivity and bondage for the people, under a succession of rulers. At the time of Christ, they were under the rule of the Roman Empire.

Naturally, the Jews expected a "Redeemer," a "Savior," and thought he was to release them from bondage. Isaiah wrote:

"For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace." (Isa. 9:6.)

Peace was not brought to this land called the Holy Land. Even today the hulks of old tanks and other war machines lie rusting on the sides of the roads. Ever-present soldiers keep vigilant watch along the borders. Nor has peace come to the rest of the world. Yet, in the Sermon on the Mount, Christ taught peace. He said, "Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God." (Matt. 5:9.)

Peace of Christ

Speaking to his disciples, Jesus said: "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." (John 14:27.)

What kind of peace did Christ mean? I think his own acts explain what he meant.

After the Last Supper, when Christ had finished his instructions to the apostles, John wrote:

"When Jesus had spoken these words, he went forth with his disciples over the brook Cedron, where was a garden, into the which he entered, and his disciples.

"And Judas also, which betrayed him, knew the place: for Jesus oftentimes resorted thither with his disciples.

"Judas then, having received a band of men and officers from the chief priests and Pharisees, cometh thither with lanterns and torches and weapons.

"Jesus therefore, knowing all things that should come upon him, went forth, and said unto them, Whom seek ye?

"They answered him, Jesus of Nazareth. Jesus saith unto them, I am he. And Judas also, which betrayed him, stood with them.

"As soon then as he had said unto them, I am he, they went backward, and fell to the ground.

"Then asked he them again, Whom seek ye? And they said, Jesus of Nazareth.

"Jesus answered, I have told you that I am he: if therefore ye seek me, let these go their way." (John 18:1-8.)

Can you match that display of calmness? of peace? Here they are coming to take a man they want to kill, and he as much as says, "Here I am, take me, but let my friends go."

Then when he stood before Pilate, under the pressure of rigid questioning, Pilate could not raise his ire. In perfect peace, he answered his questions. Pilate found no wrong in him.

After he was crucified and then resurrected, his first message to his disciples was, "Peace be unto you." (John 20:21.)

The peace within

How is it that we have not discovered the secret of peace when we have been looking for it all through the ages? I'll tell you. We are looking for someone to create it for us—to bring it to us. Edna St. Vincent Millay said: "There is no peace on earth today, save the peace in the heart at home with God. . . . No man can be at peace with his neighbor who is not at peace with himself. . . ." (Conversations at Midnight, Collected Poems, Harper & Row, Copyright 1937 and 1964.)

Have you experienced that peace within you because you helped your neighbor rake his lawn or mow his lawn? Have you felt that peace within because you helped your neighbor pick his fruit or harvest his crops? Have you witnessed that peace within because you shoveled the snow off your neighbor's walks? Have you felt that peace which came because you helped someone solve a problem and get a new lease on life? Have you "cheered up the sad, and made someone feel glad"?

A guilty conscience

Did you ever have a guilty conscience? Do you know the turmoil and tumult it can bring to your very soul? It can cause mental and even physical illness. Do you know the blessed relief of rectifying whatever caused this feeling? It may have been an unkind word, a thoughtless act, or it may have gone deeper than that. Until you have adjusted whatever causes a guilty conscience, you cannot hope for peace of mind.

Do you, at this time, have unkind feelings or less than love in your heart for a friend, a neighbor, or any of God's children? Try doing something extra nice for that person, and keep it up until all the bitterness has gone from your heart.

Peace from service

Have you taught a Sunday School class and felt when you finished that you had really taught someone some principle of the gospel that had really helped him or given him a brighter look on life? Remember the feeling of peace and joy that followed? Have you ever taught someone the gospel and received that feeling of joy because he had accepted what you had been teaching? The thrill of missionary work!

Have you sensed the thrill, the peace within your soul, that comes from a knowledge of the gospel and from accepting and living in accordance with the teachings of the gospel of Jesus Christ? Have you felt the peace from doing temple work, vicarious work for the dead?

A key to peace, then, is service. Christ said: "But he that is greatest among you shall be your servant." (Matt. 23:11.)

Have you ever been aware that all the use of priesthood is service to someone else? Haven't you always had a good feeling of peace within when you have been fulfilling your priesthood duty?

Peace, then, comes from service.

The Lord has said: "For behold, this is my work and my glory—to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man." (Moses 1:39.)

Is this not the ultimate of service? To become as God is, then, we must eliminate enmity, greed, and selfishness, and all our efforts must be in service to others. The Lord said: ". . . he who doeth the works of righteousness shall receive his reward, even peace in this world, and eternal life in the world to come." (D&C 59:23.)

Peace of Joseph Smith

Joseph Smith was an example of utmost peace in the face of tribulation. Though he had been arrested and acquitted thirty-seven times, he knew this time he would not return. On the way from Nauvoo to Carthage, Joseph Smith said:

"I am going like a lamb to the slaughter; but I am calm as a summer's morning; I have a conscience void of offense toward God and towards all men. I shall die innocent, and it shall yet be said of me—he was murdered in cold blood." (Documentary History of the Church, vol. 6, p. 630.)

Then at Carthage, Joseph wrote to his wife, Emma, the following: "I am very much resigned to my lot, knowing I am justified, and have done the best that could be done. Give my love to the children . . . and all who inquire after me. . . . May God bless you all." (DHC, vol. 6, p. 605.)

Isaiah says: "And the work of righteousness shall be peace; and the effect of righteousness quietness and assurance for ever" (Isa. 32:17)—the assurance of knowing you are living in accordance with God's will.

"We bring you peace"

Our guide on a recent tour in the Holy Land, who is a Jordanian Arab and a Greek Orthodox Catholic by the name of Sari Rabadi, taught us a little Arabian song: "Havāno, shalo, malechem," which translated means: "We bring you peace."

Yes, Sari, we say to you and to all the world, we bring you peace. We bring you the peace of the gospel, that peace which Christ meant when he said, ". . . my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. . . ." (John 14:27.)

If each person would have peace within his soul, then there would be peace in the family. If there is peace in each family, then there is peace in the nation. If there is peace in the nations, there is peace in the world.

Let us not just sing, "Let there be peace on earth and let it begin with me," but let us mean it. Make it my goal—your goal.

The way to peace

When the Savior comes again—and he will come—he will bring peace only as we will accept and follow his teachings of service to others and eliminate enmity and unrighteousness.

That angel which John saw "fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth" (Rev. 14:6) has already come. The gospel of Jesus Christ has been established on the earth, never again to be taken from the earth.

His kingdom is already here on earth and is growing rapidly to prepare for his coming. Yes, he shall surely come and bring peace to the earth, but only as we are willing to follow his teachings. This is his work, and his kingdom, which is the only way to world peace and eternal peace. I so testify in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. □

President Harold B. Lee

Elder Eldred G. Smith, Patriarch to the Church, has just spoken to us.

Elder A. Theodore Tuttle of the First Council of Seventy will now address us.

Elder A. Theodore Tuttle

Of the First Council of the Seventy

A major recurring theme of this conference, including the seminar of the Regional Representatives of the Twelve, mentioned either directly or indirectly by nearly every speaker, has been the importance and necessity of the priesthood. I want to address my remarks to this subject. The vitality and power of the priesthood on the earth today are greater than at any other period in the world's history.

Revelation on priesthood

On March 28, 1835, in Kirtland, Ohio, in a meeting with the Council of the Twelve, the Prophet Joseph received a singularly important revelation on priesthood:

"There are, in the church, two priesthoods, namely, the Melchizedek and Aaronic. . . .

"Why the first is called the Melchizedek Priesthood is because Melchizedek was such a great high priest.

"Before his day it was called the Holy Priesthood, after the Order of the Son of God.

"All other authorities or offices in the church are appendages to this priesthood." (D&C 107:1-3, 5.)

It is vital that we understand this foregoing thought. President Joseph F. Smith said:

"There is no office growing out of this Priesthood that is or can be greater than the Priesthood itself. It is from the Priesthood that the office derives its authority and power. No office gives authority to the Priesthood. No office adds to the power of the Priesthood. But, all offices in the Church derive their power, their virtue, their authority, from the Priesthood. If our brethren would get this principle thoroughly established in their minds, there would be less misunderstanding in relation to the functions of government in the Church than there is." (Gospel Doctrine [Deseret Book Co., 1939], p. 148.)

Three presiding quorums

There are three presiding quorums in the Church chosen from the body of the priesthood:

"Of necessity there are presidents, or presiding officers growing out of . . . those who are ordained to the several offices in these two priesthoods.

"Of the Melchizedek Priesthood, three Presiding High Priests, chosen by the body, appointed and ordained to that office, and upheld by the confidence, faith, and prayer of the church, form a quorum of the Presidency of the Church.

"The twelve traveling councilors are called to be the Twelve Apostles, or special witnesses of the name of Christ in all the world— . . .

"And they form a quorum, equal in authority and power to the three presidents previously mentioned.

"The Seventy are to act in the name of the Lord, under the direction of the Twelve . . . in building up the church and regulating all the affairs of the same in all nations. . . ." (D&C 107:21-24, 34.)

The government of God

What is the priesthood? President John Taylor said:

". . . it is the government of God, whether on earth or in the heavens, for it is by that power, agency, or principle that all things are governed on earth or in the heavens, and by that power that all things are upheld and sustained. It governs all things—it directs all things—it sustains all things—and has to do with all things that God and truth are associated with. It is the power of God delegated to intelligences in the heavens and to men on the earth. . . ." (The Gospel Kingdom [Bookcraft, 1943], p. 129.)

In order to gain exaltation a man must obtain, then magnify, the holy priesthood.

"For whoso is faithful unto the obtaining these two priesthoods of which I have spoken, and the magnifying their calling, are sanctified by the Spirit unto the renewing of their bodies.

"They become . . . the elect of God.

"And . . . therefore all that my Father hath shall be given unto him.

"And this is according to the oath and covenant which belongeth to the priesthood." (D&C 84:33-34, 38-39.)

But we must remember that it is on condition of magnifying the priesthood we obtain. There is great energy being expended and much emphasis given to the operation and administration of this priesthood in the Church today.

"Therefore, let every man stand in his own office, and labor in his own calling; . . . that the system may be kept perfect." (D&C 84:109-110.)

Responsibility of high priests

Standing in their responsibility, the high priests in the Church today have the overall priesthood responsibility to do genealogical research and perform temple ordinances. Through the priesthood they are to see to it that everyone in the Church, in proper time and order, saves his kindred dead. This means that all members are to—

1. have their personal book of remembrance.
2. complete research on at least their four generations.
3. live worthy to obtain a temple recommend.
4. attend to temple ordinances for the dead.

Labor of seventies

The seventy are to stand in their own office and labor in their own calling, which is priesthood missionary work. The seventy, as missionaries, are specialists in teaching. As members, our strength is in finding and fellowshiping. United we form a productive team to carry the message of the restoration to all of our Father's children.

Sunday, April 9

Place of elders

Elders standing in their office and calling have a place in welfare work. However, they share a major responsibility for the perfecting of the Saints through priesthood home teaching. The president of the elders quorum has the unique calling to administer the gospel to more people in the ward than anyone else except the bishop. Priesthood home teachers are to—"... visit the house of each member, and exhort them to pray vocally and in secret and attend to all family duties.

"... watch over the church always, and be with and strengthen them;

"... see that there is no iniquity in the church, neither hardness with each other, neither lying, backbiting, nor evil speaking;

"And see that the church meet together often, and also see that all the members do their duty." (D&C 20:47, 53-55.)

Strengthening the home

Each one of these specific duties is designed by the Lord to strengthen the home. You will notice that the word teach is mentioned only indirectly in this scriptural instruction. Perhaps if we as home teachers could catch the whole vision of what our duty is, then the teaching would eventually be done by the ones the Lord ordained to give instruction in the home.

Though priesthood home teaching has not yet come into the dignity of its calling, we may yet come to understand that it is one of the loftiest concepts of service in the Church. One thing is certain: it is service that saves.

The priesthood in the Church is a mighty bulwark against the advance of evil. There is no power on earth that can withstand the thrust of the adversary except a body of righteous men who honor their priesthood in their homes.

The Aaronic Priesthood

The young men of the Aaronic Priesthood have not been neglected. The Lord in his wisdom has seen fit to call you young men early in your lives to service in the kingdom. Sometimes, because you do not understand the program of the Church, you think that the Church is neglecting the vital issues. In the vernacular, you "want a piece of the action."

In this church there is a call to youth and there is plenty to do, if you will but follow the counsel of your leaders. It is not intended that you just "take the bit in your mouth" and run. A wise saying aptly applies: "The hand that holds the reins is not the power that pulls the load." The vigor and energy of youth united with the wisdom of mature men make a great team. That is the way the Lord has designed the Aaronic and Melchizedek Priesthoods to work together.

Why do we call upon you to live in purity? So that you will be fit servants to make your contribution to the kingdom of God.

Priesthood leadership

Sixty-six years ago President Joseph F. Smith said:

"We expect to see the day, if we live long enough (and if some of us don't live long enough to see it, there are others who will), when every council of the Priesthood in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will understand its duty; will assume its own responsibility, will magnify its calling, and fill its place in the Church, to the uttermost, according to the intelligence and ability possessed by it. When that day shall come, there will not be so much necessity for work which is now being done by the auxiliary organizations, because it will be done by the regular quorums of the Priesthood. The Lord designed and comprehended it from the beginning, and He made provision in the Church whereby every need may be met and satisfied through the regular organizations of the Priesthood." (Conference Report, April 1906, p. 3.)

We are just beginning to see the day when the strongest men in each office of the priesthood are to be called to priesthood leadership.

Clarion call to go forward

We call upon those of you who are now prospective elders to rise to your potential. Become the spiritual leaders in your home. Take upon yourselves the mantle of this responsibility. Perform the service that will save and exalt you and your loved ones in the kingdom of God. This is no ordinary call to serve, nor is this a frantic appeal. It is a solemn warning to get your personal life in order; to regulate the affairs of your family; to reach out to serve your fellowmen and bless the lives of others through this divine power.

This church with its inspired leadership is already battling the adversary. The struggle in which we are engaged is not some distant day in the future. It is now! If we do not see this clearly, it is because we do not understand the signals that come from the brethren today.

After listening to conference for three days, the message of this conference is clear. It is to arise, assume your priesthood responsibility, and carry off the work of the Lord. This has not been a common conference. Nor is it just "the best conference ever." We have heard a clarion call to repent, to begin now to magnify this great power which is vouchsafed in this church.

Oh, my brethren, I plead with you to rise up. Shake off the shackles of indolence and sloth and go forward.

In the encouraging words of the Prophet Joseph: "Brethren, shall we not go on in so great a cause? Go forward and not backward. Courage, brethren; and on, on to the victory! . . ." (D&C 128:22.)

Testimony

I want to testify that Jesus is the Christ. I testify that he is the great High Priest forever. I testify that God the Father and his Son Jesus Christ did appear to the Prophet Joseph Smith and instituted anew in this day the church of Jesus Christ, empowering him with God's power.

I testify that these men hold the keys of the holy priesthood, that there is power and inspiration in what these Brethren say. There is no other group of men in all the world like these men. They have not come to position through a political party, nor have they won a popularity contest. They have been called by prophecy and by the laying on of hands. Things will be well with us and ours to the extent that we listen to and follow their inspired counsel. In the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. □

President Harold B. Lee

Elder A. Theodore Tuttle of the First Council of Seventy has just spoken to us.

The congregation and choir will now join in singing, "Israel, Israel, God Is Calling."

After the singing, Elder Bernard P. Brockbank, Assistant to the Twelve, will address us.

The hymn, "Israel, Israel, God Is Calling," was sung by the congregation and choir.

President Lee

Elder Bernard P. Brockbank, Assistant to the Twelve, will now address us. He will be followed by Elder Sterling W. Sill, Assistant to the Twelve.

Elder Bernard P. Brockbank

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

My dear brothers and sisters, we have been fed the bread of life at this conference, the bread that feeds the spirit and brings out the divine nature in the human soul. The bread of life is built around Jesus Christ and his gospel of love and salvation.

A few years ago on our television set we had a set of rabbit ears for an antenna, and the pictures and messages were not clear. They were foggy and there was what they call "snow" on the set. Often we were unable to understand the message.

You cannot pick up the celestial message, the bread of life, the word of God, with rabbit ears on your human mind, your human body; the message will not be clear. You need your antenna high, well placed, and turned toward the divine message. You need to keep the mind clear and focused on the heavenly message. It takes time to plan and install in the human heart and mind an antenna to pick up spiritual revelation and inspiration from God. You must be in tune. If you're out of tune, you're out of harmony, and static and wrong impressions come from satanic and worldly sources.

Knowing God

Jesus Christ said, "... this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent." (John 17:3.)

We can receive eternal life and salvation from knowing the only true God and Jesus Christ, whom he has sent. Many believe that there is a God, many say that they know there is a God, but many do not act like they know God. There is a great difference in believing or knowing that there is a God and in knowing God. When we claim that we know God, it bears great responsibility, and an apostle has given us information to check our knowledge of God.

The apostle John said:

"And hereby we do know that we know him, if we keep his commandments.

"He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him.

"But whoso keepeth his word, in him verily is the love of God perfected: hereby know we that we are in him.

"He that saith he abideth in him ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked." (1 John 2:3-6.)

The apostle James said, "Thou believest that there is one God; thou doest well: the devils also believe, and tremble." (Jas. 2:19.)

Jesus was recognized by a man possessed of the devil, and the devil spoke out and said, "... I know thee who thou art, the Holy One of God." (Mark 1:24.) The devils know God but do not respect his doctrine or keep his commandments.

Source of knowledge

Knowing God is related to keeping his commandments. Knowing God must come by direct revelation from God. You cannot know by the power of flesh and blood. This great lesson is taught by Jesus Christ in this message: The disciples were asked by Jesus Christ, "Whom say ye that I am?

"And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.

"And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, Simon Barjona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven.

"And I say also unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." (Matt. 16:15-18.)

The Lord has indicated that the gates of hell cannot prevail against revelation from him to any one of his children who desires to know the living God and to know the living Jesus Christ. This is available by divine commitment and by divine will, that for anyone desiring to know God the Eternal Father and to know his Son Jesus Christ, God is under commitment and the gates of hell cannot prevail against that commitment; and it will be revealed through the power and principle of revelation direct from God to the one desiring to receive that information.

All through the life of Jesus Christ he showed his knowledge of the living God and his loyalty and allegiance to God. Jesus Christ loved his Heavenly Father. He even went so far as to say, "My Father and I are one. I came down from heaven to do the will of my Father." (See John 10:30; 6:38.)

Knowing God does not solve life's problems, but gives purpose and strength to master them. Jesus, with his knowledge of his Heavenly Father, still had his problems to meet and to work out.

Jesus the Mediator

The answers to knowing God the Eternal Father are found in and through Jesus Christ. Jesus said, "I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me." (John 14:6.)

In order to know God the Eternal Father, we must receive that knowledge through the program and through Jesus Christ, who is the mediator between God and man.

Jesus also gave this information, which is often repeated and known well by many; he said, "I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." (John 8:12.)

The light of life

The light of life is divine light that permeates and radiates in the human soul and brings out the godlike qualities and attributes of godliness. The light of life is the gospel of Jesus Christ, the gospel of love. The light of life has within it the glorious promises from God of eternal life in his heavenly kingdom. The light of life will bring divine truth and happiness and peace into a troubled heart. The light of life brings divine light into the problems and troubles of this life and helps to turn life's problems into steppingstones to eternal progression and to developing a godlike character.

Jesus also said: "... light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil.

"For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved.

"But he that doeth truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifest, that they are wrought in God." (John 3:19-21.)

Walking in the light

To know God, you must walk in the light of life. To know God as a living child of God, we should know our relationship to him, our divine potential, and we should know that in knowing God there is great responsibility to respect and love and follow his counsel and his doctrines and his commandments and to grow as a child to become more godlike.

Jesus Christ gave this commandment and important counsel by revelation to the Prophet Joseph Smith. He said: "... ye are commanded in all things to ask of God, who giveth liberally; and that which the Spirit testifies unto you even so I would that ye should do in all holiness of heart, walking uprightly before me, considering the end of your salvation, doing all things with prayer and thanksgiving, that ye may not be seduced by evil spirits, or doctrines of devils, or the commandments of men; for some are of men, and others of devils.

"Wherefore, beware lest ye are deceived; and that ye may not be deceived seek ye earnestly the best gifts, always remembering for what they are given;

"For verily I say unto you, they are given for the benefit of those who love me and keep all my commandments. . . ." (D&C 46:7-9.)

God's greatest gift

We must always keep in mind that God's greatest gift is eternal life. Eternal life comes from knowing God and from knowing Jesus Christ. Jesus said, "If thou wilt do good, yea, and hold out faithful to the end, thou shalt be saved in the kingdom of God, which is the greatest of all the gifts of God; for there is no gift greater than the gift of salvation." (D&C 6:13.)

The central and basic principle of the gospel of Jesus Christ is love. He laid the basis of human brotherhood in love. It begins in God's infinite love for his children, "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." (John 3:16.)

Keeping the commandments

As is mentioned by the Savior, to know God means to keep his commandments. The Lord also gave this in the first and great commandment relative to the importance of keeping his commandments, when we say that we love God. Here is the great commandment on love: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment." (Matt. 22:37-38.)

Jesus also said, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." (John 14:15.)

If we love God, we should keep his commandments. We should love his plan of life. We should love his Only Begotten Son, whom he sent to help us meet life and its problems and to redeem us from death, to make the resurrection and eternal life possible, and to give us the light of life that we may walk in his ways and in the divine light that will lead us to godlike blessings.

Jesus said, "This is my commandment, That ye love one another, as I have loved you." (John 15:12.)

Faith and repentance

We must keep in mind that divine programs and divine ways have been given unto us through our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ; and the way to know God and the way to perfect the human body and bring out its godlike qualities so that we can be in harmony and be a child of God, living so that we can know God, are provided in the great principles of faith and repentance.

I would like to mention briefly repentance. Jesus said, "Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." (Matt. 4:17.) The light is turned on in the human soul through the great principle of repentance. Jesus has asked us to repent of past sins, regrets, weaknesses, and failures, and to prepare and look ahead into the future of eternal life and salvation in the kingdom of heaven.

Repentance by all who are accountable is required for preparation and progression, for entrance into the kingdom of heaven. Repentance is God's purifying program and law for cleansing the human mind and body from weakness, imperfection, and sin. Repentance through Jesus Christ makes it possible for us to progress toward God's greatest gift, the gift of salvation and eternal life.

Repentance is a refining influence, a principle provided through the atonement and the sacrifice of Jesus Christ to help us purify our mortal minds and bodies and to bring out our divine nature and godlike qualities and character so that we can live in the presence of God in his celestial kingdom.

Teachings in home

The home and family is the place where knowledge of God and to know God should be taught, and the place where a loving God should be exemplified and taught to the children.

Parents, children should be taught in the home to know and to love God and to choose his doctrines and his commandments, and not to be misled or deceived by the doctrines of men or the doctrines of devils. They should be taught in the home their relationship to God and how to pray to him. Children should know that they are in the image and likeness of God, that they have godlike attributes and divine potential, that they are literally and truly children of God, with godlike capacities.

They should be taught in the home that Jesus Christ is the proper way, the truth and the great example to follow in this life.

They should be taught that the scriptures contain God's way of life, his plan of salvation, and each child should have his own set of scriptures, if capable of reading and understanding, so that he can have them by his bedside and have access to them whenever he feels he would like to know more of his Heavenly Father's plan of life and way of life.

God's way of life

It is not possible to choose God's way of life and to know God unless we know his program. If we only know the ways of men and the ways of the devil, then we will choose those ways. Jesus Christ commanded that we search the scriptures, that we know the truth, and that the truth would make us free. We find the Lord's truths in the holy scriptures, and there is no knowledge on the face of this earth greater than knowledge that has been given to us by our Heavenly Father and our Savior, Jesus Christ.

Parents, is there love and respect for God in your home? The poet said: "There is beauty all around When there's love at home." (Hymns, no. 169.)

Parents, do you know God the Eternal Father in your home? Do you pray to a living God? Do you pray to a God that you know, and do you know your relationship to him?

Parents, be careful that you do not permit the devil to come into your home. When the devil enters, he brings disrespect for God, hatred, quarreling, criticism, contention, divorce, and evil. When you know God and have respect for his plan, then there is peace and happiness in your home.

Are there virtue and purity in your family life? Is the Lord's hallowed Sabbath day kept sacred in your home and among your family?

Two destroyers

Now, just a word about what is happening in the world and going on among our children. They are being deceived, and that which is entirely wrong looks to be right because so many fine people indulge in use of these two destroyers [alcohol and tobacco] of the divine nature within man and their respect for God.

Parents, do you drink alcohol? The Lord has warned that alcohol is not good for man. (D&C 89:5.) Alcohol is a drug that can destroy godlike character. Alcohol is not good for children and not good for adults.

Parents, are you showing and teaching by example in your home how to use tobacco? Tobacco is a drug. Doctors say cigarettes are the nation's greatest single health peril. A doctor speaking in Salt Lake City recently said that cigarettes kill five times more people than do traffic accidents. Jesus Christ said that "tobacco . . . is not good for man." (D&C 89:8.) Tobacco is not good for children and is not good for adults.

A person who knows God would want to be like God, because God is perfect. God has all knowledge. God has power to create mankind from the dust of the earth. Anyone knowing God would have great respect for God. Anyone knowing the living God and indulging in the number one killer and destroyer of health of mankind shows a lack of love and knowledge and respect for God.

Sunday, April 9

Example of parents

Parents, is your example the example you want your children to follow? Do you teach self-control in your home? Do you teach divine principles so that the godlike qualities of your children can be manifest in their lives?

The home is the place to teach love for God and knowledge of God, and for people to know God and to pray to a God that they know.

President Harold B. Lee has said, "The most important work you will do for the Church will be within the walls of your own home." I repeat, "The most important work you will do for the Church will be within the walls of your own home."

May we recall again these words of the Prophet David O. McKay: "No other success can compensate for failure in the home." And may I add: No other success can compensate for failure to know the living God and the living Jesus Christ in your home and with your family.

Parents, your children are from God. There is no other answer from God. They have divine potential, and it is your responsibility to help them to know and love God, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, their Savior.

I say this in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. □

President Harold B. Lee

He to whom you have just listened is Elder Bernard P. Brockbank, Assistant to the Twelve.

Elder Sterling W. Sill, Assistant to the Twelve, will now address us.

Elder Sterling W. Sill

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

"Medicine for the soul"

Over the door of the library in the ancient city of Thebes, an Egyptian king once carved an inscription that said: "Medicine for the Soul."

Like all thoughtful people, this wise ruler understood that if the mental, spiritual, and emotional health of his people was to be properly cared for, it must be constantly nourished. And because ideas, ideals, and ambitions can be most effectively supplied through books, this great king had provided an ample literary storehouse as a place where his people could get the necessary help for thinking good ideas, building up proper attitudes, vitalizing their faith, motivating their ambitions, and increasing their righteousness, that they might help themselves to save their souls.

This idea of a mental and spiritual storehouse still provides one of our most constructive opportunities. It is reported that there is a physician in Birmingham, Alabama, who goes around writing prescriptions for people, to be filled not at drugstores but at bookstores. He knows what all of us know, that our most serious sicknesses are our soul sicknesses.

One of the tragedies of our times is the increase, to epidemic proportions, of the psychosomatic diseases brought on by our sins and emotional disturbances. As someone has pointed out, we never get stomach ulcers because of what we eat; we get stomach ulcers because of what is eating us. And as we are presently being eaten up by our ignorance, our sins, and our weaknesses, we are suffering some staggering moral death-and-disability losses.

Great literature

One of the most effective cures for all of our present-day problems is found in the literary remedy that comes from thinking uplifting thoughts and living the great principles of the gospel.

The science of writing has probably made books our greatest invention. Writing is preserved speech; it is potential ambition. By effective study we can acquire knowledge, build faith, and develop an enthusiasm that will lead us to any desired accomplishment.

It was the Savior of the world who said: "Man shall not live by bread alone. . . ." (Matt. 4:4.) And because of the wonders of our day, every family may have its own library of great books, including the word of God himself. But before anyone can be benefited by any of our great literature, he must effectively believe in it.

Abraham Lincoln

Abraham Lincoln once said, "What I want to know is in books." The two most powerful books in Lincoln's life were, first, the Holy Bible, which even in his youth he hungrily devoured before the open fire, and second, The Life and Memorable Actions of George Washington by Mason L. Weems.

Washington was able to serve as Lincoln's ideal, and out of his heart Lincoln said, "Washington is the mightiest name on earth, long since mightiest in the cause of civil liberty, still mightiest in moral reformation. On that name a eulogy is expected that cannot be. To add brightness to the sun or glory to the name of Washington is alike impossible. Let none attempt it. In solemn awe pronounce the name, and in its naked, deathless splendor leave it shining on."

Precious possessions

Someone has pointed out that books are among life's most precious possessions. They are the most remarkable creation of man. Nothing else that man builds ever lasts. Monuments fall, civilizations perish, but books continue. The perusal of a great book is as it were an interview with the noblest men of past ages who have written it.

Charles Kingsley once said, "There is nothing more wonderful than a book.

It may be a message to us from the dead, from human souls we never saw who lived perhaps thousands of miles away, and yet these little sheets of paper speak to us, arouse us, teach us, open our hearts and in turn open their hearts to us like brothers. Without books, God is silent, justice dormant, philosophy lame."

John Milton once said, "Books are not absolutely dead things, but do contain a progeny of life in them to be as active as that soul was whose progeny they are; nay they do preserve as in a vial the purest efficacy and extraction of that living intellect that bred them." (Areopagitica.)

Wonder of writing

The great wonder of writing and reading is indicated by the experience of an early-day explorer in the dark continent of Africa. He desired to send a message to a friend many miles away, and it was arranged for a trusted native to be his messenger. The native watched as with his pen the explorer made some marks on a piece of paper, which had no significance to him. Then the explorer gave the native the letter for delivery.

After traversing the many miles of wilderness, the native put the message in the hands of the one for whom it was intended. The native discovered that as soon as the recipient had studied the paper, he immediately knew exactly where the explorer was and what his problems were. He knew all about his health and as much about the needs that prompted him to send the letter as though the explorer had come in person.

The miracle involved in this mysterious communication so impressed the native that he fell down on his face and worshiped the paper.

The words of God

But what should be our enthusiasm when we can clearly read and understand those important papers recording the words of God as they came out of the fires of Sinai? Or what about those papers containing the vitalizing thoughts expressed in that greatest of all discourses, the Sermon on the Mount?

Just before the resurrected Christ ascended to his Father, he gave a thrice-repeated instruction to his chief apostle, saying, "Feed my sheep." (John 21:16.) That important responsibility for feeding the flock is also in force among us. But our personal salvation is a joint enterprise, and the responsibility for feeding our souls is one of the primary do-it-yourself projects that God himself has put into our hands. This great Egyptian king had provided the library, but the people were required to take the medicine themselves.

Our present state of malnutrition is not because of any famine for bread nor a thirst for water, but it is for the hearing and the obeying of the word of the Lord. That is, our many soul-deaths do not occur because a remedy is not available; it is only because we are failing to take that medicine which has already been provided and has already proven its effectiveness.

An ocean of truth

Emerson pointed out one phase of our problem when he said, "On the brink of an ocean of life and truth, we are miserably dying. Sometimes we are furthestest away when we are closest by." So frequently that is true.

Think how near they were who lived contemporaneously with Jesus. He walked among them. They heard him speak. And yet they were so far away that they said, "His blood be on us, and on our children." (Matt. 27:25.) And so it has been and so it may be with us. We are so near and yet we may be so far away. We live on the edge of an ocean of knowledge, but each must take his own steps that will bring him there.

On one occasion Lowell Thomas, the great radio commentator and broadcaster, was telling about the large amount of money that people spend each year to send their messages out across the major radio networks. And someone said to Mr. Thomas, "What is the greatest message that you have ever had a part in broadcasting? Or," they asked, "what is the greatest message that you could conceive as being broadcast to the people of the world?" And Mr. Thomas said, "The greatest message that I can conceive would be that God had again spoken to his people upon the earth."

God has spoken

We conduct a lot of Gallup polls among us. We like to know what the Democrats and the Republicans think. We are interested in what the labor unions and the economists think. But above all other interests, we ought to know what God thinks. God is the Creator of the universe. He is the Father of our spirits and the designer of our destinies. Above everyone else he knows the purpose of our lives and which approach will bring us to the most satisfying success.

One of the greatest good fortunes of our day is that God has not only spoken to the people upon the earth, but he came in person in the greatest manifestation of his being ever known in the world. And not only did he come in person, but he caused that his message should be written down in three great volumes of new scripture outlining in every detail the simple principles of the gospel of Christ. So again, as of old, we hear that life-giving, authoritative pronouncement: "Thus saith the Lord."

If we would all hear and follow, the Savior of men would be able to realize his greatest prayer made nineteen hundred years ago when he looked out beyond his own day and said to his Father: "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven." (Matt. 6:10.)

Most urgent needs

Our present most urgent needs are that we should read more and understand more and think more and do more and be more and live more. Jesus emphasized his own mission by saying, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." (John 10:10.) We must not allow the holy scriptures to sit on our shelves unopened while we continue to starve to death spiritually because we fail to practice those great success laws on which the eternal exaltation of our souls depends.

May God help us to be more grateful for those thrilling, lifesaving truths of the gospel of Jesus Christ, and may he help us to wholeheartedly eat the bread and more freely drink the waters of life that in his abundance our souls might live.

For this I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. □

President Harold B. Lee

We have just listened to Elder Sterling W. Sill, Assistant to the Twelve.

We will now hear from Elder John H. Vandenberg, newly sustained as Assistant to the Twelve Apostles.

Elder John H. Vandenberg

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

This morning as I walked into the Tabernacle, one of the attendant brethren said to me, "Bishop, I am looking forward to hearing your speech this afternoon." And then he added, "You are the last one."

I suppose he had in mind that this great conference has brought so many things, so many good things—the testimonies of the prophets, seers, and revelators, exciting changes, and testimonies of the brethren that God lives and that Jesus is the Christ—to the extent that our cups truly run over.

Experience in Bishopric

What a blessing it is to set a course and work diligently at it. This past decade I have had the privilege of working with two wonderful men. You have seen the good works and heard the good words of Elder Robert L. Simpson and Bishop Victor L. Brown. This isn't a parting or a farewell, but I will always cherish the experience I have had in working with these two wonderful men of God. God bless them, and God bless the Church for their service.

I know that we are led by revelation.

It comes to us through the prophet of God, Joseph Fielding Smith. I have thought a good deal about this, because I know that he is a prophet and that his counselors serve God as they serve with President Smith.

Interest in peace

In thinking what I might say at this conference, I wasn't aware that this change in my assignment was coming. I was down in Hawaii recently, and a young Hawaiian girl approached us and greeted us with both arms uplifted, holding up two fingers of each hand. I asked her what the sign meant, and with a broad smile she immediately replied, "Peace."

In traveling the highways, we often observe passing automobiles in which young occupants display the same sign at windows. We see the word peace painted on walls, fences, sidewalks, and, at times, in psychedelic colors on vehicles.

We wonder at the apparent interest in peace by the current generation. Is it any different from that of generations past? What do we mean by this expression of peace? Is it a passing fad, or is there deep determination for its accomplishment?

Sunday, April 9

Peace of Master

Peace was placed in two categories by the Master. You will recall his words to his disciples during the days before his crucifixion. He had admonished them to keep his commandments and had promised to send them another Comforter, the Spirit of truth, which is the Holy Ghost, who would teach them all things and bring all things to their remembrance that he had said unto them. Then he said, "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." (See John 14:15-27.)

What did the Savior mean when he said "not as the world giveth"? What kind of peace has the world to give?

Enemy of peace

Certainly it is true that many are searching for peace in the world, and yet some follow paths in their search that could only lead in the opposite direction—paths of avarice, ambition, envy, anger, and pride. Surely the greatest enemy of peace is selfishness and with it the desire to pile up treasures on earth. This brings to mind the parable by the Good Teacher as found in the Gospel of Luke:

"And one of the company said unto him, Master, speak to my brother, that he divide the inheritance with me.

"And he said unto him, Man, who made me a judge or a divider over you?

"And he said unto them, Take heed, and beware of covetousness: for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth.

"And he spake a parable unto them, saying, The ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully:

"And he thought within himself, saying, What shall I do, because I have no room where to bestow my fruits?

"And he said, This will I do: I will pull down my barns, and build greater, and there will I bestow all my fruits and my goods.

"And I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry.

"But God said unto him, Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee: then whose shall those things be, which thou hast provided?

"So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God." (Luke 12:13-21.)

Rich toward God

How can we be rich toward God? Does this refer to the laying up of treasures in heaven by living his commandments—love of God and of our fellowmen? Wouldn't living each day with these objectives in mind bring into our lives that peace spoken of by the Savior? Aren't we all too much inclined to be encumbered about by many things and forget those things that are most needful?

Henry David Thoreau thought so, for we read in his book Walden: "The mass of men lead lives of quiet desperation. . . . Most of the luxuries, and many of the so called comforts of life, are not only not indispensable, but positive hindrances to the elevation of manhood."

And Joshua Liebman wrote similarly in his little book Peace of Mind: "A man may have a home, possessions, a charming family, and yet find all these things ashy to his taste because he has been outstripped in the marathon race by some other runners to the golden tape line. It is not that he does not possess enough for his wants, but that others possess more. It is the more that haunts him, makes him depreciate himself and minimize his real achievements.

"The time has come when a man must say to himself: 'I am no longer going to be interested in how much power or wealth another man possesses so long as I can attain enough for the dignity and security of my family and myself. I am going to break through this vicious circle which always asks the question of life in a comparative degree: Who is bigger? Who is richer? Who has more? I am going to set my goals for myself rather than borrow them from others. . . ."

Ambitious men

I believe that this is one thing we can learn from our youth today. They have, in many cases, set simpler values and seen through the transitory worth of material things. They recognize that ambition that leads men to seek power and domination over others brings not peace, but frustration. Certainly history is replete with examples of the rise and fall of ambitious men, and during temporary relief from hostilities between nations the cry always rises, "Now we will have peace." How many wars have been termed "a war to end all wars"?

Yet an encyclopedia shows that during the period from 1496 B.C. to A.D. 1861 there were 227 years of peace compared with 3,130 years of war. Ambition, either privately or collectively, gives little hope for the achievement of peace.

Universal search

Today we have a universal search for peace—a generation of peace; yet most of those who discard the grasping, selfish race for power know not where to turn to find a way of life to take its place.

But peace cannot be achieved by making a sign or by writing words on fences. It must come first and most completely to the individual through his own efforts in keeping the commandments of our Lord and Savior, for God made all men to enjoy such peace.

Just as running madly after worldly things does not bring peace, neither does sitting idly. Because our modern conveniences often leave us much time beyond that which is necessary to sustain ourselves and our families, it becomes important not to spend this time idly, for there is much to be done if we are to partake of the Lord's peace.

Period of peace

Probably there is no quicker way to enjoy inner peace than by serving one another. There is recorded in history a marvelous period of time when this peace did indeed banish avarice, ambition, envy, anger, and pride from men's hearts. It was shortly after the Savior's visit to the American continent after his death and resurrection. We read:

"... the people were all converted unto the Lord . . . and there were no contentions and disputations among them, and every man did deal justly one with another.

"And they had all things common among them; therefore there were not rich and poor, bond and free, but they were all made free, and partakers of the heavenly gift.

"And there were great and marvelous works wrought by the disciples of Jesus, insomuch that they did heal the sick, and raise the dead, and cause the lame to walk, and the blind to receive their sight, and the deaf to hear. . . .

"And the Lord did prosper them exceedingly in the land. . . .

"And now, behold, it came to pass that the people of Nephi did wax strong, and did multiply exceedingly fast, and became an exceedingly fair and delightful people.

"And they were married, and given in marriage, and were blessed according to the multitude of the promises which the Lord had made unto them.

"And they did not walk any more after the performances and ordinances of the law of Moses; but they did walk after the commandments which they had received from their Lord and their God, continuing in fasting and prayer, and in meeting together oft both to pray and to hear the word of the Lord.

"And it came to pass that there was no contention among all the people, in all the land; but there were mighty miracles wrought among the disciples of Jesus.

"And it came to pass that there was no contention in the land, because of the love of God which did dwell in the hearts of the people.

"And there were no envyings, nor strifes, nor tumults, nor whoredoms, nor lyings, nor murders, nor any manner of lasciviousness; and surely there could not be a happier people among all the people who had been created by the hand of God.

"There were no robbers, nor murderers, neither were there Lamanites, nor any manner of -ites; but they were in one, the children of Christ, and heirs to the kingdom of God.

"And how blessed were they! For the Lord did bless them in all their doings; yea, even they were blessed and prospered until an hundred and ten years had passed away; and the first generation from Christ had passed away, and there was no contention in all the land.

"... Nephi, he that kept this last record, . . . kept it eighty and four years, and there was still peace in the land, save it were a small part of the people. . . .

"And it came to pass that two hundred years had passed away. . . ." (4 Ne. 2-3, 5, 7, 10-11, 12-13, 15-20, 22.)

This was indeed a fortunate people whose history is contained in the Book of Mormon, a book which covers nearly three thousand years and which reveals that only during those periods of time when the people were keeping God's commandments did they enjoy peace, love, happiness, and prosperity.

Peace through the gospel

Today man's greatest desire and hope is to find a life of peace and joy, progress, and freedom, which can only be found in the gospel of Jesus Christ. Yet, paradoxically, we live in a world where war, destruction, contention, law-breaking, and immorality surround us, and many become lost. One of these, a young woman, tells her story in the current issue of the NEW ERA magazine for youth. How fortunate she was in finding the true gospel of Christ to show her the way out of the confusion in which she had wandered; and what gratitude she expresses to those caring young people who showed her the way!

As members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, we accept as positive knowledge from God the fact that each human being lived in a preexistent spiritual world as a child of God and came to this mortal life for a great and necessary part of eternal life. This mortality provides the opportunity to choose the right and to obtain knowledge by faith in the revealed plan of God, which will bring peace and freedom for mortal as well as eternal life.

We accept as a fact that God has revealed through his chosen prophets the way of life which leads to peace, which is the gospel of Jesus Christ. Human passions for mortal gratification, including selfishness, envy, anger, and pride, must be replaced by spiritual ideals, and sin must become abhorrent to us, for we know that all we do here will affect our lives in eternity.

We believe that only through this knowledge and way of life can an individual or a nation achieve that peace which is so desired and sought after.

Peace in our hands

And so we say to this generation, which is so verbally calling for peace, that this thought toward peace today is indeed significant, for it is true that peace is in our hands—our own personal peace as well as in great measure the peace of our world. Believe in it, work for it, live for it; for in it, as you follow through and work for the establishment of peace first in your own souls, you will then have true peace.

Now as we go from this great conference, brothers and sisters, let us go recognizing that our cup is filled to overflowing. We have been charged with the great messages of God's prophet. We have been charged with the testimonies of the brethren. We have been charged with the Spirit of God, which has been in our presence and is now in our presence.

Let us go forth with our personal testimonies, to which I wish to add mine, that I know that God lives, that Jesus is the Christ, and that we live and serve, if we but will, under the direction of God's prophet, Joseph Fielding Smith, supported by two other prophets, Harold B. Lee and Nathan Eldon Tanner, and supported by thirteen other prophets, the Quorum of the Twelve and the patriarch.

God be with you and bless you as we go forth to carry out our assignments, whatever they are, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. □

President Harold B. Lee

He to whom you have just listened is Elder John H. Vandenberg, Assistant to the Twelve.

We will now be privileged to hear from President Joseph Fielding Smith, who will give the concluding address of the conference, and leave us his blessing.

President Joseph Fielding Smith

My dear brethren and sisters: I feel that the Lord has been with us in all the sessions of this conference; that we have been fed the bread of life; and that we are better prepared now to be the kind of people the Lord would have us be.

I am grateful to all of the Brethren for their wise counsel and for the messages they delivered as they were guided by the power of the Spirit.

I think we should conclude on a tone of thanksgiving, of blessing, and of testimony.

Thankfulness for blessings

I have no language to convey the feelings of thanksgiving which are in my heart for the infinite and eternal blessings the Lord has given to me, to my family, to the Church, and, in fact, to the whole world.

I am grateful for the atoning sacrifice of the Son of God—that because of his suffering and death all men shall be raised in immortality, while those who believe and obey his laws shall have eternal life in his kingdom.

I am thankful for the restoration of eternal truth in this final gospel dispensation; for the mission and ministry of Joseph Smith, the Prophet, and my grandfather, Hyrum Smith, the Patriarch; and for the fact that the keys of the kingdom of God have been committed again to man on the earth.

I am pleased with the growth and development of the Church, with the increased missionary work, with the many temples we now have, and with the lives of all those who are seeking to serve the Lord.

Prayer for saints

I pray that the Lord will bless all the members of the Church; and by virtue of the keys and power which I hold, I bless the Saints—those who dwell in the household of faith, those who love and seek the Lord.

What a glorious thing it is to have the saving truths of the everlasting gospel, to be members of "the only true and living church upon the face of the whole earth" (D&C 1:30), to be on the path leading to eternal life in our Father's kingdom!

O God our Heavenly and Eternal Father, look down in love and in mercy upon this thy church and upon the members of the church who keep thy commandments. Let thy Spirit dwell in our hearts forever; and when the trials and woes of this life are over, may we return to thy presence, with our loved ones, and dwell in thy house forever, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. □

Sunday, April 9

President Harold B. Lee

Had time permitted the men's chorus of the Tabernacle Choir would have favored us with a beautiful number entitled, "Thou Wilt Keep Him in Perfect Peace;" and in the spirit of that hymn which they would have sung, President Smith, let that be our prayer and that of the saints, that our Heavenly Father will keep you in perfect peace.

On behalf of all who have listened to the singing during the sessions of this conference, we express appreciation and our sincere thanks to the members of the Tabernacle Choir for the great service they have rendered and are now rendering for again furnishing us with their inspirational music.

We also express our deep appreciation to the other choirs and choruses and to the conductors and organists who have served so beautifully and inspiringly during this conference.

We are grateful to all who have contributed to the success of the conference, especially the General Authorities who we feel have never been more inspired than they have during the sessions of this conference.

We appreciate the attention given by the local and the national press representatives, and by representatives of radio and television in reporting the sessions of the conference.

We deeply appreciate the cooperation of city officials, the city traffic officers for their efficient handling of the increased traffic; the Fire Department and Red Cross, who have been on hand to render service whenever and wherever needed.

We thank the Tabernacle ushers for their unselfish service in seating the great audiences in such a courteous manner as they have.

We again express our most grateful appreciation to the owners and managers of the many radio and television stations throughout the nation and in other countries, who have carried the sessions of this conference from coast to coast in the United States, to Hawaii, Alaska, Mexico, Central America, Canada; and by satellite to Australia and countries of South America.

The Tabernacle Choir with Richard P. Condie conducting, and with Robert Cundick at the organ, will now conclude the singing of this conference with "Still, Still With Thee."

The benediction will then be offered by Elder Allen E. Litster, former president of the Andes Mission.

This conference will then stand adjourned for six months.

The Tabernacle Choir sang the closing song, "Still, Still With Thee."

The benediction was offered by Elder Allen E. Litster, former president of the Andes Mission.

The conference was adjourned for six months.

SALT LAKE TABERNACLE CHOIR AND ORGAN BROADCAST

Sunday, April 9, 1972 - 9:30 to 10:00 A.M.

The following broadcast, written and announced by Spencer Kinard, and originating with Station KSL, Salt Lake City, Utah, was presented from 9:30 to 10 o'clock A.M. on Sunday, April 9, 1972 through the courtesy of the Columbia Broadcasting System's network throughout the United States, parts of Canada, and through other facilities to several points overseas.

Announcer: Once more we welcome you within these walls with Music and the Spoken Word from the Crossroads of the West.

CBS and its affiliated stations bring you at this hour the Tabernacle Choir from Temple Square in Salt Lake City, with Richard Condie conducting the Choir, Alexander Schreiner, Tabernacle Organist, and the Spoken Word by Spencer Kinard.

With the words of John Henry Newman, the Tabernacle Choir sings: "Lead, kindly Light, . . . I do not ask to see the distant scene—one step enough for me." "Lead thou me on!"

(Choir: "Lead, Kindly Light"—Dykes)

Announcer: With Olga Gardner as soloist the Tabernacle Choir recalls words and music from the Requiem by Brahms: "Ye now are sorrowful, howbeit ye shall again behold me, and your heart shall be joyful, . . . Yea, I will comfort you, . . ."

(Choir: "Ye Now Are Sorrowful"—Brahms)

Announcer: Alexander Schreiner turns today on Temple Square to the "Finale from the Sonata in F Minor" by Mendelssohn.

(Organ: "Finale From F Minor Sonata"—Mendelssohn)

Announcer: From the Tabernacle Choir we hear F. Flaxington Harker's setting for this Old Testament text: "How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of Him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace; . . . that publisheth salvation; that saith unto Zion, Thy God reigneth!"

(Choir: "How Beautiful Upon the Mountains"—Harker)

The Spoken Word

By J. Spencer Kinard

As we ponder life and the problems that face us every day, we are oftentimes stunned at what seems to be a lack of solutions to our problems. As we look to our future—especially the young—we could easily become discouraged and filled with despair at its prospects.

We are constantly being warned of the dangers man is imposing upon himself. And young people often get the impression that the future is bleak, that there are too many insolvable problems, too many questions without answers.

Sometimes we don't know the answers and have to accept life on faith. Someone said, "It has taken me all my life to understand that it is not necessary to understand everything."¹

The late American statesman, John Foster Dulles said: "We are establishing an all-time world record in the production of material things. What we lack is a righteous and dynamic faith."² What we need to assure our future is a faith in life, a faith in God. Sometimes because we lack faith, we are driven to act in ways we know are wrong, actions that we would not ordinarily attempt under different circumstances.

Now faith in itself is not the solution to our problems, but it is the means by which we can overcome our fears and doubts, our disappointment and despair; the means by which we can find the courage to go forward in life and solve our problems.

David O. McKay offered this observation and guidance: "[Faith] is more than a mere feeling. It is power that moves to action, and should be in human life the most basic of all motivating forces. . . . The great need of today is faith that will put purpose into life, and courage into the heart. . . . The need of the world is more than a mere acceptance of [Jesus Christ] as the greatest of all men. What is really essential is faith in Him as a divine being—as our Lord and Savior.”³

¹Author Unknown

²John Foster Dulles (1888-1959), U.S. Sec. of State

Sunday, April 9

Faith is like climbing a hill when one is lost. From the canyons below it is nearly impossible to tell which direction to turn, but when we reach the crest, we can see the road below and where it leads, and feel assured that we are going in the right direction and will reach our destination. And so it is with faith.

“Faith is the assurance of things hoped for, the conviction of things not seen.”⁴ As Emerson expressed it, “All I have seen teaches me to trust the Creator for all I have not seen.”⁵

(Men’s Chorus: Without Announcement “Widerspruch”—Schubert)

Announcer: The Men’s Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir has recalled one of the songs of Franz Schubert: “Tramping the woods alone.”

³David O. McKay CBS Church of the Air address, December 19, 1943

⁴New Testament, Hebrews 11:1 (Revised Version)

⁵Ralph Waldo Emerson

Announcer: And now the Tabernacle Choir sings Malotte’s setting for words from the 23rd Psalm: “The Lord is my Shepherd; I shall not want.”

(Choir: “The Twenty-Third Psalm”—Malotte)

Announcer: Again we leave you within the shadows of the everlasting hills. May peace be with you, this day—and always.

This concludes the two thousand two hundred twenty-fifth performance continuing the 43rd year of this traditional broadcast from the Mormon Tabernacle on Temple Square, brought to you by CBS and its affiliated stations, originating with KSL in Salt Lake City, Utah.

Richard Condie conducted the Tabernacle Choir, Alexander Schreiner was at the Organ. The Spoken Word by Spencer Kinsard.

In another seven days, at this same hour, Music and the Spoken Word will be heard again from the Crossroads of the West.

This is the CBS Radio Network.

SUMMARY OF CONFERENCE MUSIC

The Salt Lake Tabernacle Choir furnished the choral numbers for the Saturday morning, the Sunday morning, and the Sunday afternoon sessions of the conference, with Richard P. Condie, conductor, and Jay E. Welch, assistant conductor.

The Brigham Young University Combined Choruses, with Ralph Woodward conducting, furnished the special musical numbers at the opening session on Thursday morning.

The choral music for the Thursday afternoon session was provided by the Primary Leaders Chorus, made up of the combined choruses of the Utah North Regions, conducted by Patricia Maughan.

The Combined Seminary Chorus of the Salt Lake Valley, with Jay E. Welch conducting, and Paul Hanks, assistant conductor, furnished special musical numbers at the Saturday afternoon meeting.

At the General Priesthood Session on Saturday evening, the choral numbers were sung by the Brigham Young University Faculty Priesthood Chorus. A. Harold Goodman was the conductor.

Richard P. Condie directed the singing of the Tabernacle Choir on the Choir and Organ Broadcast on Sunday morning, with Alexander Schreiner at the organ console.

Accompaniments on the Tabernacle Organ throughout the conference sessions were played by Alexander Schreiner, Robert Cundick, and Roy M. Darley, Tabernacle Organists.

Francis M. Gibbons
Clerk of the Conference

Index

	Page
Anderson, Elder Joseph	88
Man's eternal horizon, 88; Earth life, 88; Communication with God, 88; Long-distance horizon, 89; Alma's teachings, 89; Nourishing the seed, 89; Fruits of faith, 90; A fullness of joy, 90; Keeping all commandments, 90; Horizon extended, 91.
Ashton, Elder Marvin J.	59
What is your destination? 59; Confusion about destinations, 60; Temple marriage, 60; Call to mission field, 60; Testimony of gospel, 61; Destination still ahead, 61; Elder in wheelchair, 61; Two prison inmates, 62; Steps in eternal progression, 62; Eternal life, 62.
Authorities Present, Church	2
Authorities Sustained, Church	8
B
Bennett, Elder William H.	91
Missionary assignment, 91; Purpose of gospel, 91; Two missionary needs, 91; Obstacle to success, 92; Experience in infantry patrol, 92; Sharing gospel teachings, 93; The Book of Mormon, 93; Missionary referrals, 94; Many missionary opportunities, 94.
Benson, Elder Ezra Taft	48
Persian anniversary, 48; King Cyrus, 48; Use of good men, 49; Founding fathers, 49; Allegiance to Constitution, 49; Patriotism, 50; Support of candidates, 50; Standard in scriptures, 51; Dangers ahead, 51; Word of living prophets, 51; Promptings of Holy Spirit, 52; Civic standards, 52.
Brockbank, Elder Bernard P.	152
Knowing God, 152; Source of knowledge, 152; Jesus the Mediator, 153; The light of life, 153; Walking in the light, 153; God's greatest gift, 154; Keeping the commandments, 154; Faith and repentance, 154; Teachings in home, 154; God's way of life, 155; Two destroyers, 155; Example of parents, 156.
Brown, Elder Hugh B.	95
A missionary and his message, 95; Fruits of labor, 96; Divinity of the work, 96.

Brown, Bishop Victor L. (Priesthood Meeting) ----- 100

New calling, 100; Tribute to former leaders, 100; Response of counselors, 100; Duties of Presiding Bishopric, 100; Blessings through Aaronic Priesthood, 101; A son of God, 101; Experience in Pago Pago Stake, 101; Scripture contest, 102; Honor of priesthood ordination, 102; Cause of youth, 102; Parental responsibility, 103; Charge to leaders, 103.

Burton, Elder Theodore M. ----- 85

Already saved, 85; General salvation, 85; Sons of perdition, 85; Individual salvation, 85; Exaltation, 86; Amulek's teaching, 86; Eternal family relationship, 86; Full salvation, 86; Ministering servants, 87; Family exaltation, 87.

CChristiansen, Elder ElRay L. ----- 41

Successful parenthood, 41; Homes in serious trouble, 41; Family home evening, 42; A sacred trust, 42; Family traditions, 42; Petty disputations, 43; Avenues of communication, 43; Security in the home, 43; Faith in God, 43.

Church Finance Committee Report ----- 7Cullimore, Elder James A. ----- 44

A valued possession, 44; Peter's testimony, 44; Testimony of Christ, 45; Secret of growth, 45; Influence of Holy Spirit, 45; Companionship of Holy Ghost, 46; Special witnesses, 46; President Smith's statement, 46; The spirit of revelation, 47; Companionship of Spirit, 47; Experience of Oliver Cowdery, 47; Alma's testimony, 47.

DDunn, Elder Loren C. ----- 19

Sustaining of officers, 19; Called by God, 19; Organized from top down, 20; Assurance of divine calling, 20; Personal callings, 20; Right atmosphere for call, 20; A legal administrator, 21; Guarantee of eternal salvation, 21.

Dunn, Elder Paul H. (Priesthood Meeting) ----- 106

Parents never let go, 106; Priesthood leaders, 107; Know thyself, 107; Babe Ruth's experience, 107; A batting slump, 108; Control thyself, 109; To learn control, 109; Give thyself, 109; Assignment of missionary, 109; Conversion of professor, 110.

Dyer, Elder Alvin R. ----- 37

The plan of life, 38; Darkness and enlightenment, 38; Gospel not new, 38; Suppression of freedom, 39; The Renaissance, 39; A new dispensation, 40; Personal visitation, 40; Last dispensation, 40.

E

Edling, Elder Wilford G.	7
-------------------------------	---

F

Featherstone, Bishop Vaughn J.	22
Integrity of brethren, 22; Aaronic Priesthood, 22; Gratitude for family, 22; Confidence of Bishop Brown, 23; Conversion of Lamanite king, 23; Knowledge of God, 23.

Fifth Session	97
---------------------	----

Finance Committee Report, Church	7
--	---

First Day—Afternoon Meeting	29
-----------------------------------	----

First Day— Morning Meeting	3
----------------------------------	---

First Session	3
---------------------	---

Fourth Session	74
----------------------	----

Fyans, Elder J. Thomas (Priesthood Meeting)	103
Department of Internal Communications, 103; Magazines, 104; Administrative services, 104; Translation and distribution, 104; Distribution goals, 105; Magnitude of task, 105; Materials to be ready, 105.

G

General Authorities Present	2
-----------------------------------	---

General Authorities and Officers Sustained	8
--	---

General Priesthood Meeting	97
----------------------------------	----

Gibbons, Elder Francis M. (Statistical Report)	5
--	---

H

Haight, Elder David B.	130
Broken homes, 130; Influence of family, 130; Building on sand, 131; Teaching our children, 131; Family night, 131; One sure solution, 131; Trust officers, 132; Pressures on youth, 132; Stronger family foundations, 132; Wisdom of Church leaders, 132.

- Hanks, Elder Marion D. ----- 125
 Reasons for unhappiness, 125; Willful ignorance, 126; Men to be happy, 126; Our need for God, 126; World too much with us, 127; Arrogance and pride, 127; Enduring trials, 128; Frailties of others, 128; Our own mistakes, 128; Nephi's trust in the Lord, 129; Faith in God, 129.
- Hinckley, Elder Gordon B. ----- 75
 A great fraternity, 75; Solution of problems, 75; Motivation for clean living, 76; Growth through responsibility, 76; A spiritual dimension, 77; Governance of home, 77; To bind for eternity, 78; Reassurance in death, 78; An invitation to see, 78.
- Hunter, Elder Howard W. ----- 95
 A teacher, 95.
- Hunter, Elder Milton R. ----- 34
 Miracle of missionary work, 34; Reasons for support, 34; Faith of young man, 34; Choice of a mission, 35; Missionary in South America, 35; Results of missionary effort, 36; An answer to prayer, 36; Devotion of mission presidents, 36; Response to mission calls, 37; Testimony, 37.

K

- Kimball, President Spencer W. ----- 25
 Resurrection of Jesus, 25; Living the commandments, 26; Broken communication lines, 26; Communication impaired, 26; Inability to communicate, 27; Returned missionary, 27; Church inactivity, 27; Dwindling faith, 28; Laxity of prayers, 28; Elijah and priests of Baal, 28; Couples in sorrow, 28; A sagging world, 29.

L

- Lee, President Harold B. ----- 3, 4, 5, 8, 12, 14, 18, 21, 23, 25, 29, 53, 59, 63, 66, 69, 73, 97, 98, 99, 103, 106, 110, 113, 118, 140, 145, 148, 151, 156, 159, 163, 164
- Lee, President Harold B. (Priesthood Meeting) ----- 115
 Talk of serviceman, 115; Proof of pledge, 116; Results of passing test, 116; Meeting temptation, 116; Magnifying priesthood, 117; Spiritual suicide, 117; The hand of fellowship, 117; Divine witness, 118; Faith in leadership, 118.
- Lee, President Harold B. ----- 120
 Political activity, 120; Support of nation's leaders, 120; Conflicting dominions, 120; Demands to exercise self-will, 121; True free agency, 121; Proposal to college student, 122; Meaning of truth, 122; The Light of Christ, 122; Counsel to public officials, 122; Positive teachings of gospel, 123; Statesmanlike leaders, 124; God's eternal plan, 124; Trust in God, 124; Personal witness, 125.

M

McConkie, Elder Bruce R.	133
---------------------------------------	-----

Source of a testimony, 133; The plan of salvation, 134; Centered in Christ, 134; Testimonies of many, 135; Saving power, 135.

Monson, Elder Thomas S.	69
--------------------------------------	----

"Finishers Wanted," 69; The race of life, 70; David's failure to finish, 70; The rich young man, 70; Betrayal of Christ, 71; Job, a finisher, 71; Paul's example, 71; Work finished, 71; Marks of the finisher, 71; Experience with missionary, 72; Prize of eternal life, 73.

Music, Summary of Conference	166
---	-----

O

Obituaries	7
-------------------------	---

P

Packer, Elder Boyd K.	136
------------------------------------	-----

Why stay morally clean, 136; Plan for mortal life, 136; Power of creation, 136; Use of creative power, 137; Strong and constant feelings, 137; Importance of marriage, 137; Enticements of evil one, 137; Changed tactics, 138; Words of counsel, 138; Cleansing power, 138; Righteous family life, 138; Meaning of fatherhood, 139; Key to happiness, 139.

Passed Away, Those Who Have	7
--	---

Petersen, Elder Mark E.	15
--------------------------------------	----

Divine guidance, 15; Prophets past and present, 15; Revelation for our day, 15; In Bible times, 16; Final effort to save, 16; New light from God, 16; Accomplishments of Latter-day Saints, 17; Mormon women, 17; Modern revelation, 18; A return to God, 18.

Peterson, Bishop H. Burke	24
--	----

Call to serve, 24; Gratitude for blessings, 24; Faith and example of parents, 24.

Priesthood Meeting, General	97
--	----

R

- Rector, Jr. Elder Hartman ----- 63
 Christians, 63; Apostles and prophets, 63; The dark ages, 64; A new day, 64; To Protestant friends, 64; To Catholic friends, 64; Principles revealed, 65; Message for honest in heart, 65; Church reestablished, 65.
- Richards, Elder Franklin D. ----- 66
 Importance of prayer, 66; Prayer opened new dispensation, 66; Doing our part, 67; Supplementing prayer, 67; How to pray, 67; When to pray, 67; Family prayer, 68; Charge to parents, 68; Approach in prayer, 68; Laws governing prayer, 69.
- Richards, Elder LeGrand ----- 141
 Inspiring counsel, 141; A chosen generation, 141; Gospel to be preached, 141; Power and authority, 142; Orson F. Whitney's experience, 142; Apostasy predicted, 143; Promises of restoration, 143; Priesthood restored, 143; Coming of Elijah, 144; John's vision, 144; The true and living God, 144; The true gospel, 145.
- Romney, Elder Marion G. (Priesthood Meeting) ----- 111
 Counsel of President Grant, 111; A covenant people, 111; Covenant of the priesthood, 111; Change wrought in men, 111; To receive the kingdom, 112; Breaking covenant, 112; Witness, 112.

S

- Salt Lake Tabernacle Choir and Organ Broadcast ----- 164
- Second Day—Afternoon Meeting ----- 74
- Second Day—Morning Meeting ----- 53
- Second Session ----- 29
- Seventh Session ----- 140
- Sill, Elder Sterling W. ----- 156
 "Medicine for the soul," 156; Great literature, 156; Abraham Lincoln, 157; Precious possessions, 157; Wonder of writing, 157; The words of God, 157; An ocean of truth, 158; God has spoken, 158; Most urgent needs, 159.
- Simpson, Elder Robert L. ----- 30
 Overseas leaders, 30; Personal tribute, 31; Common judges in Israel, 31; Verdict of church court, 31; The way back, 31; The time to repent, 32; Availability of bishops, 32; The need for help, 33; Process of true justice, 33.

Sixth Session	119
---------------------	-----

Smith, Elder Eldred G.	145
-----------------------------	-----

Peace, 145; Peace of Christ, 146; The peace within, 146; A guilty conscience, 147; Peace from service, 147; Peace of Joseph Smith, 147; "We bring you peace," 148; The way to peace, 148.

Smith, President Joseph Fielding	12
--	----

Open to truth, 12; The last days, 13; Invitation to all, 13; Importance of family, 13; Successful parents, 13; Counsel to youth, 13; Service in Church, 14; Personal testimony, 14.

Smith, President Joseph Fielding (Priesthood Meeting)	98
---	----

Call of General Authorities, 98; The right of presidency, 98; Keys belong to Presidency, 99; Guidance for Saints, 99; Keys of the kingdom, 99.

Smith, President Joseph Fielding	163
--	-----

Thankfulness for blessings, 163; Prayer for saints, 163.

Statistical Report 1971	5
-------------------------------	---

Summary of Conference Music	166
-----------------------------------	-----

Sustaining of General Authorities and Officers	8
--	---

T

Tabernacle Choir and Organ Broadcast	164
--	-----

Tanner, President N. Eldon	8, 12, 30, 34, 37, 41, 44, 48, 52, 74, 75, 79, 81, 84, 87, 91, 94, 95, 96, 119, 125, 130, 133, 135, 139
----------------------------------	--

Tanner, President N. Eldon	54
----------------------------------	----

Judging others, 54; Unjust criticism, 54; Prejudgment, 55; "Judge not. . ." 55; Samuel's experience, 55; Judging fairly, 55; Looking for weaknesses, 56; Suspending judgment, 56; Improving ourselves, 56; Gossip, 57; The golden rule, 57; Forgiving one another, 57; Political campaigns, 57; Influence of the home, 58; A witness and a challenge, 58; A prophet of God, 58.

Tanner, President N. Eldon (Priesthood Meeting)	113
---	-----

A peculiar people, 113; Priesthood a plus, 113; Humbly proud of priesthood, 113; Cause of interest in Church, 114; Offer of position, 114; Visit of Jaycee President, 114; Testimony, 115.

Taylor, Elder Henry D.	79
-----------------------------	----

Your brother's keeper, 79; Opportunities to serve, 79; Teachings of Jesus, 80; Scene in Carthage jail, 80; Brotherhood of man, 81.

	Page
Third Day—Afternoon Meeting	140
Third Day—Morning Meeting	119
Third Session	53
Tuttle, Elder A. Theodore	148
Revelation on priesthood, 148; Three presiding quorums, 149; The government of God, 149; Responsibility of high priests, 149; Labor of seventies, 149; Place of elders, 150; Strengthening the home, 150; The Aaronic Priesthood, 150; Priesthood leadership, 150; Clarion call to go forward, 151; Testimony, 151.

V

Vandenberg, Elder John H.	159
Experience in Bishopric, 159; Interest in peace, 159; Enemy of peace, 160; Rich toward God, 160; Ambitious men, 161; Universal search, 161; Period of peace, 161; Peace through the gospel, 162; Peace in our hands, 162.

Y

Young, Elder S. Dilworth	81
Early mission preparations, 82; Stories of missionary work, 82; Physical stamina, 82; Learning truth, 82; Study of great literature, 82; Application of truth, 83; Training from mother, 83; Spiritual growth, 83; Training opportunities, 84; Joys of missionary service, 84.

ONE HUNDRED FORTY-SECOND
SEMI-ANNUAL

CONFERENCE

OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST
OF LATTER-DAY SAINTS

HELD IN THE TABERNACLE
SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH

OCTOBER 6, 7, 8, 1972

WITH REPORT OF DISCOURSES

Published by
The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints
Salt Lake City, Utah

OFFICIAL REPORT
of the
ONE HUNDRED FORTY-SECOND
SEMI-ANNUAL GENERAL CONFERENCE
of
THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST
OF LATTER-DAY SAINTS
held in the Tabernacle on Temple Square
in
Salt Lake City, Utah
October 6, 7, 8, 1972

Published by
The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints

1973 Corporation of the President
of
The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints

All Rights Reserved
Printed in USA by the
Deseret Press
PBCTO372 3/73

THE ONE HUNDRED FORTY-SECOND SEMI-ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER-DAY SAINTS

The 142nd Semi-Annual Conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City, Utah on Friday, October 6, 1972 at 10 o'clock a.m.

The general sessions of the conference were held at 10:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m. Friday, October 6, Saturday, October 7, and Sunday, October 8. The General Priesthood Meeting was held in the Tabernacle on Saturday, October 7, 1972 at 7 o'clock p.m.

President Harold B. Lee was present and presided at all sessions of the conference. He also conducted the conference sessions.

All General Authorities of the Church were present except Elders Alvin R. Dyer and Milton R. Hunter, who were excused because of illness.

President Joseph Fielding Smith, the tenth president of the Church, having passed away on Sunday, July 2, 1972, the session on Friday morning, October 6, at 10 o'clock was a solemn assembly at which the First Presidency of the Church was reorganized, with Harold Bingham Lee being sustained as President, Nathan Eldon Tanner as first counselor, and Marion George Romney as second counselor.

Also at the solemn assembly, Elder Spencer Woolley Kimball was sustained as President of the Council of the Twelve Apostles, Elder Bruce R. McConkie was sustained as a member of the Council of the Twelve, and the following were sustained as Assistants to the Twelve: O. Leslie Stone, James E. Faust, and L. Tom Perry. Elder Rex D. Pinegar was sustained as a member of the First Council of Seventy.

The proceedings of all sessions of the conference were given extensive coverage in the United States and Canada over many television and radio stations, coast to coast, originating with KSL in Salt Lake City.

By means of satellite transmission, sessions of the conference were heard over radio in countries of Central and South America, Mexico, and Australia. Over eighty radio stations broadcast the Sunday morning session to major cities of Mexico and Central America, and by satellite to countries of South America to a potential Latin American audience of sixty million people.

Countries in Europe, South and Central America, Africa, and parts of Asia, totaling nearly two-thirds of the world, were able to receive broadcasts of these proceedings over International Short-wave Radio Station WNYW, with studios in New York City.

Through special arrangements the Saturday morning and Sunday morning sessions were carried from the Tabernacle over direct oceanic cables to a large number of members and friends assembled in chapels throughout Great Britain, Germany, France, Holland, Belgium and Austria. These sessions, in addition to being broadcast direct, were video-taped, and released to many television stations to be broadcast later to the eastern and central parts of the United States, Hawaii, and bases of the Armed Forces throughout the Pacific, and carried over special radio facilities to Vietnam.

Rebroadcasts of all sessions of the conference were sent by KSL Radio in Salt Lake City and KMBZ Radio in Kansas City, Missouri, beginning at midnight on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, October 6, 7, and 8, to many parts of the United States and the world.

The General Priesthood Meeting held on Saturday evening was transmitted over closed-circuit from the Salt Lake Tabernacle to over 180,000 men of the priesthood assembled in approximately 750 buildings throughout the United States and Canada.

This report of the conference also includes the continuity of the Tabernacle Choir and Organ Broadcast over the Columbia Broadcasting System on Sunday morning from 9:30 to 10 o'clock, immediately preceding the general conference session.

GENERAL AUTHORITIES PRESENT

The following General Authorities of the Church were present:

The First Presidency: Harold B. Lee, N. Eldon Tanner, and Marion G. Romney.

The Quorum of the Twelve Apostles: Spencer W. Kimball, Ezra Taft Benson, Mark E. Petersen, Delbert L. Stapley, LeGrand Richards, Hugh B. Brown, Howard W. Hunter, Gordon B. Hinckley, Thomas S. Monson, Boyd K. Packer, Marvin J. Ashton, and Bruce R. McConkie.

Patriarch to the Church: Eldred G. Smith.

Assistants to the Twelve: Alma Sonne, ElRay L. Christiansen, Sterling W. Sill, Henry D. Taylor,¹ Franklin D. Richards, Theodore M. Burton, Bernard P. Brockbank, James A. Cullimore, Marion D. Hanks, Joseph Anderson, David B. Haight, William H. Bennett, John H. Vandenberg, Robert L. Simpson, O. Leslie Stone, James E. Faust, and L. Tom Perry.

The First Council of Seventy: S. Dilworth Young,² A. Theodore Tuttle, Paul H. Dunn, Harman Rector, Jr., Loren C. Dunn, and Rex D. Pinegar.

The Presiding Bishopric: Victor L. Brown, H. Burke Peterson, and Vaughn J. Featherstone.

OTHER AUTHORITIES PRESENT

Other authorities of the Church in attendance at the conference included the officers of the Historical Department, members of the Church Board of Education; Church educational authorities and supervisors; Regional Representatives; Presidents of Stakes and their counselors; Presidents of Temples; Patriarchs; Bishoprics of wards; and presidencies and members of Melchizedek and Aaronic Priesthood quorums.

Many auxiliary officers, general, stake and ward, from all parts of the Church were also in attendance.

¹Elder Alvin R. Dyer, Assistant to the Twelve, was excused on account of illness.

²Elder Milton R. Hunter of the First Council of Seventy was excused on account of illness.

FIRST DAY MORNING MEETING SOLEMN ASSEMBLY

FIRST SESSION

The opening session of the conference convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City on Friday, October 6, 1972, at 10 o'clock a.m.

With President Harold B. Lee presiding and conducting, this session was a solemn assembly, at which the First Presidency of the Church was reorganized.

The special music for this session was provided by the Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir, with Richard P. Condie conducting. Alexander Schreiner was at the organ.

President Lee made the following remarks at the opening of the conference:

President Harold B. Lee

At this the opening session of the 142nd Semi-Annual Conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, we extend warm greetings to all assembled in this historic Tabernacle on Temple Square and to many members of the Church and friends tuned to these proceedings by television and radio.

This is an especially significant meeting, being a Solemn Assembly where the President of the Church and other Church officials will be presented for sustaining vote.

We take a sad note of the death of President Joseph Fielding Smith, the tenth President of the Church, who passed away quietly on Sunday, July 2, 1972, in his ninety-sixth year after having served as an apostle of the Lord, Jesus Christ, for a period of over sixty years. We pay our honor and respect to this great, deceased leader who passed away, as it were, in the twinkling of an eye after a life filled with selfless service.

All of the General Authorities are present on the stand this morning with the exception of Brothers Alvin R. Dyer and Milton R. Hunter, who are convalescing at home, acting upon the advice of their doctors. I have talked with their wives this morning and they want me to express to you their appreciation for your faith and your love and your continued support. We extend our love and best wishes to these brethren also.

We extend a cordial welcome to special guests present this morning—government and educational leaders, our regional representatives, stake and mission presidencies, temple presidencies, bishoprics, and members of the general auxiliary boards.

During the past two days the general officers and teachers of the Relief Society have been convened in their annual conference. May the Lord's choicest blessings be with these faithful sisters for the outstanding service they are rendering to the women of the Church.

The proceedings of this conference will be given extensive coverage in the United States and Canada over many television and radio stations, coast-to-coast, originating with KSL in Salt Lake City.

By means of satellite transmission, sessions of this conference will be heard over radio in countries of Central and South America, Mexico, and Australia.

Countries in Europe, South and

Friday, October 6

First Day

Central America, Africa, and parts of Asia, totaling nearly two-thirds of the world, will be able to receive broadcasts of these proceedings over International Short-wave Radio Station WNYW, with studios in New York City.

We deeply appreciate and thank the owners and operators of the radio and television stations for their co-operation in making possible such an extensive coverage of the proceedings of this conference.

Members of the Church will attend this conference from the stakes and missions covering most of the Free World.

The General Priesthood Conference to be held Saturday evening will be transmitted over closed-circuit from the Salt Lake Tabernacle to over 180,000 men of the priesthood assembled in approximately 750 buildings throughout the United States and Canada.

We should like to express our appreciation also for the beautiful flowers that decorate the stand.

The Sunday School Conference meeting will be held this evening at seven o'clock in the Salt Lake Tabernacle. All Sunday School officers and teachers and their families are invited to attend. We also recommend that all members of the priesthood who have Sunday School responsibilities be in attendance at this meeting.

Under the direction of the First Presidency there will be a Welfare-Agricultural Meeting held in the Assembly Hall tomorrow (Saturday) morning at 7:30 o'clock. Invited to attend this special session are all stake presidencies, high councilors, bishops, agricultural operating committees, stake and ward Relief Society presidents, and others responsible for operating Welfare Production Projects.

We are favored this morning by the presence of the Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir with Richard P.

Condie conducting and Alexander Schreiner at the organ.

We shall begin this session by the chorus singing, "Thou Wilt Keep Him in Perfect Peace."

The invocation will then be offered by Elder Henry D. Taylor, Assistant to the Twelve.

The Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir sang the song, "Thou Wilt Keep Him in Perfect Peace."

The opening prayer was offered by Elder Henry D. Taylor, Assistant to the Twelve.

President Lee

The Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir will now sing "Give Ear, O Lord."

The hymn, "Give Ear, O Lord," was rendered by the Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir.

President Lee

President N. Eldon Tanner will now present the General Authorities, General Officers, and General Auxiliary Officers of the Church for the sustaining vote of this Solemn Assembly.

President N. Eldon Tanner

THE PROCEDURE FOR SUSTAINING PRESIDENT HAROLD B. LEE, FOR THE REORGANIZATION OF THE FIRST PRESIDENCY, AND THE SUSTAINING OF ALL THE OTHER GENERAL AUTHORITIES AND GENERAL OFFICERS OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER-DAY SAINTS

This, brothers and sisters, is a very solemn occasion. We so approach it and should so conduct it. It will take quite a time; but if we are in the frame of mind and spirit which we should be in, I am sure it will not be tedious.

We are met in the Tabernacle on Temple Square, Salt Lake City, in a formal Solemn Assembly of the body of the Church to express the voice of the Church in a first sustaining vote for a new President of the Church. This proceeding is in accordance with the practice of the Church from the first sustaining vote cast by a General Conference for President John Taylor, until the present time.

The Priesthood of the Church, insofar as the Tabernacle can accommodate them, is seated here by Priesthood quorums.

The First Presidency, the Council of the Twelve, with their Assistants, the Patriarch to the Church, the Presidents of the First Council of Seventy, and the Presiding Bishopric occupy their usual seats on the Tabernacle stand.

The Regional Representatives of the Twelve and the Mission Representatives of the Twelve and the First Council of Seventy occupy the seats to the north and south of the stand, both lower seats within the railing and those on the stand level, and the front seats in the body of the hall.

The Patriarchs occupy the seats near the front in the body of the hall.

The High Priests of the Church, including Presidents of Stakes and their Counselors, the High Councilors, the Presidencies and members of quorums, and Ward Bishoprics, occupy the center of the building on the main floor, as far to the eastward as the galleries.

The Seventies occupy the north part of the building on the main floor under the north gallery.

The Elders occupy the south part of the building on the main floor under the galleries.

The Aaronic Priesthood (Priests, Teachers, and Deacons) occupy the seats on the main floor, just back of the High Priests, under the gallery on the east.

The general membership of the Church occupy the rest of the building.

The voting will be by Priesthood quorums first, and then by the Conference assembled.

The quorums and groups of quorums will vote in the following order:

1. The First Presidency
2. The Quorum of the Twelve
3. The Patriarchs
4. The High Priests, including the Assistants to the Twelve, Regional Representatives and Mission Representatives, the Presidents of Stakes and their Counselors, the High Councilors, Presidencies of quorums, quorum members, the Presiding Bishopric, and Ward Bishoprics.
5. The Seventies
6. The Elders
7. The Aaronic Priesthood (Priests, Teachers, and Deacons).

8. The whole congregation here assembled, including the Priesthood.

The voting will be in the following manner:

As each quorum or group is called, they will be asked to vote to sustain the officer proposed. Those voting will when called upon arise to their feet. When the affirmative vote is called for, those so voting will bring their right arms to the square to manifest to the Lord that they sustain the officer for whom they are voting. They will then drop their hands. Then those opposing will be asked to bring their right arms to the square to bear witness to the Lord that they are not willing to sustain the officer whom they are called upon to sustain.

When both affirmative and negative votes are cast, the members of the quorum will resume their seats.

All of the quorums will vote in this manner.

Everyone is perfectly free to vote

Friday, October 5

First Day

as he wishes. There is no compulsion whatsoever in this voting. When you vote affirmatively you make a solemn covenant with the Lord that you will sustain, that is, give your full loyalty and support, without equivocation or reservation, to the officer for whom you vote.

After all the quorums have so voted, a vote will then be called of the whole congregation, those bearing the priesthood and those not bearing it. All will arise. Those voting to sustain will raise their right arms to the square, to witness that they sustain the officers for whom they vote. After they lower their hands the opposing vote will be called for and will be manifested by raising the right arm to the square.

The officers so to be voted for by quorums are the following.

The President of the Church;

The First Counselor to the President of the Church;

The Second Counselor to the President of the Church;

The President of the Quorum of the Twelve;

The Council of the Twelve;

The Patriarch to the Church;

The Sustaining of the Counselors in the Presidency, the Council of the Twelve, and the Patriarch, as Prophets, Seers and Revelators to the Church.

After the vote by quorums to sustain these officers, the rest of the General Authorities, the General Officers of the Church, and the General Auxiliary Officers of the Church will be sustained by voting as in the ordinary General Conference. This is in accordance with the procedure set by President John Taylor.

Please be ready to begin voting. Only Church members are entitled to vote.

Only one quorum, or group of quorums, as the case may be, will stand at a time in voting by quorums. Each quorum, or group of quorums, will please arise when requested and remain standing until requested to be seated.

May the Lord guide us and may His Spirit attend us as we go forward in this solemn service, established by the Lord so that each member of His Church may have a voice in sustaining those whom He has called to preside over it and to direct its work, to the salvation and exaltation of mankind.

We shall first vote by quorums to sustain the President of the Church and his Counselors.

VOTING ON FIRST PRESIDENCY

The First Presidency will please arise.

It is proposed that we sustain Harold Bingham Lee as Prophet, Seer, and Revelator, and President of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain Nathan Eldon Tanner as First Counselor in the First Presidency of the Church.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain Marion George Romney as Second Counselor in the First Presidency of the Church.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

The First Presidency will please be seated.

The Quorum of the Twelve will please arise.

It is proposed that we sustain Harold Bingham Lee as Prophet, Seer, and Revelator, and President of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain Nathan Eldon Tanner as First Counselor in the First Presidency of the Church.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain Marion George Romney as Second Counselor in the First Presidency of the Church.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

The Council of the Twelve will please be seated.

The Patriarchs of the Church here assembled, including the Patriarch to the Church, will please arise.

It is proposed that we sustain Harold Bingham Lee as Prophet, Seer, and Revelator, and President of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain Nathan Eldon Tanner as First Counselor in the First Presidency of the Church.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain Marion George Romney as Second Counselor in the First Presidency of the Church.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

The Patriarchs of the Church will please be seated.

The High Priests of the Church here assembled, including the Assistants to the Twelve, the Regional, Representatives of the Twelve, the Mission Representatives of the Twelve and the First Council of Seventy, the Presidents of Stakes and their Counselors, the High Councilors, the Presidencies of quorums, the quorum members, the Presiding

Bishopric, and Ward Bishoprics, will please arise.

It is proposed that we sustain Harold Bingham Lee as Prophet, Seer, and Revelator, and President of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain Nathan Eldon Tanner as First Counselor in the First Presidency of the Church.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain Marion George Romney as Second Counselor in the First Presidency of the Church.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

The High Priests of the Church will please be seated.

The Seventies of the Church here assembled, including the Presidents of the First Council of Seventy, the Presidencies of other quorums of seventies, and quorum members, will please arise.

It is proposed that we sustain Harold Bingham Lee as Prophet, Seer, and Revelator, and President of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain Nathan Eldon Tanner as First Counselor in the First Presidency of the Church.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain Marion George Romney as Second Counselor in the First Presidency of the Church.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

Friday, October 6

First Day

The Seventies of the Church will please be seated.

The Elders of the Church here assembled, including the Presidencies of quorums and quorum members, will please arise.

It is proposed that we sustain Harold Bingham Lee as Prophet, Seer, and Revelator, and President of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain Nathan Eldon Tanner as First Counselor in the First Presidency of the Church.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain Marion George Romney as Second Counselor in the First Presidency of the Church.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

The Elders of the Church will please be seated.

The Aaronic Priesthood of the Church here assembled, including the Presidencies of Teachers and Deacons quorums, and members of Priests, Teachers, and Deacons quorums, will please arise.

It is proposed that we sustain Harold Bingham Lee as Prophet, Seer, and Revelator, and President of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain Nathan Eldon Tanner as First Counselor in the First Presidency of the Church.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain Marion George Romney as Second Counselor in the First Presidency of the Church.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

The Aaronic Priesthood of the Church will please be seated.

The entire congregation of the Church here assembled, all the members of the Church, those bearing the priesthood, and those not bearing it, will please arise. We suggest that those seated in the Assembly Hall likewise arise and join in the voting, and likewise all those listening in on the air, or viewing these proceedings by television.

It is proposed that we sustain Harold Bingham Lee as Prophet, Seer, and Revelator, and President of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain Nathan Eldon Tanner as First Counselor in the First Presidency of the Church.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain Marion George Romney as Second Counselor in the First Presidency of the Church.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

The Congregation will please be seated.

President Lee, so far as noted, the last vote and all the other votes preceding it were unanimous.

VOTING ON THE PRESIDENT OF THE TWELVE APOSTLES AND THE FULL QUORUM OF THE TWELVE APOSTLES

We shall next vote to sustain the President of the Quorum of the Twelve and then to sustain all the members of the Quorum.

The First Presidency will please arise.

It is proposed that we sustain Spencer Woolley Kimball as President of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain as members of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints: Spencer W. Kimball, Ezra Taft Benson, Mark E. Petersen, Delbert L. Stapley, LeGrand Richards, Hugh B. Brown, Howard W. Hunter, Gordon B. Hinckley, Thomas S. Monson, Boyd K. Packer, Marvin J. Ashton, and Bruce R. McConkie.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

The First Presidency will please be seated.

The Quorum of the Twelve will please arise.

It is proposed that we sustain Spencer Woolley Kimball as President of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain as members of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints: Spencer W. Kimball, Ezra Taft Benson, Mark E. Petersen, Delbert L. Stapley, LeGrand Richards, Hugh B. Brown, Howard W. Hunter, Gordon B. Hinckley, Thomas S. Monson, Boyd K. Packer, Marvin J. Ashton, and Bruce R. McConkie.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

The Quorum of the Twelve will please be seated,

The Patriarchs of the Church here assembled, including the Patriarch to the Church, will please arise:

It is proposed that we sustain Spencer Woolley Kimball as President of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain as members of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints: Spencer W. Kimball, Ezra Taft Benson, Mark E. Petersen, Delbert L. Stapley, LeGrand Richards, Hugh B. Brown, Howard W. Hunter, Gordon B. Hinckley, Thomas S. Monson, Boyd K. Packer, Marvin J. Ashton, and Bruce R. McConkie.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

The Patriarchs of the Church will please be seated.

The High Priests of the Church here assembled, including the Assistants to the Twelve, Regional Representatives of the Twelve, Mission Representatives of the Twelve and First Council of Seventy, the Presidents of Stakes and their Counselors, the High Councilors, the Presidencies of quorums, the quorum members, the Presiding Bishopric, and Ward Bishoprics, will please arise.

It is proposed that we sustain Spencer Woolley Kimball as President of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain as members of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints: Spencer W. Kimball, Ezra Taft Benson, Mark E. Petersen, Delbert

Friday, October 6

First Day

L. Stapley, LeGrand Richards, Hugh B. Brown, Howard W. Hunter, Gordon B. Hinckley, Thomas S. Monson, Boyd K. Packer, Marvin J. Ashton, and Bruce R. McConkie.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

The High Priests of the Church will please be seated.

The Seventies of the Church here assembled, including the Presidents of the First Council of Seventy, the Presidencies of other quorums, and quorum members, will please arise.

It is proposed that we sustain Spencer Woolley Kimball as President of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain as members of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints: Spencer W. Kimball, Ezra Taft Benson, Mark E. Petersen, Delbert L. Stapley, LeGrand Richards, Hugh B. Brown, Howard W. Hunter, Gordon B. Hinckley, Thomas S. Monson, Boyd K. Packer, Marvin J. Ashton, and Bruce R. McConkie.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

The Seventies of the Church will please be seated.

The Elders of the Church here assembled, including the Presidencies of quorums and quorum members, will please arise.

It is proposed that we sustain Spencer Woolley Kimball as President of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain as members of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints: Spencer W. Kimball, Ezra Taft Benson, Mark E. Petersen, Delbert L. Stapley, LeGrand Richards, Hugh B. Brown, Howard W. Hunter, Gordon B. Hinckley, Thomas S. Monson, Boyd K. Packer, Marvin J. Ashton, and Bruce R. McConkie.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

The Elders of the Church will please be seated.

The Aaronic Priesthood of the Church here assembled, including the Presidencies of Teachers and Deacons quorums, and members of Priests, Teachers and Deacons quorums will please arise.

It is proposed that we sustain Spencer Woolley Kimball as President of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain as members of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints: Spencer W. Kimball, Ezra Taft Benson, Mark E. Petersen, Delbert L. Stapley, LeGrand Richards, Hugh B. Brown, Howard W. Hunter, Gordon B. Hinckley, Thomas S. Monson, Boyd K. Packer, Marvin J. Ashton, and Bruce R. McConkie.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

The Aaronic Priesthood of the Church will please be seated.

The entire congregation of the Church here assembled, all the members of the Church, those bearing the priesthood, and those not bearing it, will please arise. Again we suggest that those seated in the Assembly Hall, and those listening by radio or viewing these services on television, arise and join in this voting.

It is proposed that we sustain Spencer Woolley Kimball as President of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain as members of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints: Spencer W. Kimball, Ezra Taft Benson, Mark E. Petersen, Delbert L. Stapley, LeGrand Richards, Hugh B. Brown, Howard W. Hunter, Gordon B. Hinckley, Thomas S. Monson, Boyd K. Packer, Marvin J. Ashton, and Bruce R. McConkie.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

The Congregation will please be seated.

So far as observed, this voting was unanimous in the affirmative.

VOTING ON THE PATRIARCH TO THE CHURCH

We shall next vote to sustain the Patriarch to the Church.

The First Presidency will please arise.

It is proposed that we sustain Eldred G. Smith as Patriarch to the Church.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

The First Presidency will please be seated.

The Quorum of the Twelve will please arise:

It is proposed that we sustain Eldred G. Smith as Patriarch to the Church.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

The Quorum of the Twelve will please be seated.

The Patriarchs of the Church here assembled, including the Patriarch to the Church, will please arise:

It is proposed that we sustain Eldred G. Smith as Patriarch to the Church.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

The Patriarchs of the Church will please be seated.

The High Priests of the Church here assembled, including the Assistants to the Twelve, the Regional Representatives of the Twelve, the Mission Representatives of the Twelve and First Council of Seventy, the Presidents of Stakes and their Counselors, the High Councilors, the Presidencies of quorums, the quorum members, the Presiding Bishopric and Ward Bishoprics will please arise.

It is proposed that we sustain Eldred G. Smith as Patriarch to the Church.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

The High Priests of the Church will please be seated.

The Seventies of the Church here assembled, including the Presidents of the First Council of Seventy, the Presidencies of other quorums and quorum members, will please arise.

It is proposed that we sustain Eldred G. Smith as Patriarch to the Church.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

The Seventies of the Church will please be seated.

The Elders of the Church here assembled, including the Presidencies of quorums and quorum members, will please arise.

It is proposed that we sustain Eldred G. Smith as Patriarch to the Church.

Friday, October 6

First Day

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

The Elders of the Church will please be seated.

The Aaronic Priesthood of the Church here assembled, including the Presidencies of Teachers and Deacons quorums, and members of Priests, Teachers, and Deacons quorums, will please arise.

It is proposed that we sustain Eldred G. Smith as Patriarch to the Church.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

The Aaronic Priesthood of the Church will please be seated.

The entire Congregation of the Church here assembled, all the members of the Church, those bearing the priesthood and those not bearing it, will please arise. Again will those in the Assembly Hall, and those listening by radio or viewing these services on television, arise and join in the voting.

It is proposed that we sustain Eldred G. Smith as Patriarch to the Church.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

The Congregation will please be seated.

This vote was likewise unanimous in the affirmative.

VOTING ON PROPHETS, SEERS, AND REVELATORS

We shall next vote to sustain the Prophets, Seers, and Revelators to the Church.

The First Presidency will please arise.

It is proposed that we sustain the Counselors in the First Presidency, the Twelve Apostles, and the Patriarch to the Church, as Prophets, Seers, and Revelators.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

The First Presidency will please be seated.

The Quorum of the Twelve will please arise.

It is proposed that we sustain the Counselors in the First Presidency, the Twelve Apostles, and the Patriarch to the Church, as Prophets, Seers, and Revelators.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

The Quorum of the Twelve will please be seated.

The Patriarchs of the Church here assembled, including the Patriarch to the Church, will please arise:

It is proposed that we sustain the Counselors in the First Presidency, the Twelve Apostles, and the Patriarch to the Church, as Prophets, Seers, and Revelators.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

The Patriarchs of the Church will please be seated.

The High Priests of the Church here assembled, including the Assistants to the Twelve, the Regional Representatives of the Twelve, the Mission Representatives of the Twelve and First Council of Seventy, the Presidents of Stakes and their Counselors, the High Councilors, the Presidencies of Quorums, the quorum members, the Presiding Bishopric, and Ward Bishoprics, will please arise.

It is proposed that we sustain the Counselors in the First Presidency, the Twelve Apostles, and the Patriarch to the Church, as Prophets, Seers, and Revelators.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

The High Priests of the Church will please be seated.

The Seventies of the Church here assembled, including the Presidents of the First Council of Seventy, the Presidencies of other quorums and quorum members, will please arise.

It is proposed that we sustain the Counselors in the First Presidency, the Twelve Apostles, and the Patriarch to the Church, as Prophets, Seers, and Revelators.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

The Seventies of the Church will please be seated.

The Elders of the Church here assembled, including the Presidencies of quorums and quorum members, will please arise.

It is proposed that we sustain the Counselors in the First Presidency, the Twelve Apostles, and the Patriarch to the Church, as Prophets, Seers, and Revelators.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

The Elders of the Church will please be seated.

The Aaronic Priesthood of the Church here assembled, including the Presidencies of Teachers and Deacons quorums, and members of Priests, Teachers, and Deacons quorums, will please arise.

It is proposed that we sustain the Counselors in the First Presidency, the Twelve Apostles; and the Patriarch to the Church, as Prophets, Seers, and Revelators.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

The Aaronic Priesthood of the Church will please be seated.

The entire congregation of the Church here assembled, all the members of the Church, those bearing the priesthood, and those not bearing it, will please arise. Once more we suggest that those in the Assembly Hall, and those listening by radio or viewing these services on television, also arise and join in the voting.

It is proposed that we sustain the Counselors in the First Presidency, the Twelve Apostles, and the Patriarch to the Church, as Prophets, Seers, and Revelators.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

The Congregation will please be seated.

President Lee, so far as observed, the voting on this proposal was unanimous in the affirmative.

Following the procedure used by President John Taylor, the voting to sustain the other General Authorities, the General Officers of the Church, not heretofore sustained, and the heads of the auxiliary organizations will be in the form followed in regular General Conferences. The audience will remain seated while voting; all the members will vote at the same time, by the uplifted hand. We suggest that those in the Assembly Hall, and those listening by radio or viewing these services on television, also join in this voting.

It is proposed that we sustain as the Assistants to the Twelve:

Alma Sonne
ElRay L. Christiansen
Sterling W. Sill
Henry D. Taylor
Alvin R. Dyer
Franklin D. Richards
Theodore M. Burton
Bernard P. Brockbank
James A. Cullimore

Marion D. Hanks
Joseph Anderson
David B. Haight
William H. Bennett
John H. Vandenberg
Robert L. Simpson
O. Leslie Stone
James E. Faust
L. Tom Perry

Friday, October 6

First Day

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain Harold B. Lee as Trustee-in-Trust for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the sign.

It is proposed that we sustain as

The First Council of Seventy:

Seymour Dilworth Young	Hartman Rector, Jr.
Milton R. Hunter	Loren C. Dunn
Albert Theodore Tuttle	Rex D. Pinegar
Paul H. Dunn

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain as the Presiding Bishopric of the Church:

Victor L. Brown, Presiding Bishop

H. Burke Peterson, First Counselor

Vaughn J. Featherstone, Second Counselor

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain all Regional Representatives of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles and all Mission Representatives of the Quorum of the Twelve and First Council of Seventy as they are at present constituted.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain as Church Historian Leonard J. Arrington; as Church Archivist, Earl E. Olsen; and as Church Librarian, Donald T. Schmidt.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain the following General Priesthood Committees:

PRIESTHOOD WELFARE COMMITTEE

Victor L. Brown, Chairman

Junior Wright Child, Managing Director

PRIESTHOOD HOME TEACHING AND FAMILY HOME EVENING COMMITTEE

Boyd K. Packer, Advisor

James A. Cullimore, Managing Director

PRIESTHOOD MISSIONARY COMMITTEE

Spencer W. Kimball, Chairman of Executive Committee;

Gordon B. Hinckley, Thomas S. Monson, and Bruce R. McConkie,

Vice Chairmen

Loren C. Dunn, Managing Director

PRIESTHOOD GENEALOGICAL COMMITTEE

Mark E. Petersen, Advisor

Howard W. Hunter, Advisor

Theodore M. Burton, Managing Director

UNIFIED SOCIAL SERVICES
Marvin J. Ashton, Advisor
Robert L. Simpson, Managing Director

PHYSICAL FACILITIES DEPARTMENT
Marvin J. Ashton, Advisor
John H. Vandenberg, Managing Director

DEPARTMENT OF INTERNAL COMMUNICATIONS
Thomas S. Monson, Boyd K. Packer, and
Marvin J. Ashton, Advisors
J. Thomas Fyans, Managing Director

DEPARTMENT OF EXTERNAL COMMUNICATIONS
Mark E. Petersen and Gordon B. Hinckley, Advisors
Wendell J. Ashton, Managing Director

COMMISSIONER, HEALTH SERVICES CORPORATION
Dr. James O. Mason

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain as the Church Board of Education:

CHURCH BOARD OF EDUCATION

Harold B. Lee	Boyd K. Packer
Nathan Eldon Tanner	Marvin J. Ashton
Marion G. Romney	Bruce R. McConkie
Spencer W. Kimball	Alvin R. Dyer
Ezra Taft Benson	Marion D. Hanks
Mark E. Petersen	A. Theodore Tuttle
Delbert L. Stapley	Paul H. Dunn
LeGrand Richards	Victor L. Brown
Hugh B. Brown	Belle S. Spafford
Howard W. Hunter
Gordon B. Hinckley

COMMISSIONER, CHURCH EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM
Neal A. Maxwell

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain as the Church Finance Committee:

Wilford G. Edling
Harold H. Bennett
Glenn E. Nielson
Weston E. Hamilton
O. Leslie Stone

CHURCH AUDITOR
James A. Norberg

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain as officers of the Tabernacle Choir: Isaac M. Stewart, President; Richard P. Condie, Conductor; Jay E. Welch, Assistant Conductor; Tabernacle Organists: Alexander Schreiner, Chief Organist; Robert N. Cundick; Roy M. Darley; Frank W. Asper, Organist Emeritus.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

It is proposed that we sustain the following as the General Auxiliary Officers of the Church:

RELIEF SOCIETY

Belle Smith Spafford, President
Marianne Clark Sharp, First Counselor
Louise Wallace Madsen, Second Counselor
with all members of the Board as at present constituted

SUNDAY SCHOOL

Russell M. Nelson, President
Joseph B. Wirthlin, First Counselor
Richard L. Warner, Second Counselor
with all members of the Board as at present constituted.

YOUNG MEN'S MUTUAL IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION

W. Jay Eldredge, President
George I. Cannon, First Counselor
Robert L. Backman, Second Counselor
with all members of the Board as at present constituted.

YOUNG WOMEN'S MUTUAL IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION

Florence Smith Jacobsen, President
Margaret Romney Jackson, First Counselor
Dorothy Porter Holt, Second Counselor
with all members of the Board as at present constituted.

PRIMARY ASSOCIATION

LaVern Watts Parmley, President
Naomi Ward Randall, First Counselor
Florence Reece Lane, Second Counselor
with all members of the Board as at present constituted.

Those in favor will raise their right hands; those opposed will manifest it by the same sign.

President Lee, so far as I have observed, the voting in each case was unanimous in the affirmative.

President Harold B. Lee

Thank you. Thank you, President Tanner for that excellent presentation at this Solemn Assembly.

We will now invite Elder Bruce R. McConkie to take his place on the stand with the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles. This is sort of a foot of the ladder, Brother McConkie. We welcome you.

We also invite O. Leslie Stone, James E. Faust and L. Tom Perry to take their places likewise with the Assistants to the Twelve.

Will Elder Rex D. Pinegar, who has been sustained as a new member of the First Council of Seventy, please come forward and take his place with the First Council of Seventy.

We welcome you brethren. As you come to know these wonderful men, many of them are well known to you already, as we love them and as the Lord loves them, you will come to love them and sustain them because of the great strength they will bring to the General Authorities of the Church.

President Harold B. Lee

Today, at the greatest moment of my life, I find myself without words to express my deep and innermost feelings. What I may say, therefore, must be actuated by the Spirit of the Lord, that you, my beloved Saints of the Most High God, may feel the depths of my soul-searching on this momentous and historic occasion.

Order of the priesthood

As I have participated with you in this moving experience of a solemn assembly, there has been brought more forcibly than ever to my mind the significance of the great revelation of the Lord given to the Church in 1835. In this revelation the Lord gave specific instructions setting forth the order of the priesthood in the government of the church and kingdom of God.

In this revelation the Lord specified four requisites in the establishment of the First Presidency, or the presidency of the Melchizedek, or High, Priesthood of the Church, as the Lord speaks of it. (D&C 107:22.)

First, it was requisite that there be three presiding high priests.

Second, they were to be chosen by the body (which has been construed to be the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles).

Third, they must be appointed and ordained by the same body—the Quorum of the Twelve.

Fourth, they must be upheld by the confidence, faith, and prayers of the Church.

All of these steps were taken in order that the quorum of the First Presidency could be formed to preside over the Church.

Those first steps were taken by action of the Twelve and they were attended to in a sacred meeting convened in the temple on July 7, 1972, where the First Presidency were named.

Upheld by membership

Today, as never before, have I more fully realized the importance of that last requirement: that this presidency, in the Lord's language, must be upheld by the confidence, the faith, and the prayers of the Church—which means, of course, the entire membership of the Church.

We witnessed a short while ago the outpouring of love and fellowship that was in evidence in the great regional conference of our wonderful Lamanite Saints from Central America and Mexico, assembled in Mexico City in August. Over 16,000 Saints were gathered together in a great auditorium, where they sustained their General Authorities.

Bonds of brotherhood

Again, in the mighty demonstration of this solemn assembly, I am moved

Friday, October 6

First Day

with emotions beyond expression as I have felt the true love and bonds of brotherhood. There has been here an overwhelming spiritual endowment, attesting, no doubt, that in all likelihood we are in the presence of personages, seen and unseen, who are in attendance. Who knows but that even our Lord and Master would be near us on such an occasion as this, for we, and the world, must never forget that this is his church, and under his almighty direction we are to serve! Indeed, I would remind you what he declared in a similar conference of Saints in Fayette, New York, and undoubtedly would remind us again today. The Lord said: "Behold, verily, verily, I say unto you that mine eyes are upon you. I am in your midst and ye cannot see me." (D&C 38:7.)

Presidents of the Church

On the sacred occasion three months ago when I began to sense the magnitude of the overwhelming responsibility which I must now assume, I went to the holy temple. There, in prayerful meditation, I looked upon the paintings of those men of God—true, pure men, God's noblemen—who had preceded me in a similar calling.

A few days ago in the early morning hours, in my private study at home and all alone with my thoughts, I read the tributes paid to each of the Presidents by those who had been most closely associated with each of them.

Joseph Smith was the one whom the Lord raised up from boyhood and endowed with divine authority and taught the things necessary for him to know and to obtain the priesthood and to lay the foundation for God's kingdom in these latter days.

There was President Brigham Young, who was foreordained before this world was, for his divine calling to lead the persecuted Saints in fleeing from the wrath that threatened the Saints in those early gathering places in Missouri and Illinois and to pioneer the building of an inland commonwealth in the tops of these majestic mountains, to fulfill God's purposes.

To look upon the features of President John Taylor was to gain a realization that here was one, as President Joseph F. Smith spoke of him, "One of the purest men I ever knew. . . ."

As I saw the sainted face of President Wilford Woodruff, I was aware that here was a man like Nathanael of old, in whom there was no guile, and susceptible to the impressions of the Spirit of the Lord, by whose light he seemed to almost always walk "not knowing beforehand the thing he was to do."

While President Lorenzo Snow had but a brief administration, he had a special mission to establish his people on a more solid temporal foundation by the determined application of the law of sacrifice, to relieve the great burdens placed upon the Church because of mistakes and errors which had unwittingly crept in.

When I want to seek for a more clear definition of doctrinal subjects, I have usually turned to the writings and sermons of President Joseph F. Smith. As I looked upon his noble stature, I thought of the nine-year-old boy helping his widowed mother across the plains and the 15-year-old missionary on the slopes of Haleakala on the isle of Maui being strengthened by a heavenly vision with his uncle, Joseph Smith. It was he who presided during the stormy days when an antagonistic press maligned the Church, but his was the steady arm by the Lord's appointment to carry off the Church triumphantly.

I suppose I never drew closer to the meaning of a divine calling than when President Heber J. Grant placed his hands upon my shoulders and, with a deep feeling akin to mine, announced my calling to be an apostle of the Lord Jesus Christ. As his picture looked down upon me, there came again to my mind the prophetic words of his inspired blessing when I was ordained in the holy temple under his hands.

President George Albert Smith was a disciple of friendship and love. He was indeed a friend to everyone. My gaze at his likeness seemed to give me a warmth of that radiance which made every man his friend.

Tall and impressive was President David O. McKay, as he now looked at me with those piercing eyes, which always seemed to search my very soul. Never was I privileged to be in his presence but that I felt for a brief moment, as I had done on so many occasions, that I was a better man for having been in his company.

To him who sought no earthly honors, but whose whole soul delighted in the things of the spirit, President Joseph Fielding Smith was there with his smiling face, my beloved prophet-leader who made no compromise with truth. As "the finger of God touched him and he slept," he seemed in that brief moment to be passing to me, as it were, a sceptre of righteousness as though to say to me, "Go thou and do likewise."

Soul-searching thoughts

Now I stood alone with my thoughts. Somehow the impressions that came to me were, simply, that the only true record that will ever be made of my service in my new calling will be the record that I may have written in the hearts and lives of those with whom I have served and labored, within and without the Church.

The day after this appointment, following the passing of our beloved President Smith, my attention was called to a paragraph from a sermon delivered in 1853 in a general conference by Elder Orson Hyde, then a member of the Twelve. This provoked some soul-searching in me also.

The subject of his address was "The Man to Lead God's People," and I quote briefly from his sermon: "... it is invariably the case," he said, "that when an individual is ordained and appointed to lead the people, he has passed through tribulations and trials, and has proven himself before God, and before His people, that he is worthy of the situation which he holds. . . . that when a person has not been tried, that has not proved himself before God, and before His people, and before the councils of the Most High, to be worthy, he is not going to step in and lead the Church and people of God. It has never been so, but from the beginning some one that understands the Spirit and counsel of the Almighty, that knows the Church, and is known of her, is the character that will lead the Church." (Journal of Discourses, vol. 1, p. 123.)

As I have known of the lives of those who have preceded me, I have been made aware that each seemed to have had his special mission for his day and time.

A polished shaft

Then, with searching introspection, I thought of myself and my experiences of which Orson Hyde's appraisal had made reference. Then I recalled the words of the Prophet Joseph's characterization of himself, which seemed somewhat analogous to myself. He said:

"I am like a huge rough stone rolling down from a high mountain; and the only polishing I get is when some corner gets rubbed off by coming in contact with something else, striking with accelerated force against religious bigotry, priestcraft, lawyer-craft, doctor-craft, lying editors, suborned judges and jurors, and the authority of perjured executives, backed by mobs, blasphemers, licentious and corrupt men and women—all hell knocking off a corner here and a corner there. Thus will I become a smooth and polished shaft in the quiver of the Almighty. . . ." (Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, p. 304.)

These thoughts now running through my mind begin to give greater meaning to some of the experiences in my life, things that have happened which have been difficult for me to understand. At times it seemed as though I too was like a rough stone rolling down from a high mountain-side, being buffeted and polished, I suppose, by experiences, that I too might overcome and become a polished shaft in the quiver of the Almighty.

Maybe it was necessary that I too must learn obedience by the things that I might have suffered—to give me experiences that were for my good, to see if I could pass some of the various tests of mortality.

In the selection of my noble counselors, President N. Eldon Tanner and President Marion G. Romney, I learned that I was not alone with a rich measure of the gift of prophecy. They too had passed the tests, and before the Lord they had not been found wanting. How grateful I am for these noble men of the First Presidency and the Twelve and the other General Authorities.

The morning after my call came, as I knelt with my dear companion in prayer, my heart and soul seemed to reach out to the total membership of the Church with a special kind of fellowship and love which was like the opening of the windows of heaven, to give me a brief feeling of belonging to the more than three million members of the Church in all parts of the world.

Prayers of the saints

I repeat what I have said on other occasions, that I most fervently seek to be upheld by the confidence, faith, and prayers of all the faithful Saints everywhere, and I pledge to you that as you pray for me, I will earnestly try to so live that the Lord can answer your prayers through me.

In these last months, there seem to have been awakened in me new well-springs of spiritual understanding also. I know full well the truth of what the Prophet Joseph told the early missionaries to Great Britain: "The nearer a person approaches the Lord, a greater power will be manifested by the adversary to prevent the accomplishment of His purposes." (Orson F. Whitney, Life of Heber C. Kimball [Bookcraft, 1967], p. 131.)

There is no shadow of doubt in my mind that these things are as certain today as in that day, but also I am certain that, as the Lord said, "No weapon that is formed against you shall prosper; And if any man lift his voice against you he shall be confounded in mine own due time." (D&C 71:9-10.)

Solemn witness

How grateful I am for your loyalty and your sustaining vote! I bear you solemn witness as to the divine mission of the Savior and the certainty as to his guiding hand in the affairs of his church today, as in all dispensations of time.

I know, with a testimony more powerful than sight, that as the Lord declared, "The keys of the kingdom of God are committed unto man on the earth [from the Prophet Joseph Smith through his successors down to the present], and from thence shall the gospel roll forth unto the ends of the earth, as the stone which is cut out of the mountain without hands shall roll forth, until it has filled the whole earth.

"Wherefore, may the kingdom of God go forth, that the kingdom of heaven may come. . . ." (D&C 65:2, 6.)

I bear that testimony with all the conviction of my soul and leave my blessing upon the membership of the Church and the pure in heart everywhere, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

We shall ask Elder Bruce R. McConkie, newly sustained member of the Twelve, to speak to us.

Elder Bruce R. McConkie

Of the Council of the Twelve

I am grateful beyond any measure of expression, beyond any utterance in my power, for the blessings the Lord has so abundantly showered upon me, upon my family, and upon the faithful Saints in all the world. I now seek, most sincerely and devoutly, to be guided by the power of the Holy Ghost in bearing testimony of the truth and divinity of this glorious work in which we are all engaged. I pray also that the spirit of light and truth and edification so far present in this meeting may continue to rest in your hearts, so that you, being edified, will know of yourselves that those things about which I shall testify are true.

Gifts of the Spirit

As members of the church and kingdom of God on earth, we enjoy the gifts of the Spirit—those wonders and glories and miracles that a gracious and benevolent God always has bestowed upon his faithful saints. The first of these gifts listed in our modern revelation on spiritual gifts is the gift of testimony, the gift of revelation, the gift of knowing of the truth and divinity of the work. This gift is elsewhere described as the testimony of Jesus, which is the spirit of prophecy. This is my gift. I know this work is true.

I have a perfect knowledge that Jesus Christ is the Son of the living God and that he was crucified for the sins of the world. I know that Joseph Smith is a prophet of God through whose instrumentality the fullness of the everlasting gospel has been restored again in our day. And I know that this Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is the kingdom of God on earth, and that as now constituted, with President Harold B. Lee at its head, it has the approval and approbation of the Lord, is in the line of its duty, and is preparing a people for the second coming of the Son of Man.

Same as anciently

And I know further that the Lord pours out upon his people today the same glorious and wondrous gifts enjoyed by the ancient saints. To us in this day he gives the spirit of prophecy and of revelation, even as he did to them of old. "I will tell you" the glories and wonders of the everlasting gospel, he says; "I will tell you in your mind and in your heart, by the Holy Ghost, which shall come upon you and which shall dwell in your heart. Now, behold, this is the spirit of revelation." (D&C 8:2-3.)

I know there is revelation in the Church because I have received revelation. I know God speaks in this day because he has spoken to me. I rejoice in the privilege and opportunity to serve as a witness of his name, to teach the truths of salvation which he has revealed, and then to testify that these doctrines are true.

The Lord's system

This course of teaching sound doctrine and of testifying of the truth is the Lord's system. Religion comes from God. There is no other source. That which is true, that which brings joy and peace into the hearts of men in this world and prepares them for eternal glory in the world to come—all this originates with the Lord. Man can no more create saving religion than he can resurrect himself.

God has given us the truths of salvation in this day on the same basis he has revealed them in every dispensation of the past. His system is now and always has been to reveal to apostles and prophets and righteous men the doctrines and truths of salvation and to command them to teach those truths and to bear witness of their verity to the world. They are to bear testimony that they know their teachings come from the Lord. His representatives and servants are always witnesses of the truth. I rejoice in the privilege of standing as a witness of the truth in this day.

Friday, October 6

First Day

Support of Presidency

I am grateful that I was privileged to raise my hand to the square and covenant in my mind and in my soul this day, as the Spirit of the Lord was poured out upon this great congregation, that I would sustain and uphold and take the counsel of these great men whom God has called to preside over his kingdom, the First Presidency of the Church—President Harold B. Lee, a seer, a man filled with the spirit of revelation and of wisdom who is on intimate terms with that Lord whose we are; President N. Eldon Tanner, the embodiment of integrity and the basic Christian virtues, who loves the Lord and keeps his commandments; President Marion G. Romney, a spiritual giant, a preacher of righteousness, who knows the Lord and teaches his doctrine. President Romney and I are members of the same family. After I had been told of my call, he said to me, "I think Granddad Redd [Lemuel Hardison Redd] will be glad to receive us." I said, "I am going to live so I will be worthy to go where he is." He said, "So am I."

With reference to these brethren who hold the keys of the kingdom of God at this hour, the voice of the Lord to his people is: "These are they whom I have chosen as the First Presidency of my Church. Follow them." And also, "... on them have I laid the burden of all the churches, ... and whosoever receiveth me, receiveth those, the First Presidency, whom I have sent. ..." (D&C 112:18-20).

I desire with all my heart to sustain and to uphold the Presidency of the Church, to walk in the light of the revelation and truth that comes from their lips, as they give the mind and will of the Lord, both to his people and to the honest truth seekers among all the nations of the earth. I know that the work is true.

Rededication

I think I speak for each one of you, I know I do for myself and my family, when I say that in this solemn assembly—with the outpouring of the Spirit of the Lord that has been present as we have sustained the authorities of the Church and as we have listened to President Lee as he spoke by the power of the Spirit—I think all of us desire to rededicate our lives to the principles of truth and righteousness for which these noble leaders, the Presidents of the Church named by President Lee, have lived and labored and died.

Let this then be our covenant—whatever the past has been—let this then be our covenant, that we will walk in all the ordinances of the Lord blameless. Let this be our covenant, that we will keep the commandments of God and be living witnesses of the truth and divinity of this glorious work, which is destined to sweep the earth as with a flood and which shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea.

O God, grant that I and my family and all the faithful members of the house of Israel may walk in truth and light, and having enjoyed the fellowship and kinship and association that is found nowhere else on earth outside the Church, let us enjoy that same spirit, that same fellowship in its eternal fullness, in the mansions and realms which are ahead.

All of this I say humbly and gratefully, in the spirit of testimony and of thanksgiving, and in the sacred name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

No one can listen to that testimony without knowing that the Lord has called the right man to be his new witness in this high place.

The congregation and Men's Chorus will now join in singing "God Moves in a Mysterious Way His Wonders to Perform."

After the singing, Elder John H. Vandenberg, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve, will speak to us, and then President Spencer W. Kimball will be our concluding speaker.

The Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir and the congregation sang "God Moves in A Mysterious Way His Wonders to Perform."

President Lee

Elder John H. Vandenberg, Assistant to the Twelve, will now speak to us.

Elder John H. Vandenberg

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

The dignity of the proceedings of this solemn assembly causes me to have the comforting assurance that the Lord, in his goodness, continues to provide inspired leadership and divine guidance to his church, the purpose of which is to build his kingdom upon the earth and serve his children. His church extends the invitation to all who so desire to partake of the power of the gospel, which will lift an individual out of oblivion and, in so doing, will give a feeling of satisfaction and happiness not to be found elsewhere. It provides the sources of control for self-improvement, a stable character, and a truly successful life.

Self-improvement

Who is there who has reached that point in life where he can afford to allow himself to stop growing or to stop improving? Although I never had the privilege of meeting her, I am told that my wife's mother often repeated the adage to her children: "If you consider yourself a nobody and do nothing to improve yourself to become a somebody, you truly will end up being a nobody." She, no doubt, understood the power and capacity of every soul for self-improvement.

It is highly doubtful that there is even one soul upon the earth, regardless of station or age, who does not have ample room for personal growth and improvement. Quoting the words of one of the Lord's prophets: "If we are no better tomorrow than we are today, we are not very useful." (David O. McKay, Pathways to Happiness [Bookcraft, 1957], p. 292.)

Lack of desire

The sad part of humanity seems to be the utter lack of desire, in the lives of many, to really do something about enlarging the vistas of their existence. A distinguished doctor made the observation that "for the great majority of people, the good life is identical with trivial entertainment, cheap music, superficial writing, and an unending stream of visual trash. Their life is divorced from an enthusiastic faith in the future. It is focused on immediate pleasures sustained by a simplification of the grave problems pressing upon them." (Dr. E. A. Gutkind, Quote—the Weekly Digest, vol. 51, no. 4, quote 32.)

Friday, October 6

First Day

Rather than accepting the challenge to change and grow, this type of person seemingly refuses to recognize the need to constructively reorganize portions of his life. One wonders, will the time ever come that will cause a reflection back on their lives? If so, their reaction could very well be as is expressed in a newspaper cartoon, under the heading "Ziggy," which said: "It's kind of a disappointment, after reflecting on your life, to finally come face-to-face with yourself in a mud puddle."

Use of leisure time

Listening to a commentator recently, I was impressed by a related idea. His comments included the following:

"Lin Yutang, the famous Chinese philosopher, has written: 'We do not know a nation until we know its pleasures of life, just as we do not know a man until we know how he spends his leisure. It is when a man ceases to do the things he has to do, and does the things he likes to do, that the character is revealed. It is when the repressions of society and business are gone and when the goads of money and fame and ambition are lifted, and a man's spirit wanders where it listeth, that we see the inner man, his real self.'"

Then he continued: "Have you ever thought much about that? Your leisure gives you away. I used to know a man who was head of a very large commercial empire. Beginning with nothing but ambition, he became a multimillionaire and, finally, retired as head of his far-flung company. He bought a large and magnificent yacht with which to cruise the world. And do you know what he did with his free time? He read salacious paperbacks and got falling-down drunk and had to be carried to bed, unconscious, every night. He's dead now. His leisure gave him away. There was nothing there. . . just nothing at all. He was a one idea man. Once he was away from that idea, he was a lost child in the wilderness. He didn't enjoy his yacht . . . travel meant nothing to him. He was a pitiful, unhappy cypher. Not because he was rich . . . there are thousands, millions just like him in every walk of life. It was just that his millions, which gave him access to the whole world, were worthless to him and accentuated his nothingness."

Then the commentator asked the question: "What do you do with your leisure time? It's a good idea to examine carefully this important segment of your life. It exposes the real person—but not the finished person. We can change. . . ." (Earl Nightingale, "Our Changing World," No. 2459. Used by permission.)

Need for change

Change is what it will take to bring any individual out of the dilemma of living with principles of error. I believe the greatest force in the world to cause such a change is the gospel of Jesus Christ. The apostle Paul experienced one of the greatest such changes that took place in any man, and he concluded: "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. . . ." (Rom. 1:16.)

The fourth Article of Faith reads: "We believe that the first principles and ordinances of the Gospel are: first, Faith in the Lord Jesus Christ; second, Repentance; third, Baptism by immersion for the remission of sins; fourth, Laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost." As we briefly consider each of these principles, we will be aware of the power embodied in each of them.

Faith

Faith is a principle of power. It is the cause of action. A prime example was taught by the Savior as we read in the seventeenth chapter of Matthew:

"And when they were come to the multitude, there came to him a certain man, kneeling down to him, and saying,

"Lord, have mercy on my son: for he is lunatick, and sore vexed: for oftentimes he falleth into the fire, and oft into the water.

"And I brought him to thy disciples, and they could not cure him.

"And Jesus rebuked the devil; and he departed out of him: and the child was cured from that very hour.

"Then came the disciples to Jesus apart, and said, Why could not we cast him out?

"And Jesus said unto them, because of your unbelief: for verily I say unto you, If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place; and it shall remove; and nothing shall be impossible unto you.

"Howbeit this kind goeth not out but by prayer and fasting." (Matt. 17: 14-16, 18-20.)

The evidence of the power of faith is clearly defined by the Savior. Faith in God will cause the miracle of change and set the course of action on the true purpose of life.

Repentance

Repentance follows faith as naturally as the day follows dawn. The poet writes: "The morning breaks, the shadows flee." (Hymns, no. 269.) Repentance is the very essence of change; it embodies the powerful principle of obedience to God's law and discipline of self. When applied to our lives, it provides a cleansing joy which surges through us.

It has been said: "Disgrace clings to no man after repenting, any more than feet defiled with mud of the world, come yet soiled and polluted from the cleansing bath." (Spurgeon.) King

Benjamin gives further emphasis to this thought:

"And again, believe that ye must repent of your sins and forsake them, and humble yourselves before God; and ask in sincerity of heart that he would forgive you; and now, if you believe all these things see that ye do them.

"And behold, I say unto you that if ye do this ye shall always rejoice, and be filled with the love of God, and always retain a remission of your sins; and ye shall grow in knowledge of the glory of him that created you. . . ." (Mosiah 4:10, 12.)

Baptism

Baptism requires obedience to the law of God. The divine fiat has been to call all men to repent and be baptized. Baptism is a companion to repentance. It is a principle and an ordinance of the gospel, and when complied with, it is the power of entering into the kingdom of God on earth. Jesus complied with this ordinance to fulfill all righteousness. The prophet Nephi said:

"And now, if the Lamb of God, he being holy, should have need to be baptized by water, to fulfil all righteousness, O then, how much more need have we, being unholy, to be baptized, yea, even by water!" (2 Ne. 31:5.)

The efficacy of the ordinance of baptism is unquestionable as it cleanses the reborn person.

Gift of the Holy Ghost

Baptism prepares the individual to receive the rebirth of the spirit, the laying on of hands, for the gift of the Holy Ghost. Joseph Fielding Smith brings to mind these words from the Prophet Joseph Smith:

"There is a difference between the Holy Ghost and the gift of the Holy Ghost. Cornelius received the Holy Ghost before he was baptized, which was the convincing power of God unto him of the truth of the Gospel, but he could not receive the gift of the Holy Ghost until after he was baptized. Had he not taken this sign or ordinance upon him, the Holy Ghost which convinced him of the truth of God, would have left him. Until he obeyed these ordinances and received the gift of the Holy Ghost, by the laying on of hands, according to the order of God, he could not have healed the sick or commanded an evil spirit to come out of a man, and it obey him. . . ." President Smith says further: "It mattereth not whether we live long or short on the earth after we come to a knowledge of these principles and obey them unto the end." (Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith [Deseret Book, 1961], p. 199.)

Unnumbered opportunities

In these principles we find the unfailing power to change. As to the effective use of our leisure time, we have, in the gospel, unnumbered opportunities. As one acquires knowledge of the gospel principles and pursues his course, he can successfully apply those principles to his individual circumstances, whether his position be one of great or meager possessions; whether it be early in life, during his economic production period, or in retirement. The gospel is meant to temper life and to bring it into true balance and fruition.

The Lord has decreed that "the Church hath need of every member." (See D&C 84:110.) This implies development of its members by participation in the programmed activities of children and youth, filling the numerous teaching opportunities, administration assignments, fulfillment of member duties, the fulfillment of priesthood duties, not forgetting to visit the homes of members (which, until this day, has not been attended to as the Lord directed), searching out the records of ancestors, and temple participation, all of which are only part of the never-ending list of activities with which to fill our leisure hours.

The individual power is attested to in this scripture: "Verily I say, men should be anxiously engaged in a good cause, and do many things of their own free will, and bring to pass much righteousness; For the power is in them, wherein they are agents unto themselves. And inasmuch as men do good they shall in nowise lose their reward." (D&C 58:27-28.)

Success or failure

As we consider the aspects of growth and achievement, the word success obviously comes to the fore—success as it applies in terms of the world. Success or failure can carry most of us either to the peaks of happiness or to the depths of despair. People will do almost anything to keep from being branded a failure.

If a man achieves worldly success and does not blend into his life a program of self-improvement to bring about a sensible balance, he no doubt will end up as a failure. He may win the honor of men, but what about his salvation—his eternal future? Think back on the example of the man with the yacht. Was he successful? Worldly-wise, yes! But when it comes to the things that count, wasn't he more like the man who "spent all his life letting down empty buckets into empty wells; and he is frittering away his age in trying to draw them up again"? (Sydney Smith in John Bartlett's Familiar Quotations, p. 523.) Such people seek fulfillment and meaning in their lives but are unable to find it, because they themselves have misplaced their values.

Recently at a stake priesthood meeting I was greeted by two good convert brethren from the Netherlands, one of whom I like to think I had some participation in his conversion. I turned to him and asked: "Have you ever been sorry for having joined the Church?" His eyes brightened, and he responded with happy enthusiasm, saying, "No, never!"

Here, in my opinion, was a successful man. No doubt he had many vicissitudes in his life. His worldly possessions were probably minimal, but his good works—treasures in heaven—are innumerable. Here is evidence of just one of the thousands—millions—who have had similar experiences of becoming a "somebody."

And I ask you, brethren, sisters, where would we be, where would you be, where would I be, if it were not for the power of the gospel of Christ? I bear witness to its power and I do so humbly in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

We have just listened to Elder John H. Vandenberg, Assistant to the Twelve.

President Spencer W. Kimball, President of the Quorum of the Twelve, will now be our concluding speaker.

President Spencer W. Kimball

President of the Council of the Twelve

Beloved brethren and sisters and friends: Long will this solemn assembly remain in our memories. Long will we tingle from the impressive address of President Lee, following the voting. I think almost if one had a heart of stone, it would melt with the demonstration of this morning to see all the various groups raise their hands in unison to support the leaders of the Church, and it touched my heart deeply.

Sustaining of President Lee

Another act in the greatest drama is being played. No theatrical stage has ever produced such acts of such engrossing interest and importance as have been the scenes of the history of the Church in these last days. The stage has changed from New York to Ohio to Missouri to Illinois to Utah. The conditions have altered and the people who have taken the parts are different people. Today another great leader is sustained. What a privilege for us who are here to be a part of such an important event! In this change in leadership of the Church, it is important that the quorums of the priesthood and the assembly of the Saints have an opportunity to express their gratitude, pledge their support and confidence, and reaffirm their covenants.

The calling of President Harold B. Lee follows the same pattern as that of the other Presidents back for many, many years. He holds all the same keys, has the same authority, represents the same church except that it has grown much larger.

Growth of Church

When the Church was organized in 1830 it was composed of six people. So the Prophet Joseph Smith presided at first over a very small group, but it grew to many thousands by the time of his martyrdom.

When Brigham Young became President, there were approximately 40,000 members. In 1877 the new President, John Taylor, presided over about 145,000. Wilford Woodruff in 1887 had about 192,000 under him. When Lorenzo Snow became President in 1898, there were about 253,000 members, and then Joseph F. Smith had over a quarter of a million. President Heber J. Grant had nearly half a million; George Albert Smith one million, and when David O. McKay became President in 1951, there were over 1,100,000 members.

When Joseph Fielding Smith took over the reins, there were 2,800,000, and as President Harold B. Lee becomes the President, there are about 3,200,000 and growing very rapidly.

Constancy amidst change

It is reassuring to know that President Lee was not elected through committees and conventions with all their conflicts, criticisms, and by the vote of men, but was called of God and then sustained by the people.

The Church has had three different Presidents in three years. A Deseret News editorial writer wrote this:

"In many organizations such rapid turnover at the top could readily bring on confusing shifts of direction and with them a feeling of hesitancy and uncertainty.

"By contrast, the feeling within the church during this historic period has been one of stability and clear purpose, of constancy amidst change." (Deseret News, July 8, 1972, p. A-6.)

The pattern divine allows for no errors, no conflicts, no ambitions, no ulterior motives. The Lord has reserved for himself the calling of his leaders over his church. It is a study of great interest and importance.

Foreordination to responsibilities

President Harold B. Lee became the President of the Church on July 7, 1972, but was ordained an apostle April 10, 1941, and was undoubtedly foreordained to these responsibilities in the far, far-away past as were his predecessors. The Prophet Joseph Smith made this statement over a century ago:

"Every man who has a calling to minister to the inhabitants of the world was ordained to that very purpose in the Grand Council of heaven before this world was." (Joseph Fielding Smith, comp., Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, 1940 ed., p. 365.)

One of the early apostles spoke of Joseph Smith:

"That authority was not conferred upon him when he first saw angels and had some of the gifts . . . it required the laying on of the hands of someone who had the authority of the Holy Priesthood."

In due time he received that authority under the hands of those who last held the keys upon the earth. He continues:

"When Jesus . . . took His three disciples into the mount, He was transfigured before them, and Moses and Elias administered unto them, and at that time Peter was ordained to hold the keys of that dispensation. He held the keys in conjunction with his brethren, James and John.

"They came in modern times and unitedly laid their hands upon the heads of Joseph [Smith] and Oliver [Cowdery] and ordained them to the authority that they themselves held, that of the Apostleship." (George Q. Cannon, in Gospel Truth [Zion's Book Store, 1957], vol. 1, pp. 253-54.)

Continuous leadership

Significant to us is the fact that there has never been one minute since April 6, 1830, 142 years ago, that the Church has been without divine leadership. No deceased President has ever taken the keys and authorities into the spirit world away from the Church on the earth.

The second that the spirit left the body of President Joseph Fielding Smith on July 2, President Harold B. Lee in that same second as president of the twelve apostles rightfully assumed command and was the true and recognized leader, having been foreordained as said by Joseph Smith.

President George Q. Cannon speaks of the foreordination:

"It is a remarkable fact that Joseph Smith had gifts before he was ordained. He was a Seer, for he translated before he was ordained; he was a Prophet, for he predicted a great many things before he was ordained . . . ; he was a Revelator, for God gave unto him revelations before the Church was organized. He, therefore, was a Prophet, Seer and Revelator before he was ordained in the flesh." (Gospel Truth, p. 253.)

The Quorum of the Twelve on July 7, 1972, held all these gifts. And President Harold B. Lee has held them and the keys and the fullness of the priesthood since April 10, 1941, reaffirmed by the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles on July 7 of this year.

Provision for changes

Full provision has been made by our Lord for changes. Today there are fourteen apostles holding the keys in suspension, the twelve and the two counselors to the President, to be brought into use if and when circumstances allow, all ordained to leadership in their turn as they move forward in seniority.

There have been some eighty apostles so endowed since Joseph Smith, though only eleven have occupied the place of the President of the Church, death have intervened; and since the death of his servants is in the power and control of the Lord, he permits to come to the first place only the one who is destined to take that leadership. Death and life become the controlling factors. Each new apostle in turn is chosen by the Lord and revealed to the then living prophet who ordains him.

The matter of seniority is basic in the first quorums of the Church. All the apostles understand this perfectly, and all well-trained members of the Church are conversant with this perfect succession program.

Joseph Smith bestowed upon the twelve apostles all the keys and authority and power that he himself possessed and that he had received from the Lord. He gave unto them every endowment, every washing and anointing, and administered unto them the sealing ordinances.

Sustaining of new prophet

Today we have the opportunity as did the children of Israel to covenant again and to sustain a new prophet. The Lord said to Joshua, and it applies likewise to President Lee: "There shall not any man be able to stand before thee all the days of thy life: as I was with Moses," the Lord says, "so I will be with thee: I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee." (Josh. 1:5.)

"And the people . . . said . . . we will serve the Lord.

"The Lord God will we serve, and his voice will we obey.

"So Joshua made a covenant with the people that day." (Josh. 24:21, 24-25.)

Let this then be our covenant today.

An early leader said: "I look at our President—I always did watch the captain of the ship with peculiar interest, when on the ocean surrounded by icebergs or when in the midst of great storms. . . . I watched his eye and his demeanor, and I fancied . . . that I could form a good idea of our peril by watching him. I have been in storms when everybody on board excepting the Elders expected to go down. . . ." (Gospel Truth, p. 271.)

Now it is our privilege to sustain President Lee.

Finding fault

An important rule was given to us by the Prophet Joseph with which you are probably familiar: "I will give you one of the Keys of the mysteries of the Kingdom. It is an eternal principle, that has existed with God from all eternity. That man who rises up to condemn others, finding fault with the Church, saying that they are out of the way, while he himself is righteous, then know assuredly, that that man is on the high road to apostasy; and if he does not repent, will apostatize, as God lives." (Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, pp. 156-57.)

President Cannon warned again: "If any of you have indulged in the spirit of murmuring and fault-finding and have allowed your tongues to give utterance to thoughts and words that were wrong and not in accordance with the spirit of the Gospel, . . . you ought to repent of it with all your hearts and get down into the depths of humility and implore Him for the forgiveness of that sin—for it is a most deadly sin.

"The men who hold the Priesthood are but mortal men: they are fallible men. . . . [No one knows that better than they themselves.] No human being that ever trod this earth was free from sin, excepting the Son of God. . . ."

This is true concerning all of the brethren, I am sure.

"Nevertheless, God has chosen these men. He has singled them out, . . . but He has selected them, and He has placed upon them the authority of the Holy Priesthood, and they have become His representatives in the earth. He places them as shepherds over the flock of Christ, and as watchmen upon the walls of Zion. And He holds them to a strict accountability . . . for the authority which He has given to them, and in the day of the Lord Jesus they will have to stand and be judged for the manner in which they have exercised this authority. If they have exercised it wrongfully and against the interests of His work and the salvation of His people, woe unto them in the day of the Lord Jesus! He will judge them. . . ." (Gospel Truth, p. 276.)

This same early apostle tells us that the Lord gives the authority to judge and condemn only to the regularly constituted councils of the Church and not to man generally; "and those who lift their voices . . . against the authority of the Holy Priesthood . . . will go down to hell, unless they repent." (Ibid.)

Responsibility to God

It was President Wilford Woodruff who, in his closing years, made this statement: "I ask my Heavenly Father to pour out his spirit upon me, as his servant, that in my advanced age, and during the few days I have to spend here in the flesh, I may be led by his inspiration. I say to Israel, the Lord will never permit me or any other man who stands as president of this Church to lead you astray. It is not in the program. It is not in the mind of God. If I were to attempt that the Lord would remove me out of my place, and so he will any other man who attempts to lead the children of men astray from his oracles of God and from their duty. . . ." (The Discourses of Wilford Woodruff [Bookcraft, 1969], pp. 212-13.)

This should give us deep assurance.

One other leader wrote: "Men do not obtain place in this Church because they seek for it. If it were known that a man was ambitious to hold a certain office in the Church, that fact itself would lead to his defeat because his desire would not be granted unto him. This is the case with the officers of this Church. . . . [They] are responsible to God. God chose and nominated [them], and it is for him to straighten [them] out if [they] do wrong." (George Q. Cannon, in Deseret Weekly, May 21, 1898, p. 708.)

Testimony

May the Lord bless our new President and his counselors and fully sustain them. May we the people uphold his hands and totally sustain President Harold B. Lee, whom I know to be the Lord's prophet on this earth. I bear testimony that God, whose voice was heard on the Jordan River, among the Nephites, in the grove in New York, is our Heavenly Father; and the one to whom he alluded when he said, "This is my Beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased," is our Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, the head of the Church. I bear testimony too that President Lee is a prophet of God, and if we will follow him, we will make great headway in the kingdom. I bear this testimony to you in all fervor and sincerity and in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

I am sure I express the feelings of everyone of you in listening to our beloved President Kimball, to see how the Lord has brought him through miraculously with inspired doctors who waited on him when his life hung in the balance, and preserved him for the great mission which the Lord has now called him to fulfill. Thank you, President Kimball, for that matchless testimony. May the Lord continue to bless you through the longest day of your mission on earth.

We express our thanks and appreciation to the General Authorities who have spoken to us in this, the first session of conference.

The singing for this session has been furnished by the Men's Chorus from the Tabernacle Choir with Richard P. Condie conducting and Alexander Schreiner as the organist. We are grateful for those devoted brethren of the Tabernacle Choir who have brought to us their inspiring music this morning.

The chorus will now favor us, very appropriately, with the hymn, "I Need Thee Every Hour."

The benediction will then be offered by Elder J. Howard Dunn, Regional Representative of the Twelve, after which this conference will stand adjourned until two o'clock this afternoon.

The Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir sang "I Need Thee Every Hour."

The benediction was offered by Elder J. Howard Dunn, Regional Representative of the Twelve.

The conference was then adjourned until 2 o'clock p.m.

FIRST DAY AFTERNOON MEETING

SECOND SESSION

The second session of the conference convened at 2 p.m. on Friday, October 6, 1972.

President Harold B. Lee presided and conducted this session.

The choral music for this session was provided by the Relief Society Combined Choruses of the Granger, Jordan, and Midvale Regions. This chorus was conducted by Ellen Neilson Barnes, with Robert Cundick at the organ.

President Lee made the following introductory statement:

President Harold B. Lee

To all assembled here in this historic Tabernacle and to the many tuned to these proceedings by radio and television, we extend our warm greetings and welcome to this, the 142nd Semi-Annual Conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

This afternoon we are pleased to welcome special guests, educational leaders, regional representatives and mission representatives, stake and mission presidencies, temple presidencies, bishoprics, members of the general auxiliary boards, and others.

Through the generous cooperation of their owners and managers, over 300 television and radio stations will carry sessions of this conference to every state in the Union and also to many foreign countries. We express our appreciation to these owners and managers for their courtesy in broadcasting the sessions of this conference.

The music for this session will be furnished by the Relief Society Chorus, combined choruses of the Granger, Jordan, and Midvale Regions, conducted by Ellen Neilson Barnes, with Robert Cundick at the organ.

The chorus will begin this service by singing, "Send Out Thy Light."

The invocation will then be offered by Elder Angel Abrea, Regional Representative of the Twelve.

The Relief Society Chorus sang the number, "Send Out Thy Light."

The invocation was offered by Elder Angel Abrea, Regional Representative of the Twelve.

President Lee

Thank you, Brother Abrea. One of the joys is to see men like Brother Abrea raised up in the country where he lives to give us great strength in far-off South America.

The chorus will now continue by singing "Let Us Oft Speak Kind Words."

Following the singing, Elder Marvin J. Ashton of the Council of the Twelve will be our first speaker.

The number, "Let Us Oft Speak Kind Words," was rendered by the Relief Society Chorus.

President Lee

We shall now hear from Elder Marvin J. Ashton of the Council of the Twelve Apostles. He will be followed by Elder Bernard P. Brockbank, Assistant to the Twelve.

Elder Marvin J. Ashton

Of the Council of the Twelve

This day I greet you wherever you are as friends.

Definition of a friend

Someone has said, "A friend is a person who is willing to take me the way I am." Accepting this as one definition of the word, may I quickly suggest that we are something less than a real friend if we leave a person the same way we find him.

There seems to be a misunderstanding on the part of some men today as to what it means to be a friend. Acts of a friend should result in self-improvement, better attitudes, self-reliance, comfort, consolation, self-respect, and better welfare. Certainly the word friend is misused if it is identified with a person who contributes to our delinquency, misery, and heartaches. When we make a man feel he is wanted, his whole attitude changes. Our friendship will be recognizable if our actions and attitudes result in improvement and independence.

It takes courage to be a real friend. Some of us endanger the valued classification of friend because of our unwillingness to be one under all circumstances. Fear can deprive us of friendship. Some of us identify our closest friends as those with the courage to remain and share themselves with us under all circumstances. A friend is a person who will suggest and render the best for us regardless of the immediate consequences. Sir Winston Churchill became Great Britain's greatest friend in his country's darkest hour because he was courageous enough to call for "blood, toil, tears, and sweat" when some would have accepted him more readily as a friend had he advocated peaceful surrender.

President Abraham Lincoln was once criticized for his attitude toward his enemies. "Why do you try to make friends of them?" asked an associate. "You should try to destroy them."

"Am I not destroying my enemies," Lincoln gently replied, "when I make them my friends?"

President Lee, our friend

Are we not within our rights as members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints to regard our prophet, seer, and revelator, President Harold B. Lee, as a close personal friend as he leaves us improved daily by his willingness to reprove, admonish, love, encourage, and guide according to our needs? President Lee is our friend; I bear witness he is, in the fullest and most noble sense of the word, and he will lead us by inspiration and by his courageous character.

I invite you to be his friend. What a pleasure it was for me this morning to raise my arm to the square and sustain my friend, President Harold B. Lee! His friendship with me down through the years has met the test. He has always been willing to take me the way I am and leave me improved. What a joy it is to join him and my friends among the General Authorities, and all of you, in building the kingdom of our Heavenly Father here upon this earth!

I love President Tanner and I love President Romney because they are my friends. I am happy to have Elder Bruce R. McConkie seated at my side because he too is a friend.

Significance of friendship

As we more fully strive to comprehend the significance of friendship, the more our appreciation should increase for the truths found in the following quotation:

"Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." (James 1:27.)

It is well for us to be reminded that we are friends to ourselves when we keep our lives unspotted from the sins of the world and leave ourselves better tomorrow than we are today. It is a worthy daily goal to be a true friend to one's self. Our responsibility to the widow and the fatherless is to accept them as we find them, but to not leave them without improvement. Ours is to lift the heavy heart, say the encouraging word, and assist in supplying the daily needs.

Aren't we something less than a friend if we have the gospel of Jesus Christ and are unwilling to share it by word and example with a family, a member, neighbor, or the stranger? Aren't we something less than a friend if we have a testimony of the gospel of Jesus Christ and are unwilling to share it?

A friend is a possession we earn, not a gift. "Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you." (John 15:14.) The Lord has declared that those who serve him and keep his commandments are called his servants. After they have been tested and tried and are found faithful and true in all things, they are called no longer servants, but friends. His friends are the ones he will take into his kingdom and with whom he will associate in an eternal inheritance. (See D&C 93:45-46.)

Friday, October 6

First Day

References in scripture

Let me share with you quickly a few of the many "friend" references in the Doctrine and Covenants referred to by our Savior:

"And again, verily I say unto you, my friends . . .—

"Draw near unto me and I will draw near unto you; seek me diligently and ye shall find me; ask, and ye shall receive; knock, and it shall be opened unto you.

"Whatsoever ye ask the Father in my name it shall be given unto you, that is expedient for you." (D&C 88:62-64.)

" . . . my friends Sidney and Joseph. . . ." (D&C 100:1.)

" . . . my friends, behold, I will give unto you a revelation and commandment. . . ." (D&C 103:1.)

" . . . my friends, fear not . . ." (D&C 98:1.)

" . . . I will call you friends, for you are my friends, and ye shall have an inheritance with me." (D&C 93:45.)

May I add that this last friendly greeting was given when the Lord was rebuking Joseph Smith for the conduct of his family at that particular time.

And finally:

"And as I said unto mine apostles, even so I say unto you, for you are mine apostles, even God's high priests; ye are they whom my father hath given me; ye are my friends." (D&C 84:63.)

I bear you my witness that our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, is our friend. In his loving processes of command, rebuke, greeting, revelation, encouragement, and long-suffering, he daily proves this. Certainly he is willing to take us the way we are, but he wants to leave us improved in his word and his paths.

Examples of friends

For a few moments enjoy with me some very simple yet powerful recent conversations I've had in seeking the true significance of friendship. I asked an eight-year-old girl, "Who is your best friend?" "My mommie," she replied. "Why?" "Because she is nice to me."

A priest-age young man was asked the same question. "My bishop." "Why?" "Because he listens to us guys."

A 19-year-old girl: "My Gleaner teacher." "Why?" "She is always available to me, even after class."

A 13-year-old boy: "My Scoutmaster." "Why?" "He does everything with us."

A prisoner: "The chaplain." "Why?" "He believes me. He even believed me sometimes when he shouldn't have."

A husband: "My wife." "Why?" "Because she is the best part of me."

Friendship is earned

From these cannot we conclude that friendship is earned?

It was Emerson who said, "The only way to have a friend is to be one." No one can be a friend until he is known. A friend is a person who will really take the time not only to know us, but to be with us. One of the finest presents you can give anyone is your best self.

Joseph Smith gave us a glimpse of his measure of friends when he said, "If my life is of no value to my friends, it is of no value to me."

The Savior said, "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." (John 15:13.)

When Robert Louis Stevenson was asked the secret of his radiant, useful life, he responded simply, "I had a friend."

In Exodus 33:11 we read, ". . . The Lord spake unto Moses face to face, as a man speaketh unto his friend."

A friend in the true sense is not a person who passively nods approval. A friend is a person who cares.

Experience in South America

Please share this recent experience I had while visiting in South America. I was traveling with a mission president 200 miles from his office. Word reached him one of his elders was in the hospital with a ruptured appendix. His condition was grave because of the six-to seven-hour delay in getting medical attention. The mission president gave immediate instructions by telephone, getting the best physician possible, leading sixty missionaries assembled in zone conference in united prayer. He and his wife were at the elder's bedside the following morning. Prayers continued, medical attention increased, companions took turns sitting at his bedside around the clock. Parents in Idaho were notified. "The best is being done for your son. We feel he will make it. Please have your family join us in our prayers."

Here was friendship in action. Here was a friend at work. Here was an example of leaving the ninety and nine for the immediate attention of the one.

Rewards of friendship

No greater reward can come to any of us as we serve than a sincere "Thank you for being my friend." When those who need assistance find their way back through and with us, it is friendship in action. When the weak are made strong and the strong stronger through our lives, friendship is real. If a man can be judged by his friends, he can also be measured by their heights.

How can we help a friend? An Arabian proverb helps us answer: "A friend is one to whom one may pour out all the contents of one's heart, chaff and grain together, knowing that the gentlest of hands will take and sift it, keep what is worth keeping, and with the breath of kindness blow the rest away."

Yes, a friend is a person who is willing to take me the way I am but who is willing and able to leave me better than he found me.

Experience at Gate Beautiful

All of us should be eternally grateful for the classic experience shared by Peter and John when they approached the Gate Beautiful. There was a man, lame from birth, lying there. A beggar all through his life, he had never walked on his feet. As they moved in his direction he held out his hands, beckoning, expecting alms. Peter said to him, as we will all recall:

"Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk."

"And he took him by the right hand and lifted him up. . . ." (Acts 3:6-7.)

Peter was a friend. He told the beggar, "Rise and walk; I'm going to help you." We too must take the friend by the hand until he sees and finds that he has enough strength to go on his own. Is it not appropriate to conclude that Peter was willing to take the friend the way he was but left him improved? Our Savior pointed the way to reap friendship with our associates and with him when he declared:

"For I was an hungred, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me in:

"... Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." (Matt. 25:35, 40.)

I pray God to help us to be friends. We need God's friendship. He pleads for ours. God lives. He is near. He is available. I leave you my testimony today that Jesus Christ is our Redeemer and Savior, that this is his church, and that he too is our friend. I bear this witness humbly, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

Brother Ashton, of the Council of the Twelve, has just spoken to us.

We shall now hear from Elder Bernard P. Brockbank, Assistant to the Twelve. He will be followed by Elder Joseph Anderson, also an Assistant to the Twelve.

Elder Bernard P. Brockbank

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

My dear brothers and sisters: One of the great experiences of life is to be among the Saints. We all have the responsibility of preparing ourselves and others for entrance back into the kingdom of God.

The atoning sacrifice of Jesus Christ made it possible for all mankind to be resurrected and to be raised to immortality. Resurrection and immortality are universal gifts from God.

The apostle Paul taught: "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." (1 Cor. 15:22.)

God's gift to man

But to be resurrected and immortal is not all that is required for entrance into eternal life in the kingdom of God. Eternal life in the kingdom of God is far beyond his universal gift of immortality and is God's greatest gift to all mankind; it can only be brought about through obedience to the doctrines and commandments taught by Jesus Christ.

Jesus said, "I am the way, the truth and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me." (John 14:6.) He said, "... no man cometh unto the Father, but by me." This is the Lord's way, and coming unto the Father is a divine and sacred gift that must be merited.

Again, Jesus Christ said, "... Trifle not with sacred things. If thou wilt do good, yea, and hold out faithful to the end, thou shalt be saved in the kingdom of God, which is the greatest of all of the gifts of God, for there is no gift greater than the gift of salvation." (D&C 6:12-13.) God's greatest gift and blessing to his children is eternal life with him in his heavenly kingdom.

Entrance into kingdom

Today there is much controversy and contention among the doctrines and philosophies of men relative to the requirements for entrance into the kingdom of God. Many have been deceived by the teachings of men that works and obedience to God's commandments are not essential, and some base their contention on scriptures. For example, Paul said, "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: Not of works, lest any man should boast." (Eph. 2:8-9.)

The resurrection and immortality are gifts from God, through Jesus Christ, and not from the works and efforts of mortal men.

Many try to justify their claims with the statement of Jesus to the thief on the cross, when the thief said to Jesus, "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom," and Jesus said unto him, "Verily I say unto thee, To day shalt thou be with me in paradise." (Luke 23:42-43.) Jesus and the thief went to paradise. There are those who teach that paradise and heaven are one and the same place, but this is not according to the teachings of the holy scriptures.

The spirit world

After mortal death the spirit goes to paradise and remains there until the appointed time for its resurrection into immortality and eternal life.

Heaven, which is the kingdom of God, is where those who have been obedient to God's plan of life and salvation go after judgment and the resurrection.

The spirit of Jesus, after his death, went to paradise and not to the kingdom of heaven. It was not until after his resurrection that he mentioned returning to the kingdom of heaven. You will recall his words to Mary as she stood by the sepulcher weeping:

"Touch me not, for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God." (John 20:17.) His spirit had been to paradise, but he had not yet ascended to his Father in heaven.

The strait gate

Jesus warned that not very many would find their way and prepare themselves to live in the kingdom of heaven. He said, "Enter ye in at the strait gate: . . . Because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." (Matt. 7:13-14.)

Many, according to Jesus, will be misled and deceived by false teachers and false prophets, and some will desire to follow the ways of the world and will destroy their divine opportunity to enter into the kingdom of heaven. He said, ". . . wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat." (Matt. 7:13.)

Wise and foolish virgins

Contrary to what many think, just believing in God and being virtuous and pure are not sufficient to qualify a person for entrance into the kingdom of heaven. The Savior's parable about the ten virgins and their desire to enter the kingdom of heaven makes this point very clear. Jesus said:

"Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins, which took their lamps, and went forth to meet the bridegroom.

"And five of them were wise, and five were foolish.

"They that were foolish took their lamps, and took no oil with them:

"But the wise took oil in their vessels with their lamps.

"While the bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered and slept.

"And at midnight there was a cry made, Behold, the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him.

"Then all those virgins arose, and trimmed their lamps.

"And the foolish said unto the wise, Give us of your oil; for our lamps are gone out.

"But the wise answered, saying, Not so; lest there be not enough for us and you: but go ye rather to them that sell, and buy for yourselves.

"And while they went to buy, the bridegroom came; and they that were ready went in with him to the marriage: and the door was shut.

"Afterward came also the other virgins, saying, Lord, Lord, open to us.

"But he answered and said, Verily I say unto you, I know you not." (Matt. 25:1-12.)

Take note that the Lord was not talking about five thieves and sinners and five good people; he was talking about ten virgins, ten pure people who believed in God and had a desire to enter into the kingdom of heaven. The five foolish virgins had failed to prepare. Their lights were out; they were in darkness. Their urgent pleas and hasty preparation were not sufficient, and they heard these words from the lips of their God: "I know you not."

A Warning

What a shame to be clean and yet unprepared! What a tragedy to fail in service to God and in helping to build his kingdom on earth as it is in heaven! What a shame to be in darkness when the light of Christ has been made possible for everyone!

Jesus, speaking of good people who failed to qualify for entrance into the kingdom of heaven, said, "These are they who are not valiant in the testimony of Jesus; wherefore, they obtain not the crown over the kingdom of our God." (D&C 76:79.)

It is a divine warning from the teachings of Jesus Christ that one must be prepared to enter into the kingdom of heaven and must have the light of life that is made possible through following Jesus Christ. Jesus said, "I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." (John 8:12.)

Divine light

The light of life can come only through following Jesus Christ. The light of life is divine light and is required in the immortal soul before entrance back into the kingdom of God. You cannot obtain the divine light of life from men. It does not come from just being good. It can only come through repentance and by living the gospel plan of life and salvation as given by Jesus Christ.

When Jesus lived on the earth, he found a very religious group of people known as the Pharisees. They believed in God; they accepted the teaching of the prophets in the Old Testament. They accepted the Ten Commandments and would not even pick up a stone on the Sabbath day in their compliance with the commandment relative to keeping the Sabbath day holy. Yet Jesus said of the devout, praying Pharisees:

"This people draweth nigh unto me with their mouth, and honoureth me with their lips; but their heart is far from me.

"But in vain they do worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men." (Matt. 15:8-9.)

They had changed the Lord's commandments into commandments of men.

Qualifications for entrance

In his Sermon on the Mount Jesus Christ also mentioned to these people their qualification for entering into the kingdom of heaven through the Pharisee religion, with its man-made doctrines and commandments. He said, "For I say unto you, That except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven." (Matt. 5:20.)

The Pharisees, in all of their dedication and their love for God and the ancient prophets and their obedience to man-made righteousness, which appeared to be taken from the scriptures, did not qualify for entrance into the kingdom of heaven. The Pharisees were worshiping a mystical god of spirit, and they were unable to know the living God when he appeared before them. He tried with all of his godly power to convince them, but they would rather defend their man-made church and their man-made doctrines than accept the church and teachings of Jesus Christ.

Acts that disqualify

All men should know what acts will keep them from entering the kingdom of heaven. According to the apostle Paul, the following works of the flesh will keep a person out of the kingdom of God: ". . . Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, Idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, Envyings, murders, drunkenness, revelings, and such like: . . . they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God." (Gal. 5:19-21.)

Indulgence in works of the flesh will destroy man's divine nature and potential godliness.

Need for repentance

Repentance makes it possible to cleanse the mind and body of these sins, except murder, and all other weaknesses, and to turn to the Lord's way of life. He said, "Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." (Matt. 4:17.)

Repentance is God's way, with the help of his doctrines and commandments, to purify and cleanse the mind and body of its weaknesses and imperfections. Repentance prepares the mind and the body to receive the gospel and to take on the divine light of life.

Repentance frees the conscience and cleanses the mind. Jesus said, "Behold, he who has repented of his sins, the same is forgiven, and I, the Lord, remember them no more. By this ye may know if a man repenteth of his sins—behold, he will confess them and forsake them." (D&C 58:42-43.)

Repentance prepares the mind and body to know the living God and the living Jesus Christ and to receive the gospel and take on the divine light of life.

It is important to know that all of the requirements for entrance into the kingdom of God were personally given by Jesus Christ and are recorded in his holy scriptures. There will be many good people turned away from entrance into the kingdom of heaven because they failed to know and follow the Lord's plan of life. They were more interested in following doctrines of men and commandments of men than they were in following the doctrines of the Lord, as recorded in his scriptures. They were more interested in defending their sect or denomination than in knowing the truth.

Keys for entrance

Here are some of the keys that Jesus Christ gave to help one qualify for entrance back into the kingdom of God.

Jesus said, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God" (John 3:3); "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God" (John 3:5).

In John 17, verse 3, another key is recorded by Jesus Christ: "... this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent."

Wouldn't you think it is important to know God the Eternal Father and Jesus Christ if you expect to live with them in the kingdom of heaven? Many feel that they know God and know Jesus Christ, but they fail to keep their commandments.

Hear the words of the apostle John to all who claim to know God. He said, "And hereby we do know that we know him, if we keep his commandments. He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him." (1 John 2:3-4.)

Knowing God is shown by keeping his commandments. People who accept and live doctrines of men do not know the living God. When you know the living God and the living Jesus Christ, you will also know your divine relationship to God.

Jesus asked us to pray to our Father in heaven and to "seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness." (Matt. 6:33.)

I pray that we may do so, and close with this divine commandment: "... let virtue garnish thy thoughts unceasingly; then shall thy confidence wax strong in the presence of God. . . ." (D&C 121:45.)

In the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

Thank you, Brother Brockbank, Assistant to the Twelve, who has just spoken to us.

Elder Joseph Anderson, Assistant to the Twelve, will now speak to us.

Elder Joseph Anderson

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

In the year 1820 a young man 14 years of age was very greatly disturbed in his mind as to which of all the various religious denominations was acknowledged by God as his church. He had been engaged sincerely in searching for the true church, and he had read the statement of James as contained in the New Testament: "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him." (James 1:5.)

Opposing powers

In his confusion, having a sincere and earnest desire, and with unwavering faith, the boy called upon the Lord in prayer. Joseph said he had scarcely started to pray when he was seized upon by some power which entirely overcame him and which had the astonishing effect of binding his tongue so that he could not speak. Thick darkness gathered around him, and he thought he would be destroyed.

Exerting all his power to call upon the Lord to deliver him from the power which had seized him, and when he was ready to sink into despair, he saw a pillar of light exactly over his head, above the brightness of the sun, in which light he saw two Personages, and they spoke to him. (See Joseph Smith 2:16-17.)

Think of the great contrast: overpowering darkness as compared with the brightness of the sun—the power of the adversary as opposed to the glory of God. Certainly darkness would be dissipated by the appearance and in the presence of those two divine Personages, the Father and the Son, whose brightness and glory defy all description.

Light of Truth

In answer to the boy's question as to which of all the sects was right and which he should join, the Father, pointing to his Son, asked Joseph to hear him. The Son, the Savior of the world, Jesus the Christ, the resurrected Lord, answered Joseph by saying that he should join none of the existing churches and denominations, that they were all wrong.

The day was dawning when the gospel in its fullness was to be restored to mankind, when the light of heaven was to fill the entire earth, a time to come in which nothing would be withheld, when everything which had been kept from the understanding of man from the beginning of time would be made known; a time about which the prophets of old have spoken; a time when in very deed a great and a marvelous work and wonder would come forth among the children of men.

Appearances of the Father

According to our understanding of holy writ, God the Eternal Father has manifested himself to his earthly prophets on very few occasions since the time of Adam. The following instances may be recalled.

When Jesus was baptized in the River Jordan, as he came up out of the water a voice from heaven was heard saying: "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." (Matt. 3:17.)

At the time of the transfiguration, the voice of the Father was again heard: "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him." (Matt. 17:5.)

When the resurrected Christ was introduced by the Father to the Nephites on the Western Hemisphere, the following language was used: "Behold my Beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased, in whom I have glorified my name—hear ye him." (3 Ne. 11:7.)

Since the Savior's appearance to the Nephites, there is no scriptural account of the voice of the Father being heard again among men until the Father and the Son appeared unto the boy Joseph in the spring of 1820, at which time, according to Joseph Smith, the Father again bore testimony in the following language: "This is My Beloved Son. Hear Him!" (Joseph Smith 2:17.)

A New Witness for Christ

As Joseph was calling upon the Lord in prayer more than three years later, a messenger from the Lord appeared in his room surrounded by light, which light continued to increase until the room was lighter than at noon-day. On this occasion and subsequent appearances, the angel made reference to a book written upon plates of gold that was deposited in the Hill Cumorah in the state of New York, which plates, when translated, became the Book of Mormon, a new scripture, a new and important witness for Christ. On the occasion of the angel's first appearance he quoted to Joseph various verses and prophecies from the Bible, among which was the second chapter of Joel, from the 28th verse to the last, part of which reads as follows:

"And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions:

"And also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my spirit." (Joel 2: 28-29.)

Priesthood restored

The priesthood of God, which had been taken from the earth because of apostasy, was restored to Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery in 1829, also by heavenly messengers, namely, by John the Baptist and by Peter, James, and John, the presiding authority in the earth after the death of the Savior.

Before the Church was organized April 6, 1830, the Lord gave a revelation through this young man, the prophet of the Lord, to his father, Joseph Smith, Sr., in which the Lord said:

"Now behold, a marvelous work is about to come forth among the children of men.

"Therefore, O ye that embark in the service of God, see that ye serve him with all your heart, might, mind and strength, that ye may stand blameless before God at the last day." (D&C 4:1-2.)

Similar advice and counsel was given to others at about the same time through revelation from the Lord.

Church restored

To Joseph Smith was given the commission and the authorization from heaven to restore to earth the doctrine, organization, and authority of Christ's church to a people who had lost the fundamentals of true religion. Joseph Smith's successors have built and are building upon the foundation that Joseph laid through revelation from God in proclaiming its truth to all the world and in preparing a people to meet the Savior when he shall come to reign upon the earth a thousand years in peace and righteousness. Elder Harold B. Lee, whom we have sustained in this conference as a prophet, seer, and revelator and President of this church, is God's representative, the mouthpiece of the Lord to his people today, a man whom we love, a man whom we can sustain and support with all our hearts.

Pouring out of Spirit

The revealed word of God to Joseph, and particularly the words of the Prophet Joel, have been and are being fulfilled relative to the pouring out of the Spirit of the Lord upon all flesh. I quote from our late President Joseph Fielding Smith:

"The Lord said he would pour out his Spirit upon all flesh. That does not mean that upon all flesh the Holy Ghost should be sent, and that they should be participants in the blessings which those are privileged to receive who have been baptized and endowed and become members of the Church; but the Lord would pour out his blessings and his Spirit upon all people and use them to accomplish his purposes." (Doctrines of Salvation [Bookcraft, 1954], vol. 1, p. 176.)

Marvelous scientific developments have come since the heavens were opened to that 14-year-old boy, when this dispensation, the dispensation of the fulness of times, was ushered in.

Since the true knowledge of God was revealed in that mighty vision, the Lord has in very deed, in many respects, poured out his Spirit upon all flesh.

Human beings very much like ourselves have lived upon this earth since the days of Adam. Their physical strength no doubt has been equal to our own. Abraham of old had superior wisdom and knowledge, and others like unto him. There have been among the inhabitants of this world men and women of significant intelligence, those who built the pyramids, those to whom the Lord gave understanding regarding the heavenly bodies, men of faith, good men, religious men, great thinkers.

Modern advances

Yet down through the generations of time mankind have not had the comforts and conveniences, they have not had the opportunities that we enjoy. Men, women, and children obtained an existence by toiling with crude instruments long hours under most trying circumstances. In spite of their fertile lands, nations and kingdoms suffered greatly from famines, and dread diseases and pestilences have decimated peoples.

Since the opening of the heavens, as indicated, man has conquered the darkness of night through the development of the electric light, the incandescent light, the neon light, etc.

Gas lamps were a laboratory novelty in the early life of Joseph Smith and his followers, and the electric light as invented by Edison was not given to man until 1879 and 1880.

Great strides have been made in conquering pain and disease. The life of man has been prolonged, and pain alleviated through the use of anesthetics, medical and surgical discovery and development, refrigeration, sanitation, etc.

Think of the great advances in transportation, railroads, steamships, automobiles, airplanes, jet planes, and so on.

We have the marvelous means of communication, such as the telegraph, the telephone, radio, television, Telstar broadcasting, and now space exploration and space satellite technology.

Surely, we can say with Morse when he sent the first message by telegraph in 1844, over a forty-mile line, "What Hath God Wrought!"

The glory of God

The glory of God is intelligence; in other words, light and truth. All intelligence comes from God, and anyone whose mind is opened to the development of inventions for the benefit and blessing of mankind receives that light and truth through study, through research, through inspiration and guidance from the Spirit of the Lord, whether that individual be a Morse, an Edison, an Alexander Graham Bell, an Orville or Wilbur Wright, or whoever he may be.

How important it is that we have the light of truth which comes from the Lord himself! In fact, he has said: "And that which doth not edify is not of God, and is darkness.

"That which is of God is light; and he that receiveth light, and continueth in God, receiveth more light; and that light groweth brighter and brighter until the perfect day." (D&C 50:23-24.)

True understanding of God

The greatest need of the world today is an understanding of the true and living God, to know that he lives, that he rules in the heavens, that he is our Heavenly Father, the Father of our spirits, and that Jesus Christ is his Beloved Son, the Savior and Redeemer of the world; that he is the creator of the universe.

There is confusion in the minds of many people as to just what is the nature of the God we should worship and serve. This is life eternal, to know the only true God and Jesus Christ, those great personages whom Joseph saw in that heavenly vision. This knowledge brings joy and satisfaction to the soul. It is intended for all mankind. We are told that ultimately every knee shall bow and every tongue confess that Jesus is the Christ.

God the Father and his beloved Son have manifested themselves in this dispensation. Heavenly messengers have personally restored the priesthood of God, the power to act in his name. The Spirit of God is operating upon the minds of men and women everywhere. Light and knowledge are being poured out upon the inhabitants of the earth. Marvelous scientific developments are being used to make possible and speed up the preaching of the restored gospel to mankind.

Temples are being built and ordinances performed therein in accordance with the plan of life and salvation which pertains to all mankind, both the living and the dead. Yes, a great and a marvelous work has come forth among the children of men, and God is pouring out his Spirit upon all flesh.

I testify to these truths in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

Elder Joseph Anderson, Assistant to the Twelve, has just delivered that splendid talk.

The congregation and chorus will now join in singing, "We Thank Thee, O God, for a Prophet."

After the singing, Elder ElRay L. Christiansen, Assistant to the Twelve, will then address us.

The congregation and chorus sang the hymn, "We Thank Thee, O God, for a Prophet."

President Lee

Elder ElRay L. Christiansen, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve, will now address us. He will be followed by Elder Theodore M. Burton, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve.

Elder ElRay L. Christiansen

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

If what I say should need a title, it would be "We Have Made Covenants with the Lord—Let Us Keep Them."

In that inspiring session this morning, each of us had the privilege of making a covenant with the Lord that we would sustain, uphold, aid, and even defend these great men who have been chosen to lead this church at this time.

Covenants of the Lord

Making covenants with his people and with individuals has always

Friday, October 6

First Day

been one of the principal ways in which the Lord deals with them.

The scriptures tell us that he made covenants with Adam, with Noah, with Enoch, Melchizedek, Abraham, and others, and that he also made covenants with Israel of old, with the Jaredites, and with the Nephites.

Surely the Latter-day Saints are a blessed people, because in a similar way the Lord has made covenants with us individually and collectively.

A covenant is a binding and solemn agreement entered into by at least two individuals. It requires that all parties involved abide the conditions of the compact in order to make it effective and binding. Most people do not realize that sacred covenants made with earlier prophets and peoples have been restored to earth by a new covenant.

New and everlasting covenant

The Lord made clear the reason for establishing a new covenant:

"For they have strayed from mine ordinances, and have broken mine everlasting covenant;

"They seek not the Lord to establish his righteousness, but every man walketh in his own way, and after the image of his own God, whose image is in the likeness of the world, and whose substance is that of Babylon, even Babylon the great, which shall fall.

"Wherefore, I the Lord, knowing the calamity which should come upon the inhabitants of the earth, called upon my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., and spake unto him from heaven, and gave him commandments"—and so forth. (D&C 1:15-17.)

As a result of this revelation, the Prophet Joseph became the instrument in the hands of the Lord in restoring the new and everlasting covenant, which is actually the fullness of the gospel and embraces within its powers, its terms, and its conditions every other covenant and commandment that our Father has ever given to men on earth. (See D&C 132:5-7; 33:5, 7.)

It provides the way to eternal life and even exaltation to all who accept the gospel and who endure to the end in living its principles and ordinances, for he has said:

"And even so I have sent mine everlasting covenant into the world, to be a light to the world, and to be a standard for my people, and for the Gentiles to seek to it, and to be a messenger before my face to prepare the way before me." (D&C 45:9.)

It is here, then, in its fullness with all its powers as a guide, a standard for us and for all men who will heed it.

Love extended to all

Since the love of God is extended to all mankind, he has said: ". . . O [ye] inhabitants of the earth: I the Lord am willing to make these things known unto all flesh; For I am no respecter of persons. . . ." (D&C 1:34-35.)

And because of this we send missionaries by the thousands into all the world where it is permissible to teach the gospel of Jesus Christ and to baptize those who believe.

Some may wonder why the Lord gives commandments and requires us to enter into covenants with him. Or, as one person asked: "If the Lord loves us, why does he give us commandments? If he loves us, why does he say 'Thou shalt' or 'Thou shalt not'?"

A simple answer to these questions is, he commands us because he loves us. He knows perfectly well what will bring us peace and success in our individual lives and in the world and what will bring the opposite.

Blessings through obedience

Just as any father would direct (or even restrict) his children if it would be a blessing to the children, so our Father in heaven gives us commandments, laws, and covenants, not for the sole purpose of restricting us or burdening us, but rather that we may, through obedience to correct principles, find peace and success.

Actually, we do not have to do what the Lord commands us, but we cannot obtain the rewards and blessings he has promised unless we do.

"For all who will have a blessing at my hands shall abide the law which was appointed for that blessing, and the conditions thereof, as were instituted from before the foundation of the world." (D&C 132:5.)

Every member of the Church has made covenants with the Lord. These commandments and covenants are not grievous; they are not burdensome. On the contrary, they are enlightening, uplifting, assuring, and helpful. They are instruments of voluntary action on our part that help us to concentrate our efforts to accomplish the purpose of life and to reach our ultimate goal.

Covenant at baptism

Our first covenant is entered into when we are baptized and confirmed members of the Church. Both the conditions under which one becomes a candidate for baptism and the obligations of membership after baptism should be understood and impressed upon all, both young and old. The Lord makes these requirements and expectations rather definite and clear in these enlightening words:

"... All those who humble themselves before God, and desire to be baptized, and come forth with broken hearts and contrite spirits, and witness before the church that they have truly repented of all their sins, and are willing to take upon them the name of Jesus Christ, having a determination to serve him to the end, and truly manifest by their works that they have received of the Spirit of Christ unto the remission of their sins, shall be received by baptism into his church." (D&C 20:37.)

So, as one prepares himself for baptism, he must recognize that there are specific obligations and covenants associated with the receiving of this sacred ordinance.

Other covenants

When we partake of the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, we enter into a solemn covenant of obedience to keep his commandments and witness unto the Lord that we will take upon us his name and always remember him and keep the commandments which he has given us. Partaking of the sacrament should be done in sober solemnity.

Again, when we agree to have the priesthood conferred upon us, we thereby covenant with the Lord that we will honor it through righteous, decent living, and by magnifying the office given in service to others, always extending to all men kindness, consideration, courtesy, and love.

Receiving higher ordinances

Now, if we keep the covenant of baptism and honor the priesthood and its covenants and in other ways live in conformity with the principles of the gospel, we may then have the great privilege of entering a holy temple where we receive the higher ordinances of the priesthood and, in due time, enter into that order of the priesthood known as the "new and everlasting covenant of marriage," with the promise given that if we remain faithful to the covenants made, we shall come forth with the just in the morning of the first resurrection and, with our companions, our children, our posterity, be permitted to live in a state of never-ending happiness, provided, of course, that they too keep the covenants that it will be necessary for them to make.

What hope, what comfort, what assurance and joy this promise should bring to the hearts of all who love their families! Surely it is true that "eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." (2 Cor. 2:9.)

And, of course, he has said that they who love him keep his commandments and covenants.

Obligation to keep covenants

President Joseph F. Smith reminded us that "we cannot neglect, slight, or depart from the spirit, meaning, intent and purpose, of these covenants . . . that we have entered into with our Father in heaven without shearing [or depriving] ourselves of our glory, strength, right and title to his blessings, and to the gifts and manifestations of his Spirit." (Improvement Era, vol. 9 [August 1906], p. 813.)

For God surely will not be mocked!

Let me repeat, each one of us has made covenants with the Lord and has agreed before God in sacred places that we will observe his laws, which, after all, are the principles by which we must learn to live in order to qualify ourselves for the greatest of all the gifts of God, which he says is eternal life, our life in the "family kingdom."

I testify to you, brethren and sisters, that I know that God lives and that he has, because of his love for us, condescended to make covenants with us, in order that we may be spared from failure, from sorrow, from regret, and that we may rise to the full heights of glory that are promised to those who are faithful and endure to the end.

My brothers and sisters, we are a covenant-making people. Let us also be a covenant-keeping people, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

Thank you, Brother Christiansen. Brother Christiansen, Assistant to the Twelve, has just spoken to us.

Elder Theodore M. Burton, Assistant to the Twelve, will now address us. He will be followed by Elder Eldred G. Smith, Patriarch to the Church.

Elder Theodore M. Burton

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

Brothers and sisters, I desire this afternoon to bear my witness to you of the divine calling that has come to these brethren who lead us. For almost forty years I have watched as the Lord has honed and polished and prepared President Lee as our teacher, as our stake president, whom we so much loved, as an apostle, and now as President of the Church. I am grateful and pledge my support to him and his counselors.

President Tanner is our home teacher, who watches over us and cares for us in our home. We are grateful for him and pledge our loyalty to him. We are grateful for President Romney, who fourteen years ago came to Germany and helped me to become a better missionary. I have loved and respected him ever since. And these my brethren who sit before you today are men of God, and I am grateful for the teachings they have given me.

Now may I share a thought with you this afternoon.

Genealogy

I received a letter recently in which I was asked why, as president of the Genealogical Society, I didn't speak about genealogy. The writer also asked why my brethren did not preach about genealogy, when it was one of the fundamental priesthood programs of the Church. This quite startled me, for I have heard some excellent sermons on that subject given by my brethren and have given many sermons on genealogy myself.

Perhaps we have all been too subtle. Perhaps our understanding of priesthood genealogy is so broad that we expect all Church members to think of priesthood genealogy as we do. In our understanding it includes the whole plan of salvation, in which, through righteous living and revealed sacred ordinances, families are bound together eternally, worthy to live in the celestial kingdom in the very presence of God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost in an exalted, resurrected state. Perhaps we have been too subtle.

Individual responsibility

Stated, then, in simple words, I say to every member of the Church that you have a personal, individual responsibility to become engaged in priesthood genealogical activity. The real impact of the priesthood genealogy program is one of individual responsibility. The actual work must be performed by individuals, not by organizations. What is everybody's business is nobody's business, so I must say that this work is your individual responsibility and each of you, as an individual, must become converted to this work as a personal responsibility. It is not my responsibility alone, nor that of your stake president, nor that of your bishop alone. It is not confined to the high priests. Neither is genealogy and temple work reserved for older people. It should not be put off until you retire or become too old and infirm to do anything else.

A vital program

Priesthood genealogy is an exciting, living, vital program involving the whole family. Elijah came to turn the hearts of children to their parents and parents to their children, so priesthood genealogy and temple work is a family affair, a total family program involving children, youth, and parents. We ought to change our attitudes toward priesthood genealogy and realize that the real impact of this program converges on each individual member of the Church.

Some persons have asked me, "Just what is my personal responsibility in this work?" I answer that your individual responsibility is to be, or to become, worthy to enter the temple of God to participate in ordinances of salvation for yourself and for others. Youth are to be baptized in behalf of the dead. Young adults are to receive an endowment of power and to be married in the Lord's appointed way. Wives are to be sealed to husbands and have their children sealed to them for all eternity. Thus, just as you can be saviors for the living through active missionary work, so you are to qualify yourselves to become saviors for those who are dead who rely on you for help and assistance.

Saviors on Mt. Zion

As revealed by the scriptures, one of the characteristics of these last days is the appearance of saviors on the earth. This was prophesied in Old Testament times:

"And saviours shall come up on mount Zion to judge the mount of Esau; and the kingdom shall be the Lord's." (Obad. 21.)

It was prophesied by Paul in New Testament times, referring to people who had lived on the earth in times of old:

"And these all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise:

"God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect." (Heb. 11:39-40.)

It has also been prophesied of us who live today:

"Therefore, blessed are ye if ye continue in my goodness, a light unto the Gentiles, and through this priesthood, a savior unto my people Israel. The Lord hath said it. Amen." (D&C 86:11.)

So the Lord himself has placed his seal of approval upon this work.

Savior "for your dead"

A logical question then follows: For whom am I to be a savior? In section 127 of the Doctrine and Covenants, verse 6, the Prophet Joseph Smith used these words: "for your dead." In the next section, in verse 15, he continued speaking of our ancestors:

"For their salvation is necessary and essential to our salvation, as Paul says concerning the fathers [speaking collectively]—that they without us cannot be made perfect—neither can we without our dead [i.e., our fathers and mothers] be made perfect."

Joseph Smith explained the coming of Elijah as follows:

"... It is sufficient to know, in this case, that the earth will be smitten with a curse unless there is a welding link of some kind or other between the fathers and the children. . . ." (D&C 128:18.)

Our dead, then, are clearly our own progenitors or direct ancestors, as Joseph Smith explained:

"But how are they to become saviors on Mount Zion? By building their temples, erecting their baptismal fonts, and going forth and receiving all the ordinances, baptisms, confirmations, washings, anointings, ordinations, and sealing powers upon their heads, in behalf of all their progenitors who are dead, and redeem them that they may come forth in the first resurrection and be exalted to thrones of glory with them; and herein is the chain that binds the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the children to the fathers, which fulfills the mission of Elijah." (Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith [Deseret Book, 1968], p. 330.)

A blessing and a curse

Do you remember that God said that unless this was done, the earth would be smitten with a curse? What curse? Why, earth life itself becomes a curse to those who fail in their mission in mortality. Their earthly existence becomes a stumbling block for them instead of a glorious stepping-stone to the ladder of exaltation and glorification. When God speaks to man, his words can become either a curse or a blessing, as Moses explained to the children of Israel:

"Behold, I set before you this day a blessing and a curse;

"A blessing, if ye obey the commandments of the Lord your God, which I command you this day:

"And a curse, if ye will not obey the commandments of the Lord your God, but turn aside out of the way which I command you this day, to go after other gods, which ye have not known." (Deut. 11:26-28.)

So this command of God, given through his prophets today, is as binding upon us as were the commands of God binding upon the children of Israel.

Direct progenitors

But I would like to turn again to this personal responsibility which God has given us to become saviors on Mount Zion. Note that we are to become saviors for our own direct ancestors or progenitors and not for collateral relatives who are direct-line ancestors of somebody else. Note that it is our line of ancestry that is to be preserved, for the promises of Abraham come to us through these lines of lineage.

God gave the following promise to Abraham, referring to us who are Abraham's descendants:

"And I will bless them through thy name; for as many as receive this Gospel shall be called after thy name, and shall be accounted thy seed, and shall arise up and bless thee, as their father;

"And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse them that curse thee; and in thee (that is, in thy Priesthood) and in thy seed (that is, thy Priesthood), for I give unto thee a promise that this right shall continue in thee, and in thy seed after thee (that is to say, the literal seed, or the seed of the body) shall all the families of the earth be blessed, even with the blessings of the Gospel, which are the blessings of salvation, even of life eternal." (Abr. 2:10-11.)

Genealogical responsibility

Brigham Young taught that our genealogical responsibility is to our own family first. He said:

"We have a work to do just as important in its sphere as the Savior's work was in its sphere. Our fathers cannot be made perfect without us; we cannot be made perfect without them. They have done their work and now sleep. We are now called upon to do ours; which is to be the greatest work man ever performed on the earth. . . .

"There must be this chain in the holy Priesthood; it must be welded together from the latest generation that lives on the earth back to Father Adam, to bring back all that can be saved and placed where they can receive salvation and glory in some kingdom. This Priesthood has to do it; this Priesthood is for this purpose. . . .

"The ordinance of sealing must be performed here man to man, and woman to man, and children to parents, etc., until the chain of generation is made perfect in the sealing ordinances back to Father Adam. . . .

"Now, all you children, are you looking to the salvation of your fathers? Are you seeking diligently to redeem those that have died without the Gospel, inasmuch as they sought the Lord Almighty to obtain promises for you? For our fathers did obtain promises that their seed should not be forgotten. O ye children of the fathers, look at these things. You are to enter into the temples of the Lord and officiate for your forefathers." (Discourses of Brigham Young [Deseret Book, 1971], pp. 406-408.)

President Woodruff received a revelation on this subject and presented it in a general conference on April 8, 1894:

"We want the Latter-day Saints from this time to trace their genealogies as far as they can, and to be sealed to their fathers and mothers. Have children sealed to their parents and run this chain through as far as you can get it. . . . This is the will of the Lord to his people, and I think when you come to reflect upon it, you will find it to be true." (James R. Clark, comp., Messages of the First Presidency [Bookcraft, 1966], vol. 3, pp. 256-57.)

Need for genealogical work

The responsibility to officiate for our direct-line ancestors has continued to this day. Our recently deceased President Joseph Fielding Smith, whom we loved and respected, contrasted our personal responsibility with the responsibility of the Church:

"The Lord has given to the Church the responsibility of preaching the gospel to the nations of the earth. This is the greatest responsibility of the Church. Men are to be taught the gospel and called to repentance and warned. When they refuse to heed the warning, they must be left without excuse.

"The Lord has also placed upon the individual members of the Church a responsibility. It is our duty as individuals to seek after our immediate dead— those of our own line. This is the greatest individual responsibility that we have, and we should carry it through in behalf of our fathers who have gone before." (Doctrines of Salvation [Bookcraft, 1955], vol. 2, p. 146.)

So, without putting any one priesthood program before any other, for each one is important, I say in behalf of all my brethren, and say to you personally, that we fully appreciate the need for genealogical work that will bring people to the temples righteously and worthily to unite their families into the eternal family of God the Eternal Father.

I bear my witness of the divinity of this priesthood goal, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

Elder Theodore M. Burton, Assistant to the Twelve, has just addressed us.

Elder Eldred G. Smith, Patriarch to the Church, will now address us. He will be followed by Elder Ezra Taft Benson of the Council of the Twelve.

Elder Eldred G. Smith

Patriarch to the Church

It was a pleasure for me to sustain Brother Harold B. Lee as the President of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and to sustain all of the other General Authorities this morning.

I wish to express appreciation for that sustaining vote in my behalf and pledge to all my leaders here my full support. I am willing to do all that is required of me to help build up the kingdom of the Lord upon the earth.

Why build temples?

A question that is often asked by many and comes to the minds of many who are not members of our faith is: "Why do Latter-day Saints build temples?"

Our third Article of Faith is: "We believe that through the Atonement of Christ, all mankind may be saved, by obedience to the laws and ordinances of the Gospel."

The fourth Article of Faith follows: "We believe that the first principles and ordinances of the Gospel are: first, Faith in the Lord Jesus Christ; second, Repentance; third, Baptism by immersion for the remission of sins; fourth, Laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost."

Need for baptism

With God, all laws and ordinances must be complied with and obeyed. Christ said to Nicodemus, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God.

"Nicodemus saith unto him, How can a man be born when he is old? can he enter the second time into his mother's womb, and be born?

"Jesus answered, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." (John 3:3-5.)

Christ had already confirmed the fullness and exactness of this law in his own compliance thereto, as recorded in Matthew: "Then cometh Jesus from Galilee to Jordan unto John, to be baptized of him.

"But John forbad him, saying, I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me?

"And Jesus answering said unto him, Suffer it to be so now: for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness. Then he suffered him." (Matt. 3:13-15.)

Baptism for all mankind

Baptism, then, is for all mankind, even Christ, the very Son of God, who was perfect and without sin. Then it is all the more necessary for all of us.

If required for all mankind, then would a just God condemn for all eternity those who came to the earth at such time when, and such places where, such opportunities were not available—hence, impossible for them to comply with the law?

Then if God is just, and we know he is, he must provide a way whereby all mankind may receive his ordinances, and they must be so performed as shall be accepted by him.

Peter tells us in his First Epistle that between the time of Christ's crucifixion and his resurrection, he was actively engaged in preaching to the spirits of those who had died:

"By which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison;

"Which sometime were disobedient, when once the longsuffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls were saved by water." (1 Pet. 3:19-20.)

This opened the way for all who did not have the opportunity to accept his gospel in this life to accept it after death. This does not provide the ordinance of baptism, which is a must for entrance into the kingdom of God.

Paul, preaching to the Corinthians, trying to convert them to the reality of a resurrection, asked them, "Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? why are they then baptized for the dead?" (1 Cor. 15:29.)

Obviously, they were then practicing a vicarious ordinance of baptism for their kindred dead.

Christ suffered vicariously for us; now he is giving us the opportunity to perform a vicarious act for our fellow-men.

Coming of Elijah

There are yet other requirements needed. How can this vicarious work be done if the names of those who have died are not known?

The necessity, then, is very apparent that records must be kept, researched, and obtained to do this work for each individual, separately.

In April 1836, at the completion of the temple in Kirtland, Ohio, several heavenly messengers appeared to Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery. Note—not to Joseph Smith alone, but to Joseph and Oliver. Two witnessed these visitations. Among them was Elijah the prophet, who ascended into heaven without tasting death.

Thirteen years earlier, Joseph Smith had been promised by a heavenly messenger by the name of Moroni that Elijah would be sent to him. The Prophet Joseph Smith described the keys Elijah bestowed upon them in these words:

"The spirit, power, and calling of Elijah is, that ye have power to hold the keys of the revelation, ordinances, oracles, powers, and endowments of the fullness of the Melchizedek Priesthood and of the kingdom of God on the earth; and to receive, obtain, and perform all the ordinances belonging to the kingdom of God, even unto the turning of the hearts of the fathers unto the children, and the hearts of the children unto their fathers, even those who are in heaven." (Documentary History of the Church, vol. 6, p. 251. Italics added.)

Our forefathers who did not have this opportunity were promised that this day would come. (See D&C 121: 26-27.)

Since the coming of Elijah the prophet to Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery in the Kirtland Temple, this work of gathering the names has taken on great proportions by people of all walks of life and in many nations. This is a miraculous undertaking. Think of the way the Lord has inspired the scientific minds of our day to provide machines of all kinds to speed up and make possible this great undertaking.

Command to build temples

Five years after Elijah's coming, in a revelation to the Prophet Joseph Smith in 1841, the Lord directed his people to "build a house to my name, for the Most High to dwell therein.

"For there is not a place found on earth that he may come to and restore again that which was lost unto you, or which he hath taken away, even the fullness of the priesthood.

"For a baptismal font there is not upon the earth, that they, my saints, may be baptized for those who are dead—

"For this ordinance belongeth to my house, and cannot be acceptable to me, only in the days of your poverty, wherein ye are not able to build a house unto me." (D&C 124:27-30.)

Then he tells of other sacred ordinances that are to be performed in his house, or a temple.

Thus it is necessary to build temples, houses of the Lord, sacred edifices in which may be performed the ordinance of baptism and other sacred ordinances vicariously for our dead ancestors.

Keys to sacred ordinances

Elijah brought the keys to perform all the sacred ordinances belonging to the kingdom of God. All these most sacred ordinances necessary for man's exaltation in the life to come, even eternal life, are accepted by God only when they are performed in his sacred house, a temple of God.

For this reason, the children of Israel constructed an "ark of the covenant," which was portable, so they might have the blessings of the kingdom of God.

To receive the fullness of the blessings of exaltation, even eternal life, man must receive all the law and the ordinances of God's kingdom.

For living and dead

Another requirement to fulfill all the law is people. We, as members of the Church, must so live as to be worthy to go into the house of the Lord to perform these most sacred ordinances, first for ourselves, then for our dead ancestors.

The living come first. It is necessary for us to receive these ordinances first; then we may be privileged to do this work for our ancestors, to whom the promise was made that we would come to earth in this the dispensation of the fullness of times to do this work for them.

The time must come when temples will be found all over the earth, in many nations. This is most necessary for the salvation, exaltation, and eternal life of man. Then we should all be very diligent in gathering the family records and so live to be worthy of taking part in this work.

I pray the Lord to bless us to do this work, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

He to whom you have listened is Elder Eldred G. Smith, Patriarch to the Church.

Elder Ezra Taft Benson of the Council of the Twelve will be our concluding speaker.

Elder Ezra Taft Benson

Of the Council of the Twelve

This morning we sustained unanimously Harold B. Lee to what I believe is the highest office in the world, the earthly President of the church of Jesus Christ. I have known this great man longer possibly than any other one of the General Authorities. I honor him; I have admired him since we were boys together over fifty years ago. With all my heart I love and sustain him as a prophet of God, as an inspired leader, ideally qualified to lead the church of Christ in our difficult day. May God inspire us as members of the Church with wisdom to follow his noble leadership.

I seek an interest in your faith and prayers, that my brief message, which is directed primarily to those who are not yet members, might bring help and conviction to their souls.

Seeking divine guidance

While Saul was on the road to Damascus, he was stopped by a heavenly vision and the voice of the Lord Jesus Christ. And Saul responded with these momentous words: “. . . Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? . . .” (Acts 9:6.) To this the Lord responded by sending Saul to see one of his authorized servants to receive direction and a blessing.

A man can ask no more important question in his life than that which Paul asked: “. . . Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?” A man can take no greater action than to pursue a course that will bring to him the answer to that question and then to carry out that answer. What would the Lord Jesus Christ have us do? He has answered that question by saying, “Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect” (Matt. 5:48), and, “Therefore, what manner of men ought ye to be? Verily I say unto you, even as I am” (3 Ne. 27:27.)

Christ, our example

Christ, then, has set us the example of what we should be like and what we should do. While many men have admirable qualities, there is only one man who ever walked the earth who was without sin, whose father of his physical body was God the Father, and who had the power to resurrect his own body. This Jesus is our exemplar and has commanded us to follow in his steps.

God the Father has given Jesus Christ a name above all others, so that eventually every knee will bow and every tongue confess that Jesus is the Christ. He is the way, the truth, and the light, and no one can come back into the presence of our Father in heaven except through him. Christ is God the Son and possesses every virtue in its perfection. Therefore, the only measure of true greatness is how close a man can become like Jesus. That man is greatest who is most like Christ, and those who love him most will be most like him.

How, then, does a man imitate God, follow his steps, and walk as he walked, which we are commanded to do? We must study the life of Christ, learn his commandments, and do them. God has promised that to follow this course will lead a man to an abundant life and a fullness of joy and the peace and rest which those who are heavy-burdened long for. To learn of Christ necessitates the study of the scriptures and the testimonies of those who know him. We come to know him through prayer and the inspiration and revelation that God has promised to those who keep his commandments.

Learn the commandments

And how do you learn the commandments? You learn the commandments through the words of the Lord in the scriptures, through the revelations received by his authorized servants, the Light of Christ, like a conscience that comes to every man, and through personal revelation.

It is significant that when Paul asked the question, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" Christ directed Paul to one of the Lord's authorized servants. So it was with Cornelius, who after prayer was instructed to send men to contact Peter. (See Acts 10.) It has always been so—that whenever God has had his prophets upon the earth, men could go to them to learn of Christ and his commandments.

The inspired words of these prophets, when written down, became scripture, and whenever God has his representatives on the earth, there is always new revelation and new scripture. Only when men became so corrupt that the prophets were taken out of their midst did scriptures cease. And God stated that only through his authorized representatives could men receive the ordinances essential for salvation and the commandments necessary for the perfecting of his children.

Words of living prophets

Speaking to his prophets, the Lord said: "He that receiveth you receiveth me. . . ." (Matt. 10:40.) Always the words of the living prophet took precedence, for it was God's message to the people at that particular time. Had any man accepted the ancient scripture in the days of Noah but refused to follow the revelation that Noah received and failed to board the ark, he would have been drowned. Always the words of the living prophets are of the most vital concern to the people; and always, if a man would know of Christ and learn his commandments so that he can obey them, he must seek to find his authorized representatives.

For centuries, because of the wickedness of men, prophets of God no longer walked the earth, so scripture ended with the last words in the New Testament. Confusion and contention reigned in so-called Christendom, for all they had was the ancient scripture, but they were without the prophets of God to explain it to them and to receive new revelation, new scripture, and to be authorized to direct the work of the ministry.

The Restoration

But in 1820, the greatest single event since the resurrection of the Christ occurred. God the Father and his Son, Jesus Christ, personally visited a young boy by the name of Joseph Smith, who had been praying to know which church to join. God, our Father, spoke to the lad and said, ". . . This is My Beloved Son. Hear Him!" (Joseph Smith 2:17.) God the Son told Joseph Smith not to join any of the churches. Joseph was to learn that the Lord's true church was not on the earth; that living prophets of God, who were the foundation of the church, had not walked the earth for centuries; and that with their deaths, the rock of revelation on which the church was built ceased; and so there was no new scripture.

Eventually, to Joseph Smith appeared the men who were the last authorized servants to direct the church of Jesus Christ—Peter, James, and John. These glorified beings ordained Joseph Smith with the same authority they had received from Jesus, so that once again there was a prophet of God on the earth who could say, ". . . thus saith the Lord." (D&C 44:1.) Joseph Smith ordained others with the authority that he had received, and so the church of Jesus Christ was restored in these latter days—The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, commonly known as the Mormon Church.

The Book of Mormon

In due time, another heavenly messenger came to Joseph Smith to tell him that God was about to give to the earth a scriptural account of the early inhabitants of America, as the Bible is a scriptural account that covers the other side of the world. This American scripture that was translated by Joseph Smith, through the inspiration of heaven, is called the Book of Mormon. It tells, among other things, of Christ's personal appearance to God's children here in America after his resurrection in Jerusalem and of his instructions to them. The mission of the Book of Mormon is to be a companion volume with the Bible, to serve as a second witness that Jesus is the Christ, to show that God loves one nation as another, and to reduce contention by making clear many of the doctrines that have confused Christendom.

Joseph Smith received many revelations from Jesus Christ, as have the prophets who have succeeded him, which means that new scripture has been given. The Lord's mouthpiece and his prophet on the face of the earth today is President Harold B. Lee, who received his authority through a line of prophets going back to Joseph Smith, who was ordained by Peter, James, and John, who were ordained by Christ, who was and is the head of the Church, the Creator of this earth, and the God before whom all men must stand accountable.

"Come and see"

Now this marvelous message—that God has spoken to prophets in our day and reestablished his church—is for all the world. When Nathanael questioned Philip, telling him that he had found Jesus, Philip responded by saying, "Come and see." (John 1:46.)

So do we respond, "Come and see." Men can deceive you, but God will not. If you sincerely desire to know of the truthfulness of this message, then make it a matter of fervent prayer, study it out, test it out, and God will let you know.

Would you like to know if Joseph Smith was a prophet of God and if the Book of Mormon is scripture sent from God? Then put it to the test. Read the Book of Mormon, and near its close you will find a promise that is given to everyone who reads that volume; and this is the promise: that if you will ask God, the Eternal Father, in the name of Jesus Christ, if this book is true, and if you will ask with a sincere heart, with real intent, having faith in Christ, then our Heavenly Father will manifest the truth of it unto you by the power of the Holy Ghost. (See Moro. 10:4.)

This is the challenge and the test. I testify to you that I have read the Book of Mormon and that I have put it to the test; that God has revealed unto me the truthfulness of this added volume of scripture and revealed unto me that Joseph Smith is a prophet of God; and that Harold B. Lee is his prophet and representative and stands today as the earthly President of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, the one man on the earth who holds the keys of God's kingdom, as Peter did anciently.

Need for a prophet

Let me ask, do we need a true prophet of the Lord on the earth today? Did the people in Noah's day need a prophet to warn them spiritually and temporally? Had a man refused to follow Noah, would he have been saved from the flood? Yet the Bible tells us that in the last days in which we live, the wickedness of the people will become comparable to the wickedness of the people in Noah's day when God cleansed the earth by flood. Do you think we need a prophet today to warn us and prepare us for the cleansing that God promised will come, this time by fire?

Men's hearts are failing them, spiritually and temporally. Is it of interest for you to know that God has revealed many things for your blessing? He has revealed to a modern prophet a law of health, which, if obeyed, promises a man that he can run and not be weary, and walk and not faint.

Do you think men would despair so much or commit suicide if they knew through latter-day revelation about their preexistent state, where they came from, why they are here, where they are going, and the great possibilities that lie in store for them?

Home Evening program

With the satanic attempts to break apart the family and create disunion and strife in the home, would you be impressed with a program inaugurated by a modern prophet of the Lord some fifty years ago called the home evening program? This one-night-a-week program brings together all the members of the family for some spiritual and character guidance, a discussion of family goals and plans, a display of family talent, and games and refreshments.

The Church distributes to its members a yearly manual with suggestions for this home evening program. Those members who diligently hold these home evenings are given a promised blessing by a prophet of God of what will result. Listen to this promised blessing:

"Love at home and obedience to parents will increase, faith will be developed in the hearts of the youth of Israel, and they will gain power to combat the evil influences and temptations which beset them." (Family Home Evening Manual, 1965, p. v.)

Would you like that blessing for your home?

Would you be interested to know that by latter-day revelation the Lord has said that marriage is ordained of God, and that a couple married in one of our temples by those who hold the authority to bind on earth and it will be bound in heaven can be married, not till death do you part, but for time and all eternity? Would you like the assurance that comes to that couple that if they and their children are faithful, they shall continue together as a family unit in the next life?

Spread of wickedness

Are you concerned about the increasing subversion in this blessed country, and other countries of the free world, and the spread of wickedness by a giant conspiracy? Would you be interested in reading the Book of Mormon, which records the downfall of two great ancient American civilizations as a result of internal secret conspiracies and contains a warning to us today that when we see these conditions in our midst, the Lord commands us to awake to our awful situation? With the increasing amount of aid and trade that we are providing the enemy of freedom, you might be interested to know what the Book of Mormon says will happen to a nation that upholds this conspiracy. Would you like to know of the warnings of the prophets about our increasing descent down the soul-destroying road of socialism and what they have told us to do about it?

Jesus knew of the calamities that would befall the world, which is one of the reasons why he gave revelations to Joseph Smith and other prophets. Would you like to know of a program that we have had for many years of instructing our members to have on hand at least a year's supply of food, clothing, and where possible, fuel, and of getting out of financial bondage? And did you know that God is giving his church direction to make it independent of the world?

These and many, many more revelations of great blessings and help for today, with programs of preparation for tomorrow and eternity, are available now through The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Pathway to eternal life

What manner of men are we to be? Verily, even as Jesus Christ. To be like him we must study his life, learn his commandments, and do them. That is the pathway to joy and abundant and eternal life.

Prophets of God have known him—they have told us of him and of his commandments. They have been sent of God and through revelation have instructed us in the way we should go. There is no more crucial question than that which Paul asked: "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" There is no more essential answer than that which he received—of going to those who are authorized by the Lord to give directions.

"Come, listen to a prophet's voice,
And hear the word of God.
And in the way of truth rejoice,
And sing for joy aloud.
We've found the way the prophets went
Who lived in days of yore;
Another prophet now is sent
This knowledge to restore."

—Hymns, no. 46

Invitation to investigate

May I invite you to further investigate The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints—to read the Book of Mormon. There are representatives of the Church in your general area who, without any obligation on your part, will be happy to come and tell you about the Church. You are welcome to attend our meetings. If you would like some free literature or additional information, feel free to write us at our headquarters by simply addressing us in Salt Lake City.

And now, may I leave you my witness that I know that God lives—he is not dead; that God loves his children; that we are all brothers and sisters, children of the same Father in the spirit; that he blesses us and wants to further bless us, and to that end he has established his church and sent his prophets. Today that church is The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and his prophet and mouthpiece is President Harold B. Lee. I know this as I know that I live, and I bear this testimony humbly and gratefully in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

Thank you, Elder Benson, for that powerful testimony.

The Sunday School conference meeting, we remind you, will be held in the Tabernacle this evening at 7 o'clock, to which we invite all Sunday School officers and teachers and their families, and all priesthood members who have Sunday School responsibilities.

Also we remind you of the Welfare meeting to be held at 7:30 in the morning in the Assembly Hall. Regional representatives, stake presidencies, high councilors involved in Welfare work, bishoprics, and stake and ward Relief Society presidencies are invited to attend.

We have announced heretofore the wide coverage of these conference sessions. Nearly two-thirds of the world will be able to receive the broadcasts and re-broadcasts over International Short-wave Radio Station WNYW, and then re-broadcasts over KSL Radio beginning at midnight tonight.

We thank the sisters of the combined Relief Society choruses of the Granger, Jordan and Midvale Regions for their singing today. We are grateful for the presence of these lovely sisters and for the beautiful numbers they have rendered.

With Sister Barnes conducting and Brother Cundick at the organ, the chorus will now favor us with "I Know that My Redeemer Lives."

Following the singing, the benediction will be offered by Elder Clifton I. Johnson, former president of the England Central Mission.

This conference will then be adjourned until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The Relief Society Chorus sang "I Know That My Redeemer Lives."

The closing prayer was offered by Elder Clifton I. Johnson, former president of the England Central Mission.

The conference was adjourned until tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

SECOND DAY MORNING MEETING

THIRD SESSION

The third session of the conference convened in the Salt Lake Tabernacle on Saturday, October 7, 1972, at 10 o'clock a.m., with President Harold B. Lee presiding and conducting this session.

The special music for this meeting was furnished by the Tabernacle Choir, directed by Richard P. Condie, with Alexander Schreiner playing the organ accompaniments.

Before the beginning of the meeting the Tabernacle Choir sang the song, "Now Let All the Heavens Adore Thee."

President Harold B. Lee then made the following statement:

President Harold B. Lee

The Tabernacle Choir has just opened this third session of the 142nd Semi-Annual Conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints singing "Now Let All the Heavens Adore Thee."

It is our great pleasure to welcome all present this morning in this historic Tabernacle on Temple Square.

We acknowledge the presence of special guests, church leaders, educational and civic leaders, and the thousands of members of the Church from far and near who are gathered here for this conference. We extend greetings to friends attending from other churches and to the many tuned to these proceedings by radio and television throughout many areas of the world.

Music for this session of the conference will be furnished by the Tabernacle Choir, under the direction of Richard P. Condie, with Alexander Schreiner at the organ. The choir will now favor us with "Sing and Rejoice."

Following the singing the invocation will be offered by President I. Haven Barlow, President of the Layton Stake.

The Tabernacle Choir sang "Sing and Rejoice."

The opening prayer was offered by President I. Haven Barlow, President of the Layton Stake.

The Choir sang "Father in Heaven" without announcement.

President Harold B. Lee

My beloved brothers and sisters and friends who may be listening in over the radio or television:

I seek for the inspiration of this great conference during these few moments.

Purpose of restoration

On the day the Church was organized, and shortly thereafter, the word of the Lord came to the prophet-leader of this dispensation. After the announcement of the establishment of the Church of Christ in these latter days, the Lord gave to the President of the Church commandments and "gave him power from on high," first, to bring forth "a record of a fallen people, and the fullness of the gospel of Jesus Christ" (D&C 20:8-9); then, to be a light to the world and a standard for Church members and for those who are not members to seek for it (D&C 45:9); third, to prepare a people ready to receive the coming of the Lord; and finally, to teach the fullness of the gospel with power unto all nations (see Documentary History of the Church, vol. 4, p. 537).

Grave world problems

In our day, when grave problems are before the nation and the world, men everywhere are seeking panaceas for the ills that afflict mankind and the answers to world problems that remain unanswered.

The ancient prophets seemed to have foreseen our day of complete frustration, when men would be looking for answers in the wrong places and the solutions to their problems in the wrong way. The prophets foresaw the day when there would be "a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the Lord." Furthermore, said the prophet, ". . . they shall run to and fro to seek the word of the Lord, and shall not find it." (Amos 8:11-12.)

It seems that in these days of frustration, from every side we are being asked such questions as:

What does the Church think about the Vietnam war?

What is the stand of the Church on overpopulation and birth control?

What is the position of the Church relative to abortion?

How should we combat the threat of Communism throughout the world?

What are the views of the Church relative to the crime wave and the increase of juvenile delinquency?

What can be done to strengthen family ties and reduce the wave of immorality, to teach self-reliance and responsibility and moral and physical discipline?

Are there no solutions to these problems?

Preach the word

To set the theme for my few remarks, may I repeat something of vital importance that was said from this pulpit almost ten years ago by a former President of the Church, President David O. McKay:

"In these days of uncertainty and unrest, liberty-loving peoples' greatest responsibility and paramount duty is to preserve and proclaim the freedom of the individual, his relationship to Deity, and the necessity of obedience to the principles of the gospel of Jesus Christ. Only thus will mankind find peace and happiness." (Improvement Era, December 1962, p. 903.)

Then comes the question, what shall we do about all this?

When Paul the apostle was a prisoner in Rome, he sent a letter to Timothy, saying:

"Preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all longsuffering and doctrine.

"For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears;

"And they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." (2 Tim. 4:2-4.)

Quoting again from President McKay's remarks:

"It is just as important today as when Paul wrote that farewell message to Timothy that . . . members everywhere 'preach the word; be instant [that is, to be eager, earnest] in season, [and] out of season.'

"Today, in the midst of the world's perplexity, there should be no question in the mind of any true Latter-day Saint as to what we shall preach. The answer is as clear as the noonday sun in a cloudless sky. . . .

"In simple words, then, this is the word that we should preach—the gospel plan of salvation.

"The founders of this great republic had faith in the economic and political welfare of this country because they had faith in God. Today it is not uncommon to note an apologetic attitude on the part of men when they refer to the need of God's governing in the affairs of men. . . .

"But I say to you, preach in season and out of season belief in God the Eternal Father, in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost.

"Proclaim that fundamental in the gospel plan is the sacredness of the individual; that God's work and glory is 'to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man.' (Moses 1:39). . .

"Proclaim that God lives, and that his Beloved Son is the Redeemer and Savior of mankind; that he stands at the head of his Church that bears his name; that he guides and inspires those who are authorized to represent him here on earth. . . .

"Preach that the responsibility of declaring this plan of life, this way of life, this plan of salvation, rests upon the entire membership of the Church, but most particularly upon those who have been ordained to the priesthood and who have been called as leaders and servants of the people." (Improvement Era, December 1966, p. 1093.)

Eternal verities

These eternal verities are as applicable in the year 1972 as they were when Jesus first promulgated them, and they will remain fundamental and essential in man's progress and happiness as long as life and being last.

Then reference was made to a quotation from an eminent educator, who said:

"If there is to be social and political regeneration in our Republic and in the rest of the world, it must be by tremendous regeneration of moral ideals." (Dr. J. William Hudson, University of Missouri.)

The scoffer will immediately and invariably brand such a statement as naive and coming from one who has lost step with the realities of our times, as was demonstrated by some of our social science students recently who apparently haven't learned that their little learning is not a dangerous thing, if they were only to realize that what they know is only a little learning.

Proclaim peace

Time will permit but a few observations with reference to some of these startling challenges to our present generation.

In the midst of the early persecutions of this church, the Saints sought earnestly from the Lord as to how they were to meet the threats of their enemies.

The answer came: "Therefore, renounce war and proclaim peace, and seek diligently to turn the hearts of the children to their fathers, and the hearts of the fathers to the children." (D&C 98:16.)

And then came this significant promise:

"And again I say unto you, if ye observe to do whatsoever I command you, I, the Lord, will turn away all wrath and indignation from you, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against you." (D&C 98:22.)

Subject to powers that be

Early in the history of the Church came the enlightening word of the Lord:

"Let no man break the laws of the land, for he that keepeth the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land.

"Wherefore, be subject to the powers that be, until he reigns whose right it is to reign, and subdues all enemies under his feet." (D&C 58:21-22.)

The inspired prophet-leader of this dispensation declared the faith of this people in what we call the Articles of Faith:

"We believe in being subject to kings, presidents, rulers, and magistrates, in obeying, honoring, and sustaining the law." (Article of Faith 12.) Obedient to that declaration, even in times of national emergency, we yield obedience to civil authority.

In plain language, then, the Saints were told that to avoid war with their enemies they must renounce war and proclaim peace and to see that this was to begin within the home where fathers and children would be at peace with each other.

Preparation in home

The Lord gave a further promise, saying that when and if all wrath and indignation would be conquered within themselves, the evils of Satan's powers could not successfully assail them.

He didn't leave us with any question as to the prime place in his church and in the world where this preparation and the battle against evil—unless curbed in the beginning—would break out into armed conflict.

After giving his law to parents to teach and train their children to walk uprightly before the Lord, he indicated his displeasure relative to those among us who, in his language, "are idlers . . . and [our] children are also growing up in wickedness; they also seek not earnestly the riches of eternity, but their eyes are full of greediness." (D&C 68:31.)

If these words are clearly understood, we have been told where the roots of all evil are to be found. Our children have not been properly taught by parents in the home. Our communities have adopted policies which encourage idleness instead of work for those who want to work for what they need, and have failed to adopt measures to see that idleness and unemployment are reduced to the absolute minimum.

Importance of work

In our own day a pioneer leader, President Brigham Young, spoke as a pioneer statesman about the importance of work. Said he:

"My experience has taught me, and it has become a principle with me, that it is never any benefit to give, out and out, to man or woman, money, food, clothing, or anything else, if they are able-bodied, and can work and earn what they need, where there is anything on the earth, for them to do. This is my principle, and I try to act upon it. To pursue a contrary course would ruin any community in the world and make them idlers." (Discourses of Brigham Young [Deseret Book Co., 1943], p. 274.)

Now I want to digress for just a moment and repeat something that was said in a previous meeting this morning where the leaders just a few years ago, when the welfare program was instituted, said this:

"This is the essence of the Church security program, not merely that men should be fed and clothed, we know that this is important, but that the eternal man should be built up by self-reliance, by creative activity, by honorable labor, by service; a generation raised in idleness cannot maintain its integrity." (Richard L. Evans, Improvement Era, vol. 39 [1936], p. 768.)

"From the beginning the long-range objective of the Welfare Plan was to build character in the members of the Church, both givers and receivers alike, thus rescuing all that is finest down deep inside of them and bringing to flower and fruitage the laden richness of the spirit, which after all is the mission and purpose and reason for the being of this Church." (Albert E. Bowen, Church Welfare [Deseret Sunday School Union, 1946], p. 44.)

Church program

You in the Church must realize now that in order to put these divinely inspired admonitions into practice as they have come from heaven-inspired leaders, the members of the Church have been given the family home evening plan for family instruction and involvement. Linked with that, he has given us the plan of temporal salvation in the churchwide welfare program, where everyone is to give in labor, money, or service to the full extent of his ability and then receive from out of the bounties, of which each one who needs has been a producer, and then without embarrassment or reticence, he receives according to his need.

Beyond this the Lord has directed the establishment of children and youth activities and of instruction to mothers and fathers in the auxiliaries and priesthood quorum organizations of the Church, where every means is provided to give to all, as an outside observer said, speaking of the youth activities provided by the Church, "the opportunity to participate in so many good things that they have little or no time for the evil activities."

Application of Lord's plan

Any thinking person can see that if these fundamentals of sound social principles are not employed in every community to deal with crime, unemployment, and juvenile delinquency, then the seeds of unrest and bitterness would lead to the ultimate, of which the Lord warned. When these principles of right living and the application of his doctrines of salvation are not heeded, then we must expect that the power of evil will lead to conflict in the family, in the nation, and throughout the world.

Here are the Lord's own prophetic words that, instead of peace, there would be a sword; a son would be "at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter in law against her mother in law. And a man's foes shall be they of his own household." (Matt. 10:35-36.)

Are you aware that this is what is happening in many families throughout the world? Do I need to say more to bring us back to the complete application of the Lord's plan to save mankind and the world? If this people will heed this counsel from your leaders, you have the promise that, as the Lord said:

"... the gates of hell shall not prevail against you; yea, and the Lord God will disperse the powers of darkness from before you, and cause the heavens to shake for your good, and his name's glory." (D&C 21:6.)

We would be so bold also to invite the honorable of the earth everywhere to follow a similar course to the blessing of all mankind.

Never-ending contest

But now the members of this church throughout the world must brace themselves for the never-ending contest between the forces of righteousness and the forces of evil. The Prophet Joseph Smith made this declaration to the Twelve, borne out of his experience, and to which many of us since that time can testify. He said:

"You will have all kinds of trials to pass through. And it is quite as necessary that you be tried as it was for Abraham and other men of God, and . . . God will feel after you, and he will take hold of you and wrench your very heart strings, and if you cannot stand it you will not be fit for an inheritance in the Celestial Kingdom of God." (John Taylor, in Journal of Discourses, vol. 24, p. 197.)

Restrictive measures

Now, again, where there is abject poverty in some heavily populated countries, we declare it is a grievous sin before God to adopt restrictive measures in disobedience to God's divine command from the beginning of time to "multiply and replenish the earth." Surely those who project such measures to prevent life or to destroy life before or after birth will reap the whirlwind of God's retribution, for God will not be mocked.

What is sorely needed is a worldwide movement, with every means possible, to overcome the ignorance to be found among these unfortunate peoples, where the fundamental principles of right living and self-control and sound economic principles, patterned after the Lord's plan of salvation, must be adopted.

This church must be in the forefront in showing the way. If we will do this, we will begin to see the beginning of the fulfillment of the ancient prophecy when, as the prophets said, the "mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, . . . nations shall flow unto it. And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord . . . and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem." (Isa. 2:2-3. See also Mic. 4:1-2.)

Political turmoil

With regard to the political turmoil among the nations, we would earnestly pray that if this and other nations would be constrained to live by and adopt governmental systems where civil and political liberties are secure, we could then hopefully look for the fulfillment of the ancient prophecy of the prophets Isaiah and Micah, to which I have already made reference, "that out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem." When that day comes, the blessings and freedoms of the free world will then be realized.

Counterfeit plan

Now a final word about one of the great dangers of some of the widely disseminated doctrines of the enemies of freedom, which in essence have been characterized by our beloved prophet-statesman, President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., as but "a clumsy attempt of Satan to counterfeit the Lord's plan of the United Order, as defined in the Holy Scriptures." Our present welfare plan could well be the "setting-up" exercises to see how prepared this church is to live this plan, so that, as was the joyous realization of a people on this continent, as recorded in an ancient scripture we call the Book of Mormon, after they were all converted to the Lord,

"there were not rich and poor, bond and free, but they were all . . . partakers of the heavenly gift" and "surely there could not be a happier people" on the face of the earth (4 Ne. 3, 16), by living fully the law of sacrifice and consecration.

There are some well-intentioned persons within the Church who seem to have taken upon themselves to substitute for the great principles of the gospel of Jesus Christ and the kingdom of God what some have characterized as "cults"—the results of which, no matter how sincere, have caused confusion by using other organized bodies than those of the priesthood of God to combat these dangers. In doing so they have set brothers against brothers in the Church and thus weakened the unity of the greatest weapon the Lord has already provided against these evils, through the priesthood organizations of the Church and kingdom of God. Some such groups, by adopting counterfeit measures and procedures, have been led away and have apostatized and been excommunicated from the Church.

Leadership of priesthood

If we follow the leadership of the priesthood, the Lord will fulfill his promise contained in the preface to his revelations, when Satan would have power over his own dominion. This was his promise: ". . . the Lord shall have power over his saints, and shall reign in their midst, and shall come down in judgment upon . . . the world." (D&C 1:36.)

I earnestly urge all our people to unite under the true banner of the Master, to teach the gospel of Jesus Christ so powerfully that no truly converted person could ever be aligned with these controversial concepts and procedures contrary to the Lord's plan of salvation.

The Lord does reign in the midst of his Saints through his priesthood, which he delegates to man, rather than through other man-made organizations, the like of those to which I have made reference.

Prayer for world

Now, in conclusion, may I offer a humble prayer in behalf of the Church and the nation and the world. I realize that there is much more that might be said, but in this prayer may I indulge and ask that you might unite your faith with mine for a few moments:

"Our heavenly and eternal Father, hear our prayer this day, and sanctify to our good all that is being done by righteous men and women in the Church and throughout the world to bring to naught the evils that are rolling over the world like an avalanche. Increase within us the zeal to bring thy great plan of redemption to every nation, kindred, tongue, and people, looking to that glorious day when thy prophecy will be realized when truth will cover the earth as waters cover the mighty deep.

"We appeal to the protection of thy almighty power to that end which accords with thy purpose concerning us and thy work. We put ourselves under the surveillance of thy watchful eye and pray that thou will never leave us alone, and continue to give the guidance necessary to the accomplishment of thy purposes."

I add to that humble prayer my witness to the members of this church and to the world that through the atonement of the Lord Jesus Christ, "all mankind may be saved by obedience to the laws and ordinances of the Gospel." (Article of Faith 3.)

This is indeed the Lord's work in which we are engaged. He lives and is ever ready to draw near to us when we prepare ourselves to be worthy to draw close to him. From my own personal experience, I know this, which I declare in all soberness to be true, and in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

The Choir sang following President Lee's address "Praise God from Whom All Blessings Flow" without announcement.

President Harold B. Lee

This is the third session of the 142nd Semi-Annual Conference of the Church.

The Tabernacle Choir will now sing "Inflammatuſ" with Olga Gardner as the soloist.

Following the singing, Elder Howard W. Hunter of the Council of the Twelve will speak to us.

The Choir sang the song, "Inflammatuſ."

President Lee

Elder Howard W. Hunter of the Council of the Twelve will now address us.

Elder Howard W. Hunter

Of the Council of the Twelve

One of the most striking prophecies of the Old Testament, which certainly characterizes our day, is this one spoken by Amos:

"Behold, the days come, saith the Lord God, that I will send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the Lord:

"And they shall wander from sea to sea, and from the north even to the east, they shall run to and fro to seek the word of the Lord, and shall not find it." (Amos 8:11-12.)

Spiritual famine

Famine was one of the common scourges of Old Testament times, and people understood the devastating consequences of crop failure and starving people. Amos brought this understanding into sharp focus by his prediction of a spiritual famine. He said: "... not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the Lord."

Long before this time Moses had written: "... man doth not live by bread only, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord doth man live." (Deut. 8:3.)

Present-day reports of confusion and frustration of individuals and religious institutions, as they attempt to resolve their religious doubts and conflicts, remind us of these words of Amos: "... they shall run to and fro to seek the word of the Lord, and shall not find it."

They seek to find the solution without building on the rock of revelation, as the Lord said must be done, if the gates of hell are not to prevail against it. (See Matt. 16:17-18.) This problem has engaged the minds of good and sincere men before and since the restoration of the gospel of Jesus Christ in this dispensation.

Emerson's questions

In the year 1838, 134 years ago and only eight years after the organization of the Church, Ralph Waldo Emerson delivered an address before the senior class of the Divinity School at Cambridge University. In it he asked ques-

Saturday, October 7

Second Day

tions that were then unanswered and are unanswered for many individuals of our time. He said this:

"And it is my duty to say to you that the need was never greater of new revelation than now. . . . In how many churches, by how many prophets, tell me, is man made sensible that he is an infinite Soul? . . . It is the office of a true teacher to show us that God is, not was; that He speaketh, not spake. . . . Men have come to speak of . . . revelation as somewhat long ago given and done, as if God were dead." (See The Complete Writings of Ralph Waldo Emerson, pp. 37-45.)

That is an interesting statement to have been made nearly a century and a half ago. It has the sound of an echo from some of today's modern pulpits.

Modern Christian churches

Over a hundred years later, the educator Dr. Robert Gordon Sproul described this condition in modern Christian churches in these words: "We have the peculiar spectacle of a nation, which to a limited extent practices Christianity without actively believing in Christianity. We are asked to turn to the church for enlightenment but when we do we find that the voice of the church is not inspired. The voice of the church today is the echo of our own voices. . . . The way out is the sound of a voice, not our voice. . . . It is the task of the pastors to hear this voice, cause us to hear it and tell us what it says. . . . Without it we are no more capable of saving the earth than we were capable of creating it in the first place."

Decline of interest

Louis Cassels, a senior editor of United Press International, recently remarked that public interest in religion has declined because people "are sick and tired of being told what they can't believe. They want to know what, if anything, they can believe," he said,

"and many churches haven't been doing a very good job of answering that question." He ended with the warning that "if you persist in handing out stones when people ask for bread, they'll finally quit coming to the bakery." (Christianity Today, Oct. 23, 1970.)

The Gallup poll revealed in early 1967 that the majority of Americans—fifty-seven percent—say religion is losing its influence on American life. Ten years previously the proportion holding this view was 14 percent, only one-fourth as large. "This represents," said polltaker George Gallup, "one of the most dramatic shifts in surveys on American life." Surely we would agree that in the five years since that survey was made, there has been further deterioration.

Need for new revelation

In the year 1820, just prior to the time Ralph Waldo Emerson made his statement to the Cambridge Divinity School that "the need was never greater for new revelation than now," the Prophet Joseph Smith went into a grove of trees near his home and inquired of God which church he should join. The same confusion existed in his mind that exists in the minds of countless millions today, but the answer given him by the Lord takes away the uncertainty, for he said that "all their creeds were an abomination in his sight; . . . 'they draw near to me with their lips, but their hearts are far from me, they teach for doctrines the commandments of men, having a form of godliness, but they deny the power thereof.'" (Joseph Smith 2:19.)

For the world generally, this condition has not changed.

Restoration of gospel

After the long period of apostasy from the true church established by Christ during his personal ministry, a sure foundation for the kingdom of God was laid through the restoration of the priesthood and the gospel by the principles of divine revelation in this dispensation of time. The priesthood, authority to act in the name of God, was restored through visits of John the Baptist and of Peter, James, and John, who held its keys during the Savior's sojourn on earth. Other messengers, mighty prophets and leaders, including Elias, Elijah, and Moses, appeared and restored the essential keys of the kingdom. The Book of Mormon, a new witness for Jesus Christ, was revealed through the angel Moroni.

Revelation followed revelation, as recorded in the Doctrine and Covenants. The foundation was laid for the organization that would govern the kingdom of God, even until it should cover the whole earth.

Miracle achieved

In a little over 140 years, a miracle has been achieved as the priesthood has administered the restored gospel. Temples have been erected on this continent and in other places in the world. Houses of worship dot many lands of the globe. A desert has been made to bloom as a rose. Over 16,000 full-time missionaries are proclaiming the gospel in many lands. Elementary schools, high schools, seminaries, institutes of religion, and colleges in many countries give instruction to more than a quarter of a million young people daily, not only in the elements of secular learning, but in the eternal truths of the gospel.

Most important is the fact that down through its history, including this very day, the Church has had a prophet, seer, and revelator. At the head of the Church is Jesus Christ, who directs his prophet, presently Harold B. Lee. His counselors, the members of the Council of the Twelve, and the Patriarch to the Church are also prophets, seers, and revelators. The more than three million members of the Church do not have to listen to an uncertain trumpet. They can believe the voice of their leaders, knowing they are guided by the Lord.

Involvement of members

The Church of Jesus Christ provides maximum opportunity for involvement of its members. From early youth to the last years of life, satisfying and meaningful activity and responsibility are available to all who are worthy and willing. This promotes the deep satisfaction and emotional well-being which the gospel of Jesus Christ should bring into every human life.

Youth is trained from the earliest age to take part in Primary and Sunday School. At twelve years worthy young men receive the Aaronic Priesthood and, in a sense, begin an apprenticeship that prepares them for the many roles of leadership they will assume throughout their lifetime.

There is no more powerful principle of life to promote love, forbearance, and devotion in the home than that of eternal marriage. Good adjustment and performance in adult life depend largely on the quality of home life. The principle of eternal marriage is a most powerful stabilizing influence in promoting the kind of home needed to rear children who are happy and well adjusted. No church lays greater emphasis on producing a close, cohesive family life.

Loyalty increasing

What a contrast to the declarations that God is dead—there is no believable voice—the future is blank, as expressed by religious leaders, educators, and columnists. The confusion and frustrations from which the world is suffering are not common to faithful members of the Church. The proof is provided by the loyalty and dedication of its members for nearly a century and a half.

That loyalty and dedication is not diminishing—it is increasing. Hundreds are going daily from the darkness and uncertainty of unbelief and disbelief into the eternal life of the gospel by having faith, complying with the law of repentance, and accepting of baptism. Their lives are made bright and luminous by the gift of the Holy Ghost, and their souls are lifted up by their service to God and man.

A spiritual abundance

There is hope—God does live—and there is a believable voice to those who have faith and the will to believe. Certainly we live in a day of famine, as described by Amos, when “they shall run to and fro to seek the word of the Lord, and shall not find it.” (Amos 8:12.) Nevertheless, in what appears to be a spiritual famine, there are many who have found a spiritual abundance.

It is my witness that God lives and Jesus is the Christ, the Savior of the world. These few words I have spoken are a portrayal of my humble testimony that the gospel in its fullness has been restored in these latter days and that there is a prophet on the earth today who speaks the mind and will of the Lord to those who will hear and have the faith to follow. That we may do so, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

The Men’s Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir sang the song, “Now We Are Ambassadors” following Elder Hunter’s address, without announcement.

President Harold B. Lee

Elder Howard W. Hunter of the Council of the Twelve Apostles of the Church has just spoken to us. He was followed by the Men’s Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir singing from Mendelssohn’s St. Paul, “Now We Are Ambassadors.”

The choir and congregation will now join in singing “O My Father.”

Following the singing, Elder A. Theodore Tuttle of the First Council of Seventy will speak to us.

The choir and congregation sang the hymn, “O My Father.”

President Lee

For the benefit of the television and radio audience who have just joined us, we again announce that we are gathered in the historic Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City, Utah, in the third session of the 142nd Semi-Annual Conference of the Church.

Elder A. Theodore Tuttle of the First Council of Seventy will now address us. Following Elder Tuttle, we will hear from Bishop Victor L. Brown, Presiding Bishop of the Church.

Elder A. Theodore Tuttle

Of the First Council of the Seventy

“And [Isaac] builded an altar there, and called upon the name of the Lord, and pitched his tent there: and there Isaac’s servants digged a well.” (Gen. 26:25.)

Altar, tent and well

Altar, tent, and well. Isaac did not become an Abraham or a Jacob. He did not reach the heights of Abraham, called the “father of the faithful.” Nor was he as impressive as his son Israel, father of the twelve tribes. Yet Isaac is loved and revered. He worshiped God, cared for his home, and pursued his work. He is remembered simply as a man of peace. The eloquent simplicity of his life and his unique ability to lend importance to the commonplace made him great.

Altar, tent, and well: his worship, his home, his work. These basic things of life signified his relationship to God, his family, and his fellowmen. Every person on earth is touched by these three.

Answers to life's questions

Isaac worshiped at an altar of stone. He sought there answers to life's questions: Where did I come from? Why am I here? Where am I going?

These questions every man asks. These questions continue with us.

Biblical scriptures alone cannot answer these questions. Revealed religion, however, gives clear and solid answers. The fullness of the restored gospel declares: We lived with our Heavenly Father in a celestial home before this world began. We learned, progressed, and grew. We yearned to come to this life where we could receive a physical body. After resurrection, we shall return to our Father's presence, united in an eternal family. All this, through obedience to the principles and ordinances of the restored gospel.

We know by revelation that our Father lives. Jesus is his Firstborn in the spirit world: the Only Begotten in the flesh. He is the Christ, our Savior and Redeemer. His work and his glory is "to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man." (Moses 1:39.)

We know he lives, for he has appeared to men in our day to establish this latter-day work. There are living prophets and apostles on the earth today, called by God and ordained to carry out his divine purposes. His only true and living church is The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. His chosen prophet is President Harold B. Lee. Thank the Lord for modern revelation that gives solid answers to life's important questions—in which we find peace.

To know the word and works of God, Isaac knelt in his day at his altar. His tent, a home for himself and family, was sacred to him, as our homes are to us.

To Latter-day Saints, the home is a holy place, patterned after the celestial home whence we came. The priesthood-led home is the loftiest spiritual unit we know.

A family church

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is a family church. In its missionary work we seek to bring families into the Church. We teach the principles and perform ordinances that unite the family for eternity. Indeed, we may say that a prime purpose of this church is to perfect and exalt the family.

There is widespread misunderstanding today concerning the role of father and mother and children. The Prophet Joseph Smith explained that the destiny of the family is to live together as a family unit in the celestial glory. To understand their proper roles, one must understand the eternal nature of man's life—his premortal existence, life's purpose now, and his future destiny. Our religion comprehends this and more.

The man is the head of the home. He is to preside and administer its affairs "by persuasion, by long-suffering, by gentleness and meekness, and by love unfeigned; by kindness and pure knowledge." (D&C 121:41-42.)

The woman is the heart of the home. "And the Lord God said, It is not good that the man should be alone; I will make him an help meet for him." (Gen. 2:18.)

"And they twain shall be one flesh. . . ." (Mark 10:8.)

Woman's role

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., one of the Lord's noble servants, defined woman's role in eternal perspective. Speaking of Eve, he speaks of all women:

"So came Eve, an helpmeet to the priesthood mission of Adam—Eve, the last created being in the . . . world. . . . Adam took her in her purity, . . . radiant and divinely fair, into the Garden he had dressed and kept for her, into the bridal home he had built, into the Garden that from then till now has been the symbol of heaven on earth, there to begin together their earthly life, that was finally to bring opportunity . . . to the untold myriads of spirits then waiting for the mortal tabernacles these two were to make it possible for them to possess.

" . . . So Eve came . . . to be a creator of bodies . . . that God's design and the great plan might meet fruition.

"This was her calling. . . .

"From that day, . . . the greatest glory of true womanhood has been motherhood.

"What a miracle is motherhood; how nearly infinite is mother. She fashions in her womb the most complex structure known to man. . . .

"This is wife's and mother's task and opportunity; and did she fail . . . then the great plan would fail and God's purposes would come to naught. . . . This must never change. . . .

"But the full glory of motherhood is not yet reached when her child comes forth into this world of trial. . . . She feeds not only, but clothes it. She cares for it by day and watches over it by night. . . . She gently leads its faltering steps, till it walks alone. . . .

"Thus to the full stature of manhood and womanhood, mother guides, . . . instructs, directs . . . the soul for which she built the earthly home, in its march onward to exaltation. God gives the soul its destiny, but mother leads it along the way.

"When the souls shall return to the presence of the Father of all, the worthy mothers will be there to welcome their worthy children. . . ." (Immortality and Eternal Life [Melchizedek Priesthood Course of Study, 1969-70], vol. 2, pp. 24-28.)

Wives and mothers do what men cannot do. Men will bow in reverence and in love before mothers who perform this great, this marvelous service.

Contrast this view of woman with the current prattle that demeans motherhood and her exalted role; that even condones abortion and its attendant evils; that sets aside the role God gave to her. It would be hard to imagine a more exalted role of woman and her place in the eternal plan than is held and taught in The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. We invite you to consider this carefully, for it comes from God.

Family responsibility

Parental responsibility cannot go unheeded, nor can it be shifted to day-care centers, nor to the schoolroom, nor even to the Church. Family responsibility comes by divine decree. Parents may violate this decree only at the peril of their eternal salvation.

Only out of this purposeful, divine relationship of parent and child grows eternal joy and fulfillment. President Harold B. Lee has said, "The most important work you will ever do for the church will be within the walls of your own home."

To the child, God said at the great day of law-giving at Sinai: "Honour thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee." (Exod. 20:12.)

Providing for family

Kneeling at his altar, mindful of his family in his tent, Isaac found most of his working hours consumed in watching over wells he had caused to be digged. His flocks were nourished by them. His simple dependence upon the water and the soil and the forage that grew is little different in our day, for man must work.

The revelations say that "every man who is obliged to provide for his own family, let him provide. . . ." (D&C 75:28.)

In the beginning the Lord decreed, "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread. . . ." (Gen. 3:19.)

The need to work

Ever since the restoration in 1830, The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has encouraged thrift and fostered work as the ruling principle among its members.

Few evils has the Lord denounced in our day with more vehemence than idleness:

"Thou shalt not be idle, for he that is idle shall not eat the bread nor wear the garments of the laborer. . . ." (D&C 42:42.)

". . . the idler shall be had in remembrance before the Lord. . . ." (D&C 68:30.)

". . . And the idler shall not have place in the church, except he repent and mend his ways." (D&C 75:29.)

Let a man choose an occupation in balance with the other two elements of the triumvirate of which I have spoken. Learn to give an honest day's work for an honest day's pay. In the farm or shop or office, let that man know that work is not an end in itself, but a means to a noble end.

Same roles to fill

How little things have changed since Isaac's day—the things that really matter. There is the same God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, the same family roles to fill, the same need to work.

Altar, tent, and well: these things are essential. Placed in proper perspective by God's revealed word, they provide at once our greatest challenge and achievement.

Our Heavenly Father, wilt thou help us thy children to see eternity in these things and act accordingly. In the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

Elder A. Theodore Tuttle of the First Council of Seventy has just spoken to us. Bishop Victor L. Brown, Presiding Bishop of the Church, will now address us.

Bishop Victor L. Brown

Presiding Bishop

The apostle James said: "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." (James 1:27.)

The apostle Paul said: ". . . by love serve one another. For all the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this; Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself." (Gal. 5:13-14.)

He further said: "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal.

"And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing.

Saturday, October 7

Second Day

"And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity." (1 Cor. 13:1-2, 13.)

Health missionaries

With these scriptures as background, I should like to share with you some experiences of some wonderful groups of unheralded workers who have made these teachings live in their lives. May I introduce the first group to you. They are known as health missionaries, doctors and nurses who have responded to the same missionary call as have the thousands of proselyting missionaries, not only receiving not one cent of compensation, but paying their own expenses. In each case, they labor under the direction of the mission president.

Program in Guatemala

From Guatemala a lady health missionary reports: "The Primary children were given a lesson on the basic-three food groups. After the flipchart lesson, we played a game with them. They were asked to place foods in the groups where they belonged. Then we gave them a plate and asked them to prepare us a meal, either breakfast, lunch, or dinner, using foods from the basic three. This same health lesson has been given to investigator families as well as member families."

You will be interested to know that approximately 50 percent of the children in these Indian villages die before reaching the age of five. Malnutrition, complicated by respiratory infection and diarrhea, is the underlying cause.

Speaking of midwife lessons, this health missionary says: "We will give classes on this subject [delivering babies] in Relief Society, so our ladies can benefit from it. Through working with the Relief Society, we can develop the health program more. The ladies can depend on each other for help. We give them health concepts; then they can teach their families, sisters in the Church, and their neighbors. We know the health program will work through these organizations as planned. Too, we hope to work with families through the family home evening program."

Reports from missions

From Apia, Western Samoa, comes a report from a medical doctor, another health missionary: "At our conferences this round, we are again stressing the importance of food and cleanliness, but in addition, we are encouraging each family to maintain a continually growing food supply. We have indicated to them that each family should keep a certain quantity of various foods growing, and as these are used, they should be replaced. We are also encouraging them to try growing their own vegetables, and as a demonstration, we plant a small garden plot at each conference with tomatoes, cabbage, etc., and leave it for the branch to keep up. Extra plants are given to members who are interested in raising their own."

From the Philippines comes a report on the problems of the recent catastrophic flood and the help the health missionaries provided.

On and on it goes, from Peru, Tonga, Guatemala, Uruguay, Paraguay, Colombia, Bolivia, Nicaragua, Honduras, Mexico, Brazil, and in the future from Hong Kong, Korea, Taiwan, and many other countries of the world.

Social Services Program

Now let us see what is happening in the lives of people because of a second group of workers, those involved with the social services phase of the work.

This is the case of a 17-year-old unwed mother. This young lady came from a good, active Mormon family. The lines of communication had broken down between parents and daughter. She was in serious trouble from a pregnancy and was on the verge of compounding the problem in such a way as to further jeopardize any possibility of a happy, successful life when one of the dedicated staff workers became involved. Through extra effort and wise counseling, he was instrumental in saving her from falling off the precipice. He helped open the channel of communication between mother and daughter, and now, a few years later, this same young woman, through repentance and forgiveness and wise counsel, is happily married to a fine husband and is doing her part to help her neighbors. Instead of failure, she is now experiencing joy and peace of mind through living a worthwhile, fulfilling life.

Under the direction of social services, men and women in prison are visited by home teachers. They hold a regular home evening attended by the home teacher's family, the prisoner's family, and the inmate. The example of love shown by the home teaching family, along with the evidence of sincere interest, has performed miracles in the lives of many of these men.

Home teaching couples are spending hundreds of hours visiting not only in prison but also in drug and alcohol rehabilitation centers. They have gone into lonely, one-room apartments to help an alcoholic sober up and have done much more in helping in his rehabilitation.

Another important area of this service has to do with foster homes. Over 4,000 families have opened their homes to Indian students. Because these families give freely, this service carries with it that most important ingredient of a home—love.

Welfare Program

Now let us examine what happens in the lives of people when the third group becomes involved. They are largely concerned with the temporal or the financial welfare. This is a large group of dedicated men and women. You might say this group is composed of all the members of the Church who participate in any way in the welfare services program.

From one of our associates who is deeply involved in helping people we learn of what happens when the Church steps in to help.

Experience of Roger

About twelve years ago Roger walked through the side door at Welfare Square. It took him at least fifteen minutes to tell the supervisors who he was and where he came from. Although he was a young man of eighteen years, he had great difficulty expressing himself. Part of his young life had been spent in an institution in a neighboring state. Now at the age of eighteen he was on his own.

This young man lived for some time alone in the mountains. Finally, he got a ride into Salt Lake City. He could neither read nor write, and speech was nearly impossible.

The brethren at Welfare Square found Roger a place to stay. Soon he had a bishop, and he gradually became active in the Church. Fellow workers at Welfare Square helped him to learn to speak so that he could communicate. He still has great difficulty, but his friends and associates can, with a little patience, converse with him reasonably well. He worked in several different jobs at the storehouse, and today he is an active elder in the Church. Roger now has a job in a large commercial enterprise and at the present time is totally self-sufficient.

Story of Janey

Roger met Janey at Welfare Square. Let me tell you about Janey.

She had been born with cerebral palsy. She was badly crippled, but she had been able to attend school and had recently graduated from high school. This was a tremendous accomplishment; but now, after several months of searching, her family had found it impossible to obtain employment for her. Her bishop asked if there was something Janey could do. She needed to keep busy. In answer to this challenge, the storehousekeeper suggested that Janey be brought to the storehouse the next morning.

Saturday, October 7

Second Day

After Janey had been at work seven hours, her mother came to take her home. Janey was smiling with pride. She had labeled a dozen cans. There was a pile of spoiled labels on the floor, but they weren't important. The important thing was her smile. It was there because she felt useful and had pride in her accomplishment. She was willing and anxious to return the next day and continue trying.

Within a month's time, Janey was doing a good job of labeling cans. She hardly wasted any labels. As her skill in using her hands increased, she was given greater challenges. At the end of three years she was assigned the delicate job of packing eggs after they had been candled.

Janey and her family are truly happy because she has learned through the welfare program to be a contributing member of society.

Roger and Janey fell in love with each other and were married in the Salt Lake Temple for time and all eternity.

Work opportunities

Last year work opportunities amounting to 1,480,000 hours were made available to the Rogers and the Janays. The wonderful sisters of the Relief Society donated in excess of two million hours in aiding the ill and the aged. They gave compassionate service to 15,000 families at the time of losing a loved one in death. Members of the Church contributed almost two million hours to welfare projects, bishops storehouses, etc., and the Church dispersed over 17 million dollars in cash and commodities, to take care of those in need.

All of this was done through the welfare services program of the Church. This was accomplished through the regularly constituted ecclesiastical organization of the Church. There is no separate organization to manage welfare. It is an integral part of the Church and has been from the beginning. To re-emphasize its purpose and objective, I shall read a statement of the First Presidency given in 1936:

Purpose of Welfare Plan

"Our primary purpose was to set up, in so far as it might be possible, a system under which the curse of idleness would be done away with, the evils of a dole abolished, and independence, industry, thrift, and self respect be once more established amongst our people. The aim of the Church is to help the people to help themselves. Work is to be re-enthroned as the ruling principle of the lives of our Church membership." (Heber J. Grant, Conference Report, October 1936, p. 3.)

"This is the essence of the Church Security Program—not merely that men shall be fed and clothed, though that is important—but that eternal man shall be built up by self-reliance, by creative activity, by honorable labor, by service. A generation raised in idleness cannot maintain its integrity." (Richard L. Evans, "Faith, Work, and Security," Improvement Era, December 1936, p. 768.)

"... from the beginning the real long term objective of the Welfare Plan is the building of character in the members of the Church, givers and receivers, rescuing all that is finest deep down in the inside of them, and bringing to flower and fruitage the latent richness of the spirit, which after all is the mission and purpose and reason for being of this Church." (Albert E. Bowen, The Church Welfare Plan [Gospel Doctrine Course of Study, 1936], p. 44.)

These lofty goals still remain as the motivating force of all who are involved in this great work. And now, with the approval of the First Presidency, the temporal or financial, health, and social services functions are brought together in the welfare services organization of the Church concerned with the well-being of the whole man.

I bear my humble witness that this is the gospel of Jesus Christ, that he reigns at the head of this church and speaks through a living prophet, Harold B. Lee. In the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

The choir sang the song, "Jesu, Priceless Treasure," without announcement following the address by Bishop Victor L. Brown.

President Harold B. Lee

We welcome those joining us on television and radio in this third session of the 142nd Semi-Annual Conference of the Church.

President Marion G. Romney of the First Presidency of the Church will be our concluding speaker.

President Marion G. Romney

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

Brothers and sisters and friends, wherever you are:

As you have been advised, this service is a part of the 142nd Semi-Annual General Conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Need of another church

Since there were at the time it was organized, as there are today, many other so-called Christian churches, the question "What was the need of another church?" is often asked. To this question I shall respond.

To begin with, it is obvious from the inquiry itself that the existence of so many churches was perplexing. The honest in heart were disturbed and confused as to which, if any, of them was the true church of Christ.

Perplexity of Joseph Smith

Among the disturbed was one Joseph Smith, Jr., a 14-year-old youth. In the spring of 1820, stirred by a religious revival in the vicinity of Palmyra, New York, where he lived; perplexed by the conflicting claims of the churches; motivated by the admonition and promise of James, "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, . . . and it shall be given him" (James 1:5), Joseph, in childlike faith, inquired of the Lord "which of all the sects was right," that he "might know which to join."

" . . . I kneeled down [he said] and began to offer up the desire of my heart to God. I had scarcely done so, when immediately I was seized upon by some power which entirely overcame me, . . .

"But, exerting all my powers to call upon God to deliver me . . . and at the very moment when I was ready to sink into despair and abandon myself to destruction— . . . I saw a pillar of light exactly over my head, above the brightness of the sun, which descended gradually until it fell upon me.

"It no sooner appeared than I found myself delivered from the enemy

Saturday, October 7

Second Day

which held me bound. When the light rested upon me I saw two Personages, whose brightness and glory defy all description, standing above me in the air. One of them spake unto me, calling me by name and said, pointing to the other—This is My Beloved Son. Hear Him!" (Joseph Smith 2:15-18).

This vision was the opening scene in an awesome drama that some ten years later culminated in the organization of the Church.

By the Son, with whom he conversed in the heavenly vision, Joseph was told to join none of the existing churches because they "were all wrong." (Joseph Smith 2:19.) They lacked both necessary components of the church of Jesus Christ, namely, his gospel and his name.

Indispensable elements of gospel

Indispensable elements of the gospel, which they lacked, included:

1. The truth concerning the personality of God and man's relationship to him,
2. A knowledge of its saving principles and ordinances,
3. The priesthood of God, and
4. Continuing revelation.

As to the first element, the personality of God the Father and his Son, Jesus Christ, Joseph learned the truth in the vision above referred to. Later he said of them, "The Father has a body of flesh and bones as tangible as man's; the Son also. . . ." (D&C 130:22.)

As to man's relationship to God, Joseph learned from a subsequent revelation that the inhabitants of "the worlds" (including those of us on this earth) "are begotten sons and daughters unto God." (D&C 76:24.)

These fundamental truths concerning God and man's relationship to him were not being taught by the churches of Joseph Smith's day, for the obvious reason that they were neither known nor believed. It is true that they were known and taught and believed by members of the church of Christ in the days of Jesus and his apostles. But in 1830 an understanding of them had long since been lost. It was ignorance of a true knowledge of God and man's relationship to him that spawned the many churches.

During the 1820s a knowledge of the fundamental principles and ordinances of the gospel was revealed anew from heaven to the boy prophet, Joseph Smith. Many of these principles and ordinances he learned from the Book of Mormon, which came to him in the following manner.

The Book of Mormon

In September 1827, Moroni, an ancient American historian and prophet, at that time resurrected, delivered to Joseph a record inscribed on thin sheets of gold, which, by the gift and power of God, Joseph translated. This record contained an explanation of the principles and ordinances of the gospel of Jesus Christ, as it was taught and implemented among the ancient people of America.

In 1829 Joseph published his translation under the title The Book of Mormon. This book contains a record of the personal ministry of Jesus Christ among the inhabitants of America immediately following his post-resurrection ministry in the land of Jerusalem. To them he taught his gospel, even as he had taught it in Palestine. Among them he organized his church. Upon their leaders he conferred the holy priesthood. He instructed them concerning, and showed them how to administer, the saving ordinances of his gospel.

Restoration of priesthood

By the time he published the Book of Mormon Joseph had also received the third indispensable element of the gospel, namely, the holy priesthood, which empowered him to act for and in the name of God.

The Aaronic Priesthood he received in May of 1829. While translating the Savior's teachings concerning baptism as they are recorded in the Book of Mormon, he and his scribe, Oliver Cowdery, besought the Lord for further light upon the subject. As they knelt in prayer they were visited by a heavenly messenger who said that his name was "John, the same that is called John the Baptist in the New Testament." This messenger laid his hands upon their heads and said:

"Upon you my fellow servants, in the name of Messiah, I confer the Priesthood of Aaron, which holds the keys of the ministering of angels, and of the gospel of repentance, and of baptism by immersion for the remission of sins. . . ." (D&C 13.)

A few weeks later Peter, James, and John conferred upon Joseph and Oliver the Melchizedek Priesthood and ordained them apostles. (See Documentary History of the Church, vol. 1, p. 40.)

The fourth indispensable element of the gospel, continuing revelation, came with the restoration of the priesthood. It is obvious, from the manner in which Joseph Smith received a knowledge of God and of the principles and ordinances of the gospel, that he himself was receiving direct revelation from heaven. But this is not all that was necessary.

The gift of the Holy Ghost

Every member of Christ's church in the meridian of time received the gift of the Holy Ghost. The Holy Ghost is a revelator. To receive him is to be spiritually reborn. Remember, Jesus said to Nicodemus: "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." (John 3:5.)

To receive the gift of the Holy Ghost is to be born of the Spirit. The Lord instructed the priesthood officers of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints "to confirm those who are baptized into the church, by the laying on of hands for the baptism of fire and the Holy Ghost, according to the scriptures." (D&C 20:41.)

The priesthood and the power of the Holy Ghost is what gives life to the Church and its members:

"... the special office of the Holy Ghost is to enlighten and ennoble the mind, to purify and sanctify the soul, to incite to good works, and to reveal the things of God." (James E. Talmage, Articles of Faith, p. 167.)

Without this gift, the Church would be as dead and impotent as an electric powerhouse without electricity.

Organization of church

Having thus received a new dispensation of the gospel, Joseph Smith was qualified to reestablish the church of Christ upon the earth, as he was directed by the Lord to do. Such direction came in various revelations, in which the manner and the date of organization were specified.

Obedient to these commandments, Joseph Smith, Jr., did, on April 6, 1830, organize the Church of Jesus Christ at Fayette, Seneca County, New York, strictly in harmony with the commandments of God and the laws of the land.

Thus the answer to the question—Why was the Church organized when there were already so many churches?—is obviously because the Lord Jesus Christ himself directed Joseph Smith to organize it.

Name of the church

Now, the Lord not only directed Joseph to organize his church: he told him what to name it.

It is a fact worth noting that of all the churches then claiming to represent Christ, not one of them bore his name. Joseph learned from the teachings of Jesus to the Nephites that no church could be Christ's church unless it did bear his name. When the Nephites raised the question about what to name his church, Jesus, as he ministered among them, said:

"... how be it my church save it be called in my name? For if a church be called in Moses' name then it be Moses' church; or if it be called in the name of a man then it be the church of a man; but if it be called in my name then it is my church, if it so be that they are built upon my gospel." (3 Ne. 27:8.)

This statement gives us the twofold test: Christ's church (1) must bear his name, and (2) must be built upon his gospel.

That there should be no uncertainty about the name in this last dispensation, the Lord said to Joseph Smith: "... thus shall my church be called in the last days, even The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints." (D&C 115:4. Italics added.)

The phrase "Mormon Church" is a nickname.

Twofold test of church

The restored church thus meets the Savior's twofold test: it bears his name and it is built upon his gospel. About this there can be no doubt, because both the name and the gospel were by the Lord Jesus Christ himself revealed to Joseph Smith.

And now in conclusion, I would like to say a few words about, and bear my testimony concerning, the restored gospel and church of Jesus Christ.

There have been no occurrences on this earth since the ministry of Jesus in the meridian of time of such importance to you and to me as the events we have just reviewed. They occurred for the benefit of Joseph Smith and his associates not only, but for the sake of the whole world.

Introduction to revelations

Introducing the revelations given to the Prophet, the Lord said:

"... Harken ye people from afar; and ye that are upon the islands of the sea, listen together.

"For verily the voice of the Lord is unto all men, and there is none to escape; and there is no eye that shall not see, neither ear that shall not hear, neither heart that shall not be penetrated.

"And again, verily I say unto you, O inhabitants of the earth: I the Lord am willing to make these things known unto all flesh;

"For I am no respecter of persons, and will that all men shall know that the day speedily cometh; the hour is not yet, but is nigh at hand [this was in 1831], when peace shall be taken from the earth, and the devil shall have power over his own dominion.

"And also the Lord shall have power over his saints, and shall reign in their midst, and shall come down in judgment upon ... the world." (D&C 1:1-2, 34-36.)

Today, more than 140 years since the foregoing words were spoken, peace has been taken from the earth. The devil now has power over his dominion, and the Lord has power over his saints. The day approaches when he will "come down in judgment upon ... the world" and reign in the midst of his people.

Warning of calamities

Between now and then, however, if men and nations continue on their present course, great tribulation will come upon us. There shall be more "wars and rumors of wars, ... there shall be earthquakes also in divers places, and many [other] desolations. ... the whole earth shall be in commotion." (D&C 45:26, 33.) Those are the words of the Lord himself.

The Lord foresaw the coming of these calamities and gave warning of them. He restored his gospel and re-established his church as a means of escape therefrom.

Cause of predicament

About a year and a half after the Church was organized, he thus explained the cause of our present predicament:

"... they [speaking of the inhabitants of the earth] have strayed from mine ordinances, and have broken mine everlasting covenant;

"They seek not the Lord to establish his righteousness, but every man walketh in his own way, and after the image of his own God, whose image is in the likeness of the world, and whose substance is that of an idol, which waxeth old and shall perish in Babylon, even Babylon the great, which shall fall.

"Wherefore, I the Lord, knowing the calamity which should come upon the inhabitants of the earth, called upon my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., and spake unto him from heaven, and gave him commandments;

"And also gave commandments to others, that they should proclaim these things unto the world. . . ." (D&C 1:15-18.)

The commandments to be proclaimed to the world are the principles and ordinances of the gospel of Jesus Christ. By restoring his gospel and reestablishing his church in the earth, the Lord has provided the means for our temporal as well as for our spiritual salvation.

Prophecy fulfilled

The restoration fulfills the prediction of Daniel that in the days of the disunited kingdoms "the God of heaven [would] set up a kingdom, which [would] never be destroyed. . . ." (Dan. 2:44.)

It fulfills Micah's prophecy that "in the last days . . . the mountain of the house of the Lord shall be established in the top of the mountains, and it shall be exalted above the hills; and people shall flow unto it." (Mic. 4:1.)

It is the fulfillment of John's vision in which he saw an "angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people,

"Saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come. . . ." (Rev. 14:6-7.)

Yes, verily, it is the "restitution of all things" which Peter said would come in preparation for the second advent of the Lord. (See Acts 3:21.)

Personal testimony

And now, as a special witness of Jesus Christ, I add my personal testimony that all these things are true. And I bear further witness to all of you who hear or read what I am saying that if you will inform yourselves of the historical facts and revealed truths of the restoration and then humbly and sincerely call upon the Father in the name of Jesus Christ, he will give you like assurance by the power of the Holy Ghost. In the name of Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

The Choir sang the song, "Come Ye Children of the Lord," without announcement following the address by President Marion G. Romney.

President Harold B. Lee

We thank the brethren for their excellent addresses, particularly President Marion G. Romney, who has just given this concluding address.

We extend our appreciation to the managers and operators of the hundreds of television and radio stations who as a public service have made it possible for this session of conference to reach millions throughout many areas of the world.

Saturday, October 7Second Day

These proceedings are now being broadcast over stations in countries of Latin America and Australia by means of satellite transmission.

Through special arrangements of the Armed Forces Radio and Television Network this session will be televised to bases of the Armed Forces throughout the Pacific and heard by radio in Vietnam.

We shall conclude this session of the conference with the Tabernacle Choir singing from the Messiah by Handel "Worthy Is the Lamb."

Following the singing, the benediction will be pronounced by Elder Joseph Hamstead, Regional Representative of the Twelve, who comes from the Great Britain area.

The conference will then be adjourned until two o'clock this afternoon.

The Choir sang "Worthy Is the Lamb."

The benediction was offered by Elder Joseph Hamstead, Regional Representative of the Twelve.

The conference was then adjourned until two o'clock p.m.

SECOND DAY AFTERNOON MEETING

FOURTH SESSION

The fourth session of the conference convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square on Saturday, October 7, 1972 at 2 o'clock p.m.

President Harold B. Lee was present and presiding, and conducted the meeting.

The special music for this session was rendered by the Combined M Man and Gleaner Chorus of the Salt Lake Area, with Virgil Camp conducting. Roy M. Darley was at the organ.

President Lee made the following introductory comments:

President Harold B. Lee

We are convened in the Tabernacle in Salt Lake City in the fourth general session of the 142nd Semi-Annual Conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. We extend a cordial welcome to our television and radio audience, and to all present here this afternoon.

The direct broadcast of this morning's session was also video-taped, and will be released by many television stations tomorrow morning in the eastern and central parts of the United States, Hawaii, and bases of the Armed Forces throughout the Pacific, and carried over special radio facilities to Vietnam.

By means of satellite transmission, sessions of this conference will be heard over radio stations in Australia and in countries of South America.

We are especially grateful to the owners and operators of the many radio and television stations for making possible such an extensive coverage of the proceedings of this conference, originating with KSL in Salt Lake City.

The General Priesthood Conference to be held this evening will be transmitted over closed circuit from the Salt Lake Tabernacle to over 180,000 men of the priesthood assembled in approximately 750 buildings throughout the United States and Canada, and by way of closed circuit television to eight buildings in Salt Lake City, and to many assembled at the Brigham Young University.

The music for this session will be rendered by the Combined M Man and Gleaner Chorus of the Salt Lake Area, with Virgil Camp conducting. Roy M. Darley is at the organ. We shall begin this service by the chorus singing, "Shall the Youth of Zion Falter."

The invocation will then be offered by Elder Raymond C. Bowers, former president of the Alaska-British Columbia Mission.

The number, "Shall the Youth of Zion Falter," was sung by the Combined M Man and Gleaner Chorus.

Elder Raymond C. Bowers, former president of the Alaska-British Columbia Mission offered the opening prayer.

President Lee

If the world could get the message of that song, "Shall the Youth of Zion Falter," you would have the answer to why the youth of this Church are holding fast to the iron rod. If you will get the message that they sang, you will have the thing that binds us together and keeps our youth strong. I could only wish that they could have stood up while they sang it, so that you could have seen them from head to toe, so proud we are of their stature.

The Combined M Man and Gleaner Chorus now will sing, with Virgil Camp conducting, "The Shepherds Had an Angel," with Maureen Jardine as soloist, after which Elder Franklin D. Richards, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve, will speak to us.

The Combined M Man and Gleaner Chorus sang "The Shepherds Had an Angel."

President Lee

We shall now hear from Franklin D. Richards, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve.

He will be followed by Elder David B. Haight, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve.

Elder Franklin D. Richards

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

My dear brothers and sisters, I come before you with a humble heart and rejoice with you in the marvelous spirit of this conference.

Gratitude for blessings

I am grateful for the blessings of this day. I am thankful for my knowledge and testimony that God lives and that through the atoning sacrifice of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, we may enjoy eternal life as we are obedient to the laws and ordinances of the gospel. We are blessed to be living in this dispensation when the gospel, the Church, and the priesthood, which is the power to act in the name of God, have been restored through the instrumentality of the Prophet Joseph Smith, one of the great leaders of all time.

And today, in a world where there are millions of God's children who are frustrated and discouraged and are looking for an explanation of life, we are blessed to be led and guided by another prophet, our beloved President Harold B. Lee. May the Lord bless and sustain him.

Object of existence

In considering the purpose of life, the Prophet Joseph Smith said: "Happiness is the object and design of our existence; and will be the end thereof, if we pursue the path that leads to it; and this path is virtue, uprightness, faithfulness, holiness, and keeping all the commandments of God." (Documentary History of the Church, vol. 5, pp. 134-35.)

Our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, in his life, set the pattern for us to follow in our quest for this eternal joy and happiness. He admonished his disciples to be perfect, "even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect." (Matt. 5:48.)

There is tremendous power in focusing upon an ideal. People are inclined to become like those whom they admire. As we increase our knowledge and love of the Savior and indicate our willingness to do his will, we necessarily become more perfect and like him.

Savior's teachings

Some of the Savior's greatest attributes and most profound teachings are to be found in the incidents immediately preceding his crucifixion.

After the Last Supper, Jesus and the eleven apostles left the house in which they had eaten and walked to the olive grove known as Gethsemane, on the slope of Mount Olivet. Jesus apparently frequented this grove or garden when he desired privacy for prayer and meditation.

He left eight of the apostles near the entrance, with the suggestion, "Sit ye here, while I go and pray yonder." (Matt. 26:36.)

Peter, James, and John accompanied the Savior further and "then, saith he unto them, My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death: tarry ye here, and watch with me.

"And he went a little farther, and fell on his face, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me: nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt." (Matt. 26:38-39.)

The life of the Savior is replete with instances where he applied the principle of "Thy will be done, not mine." Christ's ability to apply this great principle in his life made it possible for him to become perfect.

Learning God's will

As we apply "Thy will be done, not mine" in our lives, we will likewise move toward perfection and true happiness.

But how can we know God's will in order to make our life conform? The Savior said, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." (John 14:15.)

Live so that the Holy Ghost will guide and direct you.

Seek to grow in knowledge, wisdom, and understanding by continuous study and contemplation of the words of Christ and those whom God has appointed to teach and instruct us.

And pray always, remembering the promise given to us: "Draw near unto me and I will draw near unto you. . . ." (D&C 88:63.)

As we live in this type of environment, we will know God's will and have the desire and courage to conform. This doctrine or philosophy requires one to deeply love the Lord and have great faith in his judgment.

"Thy will be done . . ."

Let me illustrate:

In the prayer offered by the Prophet

Joseph Smith at the dedication of the Kirtland Temple, which prayer was given to him by revelation, he said, ". . . Help thy servants to say, with thy grace assisting them: Thy will be done, O Lord, and not ours." (D&C 109:44.)

In the fall of 1834 the Prophet was busily engaged in preparing for the school of the elders and wrote in his diary, "No month ever found me more busily engaged than November; but as my life consisted of activity and unyielding exertions, I made this my rule: When the Lord commands, do it." (DHC, vol. 2, p. 170.)

Here again is evidenced the spirit of "Thy will be done." Joseph Smith's life exemplifies this great principle.

President Brigham Young's feeling about this divine principle is recorded in a letter to Orson Spencer in January of 1848 when he said, "As the Lord's will is my will all the time, as he dictates so I will perform." (Millennial Star, vol. 10, p. 115.)

Accepting God's will

Some of you are converts to the Church. Did you find it difficult to accept baptism when you felt it would mean being estranged from your family or friends, losing the security of your social position, maybe even losing your job or employment?

But in your heart you knew it was the will of God that you should accept him and become a member of his church, because the Holy Ghost had borne this witness to you.

When you had the will to say "Not my will, but thy will be done," placing your trust in God, and by your acceptance of baptism, showing your faith and humility, didn't you find that you had just opened the way for God to give you greater blessings than you had ever known before?

Testimony of converts

This is the testimony of two wonderful young people I met recently in Mexico, Brother and Sister Alvarez.

They told me that since they were baptized eight months ago, rather than the estrangement from family and friends they had feared, they were finding a new love and respect being given to them, besides all the wonderful new friends that they had found among their brothers and sisters in the Church. They had prospered materially, and above all they had found a peace and nearness to their Heavenly Father that they had never known before.

May I refer to two personal experiences:

Call to Eastern States Mission

As a young man I was offered an appointment to the United States Naval Academy. This was an honor and a real temptation. However, in my early life I had definitely decided that I would like to go on a mission, and I could now see that if I accepted the Naval Academy appointment I probably would not be able to serve as a missionary.

After prayerful consideration I declined the appointment, as I felt it was the will of the Lord that I go on a mission. Soon thereafter I received a call to serve in the Eastern States Mission.

I will be eternally grateful for the call I received, because it was in the mission field that I learned to love the gospel, learned the power of faith, and felt the happiness and peace that come when one is responsive to the whisperings of the Holy Spirit. The pattern I set in the mission field has been a guide to me throughout my life.

Other mission calls

My mission president, Brigham H. Roberts, in his letter of release to me, promised me that I would "find new beginnings from time to time . . . even more missions." As I left the mission field I prayed fervently and at length that this promise might be fulfilled.

Twenty-four years later it was partially fulfilled when I was called to be the stake mission president of the East Mill Creek Stake. At that time Elder Gordon B. Hinckley was president of that stake, and also at that time President Harold B. Lee gave me a beautiful blessing as he set me apart.

Four years later it was further realized when I was called to preside over the Northwestern States Mission. And one of the choicest and most inspiring experiences of our lives was when Sister Richards and I spent approximately ten days with President and Sister Lee in touring our mission.

As we have listened to missionaries bear their testimonies, many have told us how they put aside dreams and plans for school and careers and accepted mission calls. Others who have been called to important church assignments have set aside, to a large extent, their personal affairs, to give the needed attention to the work of the Lord; and all have borne witness of the happiness and blessings they and their families have received.

Vitality of church

In my opinion, the strength and vitality of the Church is due, to a large extent, to the willingness of its members to live the principle, "Thy will be done, not mine."

In 1959 when I received my call to preside over the Northwestern States Mission, it came at a most inconvenient time. But both Sister Richards and I felt that if the Lord wanted us to go, then we should go.

Many of our friends, Church members and nonmembers, indicated that they felt we were making a real sacrifice. We felt otherwise, and as President McKay set me apart, he promised me that it would be the happiest time of our lives. And it was, because our entire time was spent in serving our fellowmen. And we remembered the words of King Benjamin, "... when ye are in the service of your fellow beings ye are only in the service of your God." (Mosiah 2:17.)

Why should we consider it a sacrifice to enjoy such happiness, growth, and development?

Again I was grateful that my parents had taught me to live by the rule, "Thy will be done, not mine."

Applying this rule in our lives can mean never to turn down an opportunity to serve in building the kingdom when asked by one in authority. Our callings to serve in the Church, coming from an authorized agent of our Heavenly Father, can properly be construed to be the will of the Lord.

Acceptance of God's will in death

In many other ways, to accept the will of the Lord is oftentimes most difficult, as is the case of the death of a loved one.

Death is an important part of eternal life, yet we are never quite ready for the change. Not knowing when it will come, we properly fight to retain life for ourselves and for our loved ones. We pray for the sick and administer to the afflicted. We implore the Lord to heal and extend life. But all are not healed, even though great faith is manifested.

However, God has given us a promise that though a loved one may die, yet he or she shall live again, through the atonement and resurrection of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

The loss of loved ones is a difficult experience that builds great faith, courage, and humility, and we must all expect such experiences.

To obtain the desired happiness on this earth and in the world to come, we must steadfastly face trials and tribulations regardless of the form they take, with the spirit, "Thy will be done, not mine."

The Savior again set the pattern in this respect. No martyr ever approached death with greater courage and dignity than did Jesus Christ, our Lord and Savior.

Undoubtedly the greatest evidence of righteousness in a person is to accept Jesus Christ as our Savior and Redeemer without any qualifications, and an evidence of this is to live the doctrine, "Thy will be done, not mine."

Path to happiness

In conclusion, let me again repeat the words of the Prophet Joseph Smith: "Happiness is the object and design of our existence; and will be the end thereof, if we pursue the path that leads to it; and this path is virtue, uprightness, faithfulness, holiness, and keeping all the commandments of God."

By loving the Lord, keeping his commandments, and serving our fellow beings, we are doing his will, and this will bring us great happiness and eternal life.

I bear you this witness in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

Elder Franklin D. Richards, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve, has just addressed us.

We shall now hear from Elder David B. Haight, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve.

He will then be followed by two of our newly appointed Assistants to the Twelve, Elder O. Leslie Stone and Elder James E. Faust.

Elder David B. Haight

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

The Savior's powerful promise, "... I will cause that your bosom shall burn within you" (D&C 9:8), became a reality to me as I sat in the National Auditorium in Mexico City a few weeks ago and looked out upon the vast throng of 16,000 faithful Saints.

Some had borrowed money, mortgaged possessions, traveled for days, and made many sacrifices unknown to us that they might attend this great area conference. Our members had come to see a living prophet—to see him face to face, to hear his voice, to hear his words of assurance and admonition, and to personally witness the presidency of the kingdom of God on the earth. They came in great numbers. They saw the prophet and they felt of the comforting Spirit of the Lord. The Saints gathered there heard the truth and believed.

A missionary church

I thought of the great significance of the full-time missionary service of your sons and daughters, who join in heart and voice in humble meetings throughout the world, as they sing:

"Ye elders of Israel, come join now with me
And seek out the righteous, where'er they may be: . . .
We'll gather the wheat from the midst of the tares
And bring them from bondage, from sorrow and snares."

—Hymns, no. 344

We have been a missionary church from the beginning. I thank the Lord that we will always be a missionary church. The first conversions in this dispensation came through the humble testimony of the Prophet Joseph Smith. His efforts were directed first to those he loved most. He converted his father, his mother, and his brothers and sisters. He converted his wife, his neighbors, then Martin Harris, and the schoolteacher, Oliver Cowdery, as well as the Whitmer family. They all felt of the truth and power of his simple testimony.

"On Sunday, April 11th, 1830, Oliver Cowdery preached the first public discourse that was delivered by any of our number," wrote the Prophet Joseph Smith. (Documentary History of the Church, vol. 1, p. 81.) Then it was recorded that six were baptized following the service.

Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery, under divine instruction, began to preach, teach, expound, exhort, baptize, and set the pattern for our modern missionary service. Now, over 140 years later, we see the fruits of missionary efforts in our own families, in our wards, in our branches, and, of course, in this tabernacle today.

Blessing of a mission

This gospel is the hope and everlasting salvation for all mankind. The missionary system must be perpetuated by us. Our young men and women should be reared under the loving guidance and influence of a good home, a home where the blessing of a mission is part of each one's life's goal; a home where plans for his future mission become part of his life, such as a simple piggy bank on the shelf in the kitchen marked "For Johnny's Mission," a reminder of his dream.

Hollywood would never be able to produce the thrilling stories, the real-life dramas, the diaries, the letters home, the testimonies locked in hearts that have resulted from following the Savior's instruction: "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." (Matt. 28:19.)

Parable of sower

The Savior explained what might happen to some of our efforts. He said.

"A sower went out to sow his seed: and as he sowed, some fell by the way side; and it was trodden down. . . .

"And some fell upon a rock; and . . . it withered away. . . .

"And other fell on good ground, and sprang up, and bare fruit an hundredfold. . . ." (Luke 8:5-6, 8.)

Imagine the quantity of seed planted over the years by the tens of thousands of missionaries. Some seeds lie dormant for years; others spring forth immediately. Some years ago such a precious seed was planted in fertile soil in Germany.

Story of Lippolt family

Robert Frederick Lippolt, his wife, and daughters lived in a small city in Central Germany. Robert, a house painter, provided a moderate living for his family. One Sunday, while on her way to the Protestant church, Robert's wife was approached by Mormon missionaries, who invited her to attend sacrament meeting. She attended and was impressed.

After subsequent visits by the missionaries, she was baptized and became active in the Church. From the moment of his wife's baptism, her husband grew in animosity and bitterness toward the Church. Their daughters were also baptized, resulting in more bitterness.

Robert could bear the Mormons no longer; he moved his family from Germany to Vera Cruz, Mexico, and then on to Porto Alegre, Brazil. As soon as they were settled, Robert's wife continued to spread the news of the gospel. She was causing excitement in Brazil, for the doctrine that she preached was completely new.

Bitterness filled Robert. He hated the Mormons. He prevented his children from going to public school, for fear they would learn to read and would thus be further indoctrinated with Mormon literature.

Finally, in desperation, he took his family away from civilization to the interior of Brazil. They settled in the remote, peaceful valley of Ipomeia, in the state of Santa Catarina.

Mission in Brazil

Filled with a burning testimony and a desire to share the "good news," Robert's faithful wife wrote to the mission president in Germany, who in turn referred her to the Argentine Mission president. She asked that he visit Brazil. President Reinhold Stooft visited Brazil in 1927 and reported that much success could be realized among the German-speaking people of Brazil.

From the tiny seeds sown by missionaries in Germany and carried across the Atlantic, the First Presidency established a mission in Brazil in February 1935. The work now flourishes. Hundreds, then thousands heard the good news. Now there are four missions in Brazil and four stakes of Zion.

Even Robert Frederick, the once bitter husband and father, was eventually touched by the seed of truth, for at the age of 83 he was carried in his wooden rocking chair to the nearby River Rio de Peixe and baptized a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. How could one ever describe the deep abiding love of Robert's faithful wife for the gospel and for her family?

Planting gospel seeds

Mothers and fathers need to plant the seeds of the gospel firmly in the hearts of their children, to create in them a desire to serve and also to know how to serve—seeds of hard work, seeds of courtesy, seeds of thrift.

Then, deep in their hearts, your sons and daughters need to have planted the more valuable seeds of spirituality—the seeds of cleanliness, the seeds of love, the seeds of virtue, the seeds of courage, such as the courage of Paul, when he stood in bonds before Agrippa and stretched forth his hands and told of his conversion and said: "I am not mad, . . . but speak forth the words of truth and soberness." (Acts 26:25.)

The seed of obedience is the first law of the gospel and was exemplified by the Savior, who was obedient in all things.

Great blessings received

Your sons will go out, as did the Savior, "preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of sickness and all manner of disease among the people." (Matt. 4:23.)

Your sons will assist in healing those with sicknesses of the mind and discouragement, which afflict modern society, by changing their outlook on life, by lifting the broken hearts from the darkness of despair, by bringing them to Christ.

Through missionary service, new converts receive great blessings, but the missionary also has his life changed.

Returned Scottish missionary

I met one of our Scottish missionaries a few weeks ago at a stake conference in the East. He told me of his marriage and Church activity since returning home. He said: "Do you remember what you told me when I was released from my mission?"

I recalled that this elder was from a rural, cowboy town in Idaho, and I had asked him what he was going to do when he returned home. He said, "Just go back home. I can't afford to go to college." Then he told me he had some fear that the old gang would be waiting for him, and he might drift back into some old habits.

He had become one of our leaders, the kind of missionary you could trust with any assignment. I advised him to go back home and to invite his old friends to attend sacrament meeting, where he was to make his report, to hear of the change that had come into his life. I then counseled: "Spend some time with your parents, and then take the first bus out of town. A way will be opened up for you to get into college and develop the newly found talents you discovered in the mission field."

And as I stood and looked upon this young man at the stake conference, I saw the rough stone was now polished and would continue to change lives for good.

A divine program

I thank the Lord for our missionary service. It is a divine program. I thank the Lord for our young men and women who represent him before the world in helping build Zion, and in so doing develop their own spiritual knowledge. May our parents always instill in their sons a desire to go on a mission.

Elder O. Leslie Stone

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

My dear brothers and sisters: I don't know why I should be shaking as I am. I am among friends. I know that no one loves me more than these brethren who are sitting before you, and I love them. Nearly all of them have visited our home and stayed with us and left their blessings.

Call to serve

When President Lee called me to God bless our missionary homes. May he also bless our missionaries, as promised by President John Taylor, who said of missionaries, "... he is commissioned of the great Jehovah to bear a message . . . and God has promised to sustain him. He has always sustained His faithful Elders, and He always will." (Journal of Discourses, vol. 24, p. 35.)

May your sons respond to the great call that shall be theirs, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

When I was called to be a member of the Quorum of the Twelve thirty-one and a half years ago, one of the Presidency said something very meaningful. There are two times when a man shouldn't be expected to say very much: one, at the beginning of his career, and the other, at the end of his career.

We told these brethren that we didn't expect them to preach a sermon, but we did want to have them bear their testimony and let you feel their spirit. Two of the great men of the world, Brother O. Leslie Stone, to be followed by Brother James E. Faust.

be a stake president about sixteen years ago, I remember on the way home he said, "President Stone, I want you to prepare now for the day when you will be released." And I assured him that I was ready any time the Brethren wanted to release me. But you know this time when he called me the other day, he didn't say a word about that. Later he told me the appointment was for life.

I feel humble, grateful, and assure you and the Brethren of my willingness to serve, to devote my time, energy, and means for the upbuilding of the kingdom.

The Savior on one occasion, realizing the many temptations that we are faced with in this life, made this statement: "... seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." (Matt. 6:33.) We have tried to live by that rule in our family. My sons, who have both been mission presidents, used to quote that to me when I was talking to them about the future of their lives.

Prospective elders

Now, I want you all to remember the program of prospective elders, and I am going to tell you why. I was a prospective elder when I met my wife in Blackfoot, Idaho; and after I had courted her for some time and decided (and let her know) that she was the girl of my dreams, she let me know in no uncertain terms that I had to "shape up." A temple marriage was the only marriage she was interested in.

After shaping up, I was ordained an elder and secured a temple recommend. We were sealed for time and eternity in the Salt Lake Temple April 23, 1924. I am very grateful for my eternal companion and for my family, including fourteen grandchildren. It was my wife's birthday yesterday, the day that I was sustained as a General Authority.

I would like to testify to you that the greatest happiness that has come into our lives has been when we have been living the gospel and serving the Master, and I have to tell you just a little story.

Covenant to serve

A few years ago, roughly twenty-five, I was starting a new business. I was having difficulty in getting it into black figures. I don't like to operate in the red, and I went to my Heavenly Father on bended knees and made a covenant with him that if he would bless me with inspiration and guidance to make that business successful, I would serve him and I would be liberal with my time and means for the upbuilding of the kingdom.

The Lord did bless us abundantly, and I now pledge to President Lee, President Tanner, President Romney, and all these Brethren that I shall put forth my best efforts to fulfill this new assignment. I love the Lord, and I want to serve him.

Favorite scripture

On the day I was put in as stake president, President Lee quoted this scripture. It has always stuck in my mind, and I would like to quote it to you because it is one of my favorites:

"Trust in the Lord with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding.

"In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths." (Prov. 3:5-6.)

I pray I may always do this, in the name of Jesus Christ.

President Harold B. Lee

Thank you, President Stone. We shall now hear from James E. Faust, who was also sustained as an Assistant to the Twelve, after which the congregation and chorus will join in singing "Come O Thou King of Kings."

Elder James E. Faust

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

My beloved brothers and sisters and friends: It has been a sublime and moving experience to participate in sustaining President Lee and his counselors yesterday morning as the new First Presidency of the Church, and I humbly entreat the same spirit to sustain me for these very few moments while I respond.

Broodings about call

Since President Lee notified me of my call in the most moving and touching experience of my life last Thursday morning, there have come to me the most solemn broodings that can come to a human soul. I have asked myself a hundred times, Why me?—because it is beyond my understanding that I should be asked to join these great brethren of the General Authorities, all of whom I hold in such great esteem.

I pray that God will have mercy upon me because of my weakness and shortcomings. As long as I remember I have had a personal witness of the divinity of Jesus Christ and of his church, and it has always been easy for me to believe and to testify. I have concluded that if there is one amongst all the General Authorities who is the weakest and the least qualified, then I can fill that position. Also, because I served in Brazil on a mission, I am the only one who speaks Portuguese.

Appreciation for family

With all my heart I want to thank Ruth Wright Faust for letting me share her life and giving me the hope that we can share eternity together. She is more than a wife and a sweetheart because she has become part of my very being. With all my heart I want my children to know that I cannot succeed in this calling unless I also succeed as their father, and that they will always be paramount in my life.

No man ever had a better father than did I, and I hope that I will always honor his good name. My widowed mother is among you in the television audience, and I am sure that she weeps. Many times in my childhood I have happened upon her on her knees, praying for her five sons, and I wish to tell her that this son continues to need her faith and prayers.

Change in life

I realize that life for me and mine can never and should never be the same. For twenty-two years and until last Thursday morning I have been a lawyer, and since then I have been trying to repent. Now I shall try to become one of the fishers and help these brethren cast forth and draw in the nets of eternal life. And I should like to say that if anyone has ever been offended by anything I have ever done in my church, professional, or political life, I humbly ask their forgiveness. I mentioned to a friend of mine who knew of this call that those who know me will say, "Surely James Faust was called of the Lord because no one else would have called him."

Love for brethren

I wish President Lee to know that I sustain him, and He whom President Lee represents, with all of my devotion and all of my heart and all of my being. Under his hands I was ordained a bishop, and by him called to the stake presidency, and he has been for me all my adult life a great and beloved teacher and exemplar for all that is noble and good. President Tanner has been like a father to me, ever available, always helpful, kind, considerate, and he knows how much love and respect I have for him.

President Romney, as you know, has special qualities of inspiration and wisdom and has been a special friend and confidant, and my respect and honor for him know no bounds. I would also like to mention the profound influence that President Henry D. Moyle and President Hugh B. Brown have had also on my life. These are and have been truly great men of the earth.

I express appreciation to all the host of people who have blessed my life, those from whom I have learned, my missionary companions, those with whom I served in bishoprics, on high councils, stake presidencies, and my beloved friends, the Regional Representatives of the Twelve.

Now as a humble follower of the divine Master, I bear witness to the divinity of him as the Savior of the world, and of his church as established in these days, now headed by President Harold B. Lee, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

As we listen to these men, great in business and public life, we remember what the great prophet of the Book of Mormon said, “. . . to be learned is good if they hearken unto the counsels of God.”

We can accept all the repentant lawyers and attorneys and business men there are in the world.

The congregation and chorus will now join in singing, “Come O Thou King of Kings,” after which Elder Sterling W. Sill will then be our next speaker.

The congregation and chorus sang the hymn, “Come O Thou King of Kings.”

President Lee

Elder Sterling W. Sill, Assistant to the Twelve, will now speak to us.

He will be followed by Elder Loren C. Dunn of the First Council of Seventy.

Elder Sterling W. Sill

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

One of the biggest businesses in the world is this business of holding conventions. This week and every other week, in this country and every other country, men and women will be getting together to discuss their problems, exchange ideas, and try to develop more effective techniques for accomplishment. If one doctor discovers better methods for improving health, relieving pain, or saving lives, that information is immediately passed on to others.

As a consequence, the skill of all doctors is increased, and every one of us is made the beneficiary of every medical discovery.

If you had lived in Jerusalem 1900 years ago, your life expectancy at birth would have been approximately 19 years. If you had lived in George Washington's day in America, your life expectancy would have been 35 years. When I was born it was 48 years. But those babies who were born in an American hospital this morning have an average life expectation of 70 years.

World's most important business

Great men everywhere are studying and working day and night to uplift and enrich our lives. And if it is so important for doctors, lawyers, farmers, teachers, businessmen, and scientists to counsel together in order to increase their effectiveness, how much more important it is for us who work in this greatest of all enterprises that Jesus referred to as "my Father's business." That is the world's biggest and most important undertaking. It has the responsibility for building integrity, character, righteousness, and eternal life into the lives of his children.

Thomas Carlyle once said that a man's religion is the most important thing about him. That is what he believes in and thinks about and works at and fights for and lives by. Our eternal exaltation will not be awarded according to whether or not we make a good living, but according to whether or not we live a good life. Jesus announced the purpose of his own mission by saying, "... I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." (John 10: 10.) And to produce the most abundant lives is our primary responsibility.

The Lord himself has said: "... this is my work and my glory—to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man." (Moses 1:39.)

Questions for consideration

When we are called to assist in this all-important undertaking, it then becomes our work and our glory to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man. And twice each year, in obedience to the direct instruction of deity, this great general conference of the Church is held. And as we contemplate our own individual part in it, I would like to pose some questions for your consideration.

Just suppose that you were asked, "What is the greatest idea that you are capable of thinking?" "What is the most worthwhile good to be done?" or "What activity would make our lives most profitable and happy?"

Daniel Webster gave one answer when he said: "The greatest thought that has ever entered my mind is the consciousness of my individual responsibility to God."

We recently had another inspiring and official answer, which I would like to use as the theme for my remarks. On July 7, 1972, Harold B. Lee became the eleventh president of the church of Jesus Christ in this dispensation of our world's history. And in a conference with some seventy-five members of the press and representatives of other news media, he was asked what was the most important counsel that he had to give to the people of the world. In a three-word answer, President Lee said, "Keep the commandments."

President S. Dilworth Young recently said that in his opinion, Harold B. Lee is as strong a man as his great-granduncle, Brigham Young. And I would like to submit that these three words spoken by President Lee represent the most profitable direction that could possibly be given by anyone in any dispensation.

Religion an activity

The religion of Christ is not just an idea; it is an activity. It is not just something for us to think about; it is something for us to do. These words also constitute the world's most powerful success formula. The best way to be a good doctor or a good lawyer or a good teacher is to be a good man. These three words serve as the shortest, the most pleasant, the most direct, and the only road to the celestial kingdom.

From the very beginning, the gospel has been taught to all of the prophets. On one occasion Moses was given a revelation concerning the earliest times. He said:

"And [God] called upon our father Adam by his own voice, saying: I am God; I made the world, and men before they were in the flesh.

"And he also said unto him: If thou wilt turn unto me, and hearken unto my voice, and believe, and repent of all thy transgressions, and be baptized, even in water, in the name of mine Only Begotten Son, who is full of grace and truth, which is Jesus Christ, the only name which shall be given under heaven, whereby salvation shall come unto the children of men, ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, asking all things in his name, and whatsoever ye shall ask, it shall be given you." (Moses 6:51-52.)

Conference called by Adam

The other day I had occasion to reread the genealogy of the ten patriarchs in their succession from Adam to Noah. Excluding Enoch, who was translated at age 430, the other nine of the ten patriarchs lived to an average age of 912 years. In one sense they served as the founding fathers of our world civilization. And each was a great man in his own right. Adam will always stand at the head; and under the direction of that magnificent Being, the Savior of the world, he will forever preside over his posterity. Adam was a mighty spirit before this earth was formed, and he was faithful throughout his long mortality. Three years before his death he called together Seth, Enos, Cainan, Mahalaleel, Jared, Enoch, and Methuselah, who were all high priests, and all of the residue of his posterity who were righteous unto the valley of Adam-ondi-Ahman, and there he bestowed upon them his last blessing. The record says:

"And the Lord appeared unto them, and they rose up and blessed Adam, and called him Michael, the prince, the archangel.

"And the Lord administered comfort unto Adam, and said unto him:

I have set thee to be at the head; a multitude of nations shall come of thee, and thou art a prince over them forever.

"And Adam stood up in the midst of the congregation; and, notwithstanding he was bowed down with age, being full of the Holy Ghost, predicted whatsoever should befall his posterity unto the latest generation." (D&C 107:54-56.)

Records of righteousness

And the primary message of that great general conference was also centered in that fundamental human requirement to "Keep the commandments." Many of those who attended this conference in the year of the world 927 had made inspiring records in righteousness. The Bible says that Seth, the son of Adam, was a perfect man. At age 65 Enoch was called on a special mission to preach the gospel, which lasted for the next 365 years. The record says of him:

"And he saw the Lord, and he walked with him, and was before his face continually; and Enoch walked with God three hundred and sixty-five years, making him four hundred and thirty years old when he was translated." (D&C 107:49.)

Certainly Enoch was one of the best educated men who ever lived in the world. The record says that he was taught in all of the ways of God. He was not only a perfect man, but he wrote a great book of scripture and built up the famous city of Enoch, which was also called the city of holiness. This city of Zion and all of its people were translated and taken up to God in the year of the world 1052.

All of these founding patriarchs lived in the days of great wickedness, and yet the scripture says that Noah was also perfect in his generation. It says, "and Noah walked with God." (Gen. 6:9.) And most of his life was spent saying to the antediluvians, "Keep the commandments."

Common interests

We have many interests in common with the founding fathers of our world. They lived on one end of our civilization, and we live on the other. They stood in the forefront of our history, and we carry the responsibility for this equally important last-day period. Both periods have great intensities of good and bad. The Lord himself looked forward to our day and made a rather uncomplimentary comparison when he said: "... as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." (Matt. 24:37.)

This first period was brought to its end by the flood. The last will be brought to its close by the glorious second coming of the Son of God.

Keep the commandments

Enoch said, "Keep the commandments," and those who did were translated and taken up to heaven. Noah said, "Keep the commandments," and those who did not were drowned, and their spirits were sent to the eternal prison house. The prophet Jonah said to the people of Ninevah, "Keep the commandments," and when they obeyed, their city was saved.

In concluding his book of Ecclesiastes, the wise man Solomon said: "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man." (Eccles. 12:13.)

When one came to Jesus and said, "... what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life?" Jesus said unto him, "[Thou knowest the law], keep the commandments." (Matt. 19:16-17.)

Then on the night preceding his crucifixion he said to the apostles, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." (John 14:15.)

When the people chose apostasy rather than obedience, the dark ages came upon the world.

The Restoration

John the Revelator avoided the kind of violent death meted out to the other apostles of Jesus by his banishment to that lonely little isle of Patmos located in the Aegean Sea. Then, with prophetic vision, he looked down to our day and said:

"And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people,

"Saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come: and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters." (Rev. 14:6-7.)

The church of Jesus Christ, founded upon the foundation of apostles and prophets, has again been restored. And in 1972 a great modern prophet, standing shoulder to shoulder with those of other times, is again saying to all the world and to each of us individually, "Keep the commandments."

May God help us to hear and to obey, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

We have just listened to Elder Sterling W. Sill, Assistant to the Twelve.

Elder Loren C. Dunn of the First Council of Seventy will now address us. He will be followed by Elder Paul H. Dunn of the First Council of Seventy.

Elder Loren C. Dunn

Of the First Council of the Seventy

My brothers and sisters, I pray for the inspiration and strength and Spirit of the Lord during the few minutes that I am before you this afternoon.

In a recent area general conference held in Mexico, President Harold B. Lee made this statement:

"The strength of the Church is not to be measured by the amount of money paid as tithing by faithful members, nor by the number of the total membership of the Church, or the number of Church chapels and temple buildings.

"The real strength of the Church is to be measured by the individual testimonies to be found in the total membership of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints."

Individual testimonies

No matter what position a person holds in this church, there is one thing to which he is entitled, and that is a testimony of its truthfulness.

Not only is it the right of every member to know for himself, but every soul, whether member or nonmember, can if he desires receive a realization that God the Father actually lives; that Jesus Christ is his Son, and gave up his life on the cross that we might live, and was resurrected to ascend on high to take his place on the right hand of God; that Joseph Smith was a true prophet and that in reality he saw God the Father and his Son, Jesus Christ, and that he became the legal administrator to restore the kingdom of God to the earth; that The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is that kingdom of God on the earth, and anyone who makes himself worthy for baptism, by faith in the Lord Jesus Christ and repentance, can gain entrance to that kingdom; that the Book of Mormon is true and "a person can get closer to the Lord by following its precepts than by any other book"; and that we have today a living oracle, a prophet of God who stands at the head of this the Lord's church upon the earth.

It is not enough to enter into a scholarly discourse on the merits of this declaration or to accept or reject these claims with a wave of the hand. True strength, true peace of mind, true purpose in life comes when the individual, aside from what others may know, puts himself in a position so that the Lord can reveal to him the absolute truth of these things. It is an experience that defies description, at least to one who has not yet paid the price to receive it. It is the awakening of the mind and spirit to absolute truth. It is a revelation from God. It goes beyond what we can know and understand with our mortal senses. It is a testimony of the truthfulness of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

Around the world literally hundreds of people are gaining this testimony daily. I heard one such person speak just a few days ago. He was a new convert to the Church. He was a young man and he had a young family. He told how his life had literally changed—how the life of his whole family had changed. For the first time he knew what his relationship to God was and what the Lord expected of him. Because of this, he said, he was a better husband and father. He knew where he was going and could lead his family in a better way. But mostly he was happy—happy with the quiet joy that fills the life of every truly converted person.

People who look at us from the outside can't understand what makes this church so alive and its people so faithful and devoted. President Lee truly answered that question in Mexico when he said, as I mentioned, "The real strength of the Church is to be measured by the individual testimonies to be found in the total membership of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints."

The Book of Mormon

The way in which a person can gain such a testimony is clearly defined by the Lord. First let me read from the frontispiece of the Book of Mormon wherein the Lord gives the reasons for bringing forth this book to the world.

In the second paragraph we find this quote: "And also to the convincing of the Jew and Gentile that Jesus is the Christ, the Eternal God, manifesting himself unto all nations."

So the purpose of the book is to convince the world, both Jew and gentile, that Jesus is the Christ, the Eternal God, manifesting himself to all nations.

Next we read in section 20 of the Doctrine and Covenants where the Lord, speaking of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon, says: "And gave him power from on high, by the means which were before prepared, to translate the Book of Mormon;

"Which contains a record of a fallen people, and the fulness of the gospel of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles and to the Jews also;

"Proving to the world that the holy scriptures are true, and that God does inspire men and call them to his holy work in this age and generation, as well as in generations of old." (D&C 20:8-9, 11.)

Conviction of the truth

The Book of Mormon, then, has been brought forth to convince mankind that Jesus is the Christ and that the holy scriptures are true and that God is again speaking through prophets as he did in ancient times. The contents of the Book of Mormon then become the means whereby a person can put himself in harmony with the Spirit of the Lord so he can prove to himself and be convinced these things are true.

How this should be accomplished is outlined by one of the last prophets to write in this ancient book of scripture. Some 421 years after the birth of Christ, the prophet Moroni, speaking to the people of this generation, gave the following guidelines:

"Behold, I would exhort you that when ye shall read these things, if it be wisdom in God that ye should read them, that ye would remember how merciful the Lord hath been unto the children of men, from the creation of Adam even down until the time that ye shall receive these things, and ponder it in your hearts.

"And when ye shall receive these things, I would exhort you that ye would ask God, the Eternal Father, in the name of Christ, if these things are not true; and if ye shall ask with a sincere heart, with real intent, having faith in Christ, he will manifest the truth of it unto you, by the power of the Holy Ghost.

"And by the power of the Holy Ghost ye may know the truth of all things." (Moro. 10:3-5.)

Three steps in seeking a testimony

The three steps, then, in seeking a testimony of the truthfulness of the gospel from the Lord himself are to read, ponder, and pray with real intent and sincerity of heart. If a person will prayerfully read the pages of this inspired book and carefully turn over in his mind what he has read and constantly ask the question, "Could any man have written this book?" the promise of the Lord is that he "will manifest the truth of it unto you, by the power of the Holy Ghost."

If the world would accept this invitation, then they would know for themselves the source of strength of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints—for like all of us, they would have gone to the source and received their own testimony.

Desire to know

And now to those who by heritage find themselves members of the Church but perhaps are not sure of their own testimony—to you I would suggest that it is no sin to admit to yourself that you do not know if, in fact, you don't know. The error might be, however, in coming to the realization that you don't know and then doing nothing about it. Any person, either member or nonmember, who wants to know can know. If at present you live by the faith and testimony of your parents and those around you, that is certainly all right. But seek to reach out and gain your own testimony so you can stand on the strength of your own personal relationship with the Lord. It will help you in solving many of your problems and bring peace to your heart.

Bearing testimony

I would hope that as Latter-day Saints we can strengthen each other in the way which the Lord provided, by bearing our testimonies often—at church meetings, at the end of gospel classes, even at fast and testimony meetings. We should renew our efforts to actually express our testimonies and give something more than a passing reference to the truthfulness of the gospel. With the bearing of testimony comes the spirit of testimony, and all are edified.

And finally, may Latter-day Saint parents bear their testimonies to their children in the home—actually express to your children exactly what it is about the Church you know to be true. If we think our children know these things just because they live in the same house with us, we are mistaken. We need to say the words so our families can feel the same spirit of testimony that we have felt. Family home evening is an ideal time for this to take place.

And may I add that the family setting is an ideal place to read the Book of Mormon. We as a family recently finished reading the Book of Mormon. Although two of our children are not old enough to read yet, we find that they understand more than we thought they would, for the spirit and truth of this great book enlighten all ages.

What greater inheritance can parents give their children than the spiritual heritage which the children have a right to receive! To all men, both member and nonmember, comes the invitation from the God of this earth to learn for themselves the truth. May all who have not received the knowledge accept the invitation of the Savior is my prayer in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

Elder Loren C. Dunn of the First Council of Seventy has just addressed us.

We shall now be pleased to hear from Elder Paul H. Dunn of the First Council of Seventy. He will be followed by Elder Boyd K. Packer of the Council of the Twelve.

Elder Paul H. Dunn

Of the First Council of the Seventy

I am grateful for this opportunity, brothers and sisters, to add my witness to those that have been borne so beautifully here.

Repentance and baptism

The other night I was somewhat amused as I looked through an evening copy of the Deseret News. I noticed a picture depicting a problem that one of the Baptist churches in the South was having. It seems that their parking lot was being used by an adjoining establishment for commercial use, and the enterprising minister put this sign up at the entrance to the parking lot: "Warning—Violators will be baptized."

I couldn't help but think of that as I have listened to the real warning of the Lord and the counsel from his servants during these two great days.

When the Lord appeared to the Nephites he said, "And again I say unto you, ye must repent, and be baptized in my name, and become as a little child, or ye can in nowise inherit the kingdom of God." (3 Ne. 11:38.) That was his real warning.

Just twenty-three years ago this fall, I entered Chapman College in Southern California as a student. I came under the wonderful influence of Dr. Guy M. Davis, philosopher, educator, and teacher. Twenty-three years later, just three weeks ago last Friday evening, I saw this magnificent man, with so brilliant a mind, become as a little child, as he entered the waters of baptism and became a member of the Church.

"Strengthen thy brethren"

I thought of another scripture as I witnessed that baptism experience of my friend. The Lord, admonishing his chief apostle Peter, as Luke records it, gave this simple counsel and direction: "... when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren." (Luke 22:32.) I pray the good bishop, the home teacher, the congregation of the ward to which Guy and his family have now been assigned will strengthen my brother.

A personal experience

Permit a personal experience for just a moment. Strengthening one's brother, I think, comes closer to home when we think of fellowshiping and friendshiping our family. Some time ago when my youngest daughter was faced with the reality of attending a different school, she looked forward to the new experience with great anticipation and excitement but with the usual anxieties and concerns. Her mom and dad tried to make her experience meaningful, and one that would be positive, and we spent several hours attempting to prepare her mind for the new experience. We even planned a time when we could shop for new clothes and other special school supplies.

Finally, the long-awaited day arrived. A special evening was planned to help give spiritual comfort and guidance. Later she put her clothes out in anticipation of the next day. As she retired to her bed, seemingly all was well, but about an hour later she appeared at my study door where I was making some preparations.

"Dad," she said, rubbing her tummy, "I don't feel very well."

You know the sign; and I thought I understood it, so I invited her in and sat her on my lap. We put on a little music that we liked to listen to together. I rubbed her tummy, and she soon fell asleep. I took her back upstairs, placed her in her bed, tiptoed toward the door; and she broke the silence with the announcement, "I am not asleep yet."

I went back and lay down on the bed with her, stroked her head, gave what fatherly counsel one could under the circumstances, and reassured her. Finally she fell asleep. The next morning she appeared at breakfast in her petticoat. She said, "Dad, I don't think I had better go to school today."

I said, "Why not?"

She said, "I think I am going to get sick."

You know what she was trying to tell us, don't you? I don't know how to handle a new situation, Dad. Will I make friends? Will my teacher like me? Will I fit into the social group? Will I be accepted? These are the concerns that all of us experience, as we find ourselves in new and different social situations.

She knew what my answer would be and agreed to have me drive her to school. As we got in front of the school building, the warning bell sounded. The tears started to come to her eyes. I got out of the car and assisted her. We walked about ten feet, and she grabbed hold of my leg. It was as though she were a tackle on some football team. And then, as only a child can do to a father, she looked up at me and said philosophically, "Dad, if you really love me—if you really love me—don't send me in there."

I said, "Honey, this may be beyond your comprehension, but it's because I do love you that I am taking you in there." And I did. When we got inside the door, she grabbed hold of the other leg and held on. Numerous students came and went, and finally the little miracle happened that changed everything.

From I don't know where came a delightful, wonderful friendship, a fellowships who knew how to lose herself in serving others; one who would now take the admonishment of the Savior to strengthen her friends. With the exuberance of youth this little girl said, "Kellie, how are you?"

"Fine."

"What is your home room?" And she told her. "Tremendous. I had that home room last year. Come on, and I will take you to it."

And before Kellie knew it, she had let go of my leg and got about ten paces away, then realized what she had done. I will never forget her expression and the sermon she taught as she looked back. "Oh," she said, "Dad, you can go now; I don't need you anymore."

Need for fellowship

Thank God for the little people as well as the big people who know how to friendship and fellowship.

Thousands of people are coming into this church every month. I pray that we have the genius to follow the counsel of the Lord to strengthen our brethren. I pray that a great bishop and a wonderful home teacher and other members are taking care of my friend, Guy Davis.

I testify to the divinity of this church. It is true. I sustain President Lee as a prophet, seer, and revelator. I know he is called and ordained of God. I know God lives and that Jesus is the Christ, to which I add my testimony, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

Thank the Lord we have great teachers who know how to put over great lessons in capsules. You have listened to Paul H. Dunn, one of them. We are now going to listen to another one, Elder Boyd K. Packer of the Council of the Twelve, who will be our concluding speaker.

Elder Boyd K. Packer

Of the Council of the Twelve

After yesterday morning and this morning with President Lee, I think you can imagine the experience that is ours when we, as the Brethren, go to the temple, there to take sweet counsel together with him.

Watch-care over saints

It was in such a meeting a short time ago that there came to me the inspiration for the subject that I speak upon today. We sang as the opening hymn in that meeting "How Gentle God's Commands." Later, in a prayer, President Lee included this phrase from the hymn: "Beneath his watchful eye, His saints securely dwell." (Hymns, no. 67.) He then reverently gave thanks to the Almighty for the security and protection of his saints, and in that prayer he invited a continuation of that watch-care over them.

I was deeply touched with gratitude that in a world characterized by unrest, even by violence, there is a people who care for one another.

Paul told the saints at Ephesus: "Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellowcitizens with the saints, and of the household of God." (Eph. 2:19.)

To be a fellow citizen with the saints has great meaning. All can receive that citizenship through the ordinance of baptism, if they will—if they will repent and prepare themselves. Then, as members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, they never need be alone.

The individual is regarded as a son or daughter of God. Family members are taught to sustain one another. In such families there is some fulfillment of the statement: The saints securely dwell. Then the family structure is marvelously fitted into the setting of church organization.

Never left alone

When young men and women are living away from the parental circle, they are not left alone, for the watch-care is kept over them. As they marry, the cycle begins again.

Some do not marry, but they are never left alone.

As children leave home to begin families of their own, father and mother—now called grandfather and grandmother—face life together as they did when they were newlyweds. This is the normal, the expected, and the desirable pattern, for the course of the Lord is one eternal round. They are never left alone.

Children are taught to revere their parents, but sometimes they live at great distances. In any case, the Church reaches out with a watch-care over them.

Then, when one of them is gone, the aged widow is not left alone; for again the organization of the Church reaches out in watch-care over her to look after her needs—spiritually, and temporally also, if that becomes necessary—that she might securely dwell.

The process is simple. Two holders of the priesthood are called by their quorum president and assigned by the bishop to visit the house of each member regularly, under the title of priesthood home teachers. They are guardians of the individual and of the family.

Priesthood home teaching

When I choose to talk of priesthood home teaching, I full well realize there are some activities in the Church that are more exciting and some more interesting. Perhaps even most have more appeal.

Some time ago I was in a home after a sacrament meeting. A mother asked her teenage son how the day had gone for him. The young man, bold in truth and unhesitant as youth usually is, said, "Fine, except for sacrament meeting."

The mother inquired about sacrament meeting, and he said, "Well, if we could ever survive high councilors talking about priesthood home teaching and welfare, that would be the day!"

The humiliated mother said, "Why, David, Elder Packer here has charge of one of those programs for the whole Church."

"I know," he said. "Why doesn't he do something about it?"

My boy, I am, at this very moment, doing all that I know how to do about it. Let me explain something to you. Perhaps you'll find that these two programs—which are very closely related—can be most interesting. But interesting or not, they are vital to your security.

Fundamental things

Incidentally, young man, you can list me with that high councilor who talks of basic priesthood programs. And list with us your coach who talks about drill and exercise, and your music teacher who insists on hours of practice for but a few minutes of performance. List with us your parents, who insist that you learn to work and to pay attention to fundamental things of life.

I repeat, some activities may have much more appeal, but there is none that is more important.

It is interesting that things so basic are taken so for granted. For example, there is within us a coursing supply of blood delivering nourishment to sustain the body, carrying away waste materials, and armed with a protection against disease and infection. The blood supply is kept in motion by the incessant and dependable pumping of the heart. It is vital to life.

Ordinarily, however, a sliver in the finger gets more attention and is of more concern. No one pays much thought to the beating of the heart until there is the threat that it may be interrupted or stopped. It is then that we pay attention.

Benefits of home teaching

Home teaching, strangely enough, is so taken for granted that most members pay little attention to it, participating routinely, sometimes almost with annoyance. Through it, nevertheless, there come to members of the Church a protection and a watch-care not known elsewhere.

Picture a man calling for his companion, generally a younger man in his teens, to spend an evening calling on the homes of five or six families. They come to bring them encouragement, to search out their spiritual needs, and to be concerned with their welfare so that everybody knows that there is somebody to call upon in time of need.

If illness strikes, help can be forthcoming. The children can be cared for; visits can be arranged. Here we join the priesthood home teachers with the visiting teachers from the Relief Society. Often the problem is not illness. It is a teenager with problems or a little one not coming along the way he should.

There can pour through this channel of priesthood home teaching a sustaining power to the limits of the resources of the Church on this earth. This is not all. There can flow through this channel a redeeming spiritual power to the limits of heaven itself.

Through home teaching, tragedies have been averted. Sinking souls have been lifted. Material need has been provided. Grief has been assuaged. The infirm have been healed through administration. While the work goes on without being heralded, it is inspired of Almighty God and is basic to the spiritual nourishment of this people.

Importance of program

The leaders of the Church expend great effort to see that priesthood home teaching works. Though it is much taken for granted, it is always provided for and always will be. The principles of it have never changed, not with changing society or the various additions to programming in the Church. Without it the Church could very quickly cease to be the Church. And I say again, though some activities may be more inviting, none is more important.

I am grateful for the many activity programs we have. They are a spice, a flavoring, or a dessert. They make life interesting, particularly for our young people. I am much in favor of them and would not see them neglected, nor could you persuade me to dispense with them.

I can see that a church with home teaching only might, to a young person, be quite as dull as a meal without flavoring or dessert. However, I have some concern when our local leaders concentrate entirely on activity programs and neglect priesthood home teaching.

I say to our bishops, you might as well try to raise up an athlete on a diet of chocolate bars and soda pop as to attempt to sustain your youth with activity programs only. They may be drawn to them, but they will not be much nourished by them. No effort to redeem your youth can be more productive than the time and attention given to priesthood home teaching. For the object of priesthood home teaching is to strengthen the home, and as the teenager would say, and he usually knows, "That is where it is all at." Can't you see that when you keep this lifeline to the home open, not only do you strengthen the home, but you have much better, more flavorful activities?

The Lord's way

There are many ways to lift our young people. We are very inventive and seem to be able to devise many exciting ways. Sooner or later we will be drawn to do it the Lord's way.

I am reminded of a fur trapper who had earned a modest fortune trapping foxes. He decided to go south for the winter and left his trap lines in the care of a carefully trained young assistant. He taught him just how to set the traps and where to put the bait.

When he returned in the spring, to his disappointment there were very few fox furs.

"Did you do it just as I taught you?" asked the older man.

"Oh, no," was the reply. "I found a better way."

You who are bishops and quorum leaders, I urge you to give adequate attention to priesthood home teaching. Do not release the home teachers by attempting to accomplish what they should do in other ways. You may invent a thousand of them in an effort to strengthen your youth, but sooner or later you must come back to doing it His way.

I am reminded of the scriptural declaration:

"Who am I, saith the Lord, that have promised and not fulfilled?

"I command and men obey not; I revoke and they receive not the blessing.

"Then they say in their hearts: This is not the work of the Lord, for his promises are not fulfilled. But wo unto such, for their reward lurketh beneath, and not from above." (D&C 58:31-33.)

Twice a blessing

To you who are home teachers—you who perform the routine visit, not infrequently considered a drudgery—do not take the assignment lightly or pass it off as being routine. Every hour you spend in it and every step you take in it and every door you knock upon, every home you greet, every encouragement you give, is twice a blessing.

It is an interesting truth that the home teachers are often taught in the course of their visits to the family. In fact, it is often a question, even in a moment of sacrifice and service by a priesthood home teacher, who benefits the most—the family he serves or the home teacher.

Home teaching experience

In my experience I recall a very significant lesson. I learned it as a home teacher.

Shortly before I was married I was assigned with an older companion to serve as home teacher to an aged little lady who was a shut-in. She was a semi-invalid, and often when we knocked on the door she would call us to come in. We would find her unable to be about and would leave our message at her bedside.

We somehow learned that she was very partial to lemon ice cream. Frequently we would stop at the ice cream store before making our visit. Because we knew her favorite flavor, there were two reasons we were welcome to that home.

On one occasion the senior companion was not able to go, for reasons that I do not remember. I went alone and followed the ritual of getting a half-pint of lemon ice cream before making the call.

I found her in bed. She expressed great worry over a grandchild who was to undergo a very serious operation the following day. She asked if I would kneel at the side of her bed and offer a prayer for the well-being of the youngster.

Lesson taught

After the prayer, thinking of my coming marriage, I suppose, she said, "Tonight I will teach you." She said she wanted to tell me something and that I was always to remember it. Then began the lesson I have never forgotten. She recounted something of her life.

A few years after her marriage to a fine young man in the temple, when they were concentrating on the activities of young married life and raising a family, one day a letter came from "Box B." (In those days a letter from "Box B" in Salt Lake City was invariably a mission call.)

To their surprise they were called as a family to go to one of the far continents of the world to help open the land for missionary work. They served faithfully and well, and after several years they returned to their home, to set about again the responsibilities of raising their family.

Then this little woman focused in on a Monday morning. It could perhaps be called a blue washday Monday. There had been some irritation and a disagreement. Then some biting words between husband and wife. Interestingly enough, she couldn't remember how it all started or what it was over. "But," she said, "nothing would do but that I follow him to the gate, and as he walked up the street on his way to work I just had to call that last biting, spiteful remark after him."

Then, as the tears began to flow, she told me of an accident that took place that day, and he never returned. "For fifty years," she sobbed, "I've lived in hell knowing that the last words he heard from my lips were that biting, spiteful remark."

This was the message to her young home teacher. She pressed it upon me with the responsibility never to forget it. I have profited greatly from it. I have come to know since that time that a couple can live together without one cross word ever passing between them.

I have often wondered about those visits to that home, about the time I spent and the few cents we spent on ice cream. That little sister is long since gone beyond the veil. This is true also of my senior companion. But the powerful experience of that home teaching, the home teacher being taught, is with me yet, and I have found occasion to leave her message with young couples at the marriage altar and in counseling people across the world.

Saturday, October 7

Second Day

"Only a home teacher"

There is a spiritual genius in priesthood home teaching. Every priesthood holder who goes forth under this assignment can come away repaid a thousand-fold.

I have heard men say in response to a question about their Church assignment, "I am only a home teacher."

Only a home teacher. Only the guardian of a flock. Only the one appointed where the ministry matters most. Only a servant of the Lord!

It is because of you, the priesthood home teacher, that a verse of the hymn stands true:

"Beneath his watchful eye,
His saints securely dwell;
That hand which bears all nature up
Shall guard his children well."

I bear witness that Jesus is the Christ. This is his church and kingdom. We hold the priesthood and authority delegated of him. There presides over us a prophet, who as a man cannot extend himself to the far reaches of the earth, to every branch, to every mission, or to every stake. Yet by delegation of the authority and the keys held by him, he can reach, not just to the stakes and the wards and the branches, but he can reach into the homes, to the individuals, and bless and sustain them, that the saints might securely dwell. In the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

Elder Boyd K. Packer of the Council of the Twelve has been our concluding speaker.

I sincerely pray that the very important messages of this session will not be lost on the membership of this Church, and particularly on the priesthood holders, into whose hands we are giving some mighty responsibility these days.

We remind the brethren of the General Priesthood Meeting which will convene here this evening at 7 o'clock.

The Sunday morning session will be broadcast by many radio and television stations in the western United States, and by short-wave over Radio New York Worldwide to England, Europe, Mexico, South America, Central America, Africa, and parts of Asia.

The CBS Radio Network Tabernacle Choir Broadcast tomorrow morning will be from 9:30 to 10:00 o'clock. Those desiring to attend this broadcast must be in their seats no later than 9:15 a.m.

This music for this session has been furnished by the Combined Salt Lake Area M Man and Gleaner Chorus. We are grateful for the inspiring music rendered by this devoted group of young men and women. Thank you, young people, and may the Lord bless you, and may you be an example to all the youth of the Church, for your presence here this afternoon has been an inspiration to all who have been listening and watching.

The Combined Chorus with Virgil Camp conducting and Roy M. Darley at the organ will now sing that glorious youth song, "Carry on, carry on, carry on!"

The benediction will then be offered by Elder Nicholas J. Teerlink, president of the Wells Stake.

This conference will then be adjourned until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

The Combined M Man and Gleaner Chorus rendered the song, "Carry On."

President Nicholas J. Teerlink of the Wells Stake offered the closing prayer.

The conference was adjourned until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

GENERAL PRIESTHOOD MEETING

FIFTH SESSION

The General Priesthood Meeting of the Church convened at 7 o'clock p.m. on Saturday, October 7, 1972, with President Harold B. Lee presiding and conducting.

The special singing for this session was furnished by the Male Choir of the Mormon Youth Chorus, with Jay Welch and Hal Gundersen conducting, and Roy M. Darley at the organ.

President Lee opened the meeting with the following statement:

President Harold B. Lee

This is the General Priesthood Session of the 142nd Semi-Annual Conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

These services are being relayed by closed-circuit transmission and will reach members of the priesthood gathered in the Assembly Hall and in approximately 750 other separate locations from coast to coast and in Canada. I might say also in the Salt Palace. It is estimated that approximately 180,000 will participate in this meeting by direct wire.

We extend our greetings and blessings to all the priesthood members assembled here in the Tabernacle and in various buildings throughout the United States and Canada.

The singing during this session will be furnished by the Male Choir of the Mormon Youth Chorus, with Jay Welch and Hal Gundersen conducting, and Roy M. Darley at the organ.

We shall begin this service by the chorus singing, "Come All Ye Sons of Zion."

Elder W. Dean Belnap, former president of the England East Mission, will then offer the invocation.

The Male Choir of the Mormon Youth Chorus sang "Come All Ye Sons of Zion."

The opening prayer was offered by Elder W. Dean Belnap, former president of the England East Mission.

President Lee

The chorus, with Jay Welch conducting, will now favor us with "Pilgrim's Song."

Elder Gordon B. Hinckley of the Council of the Twelve will be our first speaker in this our General Priesthood Meeting.

The Male Choir of the Mormon Youth Chorus sang "Pilgrim's Song."

President Lee

Elder Gordon B. Hinckley of the Council of the Twelve will now speak to us. He will be followed by Bishop Vaughn J. Featherstone of the Presiding Bishopric.

Elder Gordon B. Hinckley

Of the Council of the Twelve

Wilford Woodruff records that in 1833 all of the priesthood of the Church met with the Prophet Joseph in a room only fourteen feet square, about the size of your bedroom.

Tonight, gathered in this and in some 750 other halls are more than 180,000 upon whom has been conferred that same priesthood. I would assume that among them there must be twenty-five or thirty thousand young men and boys. If the Spirit will give me utterance, I should like to speak to them.

A capable generation

At the outset, I should like to say that I am convinced that we have never had a more dedicated or more capable generation of young men in the history of the Church. Some of you older brethren may dispute that, which brings to mind the story of the boy who came down to breakfast one morning and said, "Dad, I dreamed about you last night."

"About me? What did you dream?"

"I dreamed I was climbing a ladder to heaven and on the way up I had to write one of my sins on each step of the ladder."

"And where did I come into your dream?" the father asked.

Said the boy, "When I was going up, I met you coming down for more chalk."

In various times, the Lord has chosen boys and trained them for the accomplishment of his marvelous purposes—such boys as Samuel, David, Joseph who was sold into Egypt, Nephi, Mormon, and Joseph Smith.

Resolution to grow

I believe that God has likewise chosen each of you for something of consequence in his grand design, perhaps not in the category of those I have named. But he loves you and he has a work for each of you to do.

How great, then, is your responsibility so to live that the Spirit of the Lord may dwell in you and that the Holy Ghost may speak through you.

I would that I had the capacity, the gift of the Spirit, to speak with such power that your hearts would burn with a resolution so to live as to grow in favor with both God and man.

The wonderful thing is that this is not beyond your capacity. The course of our lives is not determined by great, awesome decisions. Our direction is set by the little day-to-day choices which chart the track on which we run.

A switch point

Many years ago I worked in the head office of one of our railroads. One day I received a telephone call from my counterpart in Newark, New Jersey, who said that a passenger train had arrived without its baggage car. The patrons were angry.

We discovered that the train had been properly made up in Oakland, California, and properly delivered to St. Louis, from which station it was to be carried to its destination on the east coast. But in the St. Louis yards, a thoughtless switchman had moved a piece of steel just three inches.

That piece of steel was a switch point, and the car that should have been in Newark, New Jersey, was in New Orleans, Louisiana, thirteen hundred miles away.

So it is with our lives—a cigarette smoked, a can of beer drunk at a party, a shot of Speed taken on a dare, a careless giving in to an impulse on a date. Each has thrown a switch in the life of a boy that put him on a track that carried him far away from what might have been a great and foreordained calling. And as Nephi said, "... thus the devil cheateth their souls and leadeth them away carefully down to hell." (2 Ne. 28:21.)

Potential for good

I hold in my hand a small package that I bought in Switzerland. Do you remember the movie Sound of Music, with its final, beautiful song, "The Edelweiss Song"? It speaks of the flower of the Alps—"small and white, clean and bright, bless my homeland forever."

This is a package of Edelweiss seed. The seeds are tiny, like small dry flecks of pepper. But on the face of the package is pictured what they might become—the mature plant, the flower that grows high in the Swiss and Austrian Alps, that weathers the storms that rage through those mountains, that blooms beneath the snow, that gives beauty to Alpine slopes and meadows. These tiny seeds have within them the potential for vigorous and beautiful life. They have become the symbol of a sturdy people—"small and white, clean and bright," blessing a great land forever.

So it is with boys. There lies within you an incalculable potential for good. The small day-to-day decisions will determine the course of your lives.

Be smart

Therefore, be smart. The Lord has blessed each of you with greater capacity than you realize. Your I.Q. may not be the highest in the world. So what? Our jails are filled with clever men who were anything but smart. I have concluded that the work of the world is not done by intellectual geniuses. It is done by men of ordinary capacity who use their abilities in an extraordinary manner. As a member of this church you have the obligation to seek learning and to improve your skills.

It matters not whether you choose to be merchant, teacher, carpenter, plumber, mechanic, doctor, or to follow any other honorable vocation. The important thing is that you qualify to be useful workers in society. It is so easy and so tragic to become a drifter, a drop-out. It is so challenging and so satisfying to be a producer. In so doing, you will bless not only your own lives and the lives of those you serve, but you will also bring honor to and respect for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. For your identity as a Mormon will be recognized and the image of the Church will be improved by reason of the opinion which others have of you as you serve them. You cannot afford ever to do cheap or shoddy work. You bear the priesthood of God.

Be clean

Be clean. "Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord." (D&C 38:42.) Be ye clean that handle and administer the sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

With President Lee we recently stood in the Garden of Gethsemane in Jerusalem where in agony the Lord foresaw the terrible suffering he must endure, suffering so intense that it caused even the Son of God to bleed at every pore. There he was mocked and betrayed and delivered into the hands of wicked men.

My dear young friends, do we not mock him anew if we come to the sacrament table with unclean hands and impure hearts as we administer the emblems of his sacrifice?

As deacons, teachers, and priests, you cannot afford to sit around telling and laughing at dirty stories, reading pornographic literature, watching pornographic movies, abusing yourselves sexually, or stooping to immoral behavior of any kind.

Be clean for your own peace of mind. I spoke the other day with a young man who wished to go on a mission. In previous months he had been immoral. He and the girl with whom he had been associated thought they had done a clever thing. But he had come to realize that he had taken from her something precious that could never be restored, and that he had lost something of his own for which there was no compensation. With tears running down his cheeks he made his own judgment that he was unworthy to go into the world to teach to others a standard of behavior he had been unable to live himself. He had neither peace nor gladness.

Be clean, for the sake of your posterity. Someday each of you will meet the girl of your dreams. If you truly love her, you would rather cut off your right arm than hurt her. Never lose sight of the fact that you are the line through which will pass the qualities of your forebears to the posterity who will come after you. Pause and think. Will those qualities be diminished or enhanced because of your behavior? Be clean, and your strength will be as the strength of ten because your heart is pure.

Be obedient

Be obedient, my dear young friends. Be obedient to the calls of the priesthood. We recently met with missionaries in England and Europe, more than a thousand of them. They are a miracle to me, a constantly renewing miracle. Their tremendous capacity, their courage in meeting obstacles, their quiet and effective powers of persuasion—how impressive they are! How do they do it? someone asked me. That capacity has come slowly, through obedience to the calls of the Church.

There is no small or unimportant duty in the kingdom of God. And out of the fulfillment of each responsibility comes the strength to undertake something new and more demanding. The men who sit tonight on the stand in this Tabernacle and the priesthood leaders across the world are for the most part the lengthened shadow of boys who tried earnestly to do what they were asked to do.

"So nigh is grandeur to our dust, so near is God to man, when Duty whispers low, Thou must, the youth replies, I can." (Ralph Waldo Emerson.)

Be prayerful

Finally, be prayerful. The Lord has promised, "Be thou humble, and the Lord thy God shall lead thee by the hand, and give thee answer to thy prayers." (D&C 112:10.)

President Wilford Woodruff once declared: "It does not make any difference whether a man is a priest or an apostle if he magnifies his calling. A priest holds the keys of the ministering of angels. Never in my life, as an apostle, as a seventy, or as an elder, have I had more of the protection of the Lord than while holding the office of a priest." Is it not a marvelous thing to contemplate that the priesthood of Aaron, which you young men hold, carries with it the right to the ministering of angels!

I hope I may be pardoned for repeating a story I heard the other day in Lausanne, Switzerland. That was a sacred occasion, and I view this as a sacred occasion.

Warning heeded

More than sixty years ago, a small boy on an Idaho farm went with his father to the field. While the father worked through the day, the boy amused himself with one thing and another. Over the fence were some old farm buildings derelict and tumbled down. The boy with imagination saw in them castles to be entered. He climbed through the fence and approached the buildings to begin his exploration. As he drew near, a voice was heard to say, "Harold, don't go over there." He looked to see if his father was around. He was not. But the boy heeded the warning. He turned and ran. He never knew what danger might have been lurking there, nor did he question. Having listened and heard, he obeyed.

That boy today presides over The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Through the years he has listened, and the Lord has magnified and protected and guided him by the whisperings of his Holy Spirit.

For a period of three weeks last month, we walked together, I as his junior companion, in the ministry of the Lord. I give you my witness of the workings of the Spirit in this the prophet of our day, the Spirit nurtured and cultivated and listened to through years reaching back to boyhood.

Promptings of Holy Ghost

Be prayerful, my friends, and listen. You may never hear a voice. You likely will not. But in a manner that you cannot explain, you will be prompted and blessed. For the Lord has promised, "I will tell you in your . . . heart, by the Holy Ghost, which shall come upon you. . . ." (D&C 8:2.)

Be prayerful, and you will know that God hears and answers. Not always as we might wish him to answer, but with the passing of the years, there will come a realization as certain as the sunrise that he heard and responded.

And so, watch the switches in your life, the small but important day-to-day decisions. Be smart, my dear young friends. Be clean. Be obedient. Be prayerful. To do so will require a measure of discipline, the exercise of which will bring strength and capacity for great and demanding tasks that lie ahead of you in building the kingdom of God and in filling places of useful service in the work of the world. Your lives will be satisfying and your joy will be eternal. I so promise you as a servant of the Lord, and invoke upon you that sweet peace which comes from him alone, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

Elder Hinckley has just spoken to the Aaronic Priesthood youth of the Church. May you young men never forget what you have heard from an apostle of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Bishop Vaughn J. Featherstone of the Presiding Bishopric will now address us.

Bishop Vaughn J. Featherstone

Of the Presiding Bishopric

My beloved brethren of the priesthood: I would like you to know tonight that I am humbled in your presence. I have thought of questions that might enter the mind of a young Aaronic Priesthood bearer. One such question would be, Where can I go to get a commitment to the Church like the brethren, the bishops in the wards, the stake presidents? What is it that causes a man to go early in the morning and work late at night, and give his heart and soul to the kingdom of God? Where can I go to find a commitment to the Savior like you have? And then another question, Where can I get a testimony?

I would like to brush away the fluff if we could and maybe go to that source where I gained my special testimony. It happened to be in the scriptures.

The story of Enoch

Let's go back first to the young man Enoch. As Enoch journeyed in the land, the voice of the Lord came unto him and told him to prophesy and call the people to repentance. And Enoch answering said unto the Lord:

"Why is it that I have found favor in thy sight, and am but a lad, and all the people hate me; for I am slow of speech; wherefore am I thy servant?"

"And the Lord said unto Enoch: Go forth and do as I have commanded thee, and no man shall pierce thee. . . .

"... and the mountains shall flee before you, and the rivers shall turn from their course; and thou shalt abide in me, and I in you." (Moses 6:31-32, 34.)

These powers would be given to Enoch if he would but follow this great lead and accept the call. Enoch accepted the call. And then you will recall the tremendous thing that happened—and I think this is absolutely beautiful, the way it is described in the scriptures, how the people described Enoch after he received the call. They said: "... and there is a strange thing in the land; a wild man hath come among us." (Moses 6:38.) I think that is a tremendous description of one who serves totally and fully in the Lord's service.

Enoch, of course, had some great associations. He happened one time to be conversing with the Lord, and he said, "How is it that thou canst weep, seeing thou art holy, and from all eternity to all eternity?"

"And were it possible that man could number the particles of the earth, yea, millions of earths like this, it would not be a beginning to the number of thy creations; and thy curtains are stretched out still; . . . and also thou art just; thou art merciful and kind forever." (Moses 7:29-30.)

I want you to know that when I read those sacred words, I felt and had the feelings, I believe, that Enoch might have had in some small degree. And each of you can have those same feelings.

And then, I believe, later on Enoch had the privilege of seeing all the generations of man and beholding them in their wickedness, and then Enoch wept and stretched out his arms; and the scripture says, "And his heart swelled wide as eternity. . . ." (Moses 7:41.) I think that is a beautiful description.

Other examples

I heard our modern prophet say something similar. He wept and then he said, "As I thought about my responsibility, my heart and soul went out to the entire membership of the Church." Doesn't that have a familiar ring of the prophets?

Then what about Jeremiah? The Lord called Jeremiah and said, I knew thee before thou wast born, "and I ordained thee a prophet unto the nations." And then the scripture records: "Then said I, Ah, Lord God! behold, I cannot speak: for I am a child." (Jer. 1:5-6.) And yet the Lord took this young man and made of him the great prophet Jeremiah.

Prophecy of Amos

And then again, let's take a look at Amos. The Lord called Amos to go down to Israel and prophesy; Amos did this, and Amaziah, the king's priest, was wroth and angry. He came to Amos and said, "O thou seer, go, flee thee away into the land of Judah. . . . But prophesy not again any more at Bethel: for it is the king's chapel, and it is the king's court"—go to Judah and prophesy there and eat bread and leave us alone. And then Amos said, I think with all the courage and all the dignity of a prophet, "I was no prophet, neither was I a prophet's son; but I was an herdsman, and a gatherer of sycomore fruit. And the Lord . . . said unto me, Go, prophesy unto my people Israel. Now therefore hear thou the word of the Lord." (Amos 7:12-16.) And with all the righteous integrity of one who had this calling, he did exactly that.

Experience of Enos

Then I want to tell you the type of experience I had when I read the Book of Mormon, and this great soul Enos, a young man, the son of a prophet in this case, said:

"Behold, it came to pass that I, Enos, knowing my father that he was a just man—for he taught me in his language, and also in the nurture and admonition of the Lord—and blessed be the name of my God for it—

"And I will tell you of the wrestle which I had before God, before I received a remission of my sins.

"Behold, I went to hunt beasts in the forests; and the words which I had often heard my father speak concerning eternal life, and the joy of the saints, sunk deep into my heart.

"And my soul hungered; and I kneeled down before my Maker, . . . in mighty prayer and supplication for mine own soul; and all the day long did I cry unto him; yea, and when the night came I did still raise my voice high that it reached the heavens.

"And there came a voice unto me, saying: Enos, thy sins are forgiven thee, and thou shalt be blessed.

"And I, Enos, knew that God could not lie; wherefore, my guilt was swept away.

"And I said: Lord, how is it done?

"And he said unto me: Because of thy faith in Christ. . . ." (Enos 1-8.)

Young men, did you hear those words? Because of thy faith in Christ!

Testimony of Alma

And then a wayward son of another prophet, Alma the Younger, told his son Helaman in testimony:

"For I went about with the sons of Mosiah, seeking to destroy the church of God; but behold, God sent his holy angel to stop us by the way.

"And behold, he spake unto us, as it were the voice of thunder, and the whole earth did tremble beneath our feet; and we all fell to the earth, for the fear of the Lord came upon us.

"But behold, the voice said unto me: Arise. And I arose and stood up, and beheld the angel.

"And he said unto me: If thou wilt of thyself be destroyed, seek no more to destroy the church of God.

"And it came to pass that I fell to the earth; and it was for the space of three days and three nights that I could not open my mouth, neither had I the use of my limbs.

"But I was racked with eternal torment, for my soul was harrowed up to the greatest degree and racked with all my sins.

"Yea, I did remember all my sins and iniquities, . . . yea, I saw that I had rebelled against my God, . . . and had murdered many of his children, or rather led them away unto destruction; yea, and in fine so great had been my iniquities, that the very thought of coming into the presence of my God did rack my soul with inexpressible horror.

"Oh, thought I, that I could be banished and become extinct both soul and body, that I might not be brought to stand in the presence of my God, to be judged of my deeds.

"And now, for three days and for three nights was I racked . . . with torment, while I was harrowed up by the memory of my many sins, behold, I remembered also to have heard my father prophesy unto the people concerning the coming of one Jesus Christ, a Son of God, to atone for the sins of the world.

"Now, as my mind caught hold upon this thought, I cried within my heart, O Jesus, thou Son of God, have mercy on me, who am in the gall of bitterness, and am encircled about by the everlasting chains of death.

Saturday, October 7Second Day

"And now, behold, when I thought this, I could remember my pains no more; yea, I was harrowed up by the memory of my sins no more. . . .

"And . . . my soul was filled with joy as exceeding as was my pain!

" . . . there could be nothing . . . so bitter as were my pains. Yea, . . . my son, that on the other hand, there can be nothing so exquisite and sweet as was my joy.

"Yea, methought I saw, even as our Father Lehi saw, God sitting upon his throne, surrounded with numberless concourses of angels, in the attitude of singing and praising their God, . . . and my soul did long to be there." (Al. 36: 6-10, 12-22.)

Now, contrast those two experiences of Alma: one, that he would be banished and extinct, both soul and body; and the other, that he longed to be in the presence of God.

Personal discovery

I believe that the scriptures have every dimension of life that we can cleave unto and find a pattern for living, if we will just go back to the scriptures and study them and learn of them.

Let me tell you the greatest experience I believe I have had in all my readings of the scriptures—and I am sharing something that is very tender with me. I remember the night that I read 3 Nephi, the 17th chapter. That is when I discovered the Lord Jesus Christ, my Redeemer, the Lord of lords, the King of kings, my Savior, my personal Savior; and I believe that is where I finally found the description of the Savior as I thought him to be.

He had been with the Nephite people all the day long, you will recall, and finally said:

"I perceive that ye are weak, that ye cannot understand all my words which I am commanded of the Father to speak unto you at this time.

"Therefore, go ye unto your homes, and ponder upon the things which I have said, and . . . I come unto you again [on the morrow].

"But now I go unto the Father, and also to show myself unto the lost tribes of Israel, for they are not lost unto the Father, for he knoweth whither he hath taken them."

Compassion of the Savior

And here I believe is where I found him.

"And . . . when Jesus had thus spoken, he cast his eyes round about again on the multitude, and behold they were in tears, and did look steadfastly upon him as if they would ask him to tarry a little longer with them.

"And he said unto them: Behold, my bowels are filled with compassion towards you.

"Have ye any that are sick among you? Bring them hither. Have ye any that are lame, or blind, or maimed, or leprous, or . . . that are afflicted in any manner? Bring them hither and I will heal them, for I have compassion upon you; my bowels are filled with mercy.

"For I perceive that ye desire that I should show unto you what I have done unto your brethren at Jerusalem, for I see that your faith is sufficient that I should heal you."

And then you will recall that he had all those who were sick or halt or blind or lame come forth, and the scripture says, "And they did all, both they who had been healed and they who were whole, bow down at his feet, and did worship him; and as many as could come for the multitude did kiss his feet, insomuch that they did bathe his feet with their tears."

Little children blessed

And when he had blessed all those who were sick and halt and blind and leprous, then he called the little children round about him; and then he commanded that the multitude should kneel down, and they knelt down, and he knelt in their midst and prayed; and the scripture says:

"The eye hath never seen, neither hath the ear heard, before, so great and marvelous things as we saw and heard Jesus speak unto the Father.

"... neither can the hearts of men conceive so great and marvelous things as we both saw and heard Jesus speak; and no one can conceive of the joy which filled our souls at the time we heard him pray for us unto the Father."

And then you will recall, after he had finished praying, he arose, but so great was the joy of the multitude that they were overcome, and he commanded that they should arise, and he said, "And now behold, my joy is full."

And then Jesus wept. He blessed the little children, one by one, and when he had done this, he wept again, and then he said unto the multitude, "Behold your little ones.

"And as they looked to behold they cast their eyes towards heaven, and they saw the heavens open, and they saw angels descending out of heaven as it were in the midst of fire; and they came down and encircled those little ones about, ... and the angels did minister unto them.

"And the multitude did see and hear and bear record ... and they were in number about two thousand and five hundred [and ONE] souls" who were in that beautiful experience with the Savior. (See 3 Ne. 17.)

Personal testimony

I want you to know I was there. I wouldn't know any more surely if I had been there than I would know having read this book. And I promise you that vicariously every single young man in the Church can read the scriptures and have that same experience with all of the prophets. And you can gain your own testimony, and it need not be pinned on someone else's coat sleeve. You can actually know. You can know that we have a modern prophet. Read his words. Listen to him.

I want you to know that I have had burned into my soul like nothing else in my life the knowledge that President Harold B. Lee is a prophet. I so testify and admonish you to read the scriptures, to go back to the sure word of God. In the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

I think we would find a tremendous wealth of application in the scriptures to the lives of all of us if we would only study the scriptures.

We will now have the privilege of hearing from President Marion G. Romney of the First Presidency.

President Marion G. Romney

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

My beloved brethren of the priesthood:

In these remarks, I have in mind tonight calling attention to and emphasizing the obligation we have as priesthood bearers to care for the "poor and the needy" among us. We haven't been giving as much attention to this particular phase of the gospel recently as we once did.

Care of poor and needy

Jesus, however, in his teachings, seemed to give it top priority. You will recall that he said—as recorded in the 25th chapter of Matthew—that when he comes in his glory, he will divide his people “as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats” (vs. 32), placing the sheep on his right hand and the goats on the left.

To those on his right hand he will say, “Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world”; to those on his left he will say, “Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels.” (Matt. 25:34, 41.)

In the same statement, the Master declared that the test on which the division would be made on that great day would be the care given to the poor and the needy.

The Lord further emphasized this matter when he said to the rich young man, “. . . go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come and follow me.” (Matt. 19:21.)

He stressed it again when he spake the Good Samaritan parable.

Book of Mormon examples

The obligation to care for the poor is as impressively taught in the Book of Mormon as it is in the Bible.

Alma, “having been commanded of God,” directed his people to impart “to one another both temporally and spiritually according to their needs and their wants.” He told them that they should do so “of their own free will and good desires towards God.” (See Mosiah 18:27-29.)

Similar teachings and performances are repeatedly recorded throughout the Book of Mormon.

King Benjamin taught that caring for the poor is essential to the retention of remission of one's sins:

“And now, . . . for the sake of retaining a remission of your sins from day to day, I would that ye should impart of your substance to the poor, every man according to that which he hath, such as feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, visiting the sick and administering to their relief, both spiritually and temporally, according to their wants.” (Mosiah 4:26.)

Efficacy of one's prayers

Amulek explained that the efficacy of one's prayers depended upon his caring for the needy. After explaining how, by reason of Christ's atonement, mercy satisfies justice for all those who exercise “faith unto repentance,” he gave this eloquent exhortation:

“Therefore may God grant unto you, my brethren, that ye may begin to exercise your faith unto repentance, that ye begin to call upon his holy name, that he would have mercy upon you;

“. . . cry unto him for mercy; for he is mighty to save.

“Cry unto him when ye are in your fields, yea, over all your flocks.

“Cry unto him in your houses, . . . over all your household, both morning, mid-day, and evening.

“. . . cry unto him against the devil, who is an enemy to all righteousness.

“But this is not all; ye must pour out your souls in your closets, and your secret places, and in your wilderness.

“Yea, and when you do not cry unto the Lord, let your hearts be full, drawn out in prayer unto him continually for your welfare, and also for the welfare of those who are around you.” (Al. 34:17-18, 20-21, 23, 26-27.)

You would think if one followed that practice, he would be a pretty good man, wouldn't you; but Amulek didn't think that would be enough.

“And now behold, my beloved brethren, . . . do not suppose that this is all; for after ye have done all these things, if ye turn away the needy, and the naked, and visit not the sick and afflicted, and impart of your substance, if ye have, to those who stand in need—I say unto you, if ye do not any of these things, behold, your prayer is vain, and availeth you nothing, and ye are as hypocrites who do deny the faith." (Al. 34:28.)

Modern teachings on charity

These ancient scriptures are impressive and edifying, but it is the modern scripture by which we are bound and will be judged. It is therefore imperative that we know what these modern scriptures teach.

Introducing this subject in January 1831, less than a year after the Church was organized, the Lord said:

"... let every man esteem his brother as himself, and practise virtue and holiness before me.

"And again I say unto you, let every man esteem his brother as himself.

"For what man among you having twelve sons, and is no respecter of them, and they serve him obediently, and he saith unto the one: Be thou clothed in robes and sit thou here; and to the other: Be thou clothed in rags and sit thou there—and looketh upon his sons and saith I am just?

"Behold, this I have given unto you as a parable, and it is even as I am. I say unto you, be one; and if ye are not one ye are not mine." (D&C 38:24-27.)

To make it plain that he was speaking of temporal needs, the Lord continued, in the same revelation:

"And now, I give unto the church in these parts a commandment, that certain men among them shall be appointed, . . .

"And they shall look to the poor and the needy, and administer to their relief that they shall not suffer. . . ." (D&C 38:34-35.)

The law of the Church

A few weeks later, the Lord, in that great revelation recorded in the 42nd section of the Doctrine and Covenants, which he himself refers to as the law of the Church, said:

"If thou lovest me . . . thou wilt remember the poor, and consecrate of thy properties for their support. . . .

"And inasmuch as ye impart of your substance unto the poor, ye will do it unto me. . . ." (D&C 42:29-31.)

The importance of caring for the poor and the needy is dramatically emphasized in the revelation received by the Prophet in Kirtland, June 7, 1831, in which the Lord paired off the brethren he was sending to Missouri. These brethren, all but destitute, were to make their way as best they could across four states. The Prophet himself walked almost the whole distance from St. Louis to Independence, a distance of about 300 miles. Nevertheless, and not withstanding the fact that they were facing these hardships, the Lord thus concluded his instructions to them:

"And remember in all things the poor and the needy, the sick and the afflicted, for he that doeth not these things, the same is not my disciple." (D&C 52:40.)

Since these brethren, in their extremity, could not qualify as his disciples without remembering "the poor and the needy, the sick and the afflicted," what will be our plight, brethren, if in our affluence we fail to remember them?

The Lord's plan

In this modern world plagued with counterfeits for the Lord's plan, we must not be misled into supposing that we can discharge our obligations to the poor and the needy by shifting the responsibility to some governmental or other public agency. Only by voluntarily giving out of an abundant love for our neighbors can we develop that charity characterized by Mormon as "the pure love of Christ." (Moro. 7:47.) This we must develop if we would obtain eternal life.

To implement his instructions to care for the poor and the needy, the Lord has in all dispensations given specific programs. To ancient Israel, he gave this very simple procedure:

"... when ye reap the harvest of your land, thou shalt not wholly reap the corners of thy field, neither shalt thou gather the gleanings of thy harvest.

"And thou shalt not glean thy vineyard, neither shalt thou gather every grape of thy vineyard; thou shalt leave them for the poor and stranger. . . ." (Lev. 19:9-10.)

Two basic principles

Simple as was this program, it was nevertheless founded upon the two basic principles of action operative in all inspired welfare programs, namely: (1) those who have are to give, and (2) those who receive are to work.

Ruth was gathering in the fields of Boaz pursuant to this welfare program. Of course she had a little advantage because of Boaz's feeling toward her, but that was the program that was in force in those days.

The obligation of the receiver to labor, to the extent of his ability, to sustain himself and dependents, is just as great, in God's economy, as is the obligation to contribute to the care of the needy. When the Lord expelled Adam from Eden, he said: "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground. . . ." (Gen. 3:19.)

This divine command is still in force. In the revealed "law of the church," the Lord said in this dispensation: "Thou shalt not be idle; for he that is idle shall not eat the bread nor wear the garments of the laborer." (D&C 42:42.) Later he added: "... the idler shall not have place in the church, except he repent and mend his ways." (D&C 75:29.)

As positive, however, as is this commandment against idleness, a disregard of it by the receiver does not justify Church members in failing to impart of their substance "according to the law of [the] gospel, unto the poor and the needy." (D&C 104:18.)

On this point, King Benjamin said: "Perhaps thou shalt say: The man has brought upon himself his misery; therefore I will stay my hand, and will not give unto him of my food, nor impart unto him of my substance that he may not suffer, for his punishments are just—

"But I say unto you, O man, who-soever doeth this the same hath great cause to repent; and except he repenteth of that which he hath done he perisheth forever, and hath no interest in the kingdom of God." (Mosiah 4:17-18.)

The operation of these two principles, philanthropy by the giver and industry by the receiver, was so perfected in the days of Enoch that "the Lord called his people ZION, because they were of one heart and one mind, and dwelt in righteousness; and there was no poor among them." (Moses 7:18.)

Law of tithing

As part of the restoration of the gospel in this last dispensation, the Lord originally initiated the United Order observed by the people of Enoch. When its practice was terminated because the people of the Church couldn't discipline themselves to obey it, the law of tithing was given. With tithing, fast offerings, Relief Society contributions, and, for a while, contributions to the emigration fund, the Church provided for its poor and needy for a hundred years.

Welfare program

In the middle of the 1930s, to meet the needs of our times, the Lord revealed through the leaders of his church our present Church welfare program.

Through this program, there are made available for the poor and the needy, in addition to tithing and fast offering funds, vast quantities of many varieties of food, clothing, fuel, and other necessities of life. The program also supplies employment opportunities for all who can and will work.

Thus, through the welfare program, the Lord has given us specific instructions as to how we must provide for the poor in this our day, and he has left no doubt about the dire consequences if we fail to do so. This is what he said in one of the revelations:

"I, the Lord," said he, "stretched out the heavens, and built the earth, my very handiwork; and all things therein are mine.

"And it is my purpose to provide for my saints, for all things are mine.

"But it must needs be done in mine own way; and behold this is the way that I, the Lord, have decreed to provide for my saints, that the poor shall be exalted, in that the rich are made low.

"For the earth is full, and there is enough and to spare; yea, I prepared all things, and have given unto the children of men to be agents unto themselves." (D&C 104:14-17.)

Our responsibility

This puts the responsibility strictly upon us. The Lord has provided all we have. He has told us how to contribute to the care of his people, and he has given us our agency. We can do with it as we please, but he warns:

"Therefore, if any man shall take of the abundance which I have made, and impart not his portion, according to the law of my gospel, unto the poor and the needy, he shall, with the wicked, lift up his eyes in hell, being in torment." (D&C 104:18.)

As I understand it, "the law of [the] gospel" by which we may today determine the portion of our "abundance" which we should impart "unto the poor and the needy" requires us to, first, pay an honest tithing; second, donate liberally to the fast offering funds; and third, make welfare contributions in labor and money.

Personally, I sincerely want to understand this law and comply with it, because I do not want to "with the wicked, lift up [my] eyes in hell, being in torment."

In the light of these scriptural teachings, it seems to me, brethren, that we should be thankful for our knowledge of the law and that we should faithfully obey it. God help us to do so, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

We will now ask the audience to stand, and to join in singing "Do What Is Right, Let the Consequence Follow."

The congregation sang the hymn, "Do What Is Right."

President Lee

President N. Eldon Tanner of the First Presidency will now address us.

President N. Eldon Tanner

First Counselor in the First Presidency

I have always been impressed with the song, "Do What Is Right," which was sung by the men's chorus of the Tabernacle Choir. Particularly do I find special meaning in the words:

"Angels above us are silent notes taking Of ev'ry action; do what is right!"

—Hymns, no. 27

Oath and covenant of priesthood

It is always a privilege and blessing for me to stand before and address the priesthood. The priesthood is the power of God delegated to us to act in his name, in the office which we hold. And when he gives us that priesthood, we make a covenant with him, and he makes a covenant with us that I should like to read this evening:

"For whoso is faithful unto the obtaining these two priesthoods [“whoso is faithful unto the obtaining” means that a deacon must begin to do those things which will make it possible for him to hold these two priesthoods] . . . and the magnifying their calling, are sanctified by the Spirit unto the renewing of their bodies.

"They become the sons of Moses and of Aaron and the seed of Abraham, and the church and kingdom, and the elect of God.

"And also all they who receive this priesthood receive me, saith the Lord;

"For he that receiveth my servants receiveth me;

"And he that receiveth me receiveth my Father;

"And he that receiveth my Father receiveth my Father's kingdom; therefore all that my Father hath shall be given unto him.

"And this is according to the oath and covenant which belongeth to the priesthood.

"Therefore, all those who receive the priesthood, receive this oath and covenant of my Father, which he cannot break, neither can it be moved.

"But whoso breaketh this covenant after he hath received it, and altogether turneth therefrom, shall not have forgiveness of sins. . . ." (D&C 84:33-41.)

It is up to us whether that covenant is kept. We make that covenant. The Lord cannot break it, and we have the responsibility of keeping it.

Order of the priesthood

This evening I should like to say a few words about the order of the priesthood, or some of the things that are placed under the priesthood. I thought this might be of interest to the Aaronic Priesthood as well as others. First, I wish to explain how, following the death of the President of the Church, a new president is chosen, ordained, and set apart and the presidency is reorganized, following which they are sustained in a solemn assembly by the quorums of the priesthood and by those members of the Church present at general conference, as they were yesterday, and then by members throughout the Church in their stake conferences. Also, I shall refer to some of the authority, duties, and responsibilities of the President.

First Presidency disorganized

As you all know, three months ago our beloved President Joseph Fielding Smith was called home to his great reward and to other duties. He was certainly a true servant of the Lord and a prophet of God, who from his childhood lived to the best of his ability the teachings of the gospel and kept his covenants. He was a man without guile, and his passing was as near a translation as possible.

The Thursday before his death he gave a powerful address to the seminar of the Regional Representatives and Mission Representatives assembled in Salt Lake City. Sunday, July 2, the day of his death, he attended his Sunday meetings in his ward and participated as usual. He returned home, and after his evening meal he sat in his favorite chair talking to his daughter and quietly passed from mortal life.

On the death of the President of the Church the First Presidency is disorganized, and the counselors take their places in the Quorum of the Twelve, which, according to revelation, assumes the responsibility of the presidency of the Church, because they hold the Holy Melchizedek Priesthood and are the next quorum in authority according to the Doctrine and Covenants. (See D&C 107:23-24.) The Church, therefore, is never left without a presidency. The President of the Quorum naturally is the chief or executive officer, and the Twelve continue as the presidency of the Church until such time as the First Presidency is reorganized.

Authority vested in Twelve

While Joseph the Prophet was President of the Church, the Lord through him bestowed all of the keys of the priesthood upon the Quorum of the Twelve with equal authority with the First Presidency. Therefore, with that authority, following the death of Joseph the Prophet, the Twelve, with Brigham Young as President of the Quorum, presided over the Church for a number of years. Finally they were moved upon by the Holy Spirit to reorganize the First Presidency of the Church with Brigham Young as President and with Heber C. Kimball and Willard Richards as his counselors. In reality this organization might have been effected within twenty-four hours after the death of the Prophet Joseph Smith.

Upon the death of President Young, President John Taylor followed in similar measure the example of his predecessor, and it was some time before the presidency of the Church was reorganized with John Taylor as President, George Q. Cannon and Joseph F. Smith as counselors.

After the death of President Taylor, Wilford Woodruff, President of the Twelve, hesitated and allowed a little time to pass before the presidency was reorganized. When at last he became convinced it was his duty and was necessary in order to carry out the purposes of the Lord, he, with the Twelve, reorganized the presidency of the Church.

Reorganization of First Presidency

At that time he gave a solemn injunction to his fellow servants in relation to this. He desired it understood that in all future times if the President of the Church should die and thereby the First Presidency become disorganized, it would be the duty of the proper authorities of the Church to proceed at once, without any unnecessary delay, to reorganize the First Presidency, which procedure has since been followed.

Therefore, on July 7, 1972, shortly after the passing of President Joseph Fielding Smith, President Lee as President of the Twelve called a meeting of all the Twelve to reorganize the First Presidency of the Church. At this meeting we called upon the Lord in solemn prayer. Then each member of the Twelve, starting with the junior member, was called by the President of the Quorum to express his feelings regarding the matter at hand.

When it became President Kimball's turn to speak, he, at the conclusion of his remarks, nominated President Harold B. Lee as President of the Church, which motion was duly seconded and put to the Twelve, and carried unanimously. President Lee responded to the nomination and the action of the Twelve, accepting the high and holy calling. He then nominated, for the consideration of the Twelve, N. Eldon Tanner as first counselor and Marion G. Romney as second counselor. This was unanimously approved.

Saturday, October 7

Second Day

President Spencer W. Kimball, as senior member of the Twelve, was nominated and approved as President of the Quorum of the Twelve. Following this, President Kimball joined with other members of the Twelve as they placed their hands upon the head of President Lee and ordained him and set him apart as President of the Church and as Prophet, Seer, and Revelator, and Trustee-in-Trust for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. President Lee then set apart President Tanner and President Romney as his counselors and President Kimball as President of the Twelve.

Appreciation for association

This being an election year in the United States, these activities point up quite clearly the contrast of choosing the president of the United States and other officials in government, and the way the Lord has directed his church leaders to be chosen and placed in office. I am most thankful unto the Lord for the signal privilege I have had of associating so closely with and laboring under and sustaining three of the prophets of God and to see how the Lord works through them. I humbly pray continually that I may serve in an acceptable manner unto the Lord and to them.

Here I wish to express my deep appreciation and love for President Marion G. Romney. I have learned to love him and President Lee as I have never loved men before. And while I am speaking of love, I should like to express my love for the members of the Council of the Twelve and the other General Authorities, and for all members of the Church. In fact, I have a feeling of love for mankind, and I just hope and pray always that the Lord will make it possible for me to show that love.

Preparation of President Lee

President Lee, I am sure, was chosen and foreordained to be a prophet of God and President of the Church. The Lord has certainly prepared him for this high and holy calling by giving him responsibilities in stakes, as director of the welfare program, and for more than thirty years as a member of the Council of the Twelve. President Lee has proven his faithfulness, dedication, and ability, as referred to by Brother Hinckley here tonight and by many of the speakers during our conference thus far. He has been chosen to preside over the Church in one of the most critical periods of time in the history of the world. He is a prophet of God and speaks the will of the Lord. President Joseph Fielding Smith made this astute observation at the solemn assembly where he was sustained as President of the Church:

"I desire to say that no man of himself can lead this church. It is the Church of the Lord Jesus Christ; he is at the head. The Church bears his name, has his priesthood, administers his gospel, preaches his doctrine, and does his work.

"He chooses men and calls them to be instruments in his hands to accomplish his purposes, and he guides and directs them in their labors. But men are only instruments in the Lord's hands, and the honor and glory for all that his servants accomplish is and should be ascribed unto him forever.

"If this were the work of man, it would fail, but it is the work of the Lord, and he does not fail. And we have the assurance that if we keep the commandments and are valiant in the testimony of Jesus and are true to every trust, the Lord will guide and direct us and his church in the paths of righteousness, for the accomplishment of all his purposes." (Improvement Era, June 1970, p. 26.)

He then said of his first counselor, who is now the President of the Church: "President Harold B. Lee is a pillar of truth and righteousness, a true seer who has great spiritual strength and insight and wisdom, and whose knowledge and understanding of the Church and its needs is not surpassed." (Ibid., p. 27.)

Advice to Frederick G. Williams

As the Lord said to Frederick G. Williams, second counselor to the Prophet Joseph Smith: "... Listen to the voice of him who speaketh, to the word of the Lord your God, ...

"Unto whom I have given the keys of the kingdom, which belong always unto the Presidency of the High Priesthood:

"Therefore, verily I acknowledge him and will bless him, and also thee, inasmuch as thou art faithful in counsel, in the office which I have appointed unto you, in prayer always, vocally and in thy heart, in public and in private, also in thy ministry in proclaiming the gospel in the land of the living, and among thy brethren." (D&C 81:1-3.)

This applies to every holder of the priesthood.

Giving heed to prophet's words

The words of the Lord to the Prophet Joseph in his call to preside over the Church apply equally to our beloved President Harold B. Lee: "... thou shalt be called a seer, a translator, a prophet, an apostle of Jesus Christ. ...

"Wherefore, meaning the church, thou shalt give heed unto all his words and commandments which he shall give unto you as he receiveth them, walking in all holiness before me;

"For his word ye shall receive, as if from mine own mouth, in all patience and faith.

"For by doing these things the gates of hell shall not prevail against you; yea, and the Lord God will disperse the powers of darkness from before you, and cause the heavens to shake for your good, and his name's glory.

"For thus saith the Lord God: Him have I inspired to move the cause of Zion in mighty power for good, and his diligence I know, and his prayers I have heard.

"... behold, I will bless all those who labor in my vineyard with a mighty blessing, and they shall believe on his words, which are given him through me by the Comforter, which manifesteth that Jesus was crucified by sinful men for the sins of the world, yea, for the remission of sins unto the contrite heart." (D&C 21:1, 4-7, 9.)

You deacons, you teachers, you priests, you elders and seventies and high priests, what a tremendous privilege it is to hold the priesthood of God and have a prophet of God directing us today!

As Joseph F. Smith clearly stated regarding the President of the Church: "Every officer in the Church is under his direction, and he is directed of God." (Gospel Doctrine, p. 174.)

Duties of the President

Let us always remember this. The President of the Church holds the keys of the Melchizedek Priesthood, and there is no business or office in the Church that the President of the Church may not fill. In fact, every office in the Church belongs to the President.

The Lord, in speaking to the Prophet Joseph Smith, said: "And again, the duty of the President of the office of the High Priesthood is to preside over the whole church, and to be like unto Moses—

"Behold, here is wisdom; yea, to be a seer, a revelator, a translator, and a prophet, having all the gifts of God which he bestows upon the head of the church." (D&C 107:91-92.)

It is most important that we, as members of the Church, accept without reservation President Lee as a prophet of God and as our leader. I am glad I can say that from the bottom of my heart with every bit of feeling I have. Let us listen to the prophet's voice and follow him, not blindly but by faith. As we do this, we will never go astray. No holder of the priesthood can take it lightly. It is important that every member magnify his priesthood and realize that it is a great privilege and blessing to be able to hold the priesthood of God.

Living worthily

We must be true to the faith and dependable in every way. We must be an example to the world. I want to say to you young men, remember that the priesthood which you hold is the power of God delegated to you to act in his name in the office which you hold. The Lord expects each and every one of us to live worthy of this priesthood and be an example to the world. As President Lee said when he was first interviewed after being appointed President of this Church, and which has been referred to today, his message to the world, and surely to every one of us, is "Keep the commandments." As we do this, we will be blessed.

We never know what position or blessing the Lord has in store for us. It is our responsibility to prepare for any call that may come to us. Joseph who was sold into Egypt had no idea that he was the one chosen to save his people. Through his faithfulness and by overcoming temptation he was blessed and strengthened by the Lord and recognized for his faithfulness.

Moses in his youth did not know he was to lead the children of Israel out of Egypt, and Mormon did not know in advance of the great and important work he and his son Moroni would perform in preparing and preserving the sacred records concerning the gospel of Jesus Christ.

In each case it was because they proved their faithfulness from boyhood, and in every position they held they proved themselves worthy and were accepted by the Lord.

Faith of youth of Zion

I was thrilled as that group sang this afternoon: "Shall the youth of Zion falter," and then clearly sang, "No!" There is a difference in singing "No" and meaning "no," and in living it, and I should like to urge every young man under the sound of my voice this night to prove to the Lord that the youth of Zion have not and will not falter, but they will be an example to the world, an influence for good. And remember, if you want to be great men, you have to be great boys and youth. Prepare yourselves as our President did while he was in his youth.

Joseph Smith at age 14 had no idea that he would be President of the Church and a prophet of God. All he wanted was to know which church was true. He was foreordained, as each and every one of us is for some purpose, and because he proved faithful and lived worthy he was called to this high position. Let us live so as to be worthy and accomplish those things for which we have been foreordained.

Acting in all diligence

President Lee as a young man had no idea that he would ever be President of the Church, but his faithful performance in every office he held proved him worthy. It is just as important that the president of the deacons quorum or teachers quorum perform his duties and walk uprightly before the Lord as it is for the president of the elders, seventies, or high priests if he wants to be an instrument in the hands of the Lord. The Lord expects every man to do his duty and to be true to the covenants he makes. As is recorded in the Doctrine and Covenants, the Lord said: "Wherefore, now let every man learn his duty, and to act in the office in which he is appointed, in all diligence.

"He that is slothful shall not be counted worthy to stand, and he that learns not his duty and shows himself not approved shall not be counted worthy to stand. Even so. Amen." (D&C 107:99-100.)

"Why should we think to earn a great reward, If we now shun the fight?" It is important that every holder of the priesthood, old and young, discipline himself, overcome evil, keep himself morally clean, keep the Word of Wisdom, keep the Sabbath day holy, be honest in his dealings, true to the trust of others, and live so as to be loved and respected by all who know him, that others seeing his good works may be led to glorify our Father in heaven.

We must see that the work of the Lord goes forward and help his church and kingdom here upon the earth to grow and expand until it fills the whole earth. This is our responsibility as holders of the priesthood.

Blessings to the faithful

Man is that he might have joy. Have a good time. Enjoy life by doing those things which are right. There is no joy or satisfaction in sin, but there are great blessings promised to the faithful. No young man under the sound of my voice knows for what he was foreordained or what is in store for him, but the Lord has promised that "all saints who remember to keep and do these sayings, walking in obedience to the commandments [he was not referring to the Word of Wisdom only, but walking in obedience to all the commandments] shall receive health in their navel and marrow to their bones;

"And shall find wisdom and great treasures of knowledge, even hidden treasures;

"And shall run and not be weary, and shall walk and not faint.

"And I, the Lord, give unto them a promise, that the destroying angel shall pass by them, as the children of Israel, and not slay them." (D&C 89:18-21.)

May we all express our appreciation every night and every morning to the Lord for the privilege we have of being members of his church and of holding his priesthood, and pray for courage and strength to live as we should and thereby prepare ourselves and help others to prepare themselves for eternal life, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

I have some thoughts—notes that I thought I might be prompted to use tonight. So, if the Lord is willing, I should like to talk to you now for a few minutes in this great conference.

Call from First Presidency

I had a lesson years ago as to the greatness of priesthood. It had to do with the call of the First Presidency for me to come to their office on a day that I shall never forget—April 20, 1935. I was city commissioner in Salt Lake City. I was a stake president.

We had been wrestling with this question of welfare. There were few government work programs; the finances of the Church were low; we were told that there wasn't much that could be done so far as the finances of the Church were concerned. And here we were with 4,800 of our 7,300 people who were wholly or partially dependent. We had only one place to go, and that was to apply the Lord's program as set forth in the revelations.

It was from our humble efforts that the First Presidency, knowing that we had had some experience, called me one morning asking if I would come to their office. It was Saturday morning; there were no calls on their calendar, and for hours in that forenoon they talked with me and told me that they wanted me to resign from the city commission, and they would release me from being stake president; that they wished me now to head up the welfare movement to turn the tide from government relief, direct relief, and help to put the Church in a position where it could take care of its own needy.

Power of priesthood

After that morning I rode in my car (spring was just breaking) up to the head of City Creek Canyon into what was then called Rotary Park; and there, all by myself, I offered one of the most humble prayers of my life.

There I was, just a young man in my thirties. My experience had been limited. I was born in a little country town in Idaho. I had hardly been outside the boundaries of the states of Utah and Idaho. And now to put me in a position where I was to reach out to the entire membership of the Church, worldwide, was one of the most staggering contemplations that I could imagine. How could I do it with my limited understanding?

As I kneeled down, my petition was, "What kind of an organization should be set up in order to accomplish what the Presidency has assigned?" And there came to me on that glorious morning one of the most heavenly realizations of the power of the priesthood of God. It was as though something were saying to me, "There is no new organization necessary to take care of the needs of this people. All that is necessary is to put the priesthood of God to work. There is nothing else that you need as a substitute."

With that understanding, then, and with the simple application of the power of the priesthood, the welfare program has gone forward now by leaps and bounds, overcoming obstacles that seemed impossible, until now it stands as a monument to the power of the priesthood, the like of which I could only glimpse in those days to which I have made reference.

Now, with that understanding of priesthood power, let me speak of a few other matters that have come to my mind tonight.

Paul's warnings

There are two scriptures I would have you think of as applicable today as they were in the period following the advent of the Savior in the meridian of time in the post-apostolic period. In the Acts of the Apostles, the apostle Paul gave these charges to the elders of Israel. He said:

"Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God. . . .

"For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock.

"Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them." (Acts 20:28-30.)

And then the apostle Paul wrote to the Galatians:

"I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel:

"Which is not another; but there be some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ.

"But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.

"As we said before, so say I now again. If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed.

"For . . . I certify you, brethren, that the gospel which was preached of me is not after man.

"For I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ." (Gal. 1:6-12.)

Warnings applicable today

Today those warnings are just as applicable as they were in that day in which they were given.

There are some as wolves among us. By that, I mean some who profess membership in this church who are not sparing the flock. And among our own membership, men are arising speaking perverse things. Now perverse means diverting from the right or correct, and being obstinate in the wrong, willfully, in order to draw the weak and unwary members of the Church away after them.

And as the apostle Paul said, it is likewise a marvel to us today, as it was in that day, that some members are so soon removed from those who taught them the gospel and are removed from the true teachings of the gospel of Christ to be led astray into something that corrupts the true doctrines of the gospel of Christ into vicious and wicked practices and performances.

These, as have been evidenced by shocking events among some of these splinter groups, have been accursed, as the prophets warned; and they are obviously in the power of that evil one who feeds the gullible with all the sophistries which Satan has employed since the beginning of time.

Rumor and gossip

I should like now to make reference to some of these. The first is the spread of rumor and gossip (we have mentioned this before) which, when once started, gains momentum as each telling becomes more fanciful, until unwittingly those who wish to dwell on the sensational repeat them in firesides, in classes, in Relief Society gatherings and priesthood quorum classes without first verifying the source before becoming a party to causing speculation and discussions that steal time away from the things that would be profitable and beneficial and enlightening to their souls.

Just an example: I understand that there is a widely circulated story that I was alleged to have had a patriarchal blessing (I don't know whether any of you have heard about that) that had to do with the coming of the Savior and the ten tribes of Israel.

In the first place, a patriarchal blessing is a sacred document to the person who has received it and is never given for publication and, as all patriarchal blessings, should be kept as a private possession to the one who has received it.

And second, with reference to that which I was alleged to have had, suffice it to say that such a quotation is incorrect and without foundation in fact.

There is one thing that shocks me: I have learned, in some instances, that those who have heard of these rumors are disappointed when I tell them they are not so. They seem to have enjoyed believing a rumor without substance of fact. I would earnestly urge that no such idle gossip be spread abroad without making certain as to whether or not it is true.

Message of First Presidency

The First Presidency in August 1913 issued a warning to the members of the Church which could bear repeating today. Let me read you a few things that were said then:

"To the officers and members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints:

"From the days of Hiram Page

(Doc. and Cov., Sec. 28), at different periods there have been manifestations from delusive spirits to members of the Church. Sometimes these have come to men and women who because of transgression became easy prey to the Arch-Deceiver. At other times people who pride themselves on their strict observance of the rules and ordinances and ceremonies of the Church are led astray by false spirits, who exercise an influence so imitative of that which proceeds from a Divine source that even these persons, who think they are 'the very elect,' find it difficult to discern the essential difference. Satan himself has transformed himself to be apparently 'an angel of light.'

"When visions, dreams, tongues, prophecy, impressions or an extraordinary gift or inspiration convey something out of harmony with the accepted revelations of the Church or contrary to the decisions of its constituted authorities, Latter-day Saints may know that it is not of God, no matter how plausible it may appear. Also, they should understand that directions for the guidance of the Church will come, by revelation, through the head. All faithful members are entitled to the inspiration of the Holy Spirit for themselves, their families, and for those over whom they are appointed and ordained to preside. But anything at discord with that which comes from God through the head of the Church is not to be received as authoritative or reliable. In secular as well as spiritual affairs, Saints may receive Divine guidance and revelation affecting themselves, but this does not convey authority to direct others, and is not to be accepted when contrary to Church covenants, doctrine or discipline, or to known facts, demonstrated truths, or good common sense. No person has the right to induce his fellow members of the Church to engage in speculations or take stock in ventures of any kind on the specious claim of Divine revelation or vision or dream, especially when it is in opposition to the voice of recognized authority, local or general. The Lord's Church 'is a house of order.' It is not governed by individual gifts or manifestations, but by the order and power of the Holy Priesthood as sustained by the voice and vote of the Church in its appointed conferences.

"The history of the Church records many pretended revelations claimed by impostors or zealots who believed in the manifestations they sought to lead other persons to accept, and in every instance, disappointment, sorrow and disaster have resulted therefrom. Financial loss and sometimes utter ruin have followed."

Duty of priesthood

This is something that is recurring time and time again, and we call upon you holders of the priesthood to stamp out any such and to set to flight all such things as are creeping in, people rising up here and there who have had some "marvelous" kind of a manifestation, as they claim, and who try to lead the people in a course that has not been dictated from the heads of the Church.

As I say, it never ceases to amaze me how gullible some of our Church members are in broadcasting these sensational stories, or dreams, or visions, some alleged to have been given to Church leaders, past or present, supposedly from some person's private diary, without first verifying the report with proper Church authorities.

If our people want to be safely guided during these troublous times of deceit and false rumors, they must follow their leaders and seek for the guidance of the Spirit of the Lord in order to avoid falling prey to clever manipulators who, with cunning sophistry, seek to draw attention and gain a following to serve their own notions and sometimes sinister motives.

The Lord's test

The Lord has very plainly set forth a test by which anyone may challenge any and all who may come claiming, clandestinely, to have received some kind of priesthood authority. Now this is what the Lord said in the 42nd section of the Doctrine and Covenants, verse 11:

"Again, I say unto you, that it shall not be given to any one to go forth to preach my gospel, or to build up my church, except he be ordained by someone who has authority, and it is known to the church that he has authority and has been regularly ordained by the heads of the church."

Now, if one comes claiming that he has authority, ask him, "Where do you get your authority? Have you been ordained by someone who has authority, who is known to the Church, that you have authority and have been regularly ordained by the heads of the Church?" If the answer is no, you may know that he is an imposter. This is the test that our people should always apply when some imposter comes trying to lead them astray.

Constituted authority

Now there is another danger that confronts us. There seem to be those among us who are as wolves among the flock, trying to lead some who are weak and unwary among Church members, according to reports that have reached us, who are taking the law into their own hands by refusing to pay their income tax because they have some political disagreement with constituted authorities.

Others have tried to marshal civilians, without police authority, and to arm themselves to battle against possible dangers, little realizing that in so doing they themselves become the ones who, by obstructing the constituted authority, would become subject to arrest and imprisonment.

We have even heard of someone claiming Church membership in protest against pornographic pictures being displayed in theaters, having planted bombs, and therefore becoming subject to punishment by the law and subsequently standing judgment before the disciplinary bodies of the Church.

While we must stand solidly behind those who are trying to stamp out the filthy and provocative display of so-called pornographic materials, we have but one answer to all those who thus take such radical measures, and this is the word of the Lord:

"Let no man think he is ruler; but let God rule him that judgeth, according to the counsel of his own will, or, in other words, him that counseleth or sitteth upon the judgment seat.

"Let no man break the laws of the land . . . until he reigns whose right it is to reign, and subdues all enemies under his feet." (D&C 58:20-22.)

Sin of adultery

I want to warn this great body of priesthood against that great sin of Sodom and Gomorrah, which has been labeled as a sin second only in seriousness to the sin of murder. I speak of the sin of adultery, which, as you know, was the name used by the Master as he referred to unlicensed sexual sins of fornication as well as adultery; and besides this, the equally grievous sin of homosexuality, which seems to be gaining momentum with social acceptance in the Babylon of the world, of which Church members must not be a part.

While we are in the world, we must not be of the world. Any attempts being made by the schools or places of entertainment to flaunt sexual perversions, which can do nothing but excite to experimentation, must find among the priesthood in this church a vigorous and unrelenting defense through every lawful means that can be employed.

The common judges of Israel, our bishops and stake presidents, must not stand by and fail to apply disciplinary measures within their jurisdiction, as set forth plainly in the laws of the Lord and procedures as set forth in plain and simple instructions that cannot be misunderstood. Never must we allow supposed mercy to the unrepentant sinner to rob the justice upon which true repentance from sinful practices is predicated.

Loose writings

One more matter: There are among us many loose writings predicting the calamities which are about to overtake us. Some of these have been publicized as though they were necessary to wake up the world to the horrors about to overtake us. Many of these are from sources upon which there cannot be unquestioned reliance.

Are you priesthood bearers aware of the fact that we need no such publications to be forewarned, if we were only conversant with what the scriptures have already spoken to us in plainness?

Sure word of prophecy

Let me give you the sure word of prophecy on which you should rely for your guide instead of these strange sources which may have great political implications.

Read the 24th chapter of Matthew—particularly that inspired version as contained in the Pearl of Great Price. (Joseph Smith 1.)

Then read the 45th section of the Doctrine and Covenants where the Lord, not man, has documented the signs of the times.

Now turn to section 101 and section 133 of the Doctrine and Covenants and hear the step-by-step recounting of events leading up to the coming of the Savior.

Finally, turn to the promises the Lord makes to those who keep the commandments when these judgments descend upon the wicked, as set forth in the Doctrine and Covenants, section 38.

Brethren, these are some of the writings with which you should concern yourselves, rather than commentaries that may come from those whose information may not be the most reliable and whose motives may be subject to question. And may I say, parenthetically, most of such writers are not handicapped by having any authentic information on their writings.

As the Lord has admonished priesthood bearers from the beginning: "Wherefore, gird up your loins and be prepared. Behold, the kingdom is yours, and the enemy shall not overcome.

"Verily I say unto you, ye are clean, but not all; and there is none else with whom I am well pleased;

"For all flesh is corrupted before me; and the powers of darkness prevail upon the earth, among the children of men, in the presence of all the hosts of heaven—

"Which causeth silence to reign, and all eternity is pained. . . ." (D&C 38:9-12.)

Following leadership

Now brethren, I have spoken plainly to you in this priesthood session. Let what has been said by all the brethren tonight, and in this conference, not fall on deaf ears. Let these admonitions be received as the Lord directed they should be received, in an early revelation, to which President Tanner has already made reference, "as if from mine own mouth, in all patience and faith." (D&C 21:5.)

Only by so doing can we be truly one as a body of priesthood, by following the leadership that the Lord has established in our day in order that we may be one. And he warns us if we are not one, we are not his, as he has declared in the Doctrine and Covenants.

Call to Presidency

There are one or two things I should like to say about myself and this present responsibility. Never had I thought of myself as one day becoming the President of the Church. As a boy in my rural community, I used to hear the brethren talk about a "pillar" in the Church. I wondered what in the world it meant. It must be something great to be a pillar in the Church. Well, now, maybe I am beginning to realize something about what that means, but I know this: those who try to guess ahead of time as to who is going to be the next President of the Church are just gambling as they might be on a horse race, because only the Lord has the time table.

I remember one time Elder Charles A. Callis in a Council of the Twelve meeting. There was a rather spirited discussion on some questions. One of the Brethren said, "You had better listen to Brother George Albert Smith, the President of the Twelve, because he may be the next President of the Church."

Brother Callis smiled and said, "Oh, I wouldn't be too sure. Three times in my life I have chosen the next President of the Church, and all three of them died before they came to the presidency." The Lord only knows, and for us to speculate or to presume is not pleasing in the sight of the Lord.

Brigham Young's counsel

I have one other thought I should like to express. Brigham Young was a great defender of the Prophet Joseph Smith. There were Judases in the ranks in that day, just as there were in the Savior's day, and just as we have today, some who are members of the Church who are undercutting us, who are betraying their trusts. We are shocked when we see the places from which some of these things come.

Brigham Young was invited by some of these men who were trying to depose the Prophet Joseph from his position as President of the Church; but they made a mistake by inviting President Brigham Young into their circle. And after he had listened to what their motives were, he said something to this effect: "I want to say something to you men. You cannot destroy the appointment of a prophet of God, but you can cut the thread that binds you to the prophet of God, and sink yourselves to hell."

There was a pugilist there by the name of Jacob Bump, so the story goes, who doubled up his fists and started toward President Young, who replied to this man's threats: "I would like to lay hands on a man like you in defense of the Prophet Joseph Smith."

Remember that, brethren. You cannot destroy the appointments of the prophets of God. The Lord knows whom he wants to preside in his church, and sometimes it takes a lot of practicing, guiding, testing, before he may know whether or not one of us is prepared for the present assignment.

Each has his place

Now I think it is folly for one to compare one President of the Church with another. No one takes the place of another President of the Church. Each President has his own place. I had a lesson taught me some years ago when, in company with one of the brethren, I had reorganized the presidency of the Ensign Stake. We had named the bishop of one of the wards as stake president. It was near the end of the year, and he elected to remain as bishop, along with his first counselor, who was a bishop, until they had closed the books at the end of the year.

Six weeks after they were sustained, the stake president suddenly passed away.

Then I began to receive a barrage of letters. Where in the world was the inspiration for you to call a man whom the Lord was going to let die in six weeks? They invited me to talk at his services, and some seemed to be expecting me to try to explain why I had appointed a man that the Lord was going to take home in six weeks.

President Joseph Fielding Smith sat on the stand and heard my attempt to satisfy these people, and he said to me, "Don't you let that bother you. If you have called a man to a position in this church and he dies the next day, that position would have a bearing on what he will be called to do when he leaves this earth."

I believe that. I believe that every President of this church, every apostle of this church, every bishop, every stake president, every presiding position will have a bearing on what one is called to do when he leaves this earth.

And so, when you think of one President taking the place of another, he doesn't. That President maintains his own place. We shouldn't try to compare one as being greater than this one or greater than the other, because each one is, in the eyes of the Lord, in his own time the one most needed for that particular time. You may be sure of that.

"Iffy" blessings

Now, just one final thought. I sat in a class in Sunday School in my own ward one day, and the teacher was the son of a patriarch. He said he used to take down the blessings of his father, and he noticed that his father gave what he called "iffy" blessings. He would give a blessing, but it was predicated on "if you will not do this" or "if you will cease doing that." And he said, "I watched these men to whom my father gave the 'iffy' blessings, and I saw that many of them did not heed the warning that my father as a patriarch had given, and the blessings were never received because they did not comply."

You know, this started me thinking. I went back into the Doctrine and Covenants and began to read the "iffy" revelations that have been given to the various brethren in the Church. If you want to have an exercise in something that will startle you, read some of the warnings that were given through the Prophet Joseph Smith to Thomas B. Marsh, Martin Harris, some of the Whitmer brothers, William E. McLellin—warnings which, had they heeded, some would not have fallen by the wayside. But because they did not heed, and they didn't clear up their lives, they fell by the wayside, and some had to be dropped from membership in the Church.

Trust in the Lord

Now, there is one thing that I think we should all be mindful of. I was with a group of missionaries in the temple one day. A question was asked by one of the sisters about the Word of Wisdom, concerning the promise made that if one would keep the Word of Wisdom he should run and not be weary and should walk and not faint. And she said, "How could that promise be realized if a person were crippled? How could he receive the blessing that he could run and not be weary, and walk and not faint, if he were crippled?"

I answered her, "Did you ever doubt the Lord? The Lord said that."

The trouble with us today, there are too many of us who put question marks instead of periods after what the Lord says. I want you to think about that. We shouldn't be concerned about why he said something, or whether or not it can be made so. Just trust the Lord. We don't try to find the answers or explanations. We shouldn't try to spend time explaining what the Lord didn't see fit to explain. We spend useless time.

If you would teach our people to put periods and not question marks after what the Lord has declared, we would say, "It is enough for me to know that is what the Lord said."

The gospel is true

Elder Gordon B. Hinckley told a story after going into Vietnam that to me was a great lesson. There was a young man, as I remember it, who was in the military service in Vietnam and who joined the Church and was now about to go back to his home country in Southeast Asia.

Brother Hinckley said to him, "What is it going to do to you when you get back home now that you have joined the Church?"

"Oh," said the youth, "I will be cast out. My family will disown me. I will have difficulty in school. I will have no military rank."

Elder Hinckley then asked, "Isn't that a pretty big price to pay?"

And this young man looked at Elder Hinckley and said, "Well, the gospel is true, isn't it?"

That was a soul-searching question for Brother Hinckley, who replied: "Yes, my boy, with all my soul, the gospel is true."

And then this young man said, "Well, what else matters then?"

Brethren of the priesthood, if the gospel of Jesus Christ is true—and it is true—what else matters? The Lord may bless us with that rock-bottom testimony that will guide us through all the perils of life if we will just continue to say to ourselves, "Because I know that the gospel is true, nothing else matters."

I bear you my solemn witness that it is true, that the Lord is in his heavens; he is closer to us than you have any idea. You ask when the Lord gave the last revelation to this church. The Lord is giving revelations day by day, and you will witness and look back on this period and see some of the mighty revelations the Lord has given in your day and time. To that I bear you my witness, and leave with you my testimony this night, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

Sessions of the General Conference will be received by millions in the United States and Canada over many television and radio stations cooperating to provide the extensive coverage of this conference.

The International Short-wave Radio Station WNYW will broadcast the Sunday morning session to Europe, South and Central America, Africa and parts of Asia.

Over eighty radio stations will broadcast conference Sunday morning in major cities of Mexico and Central America.

The CBS Radio Tabernacle Choir Broadcast will be from 9:30 to 10:00 tomorrow morning. Those desiring to attend must be in their seats before 9:15 a.m.

As thousands leave this great priesthood meeting tonight, we remind you as we always do to obey traffic rules, use caution, and be courteous in your driving.

The music for this session has been furnished by the Male Choir of the Mormon Youth Chorus, with Jay Welch and Hal Gundersen, conducting, and Roy M. Darley at the organ. To you young brethren, we say we deeply appreciate your inspiring music and the service you have rendered.

The chorus now with Hal Gundersen conducting, and Brother Darley at the organ, will close the meeting with "Beautiful Savior," after which the benediction will be pronounced by President J. Ballard Washburn, president of the Kanab Stake. The conference will then be adjourned until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

The Male Choir sang the number "Beautiful Savior."

President J. Ballard Washburn of the Kanab Stake offered the benediction.

The conference was adjourned until Sunday morning at 10 o'clock.

THIRD DAY MORNING MEETING

SIXTH SESSION

The sixth session of the conference convened in the Tabernacle on Sunday, October 8, 1972, at ten o'clock a.m.

President Harold B. Lee presided and conducted this session of the conference.

The Tabernacle Choir, under the direction of Richard P. Condie, with Alexander Schreiner at the organ, furnished the special music for this session.

Before the opening of the meeting, the Tabernacle Choir without announcement sang "Awake the Trumpets Lofty Sound."

President Harold B. Lee then made the following remarks:

President Harold B. Lee

We extend a cordial welcome to all present this morning in this historic Tabernacle. This is the 142nd Semi-Annual Conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. General and local church leaders, special guests, educational and civic leaders, and thousands of members of the Church from far and near, we welcome you to this session.

Sessions of this conference will be received by millions in the United States and Canada over hundreds of radio and television stations cooperating to provide the extensive coverage of this conference.

The Tabernacle Choir, which opened these services singing "Awake the Trumpets Lofty Sound" under the direction of Richard P. Condie, with Alexander Schreiner at the organ, will now favor us with Haydn's "Achieved Is the Glorious Work," following which Elder Lester F. Hewlett, Jr., former president of the Australia South Mission, will offer the invocation.

The Tabernacle Choir sang "Achieved Is the Glorious Work."

The invocation was offered by Elder Lester F. Hewlett, Jr., former president of the Australia South Mission.

After the invocation the choir sang "Still, Still with Thee" without announcement.

President Lee

The Tabernacle Choir has sung one of the most beautiful hymns ever written, "Still, Still with Thee."

It will now be our privilege to hear from President N. Eldon Tanner, first counselor in the First Presidency of the Church.

President N. Eldon Tanner

First Counselor in the First Presidency

It is a privilege indeed, but a heavy responsibility, to address this vast audience in this historic Tabernacle and those who are listening in; and I humbly pray that the spirit and blessings of the Lord will attend us this lovely Sabbath morning.

Advice from outer space

Conditions in the world today have caused me to ponder over an editorial which I read recently. It states:

"A German astronomer believes that 'the earth's young civilization is now approaching its first great crisis because of its newly found powers of self-destruction,' and 'man's best hope of avoiding disaster is to listen hard for radioed advice coming from far out in starry space.'

"Out there, somewhere, this scientist believes, is a wise old civilization that has survived many crises and is trying to warn the callow earth against the mistakes of its own youth.

"What an astute observation! Ye for thousands of years the Master Creator from his world has been trying to get his earth people to listen hard for advice and wisdom. Either they haven't tuned in or they have been dull of sight and hearing. There have been many messages from other worlds." (Church Information Service, September 1970.)

God's messages

Since the very beginning of time we have a record of God's messages to man, either by personal appearance, by angels, by direct revelation, by visions, by dreams, or by inspiration. The first instance is where the Lord God appeared to Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden; and after they were driven out of the garden, they called upon the name of the Lord, and though they did not see him, they heard his voice. He gave them commandments that they should worship the Lord their God and offer sacrifices unto him.

"... And Adam was obedient unto the commandments of the Lord.

"And after many days an angel of the Lord appeared unto Adam, saying: Why dost thou offer sacrifices unto the Lord? And Adam said unto him: I know not, save the Lord commanded me:

"And then the angel spake, saying: This thing is a similitude of the sacrifice of the Only Begotten of the Father, which is full of grace and truth.

"Wherefore, thou shalt do all that thou doest in the name of the Son, and thou shalt repent and call upon God in the name of the Son forevermore.

"And in that day the Holy Ghost fell upon Adam, which beareth record of the Father and the Son, saying: I am the Only Begotten of the Father from the beginning, henceforth and forever, that as thou hast fallen thou mayest be redeemed, and all mankind, even as many as will." (Moses 5:5-9. Italics added.)

It is evident therefore that Adam, through revelation, knew that Christ would atone and suffer for the sins of men and that there would be a resurrection. This is an evidence that, as Amos said, "Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets." (Amos 3:7.)

Refusal to accept prophets

It is hard to understand why so many people are prepared to accept facts as recorded by historians in secular history and yet refuse to accept ecclesiastical history as recorded in the scrip-

Sunday, October 8

Third Day

tures by men whose characters are beyond reproach, and even refuse to believe, as having come from the Lord, prophecies that have been fulfilled and verified by secular history. Especially have men through the ages refused to accept prophets of their own time, and many of them have been persecuted, ridiculed, and slain.

The scriptures are replete with incidents lamenting the fact that the majority of people have always refused to accept the prophets who have cried repentance unto them and reminded them of their iniquities. You will remember what the Savior said to the multitude when denouncing the Scribes and the Pharisees:

"O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!

"Behold, your house is left unto you desolate.

"For I say unto you, Ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, Blessed be he that cometh in the name of the Lord." (Matt. 23:37-39.)

Nephi's complaint

We must listen to and support the prophets if we are to gain favor with the Lord. An early New World prophet, Nephi, complained to his people:

"Behold, my brethren, have ye not read that God gave power unto one man, even Moses, to smite upon the waters of the Red Sea, and they parted hither and thither, insomuch that the Israelites, who were our fathers, came through upon dry ground, and the waters closed upon the armies of the Egyptians and swallowed them up?

"And now behold, if God gave unto this man such power, then why should ye dispute among yourselves, and say that he hath given unto me no power whereby I may know concerning the judgments that shall come upon you except ye repent?

"But, behold, ye not only deny my words, but ye also deny all the words which have been spoken by our fathers, and also the words which were spoken by this man, Moses, who had such great power given unto him, yea, the words which he hath spoken concerning the coming of the Messiah.

"And now behold, Moses did not only testify of these things, but also all the holy prophets, from his days even to the days of Abraham.

"And now I would that ye should know, that even since the days of Abraham there have been many prophets that have testified these things; yea, behold, the prophet Zenos did testify boldly; for the which he was slain.

". . . and now we know that Jerusalem was destroyed according to the words of Jeremiah. O then why not the Son of God come, according to his prophecy?

"And now will you dispute that Jerusalem was destroyed? . . .

"Our father Lehi was driven out of Jerusalem because he testified of these things. . . .

"And now, seeing ye know these things and cannot deny them except ye shall lie, therefore in this ye have sinned, for ye have rejected all these things; notwithstanding so many evidences which ye have received; . . .

"But behold, ye have rejected the truth, and rebelled against your holy God; and even at this time, instead of laying up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where nothing doth corrupt, and where nothing can come which is unclean, ye are heaping up for yourselves wrath against the day of judgment.

"Yea, even at this time ye are ripening, because of your murders and your fornication and wickedness, for everlasting destruction; yea, and except ye repent it will come unto you soon." (Hel. 8:11-13, 16, 19-22, 24-26.)

Need for repentance

Are we today prepared to repent and accept the word of God, or, as these ancient people, go on heaping up for ourselves wrath against the day of judgment and everlasting destruction? Throughout the ages these messages have come to the inhabitants of the earth from a loving Father whose spirit children we are. They are for our benefit and blessing. He is interested in us and wants us to succeed and be happy in this life and throughout eternity. He created the world and sent us here and knows what is best for us, and through his prophets and his Son Jesus Christ he has given us the plan of life which will lead us to salvation and exaltation. God's love for his children and his desire to direct them are evident in so many ways.

Experience of Joseph

Let us refer to the experience of Joseph who was sold into Egypt. You will recall that Pharaoh was troubled by a dream he had, and learned that Joseph might be able to interpret it, so he sent for him, saying, "I have heard say of thee, that thou canst understand a dream to interpret it."

Joseph replied, "It is not in me: God shall give Pharaoh an answer of peace."

Then Pharaoh told him of his dream about the seven fat and seven lean cattle and the full and thin ears of corn. Then Joseph said God had shown Pharaoh what he was about to do and was warning him that there would be seven very fruitful years, after which there would be a famine for seven years.

We all know that Pharaoh accepted this interpretation and appointed Joseph governor and directed him to see that all surplus foods were preserved for the lean years to come. Because of Joseph's faithfulness and his responsiveness to inspiration and revelation, he found himself in a position where he was able to save his family when his father, Jacob, sent his other sons to buy corn from their brother whom they had sold into Egypt.

Joseph testified later: "... God sent me before you to preserve you a posterity in the earth, and to save your lives by a great deliverance." (See Gen. 41, 45.)

Mission of Christ foretold

We have record of many other revelations that were received by the prophets in early days as well as in modern times. Prophecies concerning the birth, mission, crucifixion, and resurrection of Jesus Christ are foretold many times by different prophets, both in the Bible and in the Book of Mormon, some of them hundreds of years before his birth. We have the words of Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Lehi, Alma, and many others prophesying of this great event.

Nephi records in some detail his visions of these happenings, as shown to him by an angel of the Lord. He beheld Mary, the mother of Jesus, bearing a child in her arms, even the Lamb of God, the Redeemer of the world. He saw the prophet who baptized him, the Holy Ghost descending upon him, his work with the Twelve, his healing the sick, the casting out of devils and unclean spirits.

Nephi also foretells the last events in the Savior's life in these words:

"But, behold, they shall have wars, and rumors of wars; and when the day cometh that the Only Begotten of the Father, yea, even the Father of heaven and of earth, shall manifest himself unto them in the flesh, behold, they will reject him, because of their iniquities, and the hardness of their hearts, and the stiffness of their necks.

"Behold, they will crucify him; and after he is laid in a sepulchre for the space of three days he shall rise from the dead, with healing in his wings; and all those who shall believe on his name shall be saved in the kingdom of God. Wherefore, my soul delighteth to prophecy concerning him, for I have seen his day, and my heart doth magnify his holy name." (2 Ne. 25:12-13.)

This prophecy was made nearly six hundred years before the birth of Christ, yet every event foretold transpired just as predicted. The New Testament writers give irrefutable testimony to validate these prophetic utterances. The New Testament also validates other prophecies recorded in the Old Testament and the Book of Mormon to which we have referred.

The account in Luke tells us that "a messenger from the Father crossed space to announce, 'For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.' (Luke 2:11.) And from out in space suddenly there came 'a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.' [Luke 2:13-14.]" (Church Information Service editorial September 1970.)

Purpose for prophets

God's purpose for having prophets upon the earth is to relay his messages for the benefit and blessing of mankind by whatever means of space communication he elects to use. In his overruling providence he has prepared a way for us to gain immortality and eternal life, which Jesus said was his work and his glory. Before and since Christ's great sacrifice for us the message has been revealed through the prophets that we must be obedient to the laws and ordinances of the gospel, and by repenting of the sins of the world, we can gain exaltation.

How important it is that we listen to the prophets! The scriptures contain numerous warnings to us in these latter days of the calamities that will come upon us, and they have been and are coming to pass. Only as the world repents and accepts and lives the teachings of the gospel as revealed by God through his Son Jesus Christ and the prophets will we save ourselves from destruction.

Messages from the beyond "Messages from the beyond have come in great numbers through the ages, faithfully interpreted by the Jeremiahs, the Ezekiels, and the Daniels; by the Nephis, and the Moronis; by the Peters, and the Pauls, and in modern times by the Joseph Smiths. Better than radioed or television communications have come personal messages without space capsule, plane, or rocket ship. Man has a long way to go before he comes into the realm of inhabited planets. Yet there is such a thing as space communication. Man has spoken to God and received answers from him. Such messages have been coming for the benefit and blessing of the inhabitants of the earth for upward of 6,000 years." (Ibid.)

There is a prophet upon the earth today through whom the Lord makes known his mind and will. We as members of the Church believe "all that God has revealed, all that He does now reveal, and we believe that He will yet reveal many great and important things pertaining to the Kingdom of God." (Article of Faith 9.)

Restoration of gospel

The greatest event and blessing ever to come to mankind was the atoning sacrifice of Jesus Christ and the plan of life and salvation that he gave. Next in importance to mankind was the restoration of the gospel through the Prophet Joseph Smith. God called to him and he listened, and through revelation he brought forth a sacred record containing the gospel in its fullness, which with the Bible and modern revelation gives the world the same plan of life and salvation as given by Jesus when he was upon the earth.

Joseph, when 14 years of age, was greatly confused as a result of the proselyting activities of the different churches in his community, and he wanted to know which church he should join. While reading the Bible, he came upon the following words in James:

"If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him.

"But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering. For he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed." (James 1:5-6.)

Joseph said that if anybody needed wisdom, he did, so he went to a grove where he could be alone and knelt in prayer.

He records: "... I saw a pillar of light exactly over my head, above the brightness of the sun, which descended gradually until it fell upon me.

"... When the light rested upon me I saw two Personages, whose brightness and glory defy all description, standing above me in the air." One of them said: "[Joseph,] This is My Beloved Son. Hear Him!" (Joseph Smith 2:26-17.)

Persecution against prophet

Joseph, through this vision, knew as he knew he lived that God the Father and his Son, Jesus Christ, were two living Personages: that they knew him by name and heard and answered his prayer and gave him instructions. As he told his experience to his friends and to his minister, he found it excited a great deal of prejudice against him, and he was persecuted and ridiculed, and yet he wrote:

"... I was led to say in my heart: Why persecute me for telling the truth? I have actually seen a vision; and who am I that I can withstand God, or why does the world think to make me deny what I have actually seen? For I had seen a vision; I knew it, and I knew that God knew it, and I could not deny it, neither dared I do it; at least I knew that by so doing I would offend God, and come under condemnation." (Joseph Smith 2:25.)

Book of Mormon

As Joseph called upon God for further direction, the angel Moroni appeared to him and told him about the gold plates and showed them to him in vision. At the end of four years he was given the plates, which contained a record of God's dealings with the ancient people on the American continent and contained the gospel in its fullness. He translated the engravings on these plates by the gift and power of God and by revelation, and to the convincing of the Jew and Gentile that Jesus is the Christ, the Eternal God, manifesting himself unto all nations.

We have this promise given by Moroni regarding the Book of Mormon:

"And when ye shall receive these things, I would exhort you that ye would ask God, the Eternal Father, in the name of Christ, if these things are not true; and if ye shall ask with a sincere heart, with real intent, having faith in Christ, he will manifest the truth of it unto you, by the power of the Holy Ghost.

"And by the power of the Holy Ghost ye may know the truth of all things." (Moro. 10:4-5.)

Personal testimony

I humbly bear testimony that the truthfulness of these things has been revealed to me and that the gospel has been restored in these latter days through his prophet, Joseph Smith, to whom God the Father and his Son appeared; that God lives; that Jesus is the Christ, who came and gave his life for you and me that we might enjoy immortality and eternal life.

The channels are open between us and the Lord today whereby we can go in secret prayer, in family prayer, and in our public gatherings, knowing that he is there, that he is a loving father, and that he stands ready to answer our prayers and direct us if we will but let him do so, in our own affairs and in the office or calling which we hold.

I also wish to bear testimony that our present leader, Harold B. Lee, is a prophet of God who has been prepared and chosen by him and has been ordained and set apart by those having authority. He is entitled to and does receive guidance from the Lord for the Church and for the benefit of mankind.

The Lord has said to the members of his church regarding his prophet:

"... thou shalt give heed unto all his words and commandments which he shall give unto you as he receiveth them, walking in all holiness before me;

"For his word ye shall receive, as if from mine own mouth, in all patience and faith.

"For by doing these things the gates of hell shall not prevail against you; yea, and the Lord God will disperse the powers of darkness from before you. . . .

"For thus saith the Lord God: Him have I inspired to move the cause of Zion in mighty power for good, and his diligence I know, and his prayers I have heard." (D&C 21:4-7.)

May we give heed to the Prophet and follow him, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

Following President Tanner's remarks, the Choir sang "Lo My Shepherd Is Divine" without announcement.

President Harold B. Lee

We have heard from President N. Eldon Tanner, first counselor in the First Presidency of the Church, followed by the Tabernacle Choir singing "Lo My Shepherd Is Divine."

Many on television and radio have just tuned in on this conference, and we wish to extend to them our sincere greetings.

Elder LeGrand Richards of the Council of the Twelve will now address us.

Elder LeGrand Richards

Of the Council of the Twelve

It is good to be here, brethren and sisters, in this wonderful conference, and I am sure that we have all been inspired by that beautiful testimony we have just heard from President Tanner.

There are three million Latter-day Saints scattered all over this world who have burning in their hearts a similar testimony of the truth of the story told by the Prophet Joseph Smith of the visit of the Father and the Son, followed by other heavenly messengers. Not only that, but hundreds of thousands who have already gone to their rest, such as my father and his father. My grandfather spent ten of the first fourteen years of his married life bearing witness of this message here and in the lands of Europe.

We have in the world today nearly 17,000 full-time missionaries who are paying their own way, or their families are, that they might tell that story to the entire world. My testimony and witness to you here today is that there is not an honest man or an honest woman in this world who really loves the Lord, and would like to serve him as he would like to be served, who would not join this church if they would just take time to find out the marvelous things the Lord has done in restoring his work to the earth in this day and time.

Message to the world

Some years ago one of our nationally known radio commentators was asked the question, "What message could be broadcast to the world that would be considered of greater importance than any other message?" And he said, after giving the matter careful thought and deliberation, "To be able to say that a man who had lived here upon this earth had returned again with a message from God would be the greatest message that could be broadcast to the world."

And that being true, the Latter-day Saints have the greatest message, not only that prophets like Moroni and John the Baptist and Peter, James, and John have visited this earth, but God the Father and his Son Jesus Christ, as President Tanner just testified. Wouldn't it be wonderful if the world could understand that?

Revealed truth needed

When the astronauts landed on the moon, the newspapers all over the world gave a front-page report of it, but that would not be anything to consider like the Creator of the heaven and the earth returning to this earth, for we are told that Jesus created the heavens and the earth and all things that in them are. Then naturally they would want to know, if the Father and the Son considered it important enough to visit this earth, what kind of a message they would want to leave or why they would come.

You have been told that in answer to Joseph's question, the Savior said that he should join none of the churches, for they taught for doctrine the precepts of men; and then the Savior added, "And their creeds are an abomination in my sight." (See Joseph Smith 2:19.)

We would not want any of our non-members to be offended at this statement, but if Jesus did visit the Prophet Joseph Smith, and we know that he did, then his statement ought to be more authoritative than the statement of any other person in all the world, and yet right along with that come similar testimonies of leaders in other churches in the nation.

Admission of clergymen

For instance, I give you a statement from Harry Emerson Fosdick in which he said, "If Jesus should come back to earth now, hear the mythologies built up around him, see the credalisms, the denominationalism, sacramentalism, carried on in his name, he would certainly say, 'If this is Christianity, I am not a Christian.'"

In Smith's Bible Dictionary, written by seventy-three noted divines and Bible students, this statement is made that "one must not expect to find the gospel of Holy Writ upon the earth today. It is not to be found thus perfect in the total fragments of Christianity, and much less in any one fragment."

Roger Williams, pastor of the oldest Baptist Church in America, gave up his ministry with the statement that: "There is no regularly constituted church of Christ on earth, nor any person qualified to administer any church ordinances; nor can there be until new apostles are sent by the Great Head of the Church for whose coming I am seeking." (Picturesque America, p. 502.)

Now that is our message to the world, that true apostles have been sent. We have listened during the sessions of this conference to about thirty of these great men—great men in their own right, regardless of their religious convictions—who have burning in their hearts a testimony that the Father and the Son have visited this earth.

Sunday, October 8

Third Day

Creeds an abomination

I would like to say a few words this morning about the statement the Savior made that "their creeds are an abomination in my sight." When Satan was cast out of heaven, the cry went out: "Woe to the inhabitants of the earth . . . for the devil is come down unto you, having great wrath, because he knoweth that he hath but a short time." (Rev. 12:12.) "And thus he goeth . . . seeking to destroy the souls of men." (D&C 10:27.) And how does he try to destroy people? By taking a little truth and mixing it with a lot of error to deceive the hearts of the people.

That is what Isaiah meant when he said: "How art thou fallen from heaven, O Lucifer, son of the morning! . . . For thou has said in thine heart, . . . I will exalt my throne above the stars of God . . . I will be like the most High." (Isa. 14:12-14.) For he is the man who made the earth to tremble, who did shake kingdoms, and thus deceived the nations. (See Isa. 14:16.) That is what Jesus came to tell us, that "their creeds were an abomination in his sight" because Satan has deceived the nations.

The world of spirits

In the few minutes that I have left I would like to mention one or two examples of Satan's deceptions. We hear constantly that all we have to do is to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and we will be saved. The advocates of this doctrine take for their justification the statement of Jesus to the malefactor on the cross when he said, "To day shalt thou be with me in paradise." (Luke 23:43.) (The Prophet Joseph Smith indicates that the word paradise as it appears in the Bible should have been translated as "the world of spirits.") They think that they can all be saved just by acknowledging Jesus as the Christ. If they only understood the scriptures!

Paul was caught up into the third heaven (and there cannot be a third heaven if there isn't a first and a second) and he was caught up into paradise and heard unspeakable words, "which it is not lawful for a man to utter." (See 2 Cor. 12:2-4.)

Let us consider then the statement made by Jesus to the malefactor: "To day shalt thou be with me in paradise" (or in the world of spirits). The apostle Paul tells us that there are three heavens above the world of spirits, and Jesus said: "In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you . . . that where I am, there ye may be also." (John 14:2-3.)

The prophet Alma, as recorded in the Book of Mormon, discusses the condition of the soul between death and the resurrection, and he states this: "Now this is the state of the souls of the wicked, yea, in darkness, and a state of awful, fearful looking for the fiery indignation of the wrath of God upon them; thus they remain in this state, as well as the righteous in paradise, until the time of their resurrection." (Al. 40:14.)

The world does not understand this, but if you will trust the scriptures, Jesus did not take the malefactor to heaven. He took him to the world of spirits, and there are three heavens above that, according to the Holy Scriptures. Why did he take him to paradise (the world of spirits)? It was a great gift and recognition at his hand because of what the malefactor had said on the cross.

The spirits in prison

Then the apostle Peter tells us where he went that day when he was crucified: ". . . he went and preached unto the spirits in prison. Which sometime were disobedient, . . . in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing wherein few, that is, eight souls were saved by water." (1 Pet. 3:19-20.)

So instead of the malefactor having to wait for years and years like those who were wicked in the days of Noah, the Savior took him with him that very day to the place where he could hear the gospel preached. Peter tells us that "for this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit." (1 Pet. 4:6.) And that is where the malefactor went with the Savior that day, but there are three heavens above that to which Jesus did not take him.

You remember when the women came to the sepulcher looking for the body of Jesus and there were two angels, one at the head and one at the foot, and they said, "Why seek ye the living among the dead? He is not here, but is risen." (Luke 24:5-6.)

Then when the Savior spoke to Mary, she said, "Rabboni, which is to say, Master." (John 20:16.) Then he said, "Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God." (John 20:17.)

You see how much easier it is to understand when you read the scriptures correctly. No wonder Jesus said to the Sadducees, "Ye do err, not knowing the scriptures." (Matt. 22:29.) So that man went with Jesus that day where he could be taught the gospel, but Jesus had not yet ascended to his Father in heaven.

Doing the will of God

At the present time, people are preaching all over the world that all you need to do is to confess that Jesus is the Christ, but that is not what Jesus said. He said, "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven."

He said, "Many shall say to me at that day [speaking of the day of his second coming], Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works?"

"And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity." (Matt. 7:21-23.)

Paul tells us, "Though he were a Son yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered; And being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." (Heb. 5:8-9.)

Judgment according to works

Then John "saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened: . . . and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works." John also wrote: "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him. . . ." (Rev. 20:12, 6.)

You see that does not come just by confession that you believe in Jesus Christ. You have got to do the works and be judged according to your works. All we need to do is to read the parable of the talents to know how the one who received the five talents won other five, and the one who received two won other two, and received the plaudit, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord."

But the one who had received the one talent said, "Lord, I knew thee that thou art an hard man, reaping where thou hast not sown, and gathering where thou hast not strawed: And I was afraid, and went and hid thy talent in the earth: lo, there thou hast that is thine."

And what did the Master say? "Take therefore the talent from him, and give it unto him which hath ten talents. For unto every one that hath shall be given, . . . but from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath. And cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth." (Matt. 25:21, 24-25, 28-30.)

That sounds like we would have to do something besides just confess if we want to reach the presence of our Father in heaven. That is hurriedly said, but there is a lot more to be said about it.

False conception of God

I would like to mention one other thing that I think is a creed that is "an abomination in the sight of God," and I shall mention it but briefly. At the time that Joseph Smith had that marvelous vision and saw that glorified Christ, he saw the same Jesus that came out of the tomb. He was the same one who appeared unto his apostles and had them feel the prints in his hands and the wound in his side. He was the same one who ascended into heaven in the presence of five hundred of the brethren at that time. This same Jesus appeared to the Prophet Joseph Smith when the whole Christian world was worshipping an essence.

There is not time to go into a lot of detail, but their catechism says that their god has "no body; he has no parts; he has no passions." That means that he has no eyes; he cannot see. He has no ears; he cannot hear your prayers. He has no voice; he cannot speak a word to the prophets. Some of them even say "he sits on the top of a topless throne." How absurd! To me it seems that their description of the god that they believe in is about the best description of nothing that can be written.

Moses knew that this condition would prevail, because when he went to lead the children of Israel into the promised land, he told them that they would not remain there long but that they would be scattered among the nations and "there ye shall serve gods, the work of men's hands, wood and stone, which neither see, nor hear, nor eat, nor smell." (Deut. 4:28.)

That is exactly the kind of a god the whole Christian world was worshipping when Joseph Smith had that glorious vision which revealed the true and living God. But Moses did not leave it at that. He said that in the latter days if they should seek after him, they would surely find him. (See Deut. 4:29.)

Witness of the truth

During this conference you have heard the testimonies of all my associates here bearing witness that the Prophet Joseph did seek after him and he did find him. And I want to bear my witness as one of his representatives, an apostle of the Lord Jesus Christ, that I know that he has visited this earth and we have his revealed truth. We have that of which Peter spoke when he said, following the day of Pentecost, that the heavens must receive the Christ "until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." (Acts 3:21.) We are the only church in the world that claims such a restitution, and there is a great difference between a restitution and a reformation. We are not Catholics. We are not Protestants. We believe in a recommitment to this earth of God's eternal truth.

Confession not sufficient

I would like to say just one more thing. I witnessed one of the religious crusades on the television here just recently. The man in charge said it would cost them a million and a quarter dollars to present it. I think of the words in the scripture that they should make merchandise out of the souls of men. (See 2 Pet. 2:3.) And then after it was all over, he invited people to come up and confess Jesus.

Then I thought of the Day of Pentecost when Peter preached to all of those people there, and they heard the gospel preached in their own language and in their own tongue and they were pricked in their hearts and they cried out, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" (Acts 2:37.) He did not tell them to come up and confess. He said: "Repent, and be baptized . . . and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." (Acts 2:37-39.)

And they cannot be baptized unless there is one having authority that is recognized in the heavens, like Jesus said to his Twelve: "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you. . . ." (John 15:16.) ". . . and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth, shall be loosed in heaven." (Matt. 16:19.)

Sharing of truth

Brothers and sisters and friends who might be listening in, we are doing all we know how to do to share with you these wonderful truths.

Since all of you Latter-day Saints have been asked to be missionaries, and the Lord said, ". . . it becometh every man who hath been warned to warn his neighbor" (D&C 88:81), you need to bear that witness too wherever opportunity presents itself. It is the greatest message in all this world today; and that is my testimony to you, and I bear it in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

He to whom we have just listened is Elder LeGrand Richards of the Council of the Twelve, who is, as you have surmised, one of the great missionaries of the Church. He is one of our veteran missionaries. May the Lord bless and preserve him long on the earth.

The choir and congregation will now join in singing "Praise to the Man Who Communed with Jehovah," following which we shall hear from Elder Robert L. Simpson, Assistant to the Twelve.

The choir and congregation sang "Praise to the Man Who Communed with Jehovah."

President Lee

To those of the television and radio audience who have just joined us in this sixth session of the 142nd Semi-Annual Conference of the Church, we are convened in the historic Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City, Utah.

We shall now hear from Elder Robert L. Simpson, Assistant to the Twelve. He will be followed by Bishop H. Burke Peterson, first counselor in the Presiding Bishopric of the Church.

Elder Robert L. Simpson

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

Oh, that the three billion people in this world could have heard what we just heard from the lips of a wonderful man, Elder LeGrand Richards; and oh, that three billion people could have heard what the priesthood heard last night from the lips of a living prophet, President Harold B. Lee. Through the mind of the Lord, President Lee was able to identify many of the problems confronting mankind today. I would like to discuss for just a moment, if I may, one of the very important problems that seems to be filtering into our homes and into our communities.

The human mind

Before drawing the breath of life on this earth, we were all spiritual beings living in the realm of God, the Eternal Father. Scripture reveals that even before our spiritual birth, each of us had individual identification as an intelligence. Before all else could take place, there had to be that beginning spark of light, that spark of intelligence or, if you please, the marvelous mechanism that controls our every thought, that controls our every act. We might think of this spark of intelligence as perhaps the nucleus of a human mind.

No wonder it has been said: "As a man thinketh, so is he." The master control center within each individual must be regarded as the key. Signals flashing out to the various parts of the body bring instant reaction; in sum and substance, this center dictates the character, the conscience, the strength, and yes, even the weaknesses of every man.

From the beginning of time, there has been a never-ending struggle to influence and control the human mind. Too often, the false promises and enticements of conspiring men have been successful. How much more effective to capture the control center than a mere outpost.

Quality input

The mind of man must first depend upon quality input before it can be counted upon to render good decisions. Like the most sophisticated computer, only with its properly designed control panel in proper place and in working order can the system be depended upon to produce the desired results.

It was Paul who made the observation that the whole must be fitly framed before the properly functioning church can be recognized and identified. It must naturally follow then that the pollution of a single church member's mind will indeed affect the whole. If pollution touches even a segment of the church, then the entire church is weakened. The church can be no stronger than its members. By the same token, the degradation of a family member weakens the entire family unit. Applied to a nation, when a segment of its citizenry becomes contaminated by frequenting the cesspools of its society, that nation indeed is weakened.

Thousands have said: "Printed filth will never become an obsession with me. I am a mature adult, and I have the right to see what is going on in the world without becoming trapped." But hardly a day passes that we don't listen to alcoholics and drug abusers who are now looking back with regret on their beginning days of social drinking and mild drug experimentation just to satisfy a so-called mature curiosity.

Pornography degrading

Evidence is conclusive that mind-polluting pornography is just as addicting and just as devastating as Satan's other tools of destruction and degradation. As expressed in the last line of Alexander Pope's poem: "We first endure, then pity, then embrace."

The gradual infiltration of this mind-polluting material has quietly engulfed us on a wide front. Today's so-called acceptable motion picture would have been banned from public viewing just a few short years ago. Many of the recommended reading lists of our public schools would have been classified as unacceptable less than a generation ago. All of us, by the flip of a switch, allow much highly questionable and some downright objectionable filth to occupy the center stage of our family circle. Public attitude against smut has very gradually been lulled into a state of mild resistance—so mild, in fact, that the adversary has already won a major victory whether we are ready to admit it or not.

Action to be taken

Now the question follows: Is there really anything that can be done? Why, of course there is, and if every God-fearing citizen would band together on a few fundamental steps, this entire trend could be turned around.

How about taking a few minutes, for example, to voice objection to the local supermarket manager about easy availability and prominent display of unacceptable material on his periodical display rack.

How about taking just five minutes each week to review the TV log and then establishing a few rules that all the family agrees to concerning viewing time and on which channel.

Why not make some effort to find out something about the next movie that will engage your family's undivided attention for two and a half or three hours and will probably cost you far more than you contributed to the poor and the needy that month. It goes without saying that all X- and R-rated movies are automatically eliminated.

Perhaps we should all become a lot more interested in what the school is recommending and making available to our children. How many school meetings or visits did you make during the past year?

Do the men you vote for feel as you do on these vital matters? Is there some legislation that needs to be encouraged, some petitions that need to be circulated, some telephone calls that need to be made? God gave us a democratic process for a good reason. Do we use this process to help his cause? Not enough! The opposition is certainly misusing it, all in the name of free speech. You and I must keep the record straight on what God intended by freedom of speech and some of the obligations connected with it.

Perversion of God-given attributes

Satan is the master of deceit. He perverts man's God-given attributes from their noble and divine purpose onto a downward track. All seem to agree that one of man's most demanding and ever-present drives is centered in his desire for companionship and sexual fulfillment. To have this highly sensitive and divine human mechanism falsely aroused by unnatural processes creates a serious conflict in that vital control center, the mind. Rationalization quickly rallies to the side of the victim of off-color literature, because rationalization helps him to live with his conscience. He tells himself that his drives are God-given and, therefore, not that bad. He also tells himself, "Nearly everybody does it. I am not so different," and while he may not be so very different, he is just exactly 100 percent wrong in the eyes of God.

Now a mind that has been deceived into receiving trashy input cannot but send false signals to the feet, the hands, and the tongue. Future decisions will all be colored by the impurity allowed to enter that control center of his entire being.

Unclean thinking

As you invite unclean thoughts to become a part of your total being, be assured some of your faculties will become considerably sharpened. Your temper will be sharpened. Your tongue will be sharpened. Your desire for more trash will be sharpened. Your ability to shade the truth will be sharpened. Yes, just about every negative part of your character will be enhanced.

There will also be a noticeable diminishing effect in your life. Your personality will be diminished. Your family relationships will be impaired. Your ability to pray will be lessened. Your spirit will be affected adversely, and your testimony of the truth will start to slip away, probably so gradually at first that you won't even realize it is happening until it is too late. The Lord has said: "... Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord." (D&C 38:42.)

Every prophet from the beginning of this earth has had foreknowledge of our day with its pitfalls and hazards. The scriptures alone give us the formula for avoiding disaster. I like what the Lord says in the 121st section of the Doctrine and Covenants: "... let virtue garnish thy thoughts unceasingly; then shall thy confidence wax strong in the presence of God; and the doctrine of the priesthood shall distil upon thy soul as the dews from heaven." (Verse 45.)

Good literature

We have been admonished to read good books and to avoid idleness, and as President David O. McKay used to say so eloquently: "The true measure of a man is how he spends his time when he doesn't have to do anything." This, of course, brings us around to self-discipline, which is the major key in the total avoidance of illicit literature.

Are there any books or literature in your possession that would have no place in the personal library of President Harold B. Lee? Someone has said: "Which way to go, the leader will know." Don't you think we should follow his example? Do you allow material to enter your mind that would be incompatible with entrance into the celestial kingdom of God?

Church membership contemplates only one thing—to qualify for his holy presence. Why jeopardize that possibility? The oft-quoted wisdom of President Heber J. Grant bears repetition here: "That which we persist in doing becomes easier for us to do; not that the nature of the thing itself has changed, but the power to do is increased." (Ralph Waldo Emerson.)

It works in both directions: the power to accept pornography, as our senses become numbed, or the power to reject as we declare with Joshua of old: "... choose you this day whom ye will serve; ... as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord." (Josh. 24:15.)

Direction of First Presidency

To whom shall we turn for our direction in these vital matters? A prophet of God has spoken within the past few days. Here are the exact words of the First Presidency on this vital subject: "Pornographic filth continues to flood this country as well as other nations of the world.

"There is abundant evidence of the damaging effect of obscenity on the solidarity of the family, on the moral fiber of the individual.

"We, with many leaders outside the Church, are deeply concerned about this growing obscenity in print, on record and tape, on television, and in motion pictures.

"We therefore urge Latter-day Saint parents to teach their children to avoid smut in any of its many insidious forms. 'Let virtue garnish thy thoughts unceasingly.' (Doctrine and Covenants 121:45.)

"The Lord has also said: 'Set in order your houses; keep slothfulness and uncleanness far from you.' (Doctrine and Covenants 90:18.)

"We also encourage Latter-day Saints as citizens to exert every effort to fight the inroads of pornography in their communities. History is replete with examples of nations which have fallen in a large measure through licentiousness."

May we accept this timely counsel. Your personal welfare and the eternal future of your entire family unit may depend upon it, and I say it in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

We sincerely hope that everyone has listened to that message and will heed the warning voice. We have just listened to Elder Robert L. Simpson, Assistant to the Twelve.

Bishop H. Burke Peterson, first counselor in the Presiding Bishopric of the Church, will now address us.

Bishop H. Burke Peterson

Of the Presiding Bishopric

In countless writings the prophets of the Lord have been trying to teach us that throughout time and all eternity the most important organization is the family. A loving Father in heaven organized his church here on the earth as a means of teaching families how to be eternally happy. We know that none of us can receive the fulfillment of true happiness except as a member of an eternal family unit.

Atmosphere of home

We also know, or we should know, that the success we experience in our homes as families is going to have a most significant effect on the eternal happiness of each of us. Happiness in the life hereafter is geared to our learning and living celestial laws while we are here on the earth. This being so, then our great need is to establish in our homes an atmosphere that will encourage the learning and living of the teachings of the Savior.

Satan knows that he can cause unhappiness in our homes if he can bring about disunity, discontent, disharmony, and a host of other spiritual illnesses. By this insidious process he has gained no small measure of success in his plan to lead astray the children of our Father in heaven. For instance, he knows that if he can cause parents to quarrel with each other, their children may well follow the example.

He knows that if parents show little respect for each other, so will their children. He knows that children mirror the actions of their parents.

He also knows that his greatest effort to block the work of the Lord must be in the home. Unfortunately, it is here where he enjoys his greatest success, first by destroying family relationships and then by destroying the family unit. He is using many devious means to accomplish his purpose. Many are the homes that do not recognize his oftentimes silent encroachment into their happiness and security.

Contention in home

One of Satan's most effective tools is at work among us today—it is a destroyer of happiness, peace, contentment, family solidarity. Families are stumbling and falling because of its hobbling and crippling effect. This tool of Satan is called contention. The dictionary describes contention as follows: "To argue, to bring discord or strife, to dispute, to quarrel."

Now, some will say, "This is our way of life—everybody's doing it." Lest we think these acts are not serious and are just our way of life, to be accepted and lived with, let us hear the word of the Lord as expressed by an ancient prophet.

We read in 3 Nephi: "... And there shall be no disputations among you, as there have hitherto been; neither shall there be disputations among you concerning the points of my doctrine, as there have hitherto been.

"For verily, verily I say unto you, he that hath the spirit of contention is not of me, but is of the devil, who is the father of contention, and he stirreth up the hearts of men to contend with anger, one with another.

"Behold, this is not my doctrine, to stir up the hearts of men with anger, one against another; but this is my doctrine, that such things should be done away." (3 Ne. 11:28-30.)

Counsel of King Benjamin

Over 2,000 years ago the great King Benjamin gave warning and wise counsel to the people of his day—and to us also. We read in Mosiah:

"And ye will not suffer your children that they go hungry, or naked; neither will ye suffer that they transgress the laws of God, and fight and quarrel one with another, and serve the devil, who is the master of sin, or who is the evil spirit which hath been spoken of by our fathers, he being an enemy to all righteousness.

"But ye will teach them to walk in the ways of truth and soberness: ye will teach them to love one another, and to serve one another." (Mosiah 4:14-15.)

From the scripture we see that King Benjamin points out in a very positive way how we can help our children, for he said we shall teach them truth, teach them soberness, teach them to love one another, and teach them to serve one another. Fathers and mothers, may I remind you that we are always teaching.

Workshop of the Lord

The home should be the great workshop of the Lord. Here is where children must be taught to walk in ways of truth and soberness, of love and service to each other.

The most effective examples a child will ever have—for bad or for good—are his own parents. Few of us realize how very pliable and teachable children are in their primary years of life. How quick they are to pick up parental habits and traits and teachings!

May I suggest that as parents we must require more of ourselves. May I suggest that we give more of ourselves, that we give more good experiences to our children, experiences that are love-producing and family-solidifying. Whether the times we give are measured in minutes or hours is not as important as what we do in them. It may be five minutes at a child's bedside each night or a fifteen-minute walk in the evening. It may be a day in the hills or a three-minute phone call from the office at midday. It may be a clever love note to a little girl or a night out to a ball game with a boy. It can even be the experience of a family home evening. It can even be the experience of a family learning to pray together and reading the scriptures together and fasting together.

Developing happy children

We must expand our thinking on ways to develop happy children. As the Lord has said, the power is within us to do so. The ways of the Lord are simple ways. Simple experiences with children develop unbreakable ties that will endure forever. It might be something as simple as smiling more in your home.

What would you think of speaking more cheerfully? Trying more often to say please and thank you?

What would you think of finding an opportunity for one sincere compliment for each child each day, and then watching them respond?

What if you decided to be cheerful tonight at the dinner table, and in spite of what others might do or say, hold to your course. See how long you can uplift your whole family. Take one day at a time. As a TV commercial says, "Try it—you'll like it."

These are contagious actions. Children will learn to be happy and more pleasant. Homes will be cheery. The gospel of Jesus Christ is more easily taught and longer remembered in a happy home.

Parents, we are the catalyst. We must be sure to give adequate time to our own courtship. A happy marriage nowadays is a perishable item. Take time alone together to feed it and nurture it and keep it alive. A happy marriage requires constant attention.

Now, in all our doing, let us be sure we have the divine approval of the Lord. His is the course to follow. Let us be sure we lead our families in his way. Contention in a home starts and stops with the parents.

Introducing newborn child

I have often wondered what would happen if the method of introducing a father to his newborn child were different. Instead of a doctor coming out and saying, "It's another girl" or "It's another boy," how would we react if each time a child was born our Father in heaven made this kind of introduction to the parents:

"Thank you for preparing this little body for the spirit I have created. Now, I present her to you for a season to care for. Please teach her of me and of my Son. I so much want her back with me some day. It all depends on you. Remember this: She is loving. She will respond to teaching. She wants to learn. Please treat her with respect. The road will not be easy. Some of the time it will be most difficult. I want to help you raise her. Please call on me often for advice and counsel. Together we can help her fulfill her purpose in the earth."

I wonder how we might treat these little ones if they had this kind of introduction. Would it be different?

Walking in truth

Remember again the scripture, "But ye will teach them to walk in ways of truth and soberness: ye will teach them to love one another, and to serve one another." And may I add—ye will teach them by your example.

Fathers and mothers and children, wherever you are, I want you to know that I know we have a Father in heaven, and I want you to know that his Son Jesus is the Christ; and I want you to know that I know he established his kingdom on the earth for our blessing and for our benefit. I testify that there is a prophet on the earth, and I testify that we will be happy if we follow his teachings, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

Following Bishop Peterson's remarks, the Choir sang "Build Thee More Stately Mansions" without announcement.

President Harold B. Lee

We have just listened to Bishop H. Burke Peterson, first counselor in the Presiding Bishopric of the Church, followed by the Tabernacle Choir singing "Build Thee More Stately Mansions."

We will now be pleased to hear from Elder Mark E. Petersen of the Council of the Twelve, who will be our concluding speaker.

Elder Mark E. Petersen

Of the Council of the Twelve

An event of great importance to the entire Christian world has taken place during this conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

A new prophet of God has been raised up for this present day!

He is one in a line of inspired men divinely called to minister now and to bring a new revelation from heaven to every man, woman, and child who will hear.

The appointment of this new prophet is of momentous import to every person who believes in God, and particularly to every believer in the Lord Jesus Christ. It is in deep humility, but with great sincerity, that we make this solemn announcement to the world.

Living prophets

Always when the Lord has had a people on the earth whom he has recognized as his own, he has led them by living prophets to whom he has given guidance from heaven.

While the people remained faithful anciently, one prophet after another was raised up by the Almighty in a long series of divine appointments. Thus we had many men of God mentioned in both Old and New Testaments.

A similar line of inspired men now has been established in modern times. This was accomplished as a result of the restoration of the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ through his latter-day seer, Joseph Smith.

When the prophet Amos was on earth he made the significant statement that the Lord will deal with his people only through prophets. Said he: "Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets." (Amos 3:7.)

This is of particular interest because it presupposes frequent communication between God and man.

A God of communication

Contrary to the general belief, the Lord is a God of communication, a God of revelation. He is a God of light and intelligence, of knowledge and information. He does not deal in darkness, neither does he save anyone in ignorance. His entire plan of salvation rests upon communication with an enlightened people.

Who can worship intelligently if kept in ignorance?

Who can have a meaningful faith without a knowledge of God?

And whence shall this knowledge come if not from the Deity himself?

But when it does come from the Deity, it is both communication and revelation.

Although he is a God of communication, he follows a particular method of transmitting knowledge to man. It is an unchanging pattern, which is, that he always speaks to the people through living prophets.

Lack of inspired direction

The scriptures indicate that over the centuries the Lord has been free and willing to give inspired direction to mankind. Nevertheless, there have been periods when such revelation has ceased. This occurred even in Bible times, and Isaiah explained the reason why. Said he:

"Behold, the Lord's hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; neither his ear heavy, that it cannot hear:

"But your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid his face from you. . . ." (Isa. 59:1-2.)

Human beings are slow to learn the ways of the Lord, and particularly are they dilatory in accepting the fact that although he is willing to communicate with them, his method of doing so is through inspired living men whom he designates as prophets.

It is a pattern with him. It is his method of procedure, and he has not changed it. He is the same yesterday, today, and forever, and so are his methods.

Lack of communication between human beings is responsible for much of the distress in the world. But when communication breaks down between God and man, even worse situations arise.

The Lord's spokesmen

Anciently the Lord showed his willingness to speak to the people by raising up a long series of inspired men who served as his spokesmen, from the days of Adam to John the Baptist. We are familiar with their names, such as Isaiah, Ezekiel, Moses, and Zachariah, to mention just a few. Their writings make up the Old Testament, one of the grandest collections of literature and revelation known to man.

But what about the New Testament period? Did God follow this same method then? Did he place prophets in the Christian church, thus preserving the historic pattern revealed in the Old Testament?

This he did!

Paul told the Ephesians that the church of Jesus Christ was built upon a foundation of apostles and prophets, with the Savior himself as the chief cornerstone. (See Eph. 2:20.)

Who were the prophets of that day?

The Twelve were included, of course. But were there others?

The New Testament tells us that there were. Silas and Barnabas were two of them, and both were great missionaries of that time. Others were Simeon and Lucius; also a man named Judas—he was not Iscariot. Likewise mentioned are Manaen and Agabus, who predicted the arrest of Paul. (See Acts 11, 13, 21.)

Reason for prophets

The epistle to the Ephesians explains why there were Christian prophets, saying that they were placed in the Lord's church for the "perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, and for the edifying of the body of Christ." (Eph. 4:12.)

Since the Savior commanded his people to become perfect as their Father in heaven (see Matt. 5:48), he set up his church to provide the means by which this could be accomplished. Hence, he gave them apostles and prophets.

These inspired men were in the church also to preserve unity among the saints and to heal divisions in the flock "that we henceforth be no more . . . tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine. . . ." (Eph. 4:14.)

So God followed the same pattern of communicating with his people in New Testament times that had been customary with him down through the ages as recorded in the Old Testament.

Present-day Christianity

Now what of our day?

Since communication between God and his prophets was an integral part of the early Christian church, what is the situation with present-day Christianity? Where are the Christian prophets of today?

Unfortunately they were lost over the centuries. There is no record of any Christian prophet having lived after A.D. 110 when it is believed by the world that John the Revelator was last heard of.

Then has Christianity drifted all these years without communication from heaven?

The denominations agree that there are no prophets among them, and they teach that neither prophets nor revelation are any longer needed. Rather, they say that the Bible—written in ages past—contains all that is necessary.

Then does this constitute a departure from the age-old pattern of the Lord—that of presently guiding his people through living prophets?

People turn from God

In Isaiah's day it was the people who turned away from God. The Lord did not turn from the people.

It was the same in the Savior's day. Do you recall that he said to those about him: "... how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!" (Matt. 23:37.)

God does not abandon his people. It is the people who abandon God.

"The soul that on Jesus hath leaned for repose,

I will not, I cannot desert to his foes;
That soul, though all hell should endeavor or to shake,

I'll never, no never, no never forsake."

—Hymns, no. 66

So we sing in one of our favorite hymns.

Restoration of gospel

The scriptures indicate that in the latter days, shortly before the second coming of the Savior, the signs of the times would be given.

Some of them would be devastating, with seas heaving themselves beyond their bounds and with earthquakes, disease, and war taking heavy tolls.

But one of the most significant of all the signs of the times was to be a restoration of the original gospel and church of Jesus Christ, this to be done "in the hour of God's judgment." (See Rev. 14:6-7.)

This restoration was to be so extensive, says the scripture, that it would include all that God had ever spoken through his servants from the beginning of the world. (See Acts 3:21.)

Then would that include a restoration of prophecy and revelation?

Would a new line of prophets be raised up to guide the people in these troublous times?

Since the scripture says that new revelation is to come in the latter days, and since God always gives his revelations through his servants, the prophets, and since for centuries there were none, then new prophets would have to be raised up to transmit the revelations intended for our day.

This is precisely what happened.

Modern prophets

Joseph Smith was the first of them. Through him the Lord restored the gospel in its purity, the Church being reestablished on the earth in 1830.

Then came a succession of modern prophets to carry on the work, which will continue to expand until the second coming of the Lord Jesus Christ.

After Joseph Smith, Brigham Young was called; then John Taylor, Wilford Woodruff, Lorenzo Snow, Joseph F. Smith, Heber J. Grant, George Albert Smith, David O. McKay, Joseph Fielding Smith, and now President Harold B. Lee.

Each was God's prophet for this time; each a seer and a revelator.

In this conference, with our hearts and our hands, we have formally sustained President Lee as our inspired leader for this day.

The mantle of the prophets now rests upon him. He holds the authority in the holy priesthood that they held.

All the keys and powers given by the angels to the Prophet Joseph Smith have been conferred upon President Lee. He is today's authorized and divinely chosen successor in this long line of prophets.

Preparation for Christ's coming

The work now will go on, eventually leading into the millennium. A believing people is being prepared to receive the Savior. Christ will come again! His church has been restored in preparation for his coming.

Once more we have prophets on the earth like Moses and Isaiah, Peter, James, and John, Silas and Barnabas and Paul.

Once again true salvation is offered to all mankind.

And once again, through his modern servants, the Savior says:

"Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.

"Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls.

"For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light." (Matt. 11:28-30.)

With this new line of prophets to guide us, we bring salvation again to all mankind. We testify that God indeed has spoken in these last days, and that we are his ministers.

The gospel of peace

Anciently the scripture said: "How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things!" (Rom. 10:15.)

Have you ever asked yourselves who these people are, who preach the gospel of peace and whose feet are so beautiful upon the mountains?

Abinadi, in the Book of Mormon, gives us the explanation.

These people are the prophets of God—they who preach the gospel of the Prince of Peace, the Lord Jesus Christ.

Says Abinadi: "I mean the holy prophets ever since the world began.

"... these are they who have published peace, who have brought good tidings of good, who have published salvation and said unto Zion: Thy God reigneth!

"And O how beautiful upon the mountains were their feet!

"And again, how beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of those that are still publishing peace!

"And again, how beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of those who shall hereafter publish peace, yea, from this time henceforth and forever!

"And behold," Abinadi continues, "this is not all. For O how beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that is the founder of peace, yea, even the Lord, who has redeemed his people; yea, him who has granted salvation unto his people." (Mosiah 15:13-18.)

So spoke Abinadi.

The prophets, then, are the servants of Jesus Christ and have been from the beginning of time. And because they are his servants and preach his gospel of peace, behold, how beautiful upon the mountains are their feet.

We honor them. We shall follow them, and through them we shall work out our salvation here on earth in the Lord's own way.

Listen to a prophet's voice

And so we say:

"Come, listen to a prophet's voice,
And hear the word of God,
And in the way of truth rejoice,
And sing for joy aloud.
We've found the way the prophets went
Who lived in days of yore;
Another prophet now is sent
This knowledge to restore.

"Come listen to a prophet's voice,
He speaks for God on high.
His voice is heard throughout the world.
The Savior's day is nigh.
We now go forth and preach his word
As heralds to mankind
To warn the nations everywhere,
That they the truth may find."

We solemnly testify that communication between heaven and earth has been reestablished in our day. We declare that God is not isolated from the world.

He is not dead. He lives.

He is not blind. He sees.

He is not deaf. He hears.

He is not dumb. He speaks, eloquently, to his living prophets and through them to the world at large.

In this manner God is speaking to you today. Listen to him. Acknowledge him. Pray to him. Obey him. In the name of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Following Elder Petersen's remarks, the Choir sang "Sing Praise to Him" without announcement.

President Harold B. Lee

Elder Mark E. Petersen of the Council of the Twelve has just spoken to us, followed by the Tabernacle Choir singing "Sing Praise to Him."

We are grateful to the owners and managers of over 300 television and radio stations for offering their facilities as a public service to make the proceedings of the conference available to millions throughout many areas of the world.

This session has been carried from the Tabernacle over direct oceanic cables to a large number of members and friends assembled in chapels throughout Great Britain, Germany, France, Holland, Belgium, and Austria.

We shall conclude this sixth session of the conference with the Tabernacle Choir singing from the Messiah by Handel "The Hallelujah Chorus", after which the benediction will be pronounced by Elder LeGrand R. Curtis, Regional Representative of the Twelve. This conference will then be adjourned until two o'clock this afternoon.

The Tabernacle Choir sang "The Hallelujah Chorus."

Elder LeGrand R. Curtis, Regional Representative of the Twelve, offered the closing prayer.

The conference was adjourned until two o'clock p.m.

THIRD DAY AFTERNOON MEETING

SEVENTH SESSION

The seventh and concluding session of the General Conference began at 2 o'clock p.m. on Sunday, October 8, 1972.

President Harold B. Lee presided and conducted the meeting.

The choral numbers were provided by the Tabernacle Choir, with Jay Welch conducting, and Robert Cundick playing the organ accompaniments.

President Lee made the following remarks at the beginning of the session:

President Harold B. Lee

Members of the Church are convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City, Utah, in the seventh and last general session of the 142nd Semi-Annual Conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Sessions of this conference have been received by millions in the United States and Canada over hundreds of radio and television stations cooperating to provide the extensive coverage of this conference.

Many television and radio stations throughout the western part of the United States will carry the proceedings of this session this afternoon.

Delayed broadcasts of both sessions today will be scheduled by Radio Stations KSL and KMBZ.

We extend a cordial welcome to all present this afternoon and to members of the Church and many friends everywhere who are listening in by radio and television.

The Tabernacle Choir, with Jay Welch conducting, and Robert Cundick at the organ, will begin this service by singing, "O Divine Redeemer."

The invocation will then be offered by President Lawrence T. Lambert, president of the Blackfoot South Stake.

The Tabernacle Choir sang the number, "O Divine Redeemer."

The opening prayer was offered by President Lawrence T. Lambert of the Blackfoot South Stake.

President Lee

The Tabernacle Choir will now sing, "Lord, Hear Our Prayer."

The number, "Lord, Hear Our Prayer," was sung by the Tabernacle Choir.

President Lee

We shall now hear from Elder Thomas S. Monson of the Council of the Twelve. He will be followed by Elder S. Dilworth Young of the First Council of Seventy.

Elder Thomas S. Monson

Of the Council of the Twelve

When Jesus of Nazareth taught and ministered among men, he spoke not as did the scribes and scholars of the day but rather in language understood by all. Jesus taught through parables. His teachings moved men and motivated them to a newness of life. The shepherd on the hillside, the sower in the field, the fisherman at his net all became subjects whereby the Master taught eternal truths.

The human body

The divinely created human body, with its truly marvelous powers and intricate parts, acquired new meaning when the Lord spoke of eyes that were not blinded but did really see, ears that were not stopped but did truly hear, and hearts that were not hardened but did know and feel. In his teachings he referred to the foot, the nose, the face, the side, the back. Significant are those occasions when he spoke of yet another part—even the human hand. Considered by artists and sculptors the most difficult member of the human body to capture on canvas or form in clay, the hand is a wonder to behold. Neither color, size, shape, nor age distorts this miracle of creation.

Hand of a child

First, let us consider the hand of a child. Who among us has not praised God and marveled at his powers when an infant is held in one's arms. That tiny hand, so small yet so perfect, instantly becomes the topic of conversation. No one can resist placing his little finger in the clutching hand of an infant. A smile comes to the lips, a certain glow to the eyes, and one appreciates the tender feelings which prompted the poet to pen the lines: "A sweet new blossom of humanity, fresh fallen from God's own home, to flower on earth." (Gerald Massey.)

As the child grows, the tightly clutched hand opens in an expression of perfect trust. "Take me by the hand, Mother; then I won't be afraid" bespeaks this confidence. The delightful song the little children sing so beautifully at once becomes a plea for patience, an invitation to teach—even an opportunity to serve:

"I have two little hands folded snugly and tight,
They are tiny and weak yet they know what is right,
During all the long hours till daylight is through,
There is plenty indeed for my two hands to do.

"Kind Father I thank thee for two little hands,
And ask thee to bless them till each understands
That children can only be happy all day
When two little hands have learned how to obey."

—The Children Sing, no. 97

The sentiments such love and faith arouse should ever draw forth from each parent a pledge of fidelity—even a determination to do that which is right.

Should added emphasis be required we need but refer to that account where the disciples came unto Jesus, saying, "Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven?"

"And Jesus called a little child unto him, and set him in the midst of them,

"And said, Verily I say unto you, Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven.

"And whoso shall receive one such little child in my name receiveth me.

"But whoso shall offend one of these little ones which believe in me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea." (Matt. 18:1-3, 5-6.) Significant is the hand of a child.

The hand of youth

Second, may we turn our attention to the hand of youth. This is the training period when busy hands learn to labor—and labor to learn. Honest effort and loving service become identifying features of the abundant life. Each was effectively taught the girls in the Mutual class when cookies were baked and taken by them to elderly women residing in a neighborhood rest home. The aged hand of a lonely grandmother clasped that of the thoughtful teenager. No word was spoken. Heart spoke to heart. The hand that baked the cookies was raised to wipe a tear. Such hands are clean hands. Such hearts are pure hearts.

Clasped hands

Then comes that day when the hand of a boy takes the hand of a girl, and parents suddenly realize their children have grown. Never is the hand of a girl so delicately displayed as when there glistens on her finger a ring denoting a sacred pledge. Her step becomes quicker, her countenance brighter, and all is well with the world. Courtship has come. Marriage follows. And once again two hands are clasped, this time in a holy temple. Cares of the world are for a brief moment forgotten. Thoughts turn to eternal values. The clasped hands speak of promised hearts. Heaven is here.

A mother's hand

Time passes. The hand of a bride becomes the hand of a mother. Ever so gently she cares for her precious child. Bathing, dressing, feeding, comforting—there is no hand like mother's. Nor does its tender care diminish through the years. Ever shall I remember the hand of one mother—the mother of a missionary. Some years ago at a worldwide seminar for mission presidents, the parents of missionaries were invited to meet and visit briefly with each mission president. Forgotten are the names of each who extended a greeting and exchanged a friendly handshake. Remembered are the feelings which welled up within me as I took in my hand the calloused hand of one mother from Star Valley, Wyoming. "Please excuse the roughness of my hand," she apologized. "Since my husband has been ill, the work of the farm has been mine to do, that our boy may, as a missionary, serve the Lord."

Tears could not be restrained, nor should they have been. Such tears produce a certain cleansing of the soul. A mother's labor sanctified a son's service. Loved are the hands of a mother.

Hand of a father

Not to be overlooked is the hand of a father. Whether he be a skilled surgeon, a master craftsman, or a talented teacher, his hands support his family. There is a definite dignity in honest labor and tireless toil.

During the period of the great depression I was a small boy. Fortunate were those men who had work. Jobs were few, hours long, pay scant. On our street was a father who, though old in years, supported with the labor of his hands his rather large family of girls. His firm was known as the Spring Canyon Coal Company. It consisted of one old truck, a pile of coal, one shovel, one man, and his own two hands. From early morning to late evening he struggled to survive. Yet during the monthly fast and testimony meeting, I specifically remember him expressing his thanks to the Lord for his family, for his work, and for his testimony. The fingers of those rough, red, chapped hands turned white as they gripped the back of the bench on which I sat as Brother James Farrell bore witness of a boy, even Joseph Smith, who, in a grove of trees near Palmyra, New York, knelt in prayer and beheld the heavenly vision of God the Father and Jesus Christ the Son. The memory of those hands of a father serve to remind me of his abiding faith, his honest conviction, and his testimony of truth. Honored are the hands of a father.

Hands of a prophet

On Friday morning in this historic tabernacle, and in the homes of Church members viewing or listening to the conference session, hands were raised to sustain a prophet, a seer, and a revelator—even the President of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Our upraised hands were an outward expression of our inward feelings. As we raised our hands, we pledged our hearts. Could I for a moment mention the hands of that prophet, even President Harold B. Lee? I do so humbly and with his permission.

Some years ago, President Lee, directed by inspiration and revelation, called Dewitt J. Paul to serve as patriarch in one of the eastern stakes of the Church. The call humbled beyond words both Brother and Sister Paul. They wondered. They worried. They prayed for assurance and heavenly confirmation. Such did not come suddenly.

The vote of the people demonstrated their supporting approval. Then came the time for ordination. In a basement room situated two floors beneath the meeting hall in which the conference was held, Dewitt Paul nervously sat on a chair and, with a silent prayer in his heart, awaited his ordination. President Harold B. Lee then placed his hands upon the head of the newly called patriarch and began to speak. Peace replaced turmoil. Faith overcame doubt. Seated next to Sister Paul was a lifelong friend to whom Sister Paul had confided her concern. During the pronouncement of the blessing and ordination, she opened her eyes. As she did so she saw a ray of light shining upon President Lee as he placed his hands upon the head of Brother Paul. At the conclusion of the blessing, she hastened to tell Brother Lee of this confirmation of a call. She recounted how she saw the sunshine form the ray of light and how it brought a bright glow to the hands of President Lee. "Indeed, this is to you a confirmation of a sacred call," said President Lee, "for as you look about this basement room, there is no window through which the sun might beam its rays." Precious are the hands of a prophet.

Hand of the Lord

Finally, may we speak of yet another hand—even the hand of the Lord. This was the hand which guided Moses, which strengthened Joshua—the hand promised to Jacob when the Lord declared: "Fear thou not; for I am with thee: be not dismayed; for I am thy God; . . . I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness." (Isa. 41:10.)

This was the determined hand which drove from the temple the money changers. This was the loving hand that blessed little children. This was the strong hand that opened deaf ears and restored vision to sightless eyes. By this hand was the leper cleansed, the lame man healed—even the dead Lazarus raised to life. With the finger of this hand there was written in the sand that message which the winds did erase but which honest hearts did retain. The hand of the carpenter. The hand of the teacher. The hand of the Christ. One called Pontius Pilate washed his hands of this man called King of the Jews. Oh foolish, spineless Pilate! Did you really believe that water could cleanse such guilt?

"I think of his hands pierced and bleeding to pay the debt!"

Such mercy, such love, and devotion can I forget? . . .

Oh, it is wonderful that he should care for me enough to die for me!

Oh, it is wonderful, wonderful to me!

—Hymns, no. 80

The hand that saves

Pitied is the hand that sins. Envied is the hand that paints. Honored is the hand that builds. Appreciated is the hand that helps. Respected is the hand that serves. Adored is the hand that saves—even the hand of Jesus Christ, the Son of God, the Redeemer of all mankind. With that hand he knocks upon the door of our understanding.

"Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice and open the door, I will come in to him. . . ." (Rev. 3:20.)

Shall we listen for his voice? Shall we open the doorway of our lives to his exalted presence? Each must answer for himself.

In this journey called mortality, clouds of gloom may appear on the horizon of our personal destiny. The way ahead may be uncertain, foreboding. In desperation we may be prompted to ask, as did another:

" . . . I said to the man who stood at the gate of the year:

'Give me a light, that I may tread safely into the unknown.'

And he replied:

'Go out into the darkness and put your hand into the hand of God.

That shall be to you better than a light and safer than a known way.'"¹

¹M. Louise Haskins, "The Gate of the Year."

Of this solemn truth I testify. I declare that our Lord and Savior does live and that he even today directs his church with his all powerful hand, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

Elder Thomas S. Monson of the Council of the Twelve has just spoken to us.

We shall now hear from Elder S. Dilworth Young of the First Council of Seventy. He will be followed by Elder James A. Cullimore, Assistant to the Twelve.

Elder S. Dilworth Young

Of the First Council of the Seventy

While we realize that we shall have close association with Elder Bruce R. McConkie in our future work with the missions of the Church and shall partake of his wisdom and spirituality, we also know that we shall miss him more than any of us care to admit. We assure him of our love, our loyalty, and our support.

We also welcome Elder Rex D. Pinegar to our council and feel certain that his ability will add strength to us as we go forward.

Genealogy of Lee family

I shall speak about genealogy.

William Lee came from the old sod in 1745. He must have had an unexplained urge, because he would not know really why he came. He might think it was to better his condition.

He fought in the American Revolution and was wounded. Many of us have ancestors who are reported to have fought in the Revolution, but few of them were wounded. This man was left for dead in the battle of Guilford County Courthouse in the Carolinas in March 1781. Thanks to good nursing he recovered and, as in all good endings, married his nurse. Four sons came to him, one of whom was Samuel, who was the youngest.

Samuel's sons, Francis, Alfred, and Eli, and their families joined the Church in 1832, about the time that my great-grandfather joined. They suffered through all the vicissitudes and the troubles and persecutions and mobbings of Jackson County, Far West, and Nauvoo, and finally came west. At Winter Quarters their father joined them. He had not joined the Church until this time but joined shortly afterward. Francis married a young woman by the name of Jane Vail Johnson. I shall speak of her later.

Call to Meadow Valley

They all came to Utah and settled in Tooele County. They were just getting settled and making things go when they were called by President Brigham Young to St. George, and they went, like all good Latter-day Saints did in those days. But they had not been in St. George very long when they were called to settle in Meadow Valley. That is a place you folks probably have not heard about. It is now known as Panaca, in what they thought was southwestern Utah, but which actually later came to be Nevada. These people, obeying the call, again without question, were the first family to move to Meadow Valley, and they made a dugout house. Sister Young said that you may not know what a dugout house is. I replied that most of the folks would know: One digs a cubical hole in a hillside and covers it with a roof of wooden poles topped with clay.

Troubles of the few settlers with the Indians caused the authorities in St. George to give them permission to abandon the project, but Sister Jane Johnson Lee refused to leave. She said she was there to stay, and stay they did. Later two Indians came into her dugout home, and one of them, seeing a rifle in one corner of the room, demanded it. Sister Lee refused to give it to him. He started for the gun, but she struck him so hard with a piece of stove wood, it knocked him down. He staggered to his feet and drew his bow, aiming the arrow at her. She let him have another piece of wood, which smashed the bow and arrow. Both Indians departed.

McMurrin sisters

Two sons of this brave couple married sisters. Samuel Marion Lee married Margaret McMurrin, and Francis Lee, Jr., married Mary McMurrin. The McMurrins were converts from Scotland who had crossed the plains with the handcart companies. Brother McMurrin, a cooper, which is a man who makes barrels and bends wood, repaired many a handcart wheel en route, which helped get the carts to the valley but delayed him and his family. They also settled in Tooele. Each of the Lee brothers took his bride to Meadow Valley.

I speak of Margaret's bravery.
 Eleven times she placed
 Her life upon the block
 And offered it that Children might be born.
 No sterile chamber
 Where the doctor waits,
 The anesthetic cone
 And nurse in readiness,
 Could be her lot.
 The cabin walls absorbed
 The agonizing cries,
 With Death close by.
 He did not claim her life.
 Instead he took each child—

Each little one to heaven—
 All eleven.
 Then came the twelfth.

For her the light burned
 Dim, then flickered low,
 And out—
 But she had filled her life, and Given all that she could give.
 Her mission was performed;
 A son was born,
 The only child to live.

He was named his father's name—
 Samuel Lee.

Mary McMurrin Lee took the child and let him nurse along with her own child, but after a time the strain was too great, so they took the baby to Salt Lake City to Grandmother McMurrin.

"I'll give him one last nursing," she said, and then laying him in his crib, she went back to Meadow Valley.

Samuel Lee and Louisa Bingham

Under his grandmother's care the baby Samuel grew into a stalwart boy, and when sixteen went to Clifton, Idaho, in Cache Valley, where he worked on a farm and there later met Louisa Bingham.

The Bingham family, stalwart in the faith, were pioneers. They endured the hardships of the plains and the difficulties of conquering the new land. They were among the early settlers of Clifton.

Out on the farm
 Louisa Bingham
 Grew and blossomed
 Into girlish womanhood.
 Her eyes
 Caught the color of the Somber hills in spring,
 And in the fall they Danced with joy
 At autumn's coloring.

At home she learned
To wash and cook and sew.
And winter
Saw her
Skating, sledding, and Riding in the bobsleigh
Through the snow.

Then Samuel Lee, now
Working on this nearby farm,
Watched her grow,
Saw with his heart
As well as with his eyes
The slow unfolding
Of her girlish charm,
The bloom of girlhood
High upon her cheeks,
A budding woman,
Gentle, soft, and warm.
And she saw him,
The young, strong, steady hands,
The head well set,
The shoulders square
And broad,
The muscles strong
And firm,
A good young man.
She knew his story well—
The twelfth and only child
Which lived.

And so they came together,
Drawn by a magnet
Neither one could see,
To be the parents of a
Man of destiny.

And so, in good time, and in his turn, there came into the family circle on a windy day in late March 1899 a son. They named him Harold Bingham Lee.

It is fitting this day that we speak briefly of this heritage. The Lord prepared the lineage through which President Lee came that he might inherit their bravery, their loyalty, their integrity, and their devotion to the truth.

Born of goodly parents

Twenty-five hundred and seventy-two years ago, give or take a year, a prophet accepted of the Lord began to write his history: "I, Nephi, having been born of goodly parents. . . ."

And then he went on to say, "I make a record of my proceedings in my days." (1 Ne. 1:1.)

And so the first prophet of our times might have said the same words: "I, Joseph Smith, having been born of goodly parents . . . make my record."

And now, so it is today. Beginning his work as the prophet of the Lord, this modern seer and revelator may thus also begin his history: "I, Harold Bingham Lee, having been born of goodly parents, begin my work."

Prophets are born of goodly parents. Before the earth was formed the heavenly hosts gave shouts of joy, both because they could come to the earth and that their leaders were chosen and recognized.

Those of us who are parents have children who may become prophets or sons of prophets. Let us raise them in truth and in virtue.

Chosen before birth

Said the Lord: "Abraham, thou art one of them; thou wast chosen before thou wast born." (Abr. 3:23.)
And the Lord designated the others who have been chosen. I do not presume; rather, I am sure, President Lee, thou wast chosen before thou wast born.

I pray that the whisperings of the Spirit, the visions of eternity, the mighty words of Christ our Lord will come to and be with you, even as they were with Nephi and with Joseph Smith. And I pray too that the disloyal and the disobedient will lose their power to hurt or make afraid.

I know that President Lee is a prophet and a seer and a revelator. I have seen with my own eyes the mantle fall upon him and have had a witness borne into my soul that the Lord has chosen him and sustains him.

God our Father, through his Son, Jesus Christ, directs the work of this the true and living church established by the Lord Jesus Christ on the earth. I know it, and bear witness of it, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

Thank you, President Young. I am humbled by that recital of my humble beginnings, the simple annals of the poor.

Elder James A. Cullimore, Assistant to the Twelve, will now speak to us.

Elder James A. Cullimore

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

What I have prepared to say today, my brethren and sisters, is directed primarily to the home teachers of the Church and those directing their work.

Importance of the home

Much has been given during these conference sessions about the family and the home and the importance of them by those who have spoken. It has been indicated, "The very essence of divine government is fatherhood and the recognition of the family relationship. The Church itself exists to exalt the family.

President Joseph F. Smith told us, "The very foundation of the kingdom of God, of righteousness, of progress, of development, of eternal life, and eternal increase in the kingdom of God is laid in the divinely ordained home." (Hugh B. Brown, in Conference Report, October 2, 1966, pp. 103-104.)

President Harold B. Lee said recently, "The most important of the Lord's work will be that which we do within our own homes." (Regional Representatives Seminar, April 7, 1972, p. 2.)

We are told that each family in the Church is really a kingdom or government within itself. The father, by virtue of the priesthood of God that has been bestowed upon him, is the head of that government. This is what constitutes patriarchal office in the family.

Originally it was the only government on the earth and was passed down from Adam to his descendants. Eventually, as society became more complex, the manner of governing the people of the earth had to change, but as far as the Church is concerned, the same order exists within the families as God set it up originally with Father Adam. And this same order will extend into the eternities. (See Millennial Star, vol. 14, p. 290.)

Priesthood to watch over Church

The importance of the family was emphasized to the Prophet Joseph Smith even before the Church was organized. The Lord revealed to him a plan by which the priesthood was to watch over the Church. The Saints were instructed "to visit the house of each member, and exhort them to pray vocally and in secret and attend to all family duties." (D&C 20:47.) He told the teachers to "watch over the church always, and be with and strengthen them;

"And see that there is no iniquity in the church, neither hardness with each other, neither lying, backbiting, nor evil speaking;

"And see that the church meet together often, and also see that all the members do their duty." (D&C 20:53-55.)

From that time forward, to a degree, all homes in the Church have been visited monthly. This was known as ward teaching.

In September 1963 home teaching was introduced to the Church. This differs from ward teaching in that greater emphasis is placed on watching over the family, rather than just making a monthly visit. Instructions have been given that the duty of the home teacher is to keep in touch with the families, to watch over them, to contact them in whatever manner necessary, in order to watch over them. We are told that home teaching is not just the one visit a month, but that home teaching is never done. We are to have concern for these families every day as long as they are assigned to us. The one visit a month to a family is important, but it is only one means of contact as we watch over our families.

Challenges of home teaching

On the occasion of the official introduction of the home teaching program, President Marion G. Romney suggested some of the challenges and opportunities of home teaching, in these words: "Through the program of priesthood correlation, we bearers of the priesthood must increase our efforts to encourage, teach, and inspire the Saints to become 'partakers of the divine nature,' . . . through obedience to the sanctifying principles of the gospel.

"We are performing far below our potential in this matter. . . . Now, priesthood correlation, as we are using the term here, contemplates all that is now being done in ward teaching and much more. It unites under one undertaking many activities. It requires that attention be given to every member of every family, particularly to those who need special encouragement to live the gospel. It means much more than a perfunctory visit once a month. It includes:

"1. Periodic visits to every family by two priesthood bearers;

"2. Laboring with Melchizedek

Priesthood bearers [the fathers] to build spiritual and temporal 'strength';

"3. Laboring with inactive and overage members of the Aaronic Priesthood under 21;

"4. Activating and bringing into full church participation senior members of the Aaronic Priesthood and their families [now known as prospective elders];

"5. Fellowshiping and bringing into full activity recent converts, new arrivals, and all inactive church members;

"6. Encouraging all parents and other family heads to maintain genuine Latter-day Saint homes in which are practiced and taught the sanctifying principles of the gospel. . . .

"It will be their [the home teachers'] responsibility," President Romney continues, "to make sure that infants are blessed; that children are baptized at eight years of age; and that boys are worthy and qualified to be ordained to the priesthood at 12 years of age and that they are so ordained; that they move through the grades of the priesthood in proper order; that candidates for marriage are properly taught the importance and sanctity of temple marriage and the church standards which will qualify them for it, to the end that they will be married in the temple.

"It will be the responsibility of the two visiting brethren to know the available church activities for each family member and encourage him to avail himself of them—such activities, for example, as Sacrament meetings, stake conferences, and other activities; activities provided by priesthood quorums, auxiliary organizations, . . . genealogical and temple work, and so forth." (Improvement Era, December 1962, pp. 938-39.)

Vision lacking

This is really watching over the Church. After nine years of home teaching, however, I am afraid we are really still doing mostly ward teaching. We are still prodding the priesthood home teachers to "hurry and get your home teaching done—the month is nearly over." Even now the home teacher is heard to say, "If I really had a message to take to my families, I could do my teaching."

These things indicate we really don't have the vision of "watching over the Church." We might have a great record of percentage of homes visited each month, but the real test is: Are we affecting the lives of the individual members of the family for good through our contacts? Are we respecting the sacred nature of the family unit by working with and through the father? Do we sit down with the father as often as needed? Do we listen to him? Do we encourage and praise and otherwise uplift him?

Strengthening parents

Our calling and opportunity as home teachers is to watch over and strengthen fathers of families; the Lord expects fathers and mothers first to teach the gospel to their families in regular family home evenings and daily as teaching opportunities arise. Home teachers may be asked to assist on special occasions.

We have been counseled that the family, presided over by the priesthood holder, is the basic church unit. We know, as home teachers, that the order of the priesthood requires us to work with a family through the presiding authority in the family, the father. The father should be recognized in his position. The Lord holds him responsible for the righteous functions of his family in relation to other church units and for the conducting of his family into eternal life. The home teacher working with and through the father strengthens his role and responsibility.

Helping fathers

Our thought as home teachers should always be: How can I help the fathers under my care magnify their priesthood by fully accepting their responsibilities as patriarchs of their families?

We might put much effort into working with individuals in a family and eventually reach a child, but our real challenge is to work with the father in strengthening him that he might lead the entire family to celestial glory.

President Joseph F. Smith said, regarding the right of the father: "There is no higher authority in matters relating to the family organization, and especially when that organization is presided over by one holding the higher Priesthood, than that of the father. . . . The patriarchal order is of divine origin and will continue throughout time and eternity. There is then a particular reason why men, women, and children should understand this order and this authority in the household of the people of God, and seek to make it what God intended it to be, a qualification and preparation for the highest exaltation of His children. In the home the presiding authority is always vested in the father, and in all home affairs and family matters there is no other authority paramount." (The Juvenile Instructor, March 1902, p. 146.)

Need for new emphasis

There is great need for a fresh new look at ourselves as home teachers. How can we more nearly accomplish that which was intended by the Lord in the revelation to the Prophet Joseph Smith?

I think President Lee sounded the note to the Regional Representatives of the Twelve last April when he said:

"Maybe the home teacher should be charged more clearly to describe his mission to watch over and to strengthen to see that members do their duty. . . . They think themselves as teachers of the Gospel message only. Maybe we ought to be calling them home guardians or sentinels and to report their stewardship to the fathers of the ward. We must do something to change the emphasis from teaching to guardians, 'watching over the church kind of concept.' Until we get that into our minds, we are not going to do the kind of home teaching that is going to get results."

We need, at once, to catch the spirit of what President Lee has said and become priesthood guardians, priesthood watchmen, rather than teachers of the gospel only. We need to make sure home teachers are not guilty, after having made the one visit a month to each family, of relaxing, feeling good about it, and declaring our home teaching done for the month. Remember, home teaching is never done.

Needs of the family

Brother Rex Reeves, one of the Regional Representatives of the Twelve, gave us some wonderful direction when he said: "Priesthood home teachers must think in terms of needs of the family, not just taking a message. When the priesthood home teacher can see souls—not just another home to visit—and when he can feel the needs of individuals and, in his heart, when he can love them and has a yearning to help, he can give courage to struggling souls as they try to climb homeward in these perilous times.

"Priesthood home teaching is not just another program of the Church, something to get done so you can send the report in. It is a principle of action—the vehicle by which all of the programs of the Church are taken to the family and the individual, and, in addition, it has the power to bless and guide and strengthen souls." (Regional Representatives Seminar, December 12, 1970.)

Role of home teacher

When stake presidents, bishops, and priesthood leaders generally get the real concept and feeling of home teaching and let it be the vehicle by which all Church programs are taken to the family and the individuals, when families and individuals come to properly recognize and work with the home teachers, we will be able to give a much better account of ourselves in watching over the Church.

The First Presidency many years ago stated, "The home [is] the basis of a righteous life and no other instrumentality can take its place or fulfill its essential functions." (Cited by Elder Harold B. Lee, in CR, September 30, 1961, p. 79.)

May we better fulfill our assignment as home teachers by becoming guardians and watchmen over the families of the Church and thus strengthen them, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

I sincerely hope that you priesthood holders will remember what has been said to you about how to do home teaching, not ward teaching.

The congregation and choir will now join in singing "Israel, Israel, God Is Calling," after which Elder Marion D. Hanks, Assistant to the Twelve, will address us.

The congregation and choir sang the hymn, "Israel, Israel, God Is Calling."

President Lee

Elder Marion D. Hanks, Assistant to the Twelve, will address us. He will be followed by Elder Hartman Rector, Jr., of the First Council of Seventy.

Elder Marion D. Hanks

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

For some time I have thought whimsically, as this occasion approached, of a counselor in a stake presidency some years ago who began his remarks by recalling a day after World War II when he had been surrounded by an unfriendly mob in a foreign place. He said, as he escaped with his life, and that barely, that he had been ill with fright. He said, "My voice quavered, my heart palpitated, my mouth was dry; I was really frightened. Knowing that you love me," he said, "I can't quite imagine why I feel that same way as I speak to you."

I have always felt it to be a great honor to be permitted to express the convictions of my heart here, and I feel so today.

Gospel defined

Yesterday President Romney referred to the 27th chapter of 3 Nephi in recalling the Lord's admonition to name his church in his name. Subsequently in that same marvelous chapter, Christ defined his gospel in some beautiful and to me eternally significant words: "Behold I have given unto you my gospel, and this is the gospel which I have given unto you—that I came into the world to do the will of my Father, because my Father sent me."

It is my earnest conviction that we came here for the same reason. Christ expresses his understanding of the will of his Father and his own commission in the words which follow:

"And my Father sent me that I might be lifted up upon the cross; and after that I had been lifted up upon the cross, that I might draw all men unto me, that as I have been lifted up by men even so should men be lifted up by the Father, to stand before me, to be judged of their works, whether they be good or whether they be evil—

"And for this cause have I been lifted up. . . ." (3 Ne. 27:13-15.)

And then the Master taught what we know to be the first principles and ordinances of the gospel, concluding as he had begun: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, this is my gospel." Then he added: "Therefore, what manner of men ought ye to be? Verily I say unto you, even as I am." (3 Ne. 27:21, 27.)

Our commission

Christ's commission was clear, and it seems to me that through him our commission becomes clear, that we are so to live that through him and his love we may be lifted up by the Father to enjoy the consequences of our convictions and our decisions.

We are here to love God and to keep his commandments, to live with an integrity that will merit our own self-respect and the respect of our loved ones and make us worthy for the companionship of the Spirit. We are here to love and serve our fellowmen, to reflect in our own lives daily our true convictions as to the priceless value of the individual child of God, to live with joy in a way worthy of the sons of God, to become the manner of men he is.

The worth of souls

He taught us very clearly the worth of souls and that they are very great in the sight of God. The lost sheep should have an anxious shepherd seeking him. The lost coin must be searched for. The prodigal who comes to himself and turns homeward will find his Father running to meet him. Thus taught the Lord.

Perhaps we don't all of us understand and apply this principle effectively, but there are those who do.

Recently a stake president told of his visit, with others, to a Junior Sunday School class. When the visitors entered they were made welcome, and the teacher, seeking to impress the significance of the experience for the youngsters, said to a little child on the front row, "How many important people are here today?" The child rose and began counting out loud, reaching a total of seventeen, including every person in the room. There were seventeen very important persons there that day, children and visitors!

That is how Christ feels, and so should we.

Some souls in jeopardy

We are all aware that many valuable souls are in jeopardy these days. Many sheep are wandering, many coins are being dropped, many young prodigals have left home and are wasting their inheritance. As we have been reminded this morning, in substantially every community across the earth there are those who are cynically trading in filth, mining gold from dirt. They press pornography and drugs and destructive behavior. They seek to beguile unstable souls, as the scriptures teach.

"For when they speak great swelling words of vanity, they allure through the lusts of the flesh, through much wantonness, those that were clean escaped from them who live in error. While they promise them liberty, they themselves are the servants of corruption. . . ." (2 Pet. 2:18-19.)

Some other adults are not wise or sensitive to the needs of the young, or are guilty of cowardice masquerading as enlightenment and liberalism, or are indifferent.

Unfortunately, too many young people surrender to the enticements and arguments, often, perhaps, because they never get a chance to see or experience the happier, purposeful, more excellent way. Some have no experience with a loving home, or concerned, loving parents, or a unified, happy family. Not knowing, or choosing immaturity against knowledge, they make bad decisions and commit themselves to courses that are destructive.

Choosing a wiser way

The marvel to me is how many choice young people see through the mists and choose a wiser way. Some of them do this even though they have not had the benefit of a good home and family and parents who care and try. Somehow they are wise enough to take a stand against the crowd or the current, even when the source of the pressure seems respectable and when those who should care seem not to care.

There are so many great young people. One who comes to mind was a well-dressed, good-looking young man, sharp, well-spoken, and contemporary in every constructive way, but he was obviously deeply distressed as he rose to offer a greeting in behalf of the university student body of which he was president. His audience was made up of regents and trustees of institutions of higher education meeting in conference at his school. The group had listened to a series of speeches from educators, noting with approval the abandonment on college and university campuses of the doctrine of in loco parentis, a term that means, as you may know, "standing in the place of a parent." The schools, the speakers said, no longer accept the responsibility of standing in the place of a parent to the students who attend them. Knowledge, intellect, reason—these are the goods with which these institutions deal; the private life of the individual is not their proper concern.

The young student president said what many of us were thinking:

"I've listened to your announcement of the abandonment of the principle of in loco parentis," he said, "and feel there is something you should know. If in fact the school is no longer interested in or willing to fill that role—if it doesn't care about us as persons, as good parents would care—then that leaves a great many of us with no parents at all any place."

No further explanation was made, and none was needed.

Pressures on youth

As pressures in our communities have intensified for the young, so life on many college campuses has undergone a great transformation in the last decade, not so much in the classroom or curriculum as in the nature of student life out of class. While a few activists have had the chief attention, every student in the affected schools has been influenced by the breakdown of the rules that once governed the lives of undergraduates.

Only a few years ago most colleges made a vigorous effort to enforce regulations governing dormitory standards and hours, student dress, sexual behavior, drinking, and chaperonage. Now in many institutions all of this has changed. Revolutionary and rebellious behavior seems to have toned down, but many rules formerly enforced have all but disappeared.

What is likely to happen to inexperienced young persons dropped into such a situation in the school or community?

Experience at Missionary Ridge

There is a story that may offer significant insight. Outside Chattanooga, Tennessee, is a place known as Missionary Ridge. During the Civil War a numerically superior Southern force was dug in on the Ridge, protecting it against Northern attack. The defenders were well fortified and strongly entrenched, holding strategic positions that would seem to make them invulnerable. Yet the hill was lost. Why? The soldiers on Missionary Ridge were so isolated from each other that they had lost touch with each other. They could not hear their leaders through the din. Plainly visible to them were the large numbers of the enemy coming up the hill to attack them. Feeling alone and frightened, a few individual defenders panicked and surrendered and were soon joined by large numbers of their fellows. The battle was lost. They were not cowards; they thought they were alone.

Present day conflicts

How very parallel are some of the scenes of conflict we see going on around us! God's choice young sons and daughters are being subjected to the new social arrangements and pressures currently in vogue. Many are cut off from any supportive roots. They feel alone, abandoned, unloved. Some panic and surrender to the advancing enemy. They sin, and then let their sins become habits. What if they have no place to turn to for refuge, for strength, encouragement, instruction? What if they have no parents to whom they feel they can go for reassurance, forgiveness, unconditional love?

Value of Church programs

O! the implications are so clear for those of us who have been granted stewardship among the children of God—for parents, teachers, leaders, neighbors, concerned adults, advisers, home teachers!

Of late I have found myself thanking God more fervently than ever before for the gospel and the Church. I thank him for people and for programs that reach out to support parents and to bless young men and women like my choice young friend who felt that he had no parents anyway.

No young person who is truly involved in the warmth of the kingdom need ever feel that he has no place to go and no one who is genuinely concerned about him. No one of them should ever fall for the false proposition that a human being can have his mind unbraided from his heart, sinews, and spirit—the rest of him conveniently stored away while the mind is disciplined and filled like a silo with grains of knowledge—and then the whole braided together again, with the expectation that the individual will now function in the moral, ethical, spiritually strong way we would like in our teacher or doctor or carpenter or lawyer or banker or son-in-law.

None should be surrendered ever, unsupported, to circumstances that will certainly make much more difficult for them the enjoyment of those blessings that make life worthwhile—and I speak of good conscience, wholesome marriage and family and other human relationships, and the confidence we are entitled to have in the presence of God. "Character is higher than intellect," wrote Emerson. "Men must be fit to live as well as to think."

The long view

Of course, every young person must make his own decisions and give his own answer. He must try to see the long view, and it is our responsibility to help him see the moral hazards in the course that starts out to be fun and turns out to be artfully camouflaged trouble. "The way in is easy, the way out is hard," someone has said. The world is full of booby traps and pitfalls, with signs pointing to them that read—

"This way to the fun house."

To meet the tests of the times, the young person must think, put down roots, establish wise loyalties, learn and actively appreciate his heritage, and know that he is ultimately responsible for his decisions.

My spirit today is one of gratitude but not one of self-congratulation. How well are we doing with what we have, with what we know? I am only hours away from a sobering interview with another beautiful young person who has apparently experienced failure of relationship at every level—with family, friends, leaders, teachers, even with God, she felt. She seemed so alone in the presence of great pressures that she surrendered to the enemy for a time. Now she has some help. She has learned that Christ the Lord has the answer; she will be liberated because she is looking to him who is strengthening her in this and all things.

How tragic it would be if such a beautiful spirit were lost because one of us, one of God's stewards, fails in an assignment or relationship.

"... in thy name we go"

Recently I recalled for a wonderful group of great young Latter-day Saints the thrilling story of Gideon of old, humble in the face of a seemingly insuperable challenge but called of God, who, through his resourcefulness and the strength of the Almighty, won a battle. His rallying cry is remembered: "The sword of the Lord, and of Gideon." (Judg. 7:18.)

One other line from that marvelous story is so important that I call it to your attention: "they stood every man in his own place round about the camp..." (Judg. 7:21.) The battle was won.

Asa, king of Judah, commissioned of God to the conflict, facing an enemy army of more than a million soldiers, gave us the key. He said, "... we rest on thee, and in thy name we go..." (2 Chron. 14:11.)

I thank God for the multitude of marvelous young people I know. I pray for them and invoke God's Spirit to be with them, and as plainly as I know how, and as earnestly, invoke God's Spirit to be upon us, the stewards. Let me repeat for the second time today that beautiful line from the hymn Brother Petersen used this morning:

"The soul that on Jesus hath leaned for repose

I will not, I cannot, desert to his foes;
That soul, though all hell should endeavor to shake,

I'll never, no never, no never forsake!"
—Hymns, no. 66

God bless us, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

Elder Marion D. Hanks, Assistant to the Twelve, has just addressed us.

We shall now hear from Elder Hartman Rector, Jr. of the First Council of Seventy.

Elder Hartman Rector, Jr.

Of the First Council of the Seventy

If I might, I would like to say a few words to the youth of Zion, following the lead of Brother Hanks. I love them and they know it.

Story of Joseph

The story of Joseph, the son of Jacob who was called Israel, is a vivid representation of the great truth that "all things work together for good to [those] who" love God. (See Rom. 8:28.) Joseph always seemed to do the right thing; but still, more importantly, he did it for the right reason. And how very, very significant that is! Joseph was sold by his own brothers as a slave and was purchased by Potiphar, a captain of the guard of Pharaoh. But even as an indentured servant, Joseph turned every experience and all circumstances, no matter how trying, into something good.

This ability to turn everything into something good appears to be a godly characteristic. Our Heavenly Father always seems able to do this. Everything, no matter how dire, becomes a victory to the Lord. Joseph, although a slave and wholly undeserving of this fate, nevertheless remained faithful to the Lord and continued to live the commandments and made something very good of his degrading circumstances. People like this cannot be defeated, because they will not give up. They have the correct, positive attitude, and Dale Carnegie's expression seems to apply: If you feel you have a lemon, you can either complain about how sour it is, or you can make a lemonade. It is all up to you.

"Failure ceases to exist in the face of persistence." So, the Lord prospered Joseph, and his master saw that the Lord was with him and made Joseph overseer over all his house; and all that he had, he put in Joseph's hands. So implicit was his trust in this remarkable young man that Potiphar did not bother to keep any accounting of his own possessions.

Right thing for right reason

Naturally, such a remarkable person would be enticing to the opposite sex, and so it was with Joseph. Potiphar's wife, who, to say the most for her, was of very doubtful character, attempted to seduce Joseph; but Joseph was untouchable because of his trust and reliance on the Lord. He tried to reason with her, saying:

"... my master . . . hath committed all that he hath to my hand;

"There is none greater in this house than I; neither hath he kept back any thing from me but thee, because thou art his wife. . . ." (Gen. 39:8-9.)

Then, it would seem that he would have followed this declaration with a profession of loyalty to his master because of his appreciation of the trust that Potiphar had placed in him. But he did not; instead, his statement of why he could not submit to her demands revealed the real strength of this choice young man. He said: "... how then can I do this great wickedness, and sin against God?" (Gen. 39:9.) With this statement Joseph showed that he was determined to do the right thing, but do it for the right reason. That reason: because he loved the Lord.

Oh, yes, it is good to be loyal to your employer, or your friends, or your family. Loyalty is akin to honesty; and if you are not honest, you are really not much good. You are no good to yourself because you lie to yourself. This is called rationalization, but it is really just lying. You are no good to your friends because they cannot trust you. You are no good to the Lord because he cannot use you—unless, of course, it would be as a bad example. If you make a mistake, all is not lost. You can always be used as a bad example.

Allegiance to the Lord

Joseph vividly demonstrated why he was favored of the Lord, or, as the scriptures said, why "the Lord was with Joseph, and he was a prosperous man. . . ." (Gen. 39.) His reliance was upon the Lord. His trust was in the Lord, and his allegiance ran to the Lord.

I believe this is the greatest lesson that can be learned by the youth of Zion—to do the right thing because you love the Lord. It is so vitally important that, I feel, if you do anything in righteousness for any other reason than you love the Lord, you are wrong—at least you are on very shaky ground. And, somewhere your reasons for acting in righteousness will not be strong enough to see you through. You will give way to expediency, or peer group pressure, or honor, or fame, or applause, or the thrill of the moment, or some other worldly reason. Unless your motives are built upon the firm foundation of love of the Lord, you will not be able to stand.

Finding consistency

It seems that, at this day and time, everything is in a state of change. There appears to be nothing in this life that is not subject to erosion, or decay, or just change for the sake of change—like the new automobile models each year. There is only one place where we can go and find consistency, and that is where Joseph went: to the Lord, for "he is the same, yesterday, today, and forever." And the most important fact is that there is no place you can go where he is not. In the words of the psalmist,

"Whither shall I go from thy spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy presence?"

"If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there: if I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there.

"If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea;

"Even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me.

"If I say, Surely the darkness shall cover me; even the night shall be light about me.

"Yea, the darkness hideth not from thee; but the night shineth as the day: the darkness and the light are both alike to thee." (Ps. 139:7-12.)

Whether walking on the moon, or probing the immensity and vastness of

Sunday, October 8

Third Day

space, or in the depths of the sea, or in darkest Africa, or in Salt Lake City, he is there.

Oh, if we could only learn this lesson and look to his living prophet on earth! In this day and time, following the living prophet is the only way that we can follow the Lord God and do his will. You can't do it by quoting the dead prophets or ignoring or throwing rocks at the living prophets. Following the prophet today, President Harold B. Lee, is the only real safety we can know in this time of decay.

Joseph's example

Let us continue with Joseph's story, and perhaps we can learn how to handle difficult situations by following Joseph's example. The scripture records that Joseph stoutly resisted the advances of Potiphar's wife, but one day as he went into the house "to do his business," it so happened that "there was none of the men of the house there within." (Gen. 39:11.)

Now, this is always a dangerous situation and should be avoided if at all possible. Potiphar's wife became particularly insistent, even to taking hold of his coat and attempting to draw him to her. But Joseph did the very best thing he could do under the circumstances. The scripture records, ". . . he left his garment in her hand, and fled, and got him out." (Gen. 39:12.) Or, in today's language—he ran.

Maybe that doesn't sound like a very sophisticated thing to do, but sometimes running is the only thing to do. This was such a time. I am sure that Joseph did not know he was going to be alone with her, or he would not have gone into the house. I have great faith in Joseph.

It is more important that we beware of compromising situations than anything else we can do. We must avoid them. If we don't, we will run the great risk of being overcome.

Missing the treetops

In my experience, I have found that it is very, very dangerous to fly just high enough to miss the treetops. I spent twenty-six years flying the navy's airplanes. It was very exciting to see how close I could fly to the trees. This is called "flat hatting" in the navy, and it is extremely dangerous. When you are flying just high enough to miss the trees and your engine coughs once, you are in the trees.

Now let's pretend that the navy had a commandment—"Thou shalt not fly thy airplane in the trees." As a matter of fact, they did have such a commandment. In order to really be free of the commandment, it becomes necessary for me to add a commandment of my own to the navy's commandment, such as, "Thou shalt not fly thy airplane closer than 5,000 feet to the trees." When you do this, you make the navy's commandment of not flying in the trees easy to live, and the safety factor is tremendously increased.

Admittedly, the latter commandment is your own addition, and care should be exercised that you do not get it mixed up with the law and expound it as the law. Rather, it is your own commandment, invented by you for your own self-preservation; and, if you are going to preach it, it should be expounded as such.

Barriers against temptation

We should studiously avoid placing ourselves in positions where we could be overcome by temptation. Paul's admonition that we avoid even the appearance of evil certainly represents an addition to the Lord's commandment, which is, to "forsake all evil" and "entangle not yourselves in sin." (See D&C 98:11; 88:86.) But if we follow Paul's admonition, we will find the Lord's commandment much easier to live.

It is so important that young people who are unmarried erect barriers against temptation to help them avoid the compromising situations. May I suggest a few barriers.

1. Never go into a house alone with one of the opposite sex.

2. Never, never enter a bedroom alone with one of the opposite sex.

3. Do not neck or pet. Now, admittedly there is no place in the scriptures where the Lord has said, "Thou shalt not neck or pet." I know that, but he has said, "Thou shalt not commit adultery, or fornication, or anything like unto it."

4. Never park on a lonely road with just the two of you alone.

5. Do not read pornographic literature.

6. Do not attend R- or X-rated movies, and avoid drive-ins.

7. Do not spend time in drinking or gambling establishments.

Admittedly, these are just a few personal commandments that you might adopt. You should make up your own special and specific list of commandments, such as, "I'll never accept another date with Herman." Such commandments would depend on your own past experience and your own particular weaknesses.

"... get yourself out"

Of course, there is no guarantee that your personal barriers will always stand; some may fail; you may slip and break your own commandment. If and when you do, remember Joseph and follow his example. You can always run and "get yourself out." Get out before the Lord's commandment is broken.

Yes, Joseph ran, and because he did, he was temporarily placed in prison, where he was shut out from society, but if he had not run, he would have been an eternal prisoner, being shut out from God perhaps forever, because he would not have been in condition to receive the necessary communications that made him the great prophet that he was.

Promised blessings

The Lord has such great and tremendous blessing in store for the youth of Zion today if they will but walk uprightly before him and keep his commandments and thus qualify for his blessings. As it is written, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." (1 Cor. 2:9.) Such blessings come only through obedience to his commandments.

"There is a law, irrevocably decreed in heaven before the foundations of this world, upon which all blessings are predicated—

"And when we obtain any blessing from God, it is by obedience to that law upon which it is predicated." (D&C 130:20-21.)

Again, he has said, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." (John 14:15.)

I pray that we may walk in righteousness because we love the Lord, for surely this is the right reason. In the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

We have just listened to Elder Hartman Rector, Jr. of the First Council of Seventy.

Now we have just a few minutes for two of our new brethren. We have told them that they shouldn't expect to preach a sermon. Reminding them of what we said to the the other brethren that there are two times when we shouldn't make a speech, one at the beginning, and one at the end of our career. But we do want to hear from these two brethren, Elder Rex D. Pinegar, first, for a few moments to bear his testimony; and then we would like to hear from Brother L. Tom Perry. Brother Pinegar has just been named as a member of the First Council of Seventy. He is now presiding over a mission and is anxious to get back to his little flock whom he left by the speediest way possible to get to the conference. Then we will hear from Brother L. Tom Perry, the president of the Boston Stake momentarily.

Elder Rex D. Pinegar

Of the First Council of the Seventy

I am reminded as I approach you today of a scripture that was written to me in a letter by one of the missionaries in the North Carolina-Virginia Mission. It expresses the feelings in my heart and is taken from Alma, the 29th chapter, verses 9 and 10, where we find:

"I know that which the Lord hath commanded me, and I glory in it. I do not glory of myself, but I glory in that which the Lord hath commanded me; yea, and this is my glory, that perhaps I may be an instrument in the hands of God to bring some soul to repentance; and this is my joy.

"And behold, when I see many of my brethren truly penitent, and coming to the Lord their God, then is my soul filled with joy; then do I remember what the Lord has done for me, yea, even that he hath heard my prayer; yea, then do I remember his merciful arm which he extended towards me."

That we may all remember that arm is my prayer in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

Elder L. Tom Perry

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

Elder Loren Dunn, as I left for lunch, whispered in my ear and said, "They grade General Authorities on how little time they take in their first address." I am trying for a straight A today.

Three pledges

I would just like to make three pledges: First of all, to my dear wife, whom I love, sustain, and support. If she continues to support me the way she has in the last twenty-five years, I know I cannot fail any assignment.

Second, to my three lovely children, Barbara, Lee, and Gay. I will try to live worthy of the inspiration of the Lord to be a priesthood leader in the home.

And finally, to President Lee, his great counselors, the Council of the Twelve, I sustain and support you. Let me help you carry the great burden which is yours.

This is the Church of Jesus Christ as it has been established in the latter days. I am grateful for that testimony, for the strength it gives me. I say this humbly, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

I wanted you to feel the spirit of these splendid new men, whom the Lord has brought to his service by the gift of prophesy. To that I bear humble witness. My brethren, I am sure, understand that, and they know the way by which these brethren have been called.

President Harold B. Lee

We now come to the closing moments of a momentous conference, history making and in many ways a conference that has great significance because of the time in which we live. Perhaps never have we turned a page of the history of the Church with greater challenge, with greater problems, or with greater promise for the future.

Unity of brethren

I have listened with great satisfaction to the testimonies of my brethren. I believe you have felt the unity in your First Presidency, these noble men, President Tanner and President Romney, and the feeling of oneness that has been expressed by the Twelve and all of these brethren of the General Authorities. There is a bond that is to be found among those called to these positions that is stronger than the ties of blood relationship, so deep, so wonderful, so strengthening, except for which we probably couldn't walk the path that we are asked to walk at these times.

Words from Liberty Jail

In the midst of similar circumstances the Prophet Joseph Smith was in the Liberty jail trying to think of something he could do to strengthen his people. He wrote some significant words. He said:

"Therefore, that we should waste and wear out our lives in bringing to light all the hidden things of darkness, wherein we know them; and they are truly manifest from heaven—

"These should then be attended to with great earnestness. . . .

"You know, brethren," he wrote, "that a very large ship is benefited very much by a very small helm in the time of a storm, by being kept workways with the wind and the waves.

"Therefore, dearly beloved brethren, let us cheerfully do all things that lie in our power; and then may we stand still, with the utmost assurance, to see the salvation of God, and for his arm to be revealed." (D&C 123:13-14, 16-17.)

Light in a storm

I was at Manti, Utah, some years ago. As we came out of the Saturday night leadership meeting, there was a heavy snowstorm. As we drove to the home of the stake president, he stopped his car and turned back to the temple hill. There the lighted temple was standing majestically. We sat there in silence for a few moments, inspired by the sight of that beautiful, sacred place. He said, "You know, Brother Lee, that temple is never more beautiful than in times of a dense fog or in times of a heavy, severe storm."

Just so, never is the gospel of Jesus Christ more beautiful than in times of intense need, or in times of a severe storm within us as individuals, or in times of confusion and turmoil.

Change through experience

I come now to the closing moments of this session when I have time for some sobered reflections. Somehow I have had the feeling that during the expressions here, whenever my name has been mentioned, they were talking of somebody other than myself. And I really think that is so, because one cannot go through the experience that I have gone through these last three days and be the same as before. I am different than I was before Friday morning.

I cannot go back to where I was because of the love and faith and confidence that you, the people of the Lord, have reposed in me. So you have been talking of somebody else. You have been talking of somebody that you want me to become, which I hopefully pray God I may, with his help, become.

A sacred assembly

We have announced time and again the great coverage of this conference. Millions have been listening. You know we are being judged by what emanates from this tabernacle. I held a meeting with some new missionaries recently. Their attention was called to something that I may have the temerity to mention to you today. The Lord said here in a great revelation, "Therefore, cease from all your light speeches, from all laughter, from all your lustful desires, from all your pride and light-mindedness, and from all your wicked doings." (D&C 88:121.)

I wonder sometimes if we forget that all we say in this sensitive building is going out over the air from a sacred assembly. It doesn't mean that we should be long-faced, should not show our joy, but we ought to couch our expressions of joy not with the audible expression that swells up to a great crescendo that might be mistaken by those who are listening on the outside. I think it would be well for us to remember that, with a sense of our responsibility to the most high God. We should be an example of what the Lord in this revelation has counseled us to be when we are in his service.

Closeness of family

Some great compensations have come to me in these last few days. Never has my family, the intimate family of mine, been drawn more closely together. One by one these precious children, grandchildren of mine, and my own dear companion have drawn closer, and I have reason to believe that those beyond sight have been very near to us, their families and mine.

There has been a unity and a pledge to me that they feel that this is their call. I have said to them, "My sermons will be no better than the lives of the members of my family." I am pleading with them to set an example before the Church.

Effects of conference

And so I come to you in these closing moments; and as one who is as a patriarch to the Church holding this position, I have a right to extend a blessing to you. I am not concerned about how much you remember in words of what has been said here. I am concerned about how it has made you feel. What are you going to take back with you when you go? What are you going to give to your families? What are you going to give to your members and to your wards and stakes and missions?

If you can catch the spirit of what has gone on here during this conference and can feel that great unity now, then take to them my love and blessing. Assure them that the presidency of the Church and the General Authorities really love the members of the Church everywhere, the lowly, the mighty, the educated, the uneducated, wherever they are. Will you please assure them of our love and our concern about them and their welfare.

A reassuring faith

There has come to me in these last few days a deepening and reassuring faith. I can't leave this conference without saying to you that I have a conviction that the Master hasn't been absent from us on these occasions. This is his church. Where else would he rather be than right here at the headquarters of his church? He isn't an absentee master; he is concerned about us. He wants us to follow where he leads. I know that he is a living reality, as is our Heavenly Father. I know it.

I only hope that I can qualify for the high place to which he has called me and in which you have sustained me.

I know with all my soul that these sayings are true, and as a special witness I want you to know from the bottom of my heart that there is no shadow of doubt as to the genuineness of the work of the Lord in which we are engaged, the only name under heaven by which mankind can be saved.

Love extended

My love goes out to my own family, to my associates, to all within the sound of my voice, even the sinners; I would wish that we would reach out to them, and those who are inactive, and bring them into the fold before it is too late.

God be with you. I have the same feeling as perhaps the Master had when he bid goodbye to the Nephites. He said he perceived that they were weak, but if they would go to their homes and ponder what he said, he would come again and instruct them on other occasions. So likewise, you cannot absorb all that you have heard and that we have talked about, but go to your homes now and remember what you can, and get the spirit of what has been done and said, and when you come again, or we come to you, we will try to help you further with your problems.

I bear you my witness to these things and leave you my blessing in the name of the Lord, Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

On behalf of all who have listened to the singing during the sessions of this General Conference, we express our appreciation and our sincere thanks to the members of the Tabernacle Choir for once again giving their time and talent in order to bring us the beautiful and inspirational music heard in this conference.

We also express our appreciation to the members and conductors of other choirs and choruses who have generously rendered the beautiful and inspiring music of the conference.

We are grateful to all who have contributed to the success and inspiration of this conference, especially the General Authorities who have delivered such timely and inspirational messages. And I believe never have they spoken more pertinently to the needs of the day than they have in this conference.

We appreciate the local and national press representatives, and representatives of radio and television in reporting the sessions of this conference.

We thank our city officials for the cooperation they have given; the traffic officers for their courteous and efficient handling of the traffic; the Fire Department and the Red Cross, who have been on hand to give us every service; to the ushers who have carefully taken care of these great audiences.

We again express appreciation to the owners and managers of the many radio and television stations, who have carried the sessions of this conference from coast to coast in the United States, to Hawaii, Alaska, Mexico, Central America, Canada; and by satellite to Australia and countries in South America.

The Tabernacle Choir, with Richard P. Condie conducting and Robert Cundick at the organ, will now conclude the singing of this conference with the anthem, "How Beautiful Upon the Mountain."

The benediction will then be offered by Elder Richard B. Sonne, Regional Representative of the Twelve.

This conference will then stand adjourned for six months.

The Tabernacle Choir sang the anthem, "How Beautiful Upon the Mountain."

The benediction was offered by Elder Richard B. Sonne, Regional Representative of the Twelve.

The conference was adjourned for six months.

SALT LAKE TABERNACLE CHOIR AND ORGAN BROADCAST

The following broadcast, written and announced by J. Spencer Kinard, and originating with Station KSL, Salt Lake City, Utah, was presented from 9:30 to 10 a.m. Sunday, October 8, 1972, through the courtesy of the Columbia Broadcasting System's network throughout the United States, parts of Canada, and through other facilities to several points overseas:

(Organ begins playing "As the Dew" on signal at 9:28.

At 9:30 on signal Organ and Choir break into "Gently Raise" singing words to end of second line, and humming to end of verse for announcer's background.)

Announcer: Once more we welcome you within these walls with Music and the Spoken Word from the Crossroads of the West.

CBS and its affiliated stations bring you at this hour the Tabernacle Choir from Temple Square in Salt Lake City, with Richard Condie conducting the Choir, Alexander Schreiner, Tabernacle Organist, and the Spoken Word by Spencer Kinard.

With Harry Rowe Shelley's setting of the Good Shepherd and paraphrasing of the 23rd Psalm, the Choir voices these reassuring words: "And so through all the length of days, Thy goodness faileth never; Good Shepherd may I sing Thy praise within Thy house forever!"

(Choir: "The King of Love My Shepherd Is"—Shelley, arr. Scholin)

Announcer: The Tabernacle Choir turns next to a chorus from the Messiah: "His Yoke is easy, His burden is light."

(Choir: "His Yoke Is Easy"—Handel)

Announcer: Alexander Schreiner, Tabernacle Organist, brings to Temple Square this hour a lyrical writing selected from the worshipful music of Guilman.

(Organ: "Adagio"—Guilman)

Announcer: "I stand all amazed at the love Jesus offers me; . . . Such mercy, such love, and devotion can I forget. . . . Oh, it is wonderful that he should care for me, enough to die for me. . . . Oh, it is wonderful . . .

(Choir: "I Stand All Amazed"—Gabriel)

The Spoken Word

By J. Spencer Kinard

Announcer: We recently spoke of the need to be forgiving. The best place to practice and develop that principle is in our homes, as we conduct our daily family affairs.

The family unit is one of the great tools the Creator provided to help keep us on course. It is in a family setting that we most often learn about love, forgiveness, self-discipline and work. It is the best place to acquire beliefs and values. It is there we should learn the lessons of life.

Our family is the most important association we have. Its importance cannot be overstressed. The late spiritual leader David O. McKay offered this wise counsel: "No other success can compensate for failure in the home."¹ And, as Harold B. Lee advised, "The most important work you will ever do . . . will be within the walls of your own home."² If we will work as hard at improving our own families as we do at many of the other things we attempt, our entire world will be a better place in which to live.

Family success does not happen automatically. It is a task which requires high priority and one that we cannot begin too soon. We must pray and work to develop pleasant family relationships, the vital foundation of which is loving parents.

Young people would do well to remember that a proper partner and a proper courtship are vital keys to a happy marriage and a successful family. Unhappy family relations is one of the greatest tragedies in life. None of us would willfully choose such an existence, yet, that is what we do when we make hasty or improper choices in building a marriage.

One of the greatest gifts mankind has is his freedom. We are free to set our own course; free to raise our own families; free to build our own society. We should remember, as one wrote, that "... concentrating on the quality of life in the home is, ultimately, the best way to raise the quality of life in society."³

The life that is spent improving the family is a life that is full and rich and beautiful. But too often we are "simple souls who stray" and who find that challenge difficult. Indeed, there can be no more important challenge than the success and happiness of our families.

¹President David O. McKay, April 4, 1964 Conference Address

²President Harold B. Lee

³Dr. Neal A. Maxwell, A Time To Choose

(Choir: Without Announcement "Ye Simple Souls Who Stray"—Stephens)

Announcer: The Tabernacle Choir has sung the music of Evan Stephens: "Ye Simple Souls Who Stray far from the path of peace."

Turning now to a familiar French

Carol, we hear singing by the Women's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir: "Bring your torches . . . hurry and run . . . it is Jesus."

(Women's Chorus: "Bring Your Torches"—arr. Wasner)

(Organ: Without Announcement "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere"—Fearis)

Announcer: Alexander Schreiner has presented the hymn "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere."

In closing this traditional broadcast from Temple Square today, the Tabernacle Choir sings from the music of Albert Hay Malotte, "The Lord's Prayer." "Our Father, which art in heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name."

(Choir: "The Lord's Prayer"—Malotte)

Announcer: Again we leave you within the shadows of the everlasting hills. May peace be with you, this day—and always.

This concludes the two thousand two hundred fifty-first performance continuing the 44th year of this traditional broadcast from the Mormon Tabernacle on Temple Square, brought to you by CBS and its affiliated stations, originating with Station KSL in Salt Lake City, Utah.

Richard Condie conducted the Tabernacle Choir. Alexander Schreiner was at the Organ. The Spoken Word by Spencer Kinard.

In another seven days, at this same hour, Music and the Spoken Word will be heard again from the Crossroads of the West.

This is the CBS Radio Network.

SUMMARY OF CONFERENCE MUSIC

The Salt Lake Tabernacle Choir furnished the choral numbers for the Saturday morning, the Sunday morning, and the Sunday afternoon sessions of the conference, with Richard P. Condie, conductor, and Jay E. Welch, assistant conductor.

The Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle

Choir rendered the special musical numbers at the Solemn Assembly held on Friday morning.

The choral music for the Friday afternoon session was provided by the Relief Society Combined Choruses of the Granger, Jordan, and Midvale Regions, conducted by Ellen Neilson Barnes.

The Combined M Man and Gleaner Chorus of the Salt Lake Area, with Virgil Camp conducting, furnished special musical numbers at the Saturday afternoon meeting.

At the General Priesthood Meeting on Saturday evening, the choral numbers were sung by the Male Choir of the Mormon Youth Chorus, with Jay Welch and Hal Gundersen conducting.

Richard P. Condie directed the singing of the Tabernacle Choir on the Choir and Organ Broadcast on Sunday morning, with Alexander Schreiner at the organ console.

Prelude and postlude music, and accompaniments on the Tabernacle Organ throughout the conference sessions were played by Alexander Schreiner, Robert Cundick, and Roy M. Darley, Tabernacle Organists.

Francis M. Gibbons

Clerk of the Conference

Index

	Page
Anderson, Elder Joseph -----	40
Opposing powers, 40; Light of Truth, 40; Appearances of the Father, 40; A New Witness for Christ, 41; Priesthood restored, 41; Church restored, 41; Pouring out of Spirit, 41; Modern advances, 42; The glory of God, 42; True understanding of God, 43.
Ashton, Elder Marvin J. -----	32
Definition of a friend, 32; President Lee, our friend, 33; Significance of friendship, 33; References in scripture, 34; Example of friends, 34; Friendship is earned, 34; Experience in South America, 34; Rewards of friendship, 35; Experience at Gate Beautiful, 35.
Authorities and Officers Sustained, General -----	5
Authorities Present -----	2
B
Benson, Elder Ezra Taft -----	53
Seeking divine guidance, 53; Christ, our example, 53; Learn the commandments, 54; Words of living prophets, 54; The Restoration, 54; The Book of Mormon, 55; "Come and see," 55; Need for a prophet, 55; Home Evening program, 56; Spread of wickedness, 56; Pathway to eternal life, 57; Invitation to investigate, 57.
Brockbank, Elder Bernard P. -----	36
God's gift to man, 36; Entrance into kingdom, 36; The spirit world, 36; The strait gate, 37; Wise and foolish virgins, 37; A warning, 37; Divine light, 38; Qualifications for entrance, 38; Acts that disqualify, 38; Need for repentance, 38; Keys for entrance, 39.
Brown, Bishop Victor L. -----	71
Health missionaries, 72; Program in Guatemala, 72; Reports from missions, 72; Social Services Program, 72; Welfare Program, 73; Experience of Roger, 73; Story of Janey, 73; Work opportunities, 74; Purpose of Welfare Plan, 74.
Burton, Elder Theodore M. -----	46
Genealogy, 47; Individual responsibility, 47; A vital program, 47; Saviors on Mt. Zion, 47; Savior "for your dead," 48; A blessing and a curse, 48; Direct progenitors, 48; Genealogical responsibility, 49; Need for genealogical work, 49.

	Page
C
Christiansen, Elder ElRay L. -----	43
Covenants of the Lord, 43; New and everlasting covenant, 44; Love extended to all, 44; Blessings through obedience, 44; Covenant at baptism, 45; Other covenants, 45; Receiving higher ordinances, 45; Obligation to keep covenants, 46.
Cullimore, Elder James A. -----	162
Importance of the home, 162; Priesthood to watch over Church, 162; Challenges of home teaching, 163; Vision lacking, 163; Strengthening parents, 164; Helping fathers, 164; Need for new emphasis, 164; Needs of the family, 165; Role of home teacher, 165.
D
Dunn, Elder Loren C. -----	95
Individual testimonies, 95; The Book of Mormon, 96; Conviction of the truth, 96; Three steps in seeking a testimony, 96; Desire to know, 97; Bearing testimony, 97.
Dunn, Elder Paul H. -----	98
Repentance and baptism, 98; "Strengthen thy brethren," 98; A personal experience, 98; Need for fellowship, 99.
F
Faust, Elder James E. -----	90
Broodings about call, 90; Appreciation for family, 90; Change in life, 90; Love for brethren, 90.
Featherstone, Bishop Vaughn J. (Priesthood Meeting) ---	109
The story of Enoch, 110; Other examples, 110; Prophecy of Amos, 110; Experience of Enos, 111; Testimony of Alma, 111; Personal discovery, 112; Compassion of the Savior, 112; Little children blessed, 112; Personal testimony, 113.
Fifth Session -----	105
First Day—Afternoon Meeting -----	31
First Day—Morning Meeting -----	3

Page

First Session	3
Fourth Session	80

G

General Authorities and Officers Present	2
General Authorities and Officers, Sustaining of	5
General Authorities Present	2
General Priesthood Meeting	105

H

Haight, Elder David B.	85
A missionary church, 85; Blessing of a mission, 86; Parable of sower, 86; Story of Lippolt family, 86; Mission in Brazil, 87; Planting gospel seeds, 87; Great blessings received, 87; Returned Scottish missionary, 87; A divine program, 88.
Hanks, Elder Marion D.	166
Gospel defined, 166; Our commission, 166; The worth of souls, 166; Some souls in jeopardy, 167; Choosing a wiser way, 167; Pressures on youth, 168; Experience at Missionary Ridge, 168; Present day conflicts, 168; Values of Church programs, 168; The long view, 169; "... in thy name we go," 169.
Hinckley, Elder Gordon B. (Priesthood Meeting)	106
A capable generation, 106; Resolution to grow, 106; A switch point, 106; Potential for good, 107; Be smart, 107; Be clean, 107; Be obedient, 108; Be prayerful, 108; Warning heeded, 108; Promptings of Holy Ghost, 109.
Hunter, Elder Howard W.	65
Spiritual famine, 65; Emerson's questions, 65; Modern Christian churches, 66; Decline of interest, 66; Need for new revelation, 66; Restoration of gospel, 66; Miracle achieved, 67; Involvement of members, 67; Loyalty increasing, 67; A spiritual abundance, 68.

	Page
K
Kimball, President Spencer W. -----	27
Sustaining of President Lee, 27; Growth of Church, 27; Constancy amidst change, 28; Foreordination to responsibilities, 28; Continuous leadership, 28; Provision for changes, 29; Sustaining of new prophet, 29; Finding fault, 29; Responsibility to God, 30; Testimony, 30.
Kinard, J. Spencer (The Spoken Word) -----	178
L
Lee, President Harold B. -----	3, 4, 16, 20, 23, 27, 30, 31, 32, 35, 39, 43, 46, 50, 52, 57, 58, 65, 68, 71, 75, 79, 80, 81, 85, 88, 89, 91, 94, 97, 99, 104, 105, 109, 113, 117, 131, 132, 138, 143, 147, 149, 154, 155, 159, 162, 165, 170, 173, 174, 177
Lee, President Harold B. -----	17
Order of the Priesthood, 17; Upheld by membership, 17; Bonds of brotherhood, 17; Presidents of the Church, 18; Soul-searching thoughts, 19; A polished shaft, 19; Prayers of the saints, 20; Solemn witness, 20.
Lee, President Harold B. -----	59
Purpose of restoration, 59; Grave world problems, 59; Preach the word, 59; Eternal verities, 60; Proclaim peace, 60; Subject to powers that be, 61; Preparation in home, 61; Importance of work, 61; Church program, 62; Application of Lord's plan, 62; Never-ending contest, 63; Counterfeit plan, 63; Leadership of priesthood, 64; Prayer for world, 64.
Lee, President Harold B. (Priesthood Meeting) -----	123
Call from First Presidency, 123; Power of priesthood, 124; Paul's warnings, 124; Warnings applicable today, 125; Rumor and gossip, 125; Message of First Presidency, 125; Duty of priesthood, 126; The Lord's test, 126; Constituted authority, 127; Sin of adultery, 127; Loose writings, 128; Sure word of prophecy, 128; Following leadership, 128; Call to Presidency, 129; Brigham Young's counsel, 129; Each has his place, 129; "Iffy" blessings, 130; Trust in the Lord, 130; The gospel is true, 131.
Lee, President Harold B. -----	175

Page

Unity of brethren, 175; Words from Liberty Jail, 175; Light in a storm, 175; Change through experience, 175; A sacred assembly, 176; Closeness of family, 176; Effects of conference, 176; A reassuring faith, 176, Love extended, 177.

M

McConkie, Elder Bruce R. ----- 21

Gifts of the Spirit, 21; Same as anciently, 21; The Lord's system, 21; Support of Presidency, 22; Rededication, 22.

Monson, Elder Thomas S. ----- 155

The human body, 155; Hand of a child, 155; The hand of youth, 156; Clapsed hands, 156; A mother's hand, 156; Hand of a father, 157; Hands of a prophet, 157; Hand of the Lord, 158; The hand that saves, 158.

Music, Summary of Conference ----- 179

P

Packer, Elder Boyd K. ----- 100

Watch-care over saints, 10; Never left alone, 100; Priesthood home teaching, 100; Fundamental things, 101; Benefits of home teaching, 101; Importance of program, 102; The Lord's way, 102; Twice a blessing, 102; Home teaching experience, 103; Lesson taught, 103; "only a home teacher," 104.

Perry, Elder L. Tom ----- 174

Three pledges, 174.

Petersen, Elder Mark E. ----- 150

Living prophets, 150; A god of communication, 150; Lack of inspired direction, 150; The Lord's spokesmen, 151; Present-day Christianity, 151; People turn from God, 152; Restoration of gospel, 152; Modern prophets, 152; Preparation for Christ's coming, 152; The gospel of peace, 153; Listen to a prophet's voice, 153.

Peterson, Bishop H. Burke ----- 147

Atmosphere of home, 147; Contention in home, 147; Counsel of King Benjamin, 148; Workshop of the Lord, 148; Developing happy children, 148; Introducing newborn child, 149; Walking in truth, 149.

Pinegar, Elder Rex D. ----- 174

	Page
Priesthood Meeting, General - - - - -	105

R

Rector, Jr., Elder Hartman - - - - -	170
---	------------

Story of Joseph, 170; Right thing for right reason, 170; Allegiance to the Lord, 171; Finding consistency, 171; Joseph's example, 172; Missing the treetops, 172; Barriers against temptation, 172; ". . . get yourself out," 173; Promised blessings, 173.

Richards, Elder Franklin D. - - - - -	81
--	-----------

Gratitude for blessings, 81; Object of existence, 82; Savior's teachings, 82; Learning God's will, 82; "Thy will be done . . .", 82; Accepting God's will, 83; Testimony of converts, 83; Call to Eastern States Mission, 83; Other mission calls, 83; Vitality of church, 84; Acceptance of God's will in death, 84; Path to happiness, 85.

Richards, Elder LeGrand - - - - -	138
--	------------

Message to the world, 139; Revealed truth needed, 139; Admission of clergymen, 139; Creeds an abomination, 140; The world of spirits, 140; The spirits in prison, 140; Doing the will of God, 141; Judgment according to works, 141; False conception of God, 142; Witness of the truth, 142; Confession not sufficient, 142; Sharing of truth, 143.

Romney, President Marion G. - - - - -	75
--	-----------

Need of another church, 75; Perplexity of Joseph Smith, 75 Indispensable elements of gospel, 76; The Book of Mormon, 76; Restoration of priesthood, 76; The gift of the Holy Ghost, 77; Organization of Church, 77; Name of the church, 77; Twofold test of church, 78; Introduction to revelations, 78; Warning of calamities, 78; Cause of predicament, 79; Prophecy fulfilled, 79; Personal testimony, 79.

Romney, President Marion G. (Priesthood Meeting) - - - - -	113
---	------------

Care of poor and needy, 113; Book of Mormon examples, 114; Efficacy of one's prayers, 114; Modern teachings on charity, 115; The law of the Church, 115; The Lord's plan, 115; Two basic principles, 116; Law of tithing, 116; Welfare program, 116; Our responsibility, 117.

S

Salt Lake Tabernacle Choir and Organ Broadcast - - - - -	178
---	------------

Second Day—Afternoon Meeting - - - - -	80
---	-----------

Second Day—Morning Meeting - - - - -	58
---	-----------

	Page
Second Session	21
Seventh Session	154
Sill, Elder Sterling W.	91
World's most important business, 92; Questions for consideration, 92; Religion an activity, 92; Conference called by Adam, 93; Records of righteousness, 93; Common interests, 94; Keep the commandments, 94; The Restoration, 94.
Simpson, Elder Robert L.	144
The human mind, 144; Quality input, 144; Pornography degrading, 144; Action to be taken, 145; Perversion of God-given attributes, 145; Unclean thinking, 146; Good literature, 146; Direction of First Presidency, 146.
Sixth Session	132
Smith, Elder Eldred G.	50
Why build temples? 50; Need for baptism, 50; Baptism for all mankind, 51; Coming of Elijah, 51; Command to build temples, 52; Keys to sacred ordinances, 52; For living and dead, 52.
Solemn Assembly	3
Stone, Elder O. Leslie	88
Call to serve, 88; Prospective elders, 89; Covenant to serve, 89; Favorite scripture, 89.
Summary of Conference Music	179
Sustaining of General Authorities and Officers	5
T
Tabernacle Choir and Organ Broadcast	178
Tanner, President N. Eldon	4
Tanner, President N. Eldon (Priesthood Meeting)	118
Oath and covenant of priesthood, 118; Order of the priesthood, 118; First Presidency disorganized, 118; Authority vested in Twelve, 119; Reorganization of First Presidency, 119; Appreciation for association, 120; Preparation of President Lee, 120; Advice to Frederick G.

	Page
Williams, 121; Giving heed to prophet's words, 121; Duties of the President, 121; Living worthily, 122; Faith of youth of Zion, 122; Acting in all diligence, 122; Blessings to the faithful, 123.
Tanner, President N. Eldon	133
Advice from outer space, 133; God's messages, 133; Refusal to accept prophets, 133; Nephi's complaint, 134; Need for repentance, 135; Experience of Joseph, 135; Mission of Christ foretold, 135; Purpose for prophets, 136; Messages from the beyond, 136; Restoration of gospel, 136; Persecution against prophet, 137; Book of Mormon, 137; Personal testimony, 137.
Third Day—Afternoon Meeting	154
Third Day—Morning Meeting	132
Third Session	58
Tuttle, Elder A. Theodore	68
Altar, tent and well, 68; Answers to life's questions, 69; A family church, 69; Woman's role, 70; Family responsibility, 70; Providing for family, 70; The need to work, 71; Same roles to fill, 71.
V
Vandenberg, Elder John H.	23
Self-improvement, 23; Lack of desire, 23; Use of leisure time, 24; Need for change, 24; Faith, 24; Repentance, 25; Baptism, 25; Gift of the Holy Ghost, 25; Unnumbered opportunities, 26; Success or failure, 26.
Y
Young, Elder S. Dilworth	159
Genealogy of Lee family, 159; Call to Meadow Valley, 159; McMurrin sisters, 160; Samuel Lee and Louisa Bingham, 160; Born of goodly parents, 161; Chosen before birth, 161.

ONE HUNDRED FORTY-THIRD ANNUAL

CONFERENCE

OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST
OF LATTER-DAY SAINTS

HELD IN THE TABERNACLE
SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH

APRIL 6, 7, 8, 1973

WITH REPORT OF DISCOURSES

Published by
The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints
Salt Lake City, Utah

OFFICIAL REPORT
of the
ONE HUNDRED FORTY-THIRD
ANNUAL GENERAL CONFERENCE
of
THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST
OF LATTER-DAY SAINTS

held in the Tabernacle on Temple Square
in
Salt Lake City, Utah
APRIL 6, 7, 8, 1973

Published by
The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints

1973 Corporation of the President
of
The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints

All Rights Reserved
Printed in USA by the
Deseret Press
PBCT0394 9/73

THE ONE HUNDRED FORTY-THIRD ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER-DAY SAINTS

The 143rd Annual Conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City, Utah, on Friday, April 6, 1973, at 10 o'clock a.m.

The general sessions of the conference were held at 10:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m. on Friday, April 6, Saturday, April 7, and Sunday, April 8. The General Priesthood Meeting was held in the Tabernacle on Saturday, April 7, at 7 o'clock p.m.

President Harold B. Lee was present and presided at all sessions of the conference. He also conducted all of the conference sessions.

All General Authorities of the Church were present, with the exception of Elder Alvin R. Dyer, who was excused because of illness.

The proceedings of the conference sessions were given extensive coverage in the United States and Canada over many television and radio stations, coast to coast, originating with KSL in Salt Lake City.

By means of satellite transmission, sessions of the conference were heard over radio in countries of Central and South America, Mexico, and Australia.

Countries in Europe, South and Central America, Africa, and parts of Asia were able to receive broadcasts of these proceedings over International Short-wave Radio.

Through special arrangements the Friday morning and Sunday morning sessions were carried from the Tabernacle over direct oceanic cables to a large number of members and friends assembled in chapels throughout Great Britain, Germany, France, Holland, Belgium, and Austria. These sessions, in addition to being broadcast direct, were video-taped, and released to many television stations to be broadcast later to the eastern and central parts of the United States, Hawaii, and bases of the Armed Forces throughout the Pacific.

Rebroadcasts of all sessions of the conference were sent by KSL Radio in Salt Lake City and KIRO Radio in Seattle, Washington, beginning at midnight, on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, April 6, 7, and 8, to many parts of the United States and the world.

The General Priesthood Meeting held on Saturday evening was transmitted over closed-circuit from the Salt Lake Tabernacle to over 180,000 men of the priesthood assembled in approximately 800 buildings throughout the United States and Canada.

This report of the conference also includes the continuity of the Tabernacle Choir and Organ Broadcast over the Columbia Broadcasting System on Sunday morning from 9:30 to 10 o'clock, immediately preceding the general conference session.

GENERAL AUTHORITIES PRESENT

The following General Authorities of the Church were present:

The First Presidency: Harold B. Lee, N. Eldon Tanner, and Marion G. Romney.

The Quorum of the Twelve

Apostles: Spencer W. Kimball, Ezra Taft Benson, Mark E. Petersen, Delbert L. Stapley, LeGrand Richards, Hugh B. Brown, Howard W. Hunter, Gordon B. Hinckley, Thomas S. Monson, Boyd K. Packer, Marvin J. Ashton, and Bruce R. McConkie.

Patriarch to the Church: Eldred G. Smith

Assistants to the Twelve: Alma Sonne, ElRay L. Christiansen, Sterling W. Sill, Henry D. Taylor¹, Franklin D. Richards, Theodore M. Burton, Bernard P. Brockbank, James A. Cullimore, Marion D. Hanks, Joseph Anderson, David B. Haight, William H. Bennett, John H. Vandenberg, Robert L. Simpson, O. Leslie Stone, James E. Faust, and L. Tom Perry.

The First Council of Seventy: S. Dilworth Young, Milton R. Hunter, A. Theodore Tuttle, Paul H. Dunn, Hartman Rector, Jr., Loren C. Dunn, and Rex D. Pinegar.

The Presiding Bishopric: Victor L. Brown, H. Burke Peterson, and Vaughn J. Featherstone.

OTHER AUTHORITIES PRESENT

Other authorities of the Church in attendance at the conference included the Presidents of Temples; Regional Representatives; Mission Representatives; Presidents of Stakes and their counselors; Patriarchs; Bishops of wards; and presidencies and members of Melchizedek and Aaronic Priesthood quorums.

Many auxiliary officers, general, stake and ward, from all parts of the Church were also in attendance.

¹Elder Alvin R. Dyer, Assistant to the Twelve, was excused on account of illness.

FIRST DAY MORNING MEETING

FIRST SESSION

The opening session of the conference convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City, Utah, on Friday, April 6, 1973, at 10 o'clock a.m., with President Harold B. Lee presiding. President Lee also conducted the meeting.

The special music for this session was provided by the Tabernacle Choir, with Richard P. Condie conducting. Alexander Schreiner was at the organ.

Before the opening of the meeting the Tabernacle Choir sang the number, "The Heavens Resound." President Lee then made the following remarks:

President Harold B. Lee

The Tabernacle Choir has just opened this first session of the 143rd Annual Conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints singing "The Heavens Resound."

To all assembled this beautiful spring morning in this historic Tabernacle, we extend a cordial welcome at this first session of the Annual Conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

We acknowledge the presence of special guests, Church leaders, educational and civic leaders, and the thousands of members of the Church from far and near who are gathered here for this conference. We extend greetings to friends attending from other churches and to the many tuned in to these proceedings by radio and television throughout many areas of the world.

This music for this session of the conference will be furnished by the Tabernacle Choir, under the direction of Richard P. Condie, with Alexander Schreiner at the organ. The choir will now sing, "With a Voice of Singing."

Following the singing, the invocation will be offered by Elder ElRay L. Christiansen, Assistant to the Twelve.

The Tabernacle Choir sang "With a Voice of Singing."

The invocation was offered by Elder ElRay L. Christiansen, Assistant to the Twelve.

After the opening prayer, the Tabernacle Choir sang "Praise God from Whom All Blessings Flow" without announcement.

President Lee

The invocation has been offered by Elder ElRay L. Christiansen, Assistant to the Twelve.

The Tabernacle Choir has given us the introductory music for this occasion.

President Harold B. Lee

It is a great delight to meet here today, and to those who may be listening from far and near, we assure you that we welcome you likewise.

Anniversary of church organization

This is the annual conference of the Church. April 6, 1973, is a particularly significant date because it commemorates not only the anniversary of the organization of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in this dispensation, but also the anniversary of the birth of the Savior, our Lord and Master, Jesus Christ. Joseph Smith wrote this, preceding a revelation given at that same date:

"The rise of the Church of Christ in these last days, being one thousand eight hundred and thirty years since the coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ in the flesh, it being regularly organized and established agreeable to the laws of our country, by the will and commandments of God, in the fourth month, and on the sixth day of the month which is called April." (D&C 20:1.)

Traditionally since that time, the spring conferences of the Church are held on the days of each year which include April 6.

"Zion must arise . . ."

Two years later another revelation followed, which had great significance then, and today has even greater meaning as viewed in the light of the demands of the increasing membership in the Church. This is a quotation which may be something of a text for my next few remarks today:

"For Zion must increase in beauty, and in holiness; her borders must be enlarged; her stakes must be strengthened; yea, verily I say unto you, Zion must arise and put on her beautiful garments." (D&C 82:14.)

Zion, as used here, undoubtedly had reference to the Church. At that time there was but a small body of Church members just beginning to emerge as an organization, after having experienced harsh treatment from enemies outside the Church, who had then been directed to gather together in Jackson County, Missouri, which the Lord had designated as the "land of Zion."

Meaning of Zion

As though to impress upon these early struggling members their destiny in the world, the Lord in another revelation told them this:

"Therefore, verily, thus saith the Lord, let Zion rejoice, for this is Zion—THE PURE IN HEART; therefore, let Zion rejoice, while all the wicked shall mourn." (D&C 97:21.)

To be worthy of such a sacred designation as Zion, the Church must think of itself as a bride adorned for her husband, as John the Revelator recorded when he saw in vision the Holy City where the righteous dwelled, adorned as a bride for the Lamb of God as her husband. Here is portrayed the relationship the Lord desires in his people in order to be acceptable to our Lord and Master even as a wife would adorn herself in beautiful garments for her husband.

The rule by which the people of God must live in order to be worthy of acceptance in the sight of God is indicated by the text to which I have made reference. This people must increase in beauty before the world; have an inward loveliness which may be observed by mankind as a reflection in holiness and in those inherent qualities of sanctity. The borders of Zion, where the righteous and pure in heart may dwell, must now begin to be enlarged. The stakes of Zion must be strengthened. All this so that Zion may arise and shine by becoming increasingly diligent in carrying out the plan of salvation throughout the world.

"A standard for the nations"

While the Church was in its infancy, the Lord pointed to a time when those earlier gathering places would not have room for all who would be gathered for reasons for which he declared that his church should be united. Here are his words:

"For thus shall my church be called in the last days, even The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints." And then this command: "Arise and shine forth, that thy light may be a standard for the nations." (D&C 115:4-5.)

Here is clearly inferred that the coming forth of his church in these days was the beginning of the fulfillment of the ancient prophecy when "the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it. And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths. . . ." (Isa. 2:2-3.)

Stakes of Zion

In these revelations the Lord speaks of organized units of the Church which are designated as stakes, each of which those not of our faith may think of as a diocese. These units so organized are gathered together for these fundamental purposes: first, for a defense against the enemies of the Lord's work, both the seen and the unseen.

The apostle Paul said with reference to these enemies about which we should be concerned:

"For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." (Eph. 6:12.)

These organizations were to be as stated in the revelation noted earlier, as a "refuge from the storm, and from wrath when it shall be poured out without mixture upon the whole earth." (D&C 115:6.)

Prophetic warning

In the preface to all the Lord's revelations that he gave from the beginning of this dispensation, he issued this fateful warning, which must never be absent from our minds. This prophetic warning of 1831 was given, as the Lord declared, so that "all men shall know that the day speedily cometh; the hour is not yet, but is nigh at hand, when peace shall be taken from the earth, and the devil shall have power over his own dominion." (D&C 1:35.)

Now 142 years later we are witnessing the fury of this time, when Satan has power over his own dominion, with such might that even the Master in his day referred to him as the "prince of this world," the "enemy of all righteousness."

Promise to righteous

Despite these dire predictions and the evidences of their fulfillment truly before us today, there is promised in this same revelation even a greater power to thwart Satan's plans to destroy the work of the Lord. Here the Lord makes this promise to the Saints of the Most High God, to

Friday, April 6

First Day

the righteous in heart to whom he has referred as "the people of Zion." This is what he said:

"And also the Lord shall have power over his saints, and shall reign in their midst, and shall come down in judgment upon Idumea, or the world." (D&C 1:36.)

This has reference to the world in the same sense as when the Master spoke of the worldliness from which he warned his disciples, that while they would be engulfed in the world, they must keep themselves from the sins to be found therein.

I believe there has never been a time since the creation that the Lord has left the dominion of the devil to destroy his work without his power being manifest in the midst of the righteous to save the works of righteousness from being completely overthrown.

Today we are witnessing the promise of the Lord that "if your eye be single to my glory," which he declared to the prophet Moses was "to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man" (Moses 2:39), "your whole bodies shall be filled with light, and there shall be no darkness in you; and that body which is filled with light comprehendeth all things." (D&C 88:67.)

We have also been promised by the Lord: "Behold, and lo, I will take care of your flocks, and will raise up elders and send unto them. Behold, I will hasten my work in its time." (D&C 88:72-73.)

Boundaries being enlarged

Today we are witnessing the demonstration of the Lord's hand even in the midst of his saints, the members of the Church. Never in this dispensation, and perhaps never before in any single period, has there been such a feeling of urgency among the members of this church as today. Her boundaries are being enlarged, her stakes are being strengthened. In the early years of the Church specific places to which the Saints were to be gathered together were given, and the Lord directed that these gathering places should not be changed, but then he gave one qualification: "Until the day cometh when there is found no more room for them; and then I have other places which I will appoint unto them, and they shall be called stakes, for the curtains or the strength of Zion." (D&C 101:21.)

Remarks at Mexico City

At the Mexico City Area Conference last August, Elder Bruce R. McConkie of the Council of the Twelve, in a thought-provoking address, made some comments pertinent to this subject, and I quote a few sentences from his address:

"Of this glorious day of restoration and gathering, another Nephite prophet said: 'The Lord . . . has covenanted with all the house of Israel,' that 'the time comes that they shall be restored to the true church and fold of God'; and that 'they shall be gathered home to the lands of their inheritance, and shall be established in all their lands of promise.' (2 Ne. 9:1-2.)

"Now I call your attention to the facts, set forth in these scriptures, that the gathering of Israel consists of joining the true church; of coming to a knowledge of the true God and of his saving truths; and of worshiping him in the congregations of the Saints in all nations and among all peoples. Please note that these revealed words speak of the folds of the Lord; of Israel being gathered to the lands of their inheritance; of Israel being established in all their lands of promise; and of there being congregations of the covenant people of the Lord in every nation, speaking every tongue, and among every people when the Lord comes again."

Elder McConkie then concluded with this statement, which certainly emphasizes the great need for the teaching and training of local leadership in order to build up the church within their own native countries:

"The place of gathering for the Mexican Saints is in Mexico; the place of gathering for the Guatemalan Saints is in Guatemala; the place of gathering for the Brazilian Saints is in Brazil; and so it goes throughout the length and breadth of the whole earth. Japan is for the Japanese; Korea is for the Koreans; Australia is for the Australians; every nation is the gathering place for its own people."

Growth of church

The most frequently asked question from inquirers is, "How do you account for the phenomenal growth of this church when so many others are on the decline?"

Among the primary and many factors which account for the continued growth of the Church, I will mention only a few, for those who would ask this question to ponder.

No longer might this church be thought of as the "Utah church," or as an "American church," but the membership of the Church is now distributed over the earth in 78 countries, teaching the gospel in 17 different languages at the present time.

This greatly expanded church population is today our most challenging problem, and while we have cause for much rejoicing in such a widespread expansion, it does pose some great challenges to the leadership of the Church to keep pace with the many problems.

Adherence to fundamentals

Two basic principles have always guided the leaders of the Church in their planning to meet these circumstances. The first that might be called to the attention of those who would be interested is the basic principle of the plan of salvation from before the foundation of the world, for the redemption of mankind and which has been revealed to the prophets of this dispensation and has not been changed, for as the apostle Paul declared in his day, so do we declare today:

"But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed. . . .

"But I certify you, brethren, that the gospel which was preached of me is not after man.

"For I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ." (Gal. 1:8, 11-12.)

If we were to answer those who ask us why the steady growth, we would answer that the first fundamental reason would be that we have held our course in teaching the fundamental doctrines of the Church. We declare in one of our Articles of Faith:

"We believe [and, we might add, teach] all that God has revealed, all that He does now reveal, and we believe that He will yet reveal many great and important things pertaining to the Kingdom of God." (Article of Faith 9.)

Reason for confusion

In one of the latest of the Lord's revelations in this dispensation, he gave the reason for the confusion among the many churches then in existence: because they have, as he said, "strayed from mine ordinances, and have broken mine everlasting covenant; They seek not the Lord to establish his righteousness, but every man walketh in his own way, and after the image of his own God, whose image is in the likeness of the world. . . ." (D&C 1:15-16.)

Therefore a new restoration was necessary, as he plainly declared:

"Wherefore, I the Lord, knowing the calamity which should come upon the inhabitants of the earth, called upon my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., and spake unto him from heaven, and gave him commandments;

"And also gave commandments to others, that they should proclaim these things unto the world; and all this that it might be fulfilled, which was written by the prophets. . .

"But that every man might speak in the name of God the Lord, even the Savior of the world; . . .

"That the fulness of my gospel might be proclaimed by the weak and the simple unto the ends of the world, and before kings and rulers.

"... after the manner of their language, that they might come to understanding." (D&C 1:17-18; 20:23-24.)

Ecumenical movement

There are those who speak of an ecumenical movement, where theologically, it is supposed, all churches would be brought together into a universal organization. In essence it probably would contemplate that they would give up their basic principles and be united in a nebulous organization which would not necessarily be founded on the principles as have traditionally been the doctrines of the church of Jesus Christ from the beginning.

When the revelations of the Lord are clearly understood, there is set forth the only basis of a united and universal church. It could not be accomplished as set forth by a man-made formula; it could only be accomplished when the fullness of the principles of the gospel of Jesus Christ are taught and practiced, as declared by the apostle Paul to the Ephesians, who said that the church is "built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone." (Eph. 2:20.)

Mission of the Church

The mission of the Church has also been defined:

"And the voice of warning shall be unto all people, by the mouths of my disciples, whom I have chosen in these last days.

"Wherefore the voice of the Lord is unto the ends of the earth, that all that will hear may hear." (D&C 1:4, 11.)

Obedient to that instruction, and from the beginning of the Church, there have been missionaries sent to all parts of the world. Today we have increasing numbers of missionaries, mostly younger men, who have been schooled from their childhood to prepare themselves for a call to serve as missionaries.

From a handful of missionaries in the early days of the Church, this number has been increased to over 17,000 serving today, each at his own expense, or at the expense of his immediate family, for a period of two or more years, each with a conviction in his heart that one so called has the divinity of his calling in his mind as he may go forth into any part of the world to which he may be called.

Another reason that might be given for the increase in the Lord's work: perhaps as never before have there been so many people of the world searching for answers to the many perplexing problems.

Meeting today's needs

While the principles of the gospel of Jesus Christ have not changed, the methods in meeting these challenges of the needs of today's world must respond to the demands of our time. Fortunately the Lord has given, in the revelations to this church, the guidelines by which we should respond to the demands of the times. The plan of salvation has defined the way by which he would have us deal with the temporal needs of the people. The welfare plan of the Church seeks out those in distress. Where the newly found members are located, the plan of temporal salvation is, primarily, to teach the individuals how to take care of themselves. The Lord has provided a hedge against the terrifying impact upon the sanctity of the home and marriage, by strengthening the home and by providing guidelines to parents to teach their children the basic principles of honesty, virtue, integrity, thrift, and industry.

There is a concern of the Church for the individual members, from childhood to youth, and from among the youth into adulthood, to respond to the needs of members of the Church of every age.

In answer to the questions as to whether or not there may have been any dropouts or members who have fallen away, our answer has always been to recall the Master's parable of the sower, where the sower went out to sow. Some of the seeds fell on fertile ground, but among the seeds which fell on fertile ground, some produced thirtyfold, some sixtyfold, and some ninetyfold. So today, in about that same ratio, we have some who are partially active, some are more so, and some who are thoroughly active in the Church, but we are always reaching out to the ones who have strayed away, and we are constantly trying to bring them back into full activity.

Individual testimonies

But perhaps the most important reason of all for the growth of the Church is the individual testimonies of the divinity of this work, as would be multiplied in the hearts of the individual members of the Church. For the strength of the Church is not in the numbers, nor in the amount of tithes and offerings paid by faithful members, nor in the magnitude of chapels and temple buildings, but because in the hearts of faithful members of the Church is the conviction that this is indeed the church and kingdom of God on the earth. Without that conviction, as one of my eminent business associates remarked, "The welfare plan of the Church would be but a shambles"; also missionary work would not flourish; and members would not be faithful in making generous contributions to the Church to finance its many operations. The secret of the strength of this church may be found in the statement of a president of a student body at one of our state-operated universities, whose identity, of course, is confidential. This is a quotation from his personal letter addressed to me:

Letter from student leader

"With the rule of the radical ideas which are sweeping the country, there has come a breakdown of family ties which is despised in many intellectual circles. The country is seemingly plied with sex education, abortion, planned parenthood, pornography, women's liberation, communal living, premarital sex, and postmarital permissiveness. . . ."

And then this young college student leader concludes with this heartwarming declaration, which I know came from the depths of his soul. This is what he wrote:

"President Lee, I want you to know that the Latter-day Saint students on campus who keep the commandments are 100 percent behind you. Thank God we have leaders who stand firm against the subtle battle of the adversary who is striking at the home, the most vital unit of the world. Thank you for being the kind of a person that we, as young people growing up in this mixed-up world, can understand and can follow."

United support

By that same token, and in the language of that brilliant college student, I am convinced that the greatest of all the underlying reasons for the strength of this church is that those who keep the commandments of God are 100 percent behind the leadership of this church. Without that united support it would be readily understood that this church could not go forward to meet the challenges of the day. Our call is for the total membership of the Church to keep the commandments of God, for therein lies the safety of the world. As one keeps the commandments of God, he is not only persuaded as to the righteousness of the course that is being followed under the leadership of the Church, but also will have the Spirit of the Lord to guide him in his individual activities, for each baptized member has been given a sacred endowment when he was baptized and which has been committed to every baptized member of the Church by the authority of the priesthood: the gift of the Holy Ghost, which, as the Master declared, would teach all things, would bring all things to their remembrance, and even show them things to come. (See John 14:26.)

It will be clearly understood, then, that the great responsibility that the leaders and teachers in the Church have is to persuade, to teach, to direct aright, that the commandments of Almighty God will be so lived as to prevent the individual from falling into the trap of the evil one who would persuade him not to believe in God and not to follow the leadership of the Church.

Divinity of work

I want to bear my sacred witness that because I know of the divinity of this work, I know that it will prevail; and that though there may be enemies within and without the Church who would seek to undermine and would seek to find fault and try to undermine the influence of the Church in the world, this church will be borne off triumphantly and will stand through the test of time when all the man-made efforts and weapons forged against the Lord's word will fall by the wayside. I know that our Lord and Master Jesus Christ is the head of this church; that he has daily communion through agencies known to him, not only to the leaders of the Church in high positions, but also to individual members as they keep the commandments of God. To that I bear my sacred witness and leave my blessing upon all the faithful of the Church, and indeed in the world everywhere, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

Following President Harold B. Lee's address, the Tabernacle Choir sang "I Stand All Amazed at the Love Jesus Offers Me?"

President Harold B. Lee

For the benefit of the television and radio audience who have just joined with us, we are gathered in the historic Mormon Tabernacle on Temple Square in this the first session of the 143rd Annual Conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

The Tabernacle Choir, with Richard P. Condie directing and Alexander Schreiner at the organ, will sing "Still, Still With Thee."

Following the singing, Elder A. Theodore Tuttle of the First Council of Seventy will speak to us.

The Tabernacle Choir sang
"Still, Still With Thee."

President Lee

Elder A. Theodore Tuttle of the First Council of Seventy will now address us.

Elder A. Theodore Tuttle

Of the First Council of the Seventy

The Lord closed section 1 in the Doctrine and Covenants with these words: "What I the Lord have spoken, I have spoken, and I excuse not myself; and though the heavens and the earth pass away, my word shall not pass away, but shall all be fulfilled, whether by mine own voice or by the voice of my servants, it is the same." (D&C 1:38.)

We have just heard the voice of his servant, and it is the same! President Lee has done what all prophets in all ages have done. He has testified that God, our Father, lives; that Jesus Christ is our Savior and Redeemer, the head of this church. He has testified that Joseph Smith was the prophet of the restoration. Like all the prophets before him, he has declared that the way to peace is found only in the gospel of Jesus Christ; that only by keeping God's commandments, as revealed through the living prophets, can we find eternal life.

Characteristics of a prophet

What is a living prophet? His age? He may be young or old. He need not wear a tunic nor carry a shepherd's staff. His physical features are not important. A prophet need not have advanced educational degrees nor come from any special social class. He may be rich or poor. He needs no credentials from men.

What is it, then, that qualifies a man to be a prophet?

Foremost, God must choose him as his prophet! This is entirely different than for man to choose God. The Savior, speaking to his apostles, said, "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit. . . ." (John 15:16.)

"We believe that a man must be called of God, by prophecy, and by the laying on of hands, by those who are in authority to preach the Gospel and administer in the ordinances thereof." (Article of Faith 5.)

A prophet, then, is the authorized representative of the Lord. While the world may not recognize him, the important requirement is that God speaks through him. A prophet is a teacher. He receives revelations from the Lord. These may be new truths or explanations of truths already received.

A living prophet

It is an easy thing to believe in the dead prophets. Many people do. For some mysterious reason there is an aura of credibility about them. It is not so with the prophet who lives among us, who must meet life's everyday challenges. But it is a great thing to believe in the living prophets. Our salvation is contingent upon our belief in a living prophet and adherence to his word. He alone has the right to revelation for the whole Church. His words, above those of any other man, ought to be esteemed and considered by the Church as well as by the world. One day this truth will be understood.

Someone has said, "That person is not truly converted until he sees the power of God resting upon the leaders of this church, and until it goes down into his heart like fire."

Some may wonder at such power and authority being vested in one man. "Could he not lead us astray?" they ask. President Wilford Woodruff once said, "I say to Israel, the Lord will never permit me or any other man who stands as president of this Church to lead you astray. It is not in the program. It is not in the mind of God. If I were to attempt that the Lord would remove me out of my place, and so he will any other man who attempts to lead the children of men astray from the oracles of God and from their duty." (Discourses of Wilford Woodruff [Bookcraft, 1946], pp. 212-13.)

Mouthpiece of God

President Henry D. Moyle has said, "The older I get and the closer contact I have with the President of the Church, the more I realize that the greatest of all scripture which we have in the world today is current scripture. What the mouthpiece of God says to his children is scripture. It is his word and his will and his law made manifest through scripture, and I love it more than all other." (BYU tri-stake fireside, January 1963.)

The Lord has given this promise to his servants: "And whatsoever they shall speak when moved upon by the Holy Ghost shall be scripture, shall be the will of the Lord, shall be the mind of the Lord, shall be the word of the Lord, shall be the voice of the Lord, and the power of God unto salvation." (D&C 68:4.)

Revelations for specific times

President John Taylor said, "We require a living tree—a living fountain—living intelligence, proceeding from the living priesthood in heaven, through the living priesthood on earth. . . . And from the time that Adam first received a communication from God, to the time that John, on the Isle of Patmos, received his communication, or Joseph Smith had the heavens opened to him, it always required new revelations, adapted to the peculiar circumstances in which the churches or individuals were placed. Adam's revelation did not instruct Noah to build his ark; nor did Noah's revelation tell Lot to forsake Sodom; nor did either of these speak of the departure of the children of Israel from Egypt. These all had revelations, for themselves, and so had Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Jesus, Peter, Paul, John, and Joseph. And so must we, or we shall make a shipwreck." (The Gospel Kingdom, [Deseret Book Co., 1944], p. 34.)

Orson Pratt has said, "The very moment that we set aside the living oracles we set aside the revelations of God. Why? Because the revelations of God command us plainly that we shall harken to the living oracles. Hence, if we undertake to follow the written word, and at the same time do not give heed to the living oracles of God, the written word will condemn us. . . ." (Journal of Discourses, vol. 7, p. 373.)

Counsel to Saints

It is the right and responsibility of the prophets to counsel the Saints.

President Wilford Woodruff said, "We, as a people, should not treat lightly this counsel, for I will tell you in the name of the Lord—and I have watched it from the time I became a member of this Church—there is no man who undertakes to run counter to the counsel of the legally authorized leader of this people that ever prospers. . . . you will find that all persons who take a stand against this counsel will never prosper. . . ."

"... We have been governed by counsel instead of commandment in many things, which has been a blessing to the saints. . . ." (JD, vol. 14, pp. 33, 36.)

President Stephen L. Richards comments on counsel: "... a moment's reflection will convince you of the rather serious regard in which we hold counsel. While it is true that we characterize infraction of the law as sin, and we do not apply quite that drastic a terminology to failure to follow counsel, yet in the Church, under the priesthood, counsel always is given for the primary purpose of having the law observed, so that it does occupy a place of standing and importance, almost comparable to that law of the gospel." (BYU Speeches, February 26, 1957.)

Listening ears

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., pinpointed today's need: "What we need today is not more prophets. We have the prophets. But what we need is more people with listening ears. That is the great need of our generation."

"There are those who insist that unless the Prophet of the Lord declares, 'Thus saith the Lord,' the message may not be taken as revelation. This is a false testing standard. For while many of our modern revelations as contained in the Doctrine and Covenants do contain these words, there are many that do not." (Church News, July 31, 1954.)

President Marion G. Romney clarified the responsibility of those who hear the witness of a servant of God: "We who are his present witnesses are but discharging our responsibility when we bring these testimonies of the prophets and our own testimonies . . . to your attention."

"To the extent we do bring them to your attention, the responsibility passes from us to you to determine the credibility of the witnesses and their testimonies. Let no man underestimate the importance of his decision concerning this matter." (Improvement Era, December 1967, p. 100.)

It is a privilege to follow the President of the Church.

There will be other General Authorities and prophets and apostles who will counsel us during this conference. May we listen and hear the voice of the Lord, for—

"What I the Lord have spoken, I have spoken, and I excuse not myself; and though the heavens and the earth pass away, my word shall not pass away, but shall all be fulfilled, whether by mine own voice or by the voice of my servants, it is the same."

"For behold, and lo, the Lord is God, and the Spirit beareth record, and the record is true, and the truth abideth forever and ever" (D&C 1:38-39.)

In the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

Following Elder Tuttle's sermon, the Tabernacle Choir sang "Hallelujah, Amen" without announcement.

President Harold B. Lee

Elder A. Theodore Tuttle of the First Council of Seventy has spoken to us. He was followed by the Tabernacle Choir singing "Hallelujah, Amen," by Handel.

The choir and the congregation will now join in singing "I Know That My Redeemer Lives."

Following the singing, Elder L. Tom Perry, Assistant to the Twelve, will speak to us.

The congregation sang the hymn, "I Know That My Redeemer Lives."

President Lee

Elder L. Tom Perry, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve, will now address us.

Following Elder Perry, we will hear from Elder Robert L. Simpson, Assistant to the Twelve.

Elder L. Tom Perry

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

"Now therefore thus saith the Lord of hosts; Consider your ways.

"Ye have sown much, and bring in little; ye eat, but ye have not enough; ye drink, but ye are not filled with drink; ye clothe you, but there is none warm; and he that earneth wages earneth wages to put it into a bag with holes.

"Thus saith the Lord of hosts; Consider your ways." (Hag. 1:5-7.)

Conditions of today

I have read this great scripture and continue to be impressed with how clearly the Old Testament prophet describes the conditions of today. Almost daily we read of those who invest for little return. We eat food so refined that the nourishment is lacking. We witness the drink that can never satisfy the thirst for those who drink; the dressing for style, rather than warmth, comfort, and modesty; the high wages of the wage earner today which still do not satisfy or supply his needs.

A noted historian several years ago summarized the reasons for the fall of Rome as follows:

1. The breakdown of the family and the rapid increase of divorce.

2. The spiraling rise of taxes and extravagant spending.

3. The mounting craze for pleasure and the brutalization of sports.

4. The decay of religion into myriads of confused forms, leaving the people without a uniform guide.

Our unconquered appetites and consuming drive for material possessions appear to be leading us on a course so often repeated in history. Greed, lust, and desire historically have only led mankind to waste, destruction, and suffering.

James E. Talmage has written:

"Material belongings, relative wealth or poverty, physical environment—the things on which we are prone to set our hearts and anchor our aspirations, the things for which we sweat and strive, oftentimes at the sacrifice of happiness and to the forfeiture of real success—these after all are but externals, the worth of which in the reckoning to come shall be counted in terms of the use we have made of them." (James E. Talmage, The Vitality of Mormonism, 1919, p. 352.)

Isn't this the time and isn't this the hour to follow the admonition of the Lord to "consider your ways"?

Personal experiences

I have spent considerable time since the last general conference examining my ways to determine what I have to do to measure up to the calling the Prophet has issued to me. Let me share one or two of these lessons that this new experience has given me.

For 21 years, before receiving this call, I was employed by some of the great department stores of the country. I have been blessed with some close associations with some of the most talented leaders this industry has produced. I find myself today making a comparison between my former business associates and those with whom I am now busily engaged. Both groups have great leaders, but how different is their motivation! I have found in these Brethren seated before you the fulfillment in their lives of the promise given to the Prophet Joseph Smith:

"... let virtue garnish thy thoughts unceasingly; then shall thy confidence wax strong in the presence of God; and the doctrine of the priesthood shall distil upon thy soul as the dews from heaven.

"The Holy Ghost shall be thy constant companion. . . ." (D&C 121:45-46.)

Companionship of Holy Ghost

I have watched them armed with the Holy Ghost as a constant companion, taking on enormous work loads at an age when most men would be confined to rocking chairs, and engaging in strenuous travel schedules with great enthusiasm to be anxiously engaged in building the kingdom of God. Then by observation, the realization has come to me that this great Spirit that blesses them in their activities is not a special gift to them alone, but is available to all mankind if they will but be partakers and earnestly seek it and be humbly guided by it. "The office of the Holy Ghost is to enlighten the mind, to purify and sanctify the soul, to incite to good works, and to reveal the things of God." (James E. Talmage, Articles of Faith, p. 167.)

Isn't this spirit a constant companion you need in your life? "Consider your ways." Isn't now the time to follow the Lord's direction and receive the divine assurance that he is with you, guiding you in the paths that will make your life meaningful, rewarding, and satisfying?

Security of love

Secondly, I was reared in a home by noble parents who gave their children the security of love. We as a family were tied together by those great bonds. During our married life, with the exception of an occasional visit, we have lived at least a thousand miles away from our family center. What a great enjoyment it is to be near them again!

The last high school basketball tournament gave our family a rallying point for a common activity. My brother's boy participated on one of the teams. They had lost their first game, and his personal production for that game was 12 points. This was about average for what he had been doing during the regular season. Then tragedy struck the team in the second game. Their big center, who was their high scorer, was injured and was out for the balance of the tournament. The team realized that another loss meant elimination.

My nephew was placed under the pressure of having to make up for that loss. He was moved from his regular position of forward to replace the center. He met the challenge by scoring 32 points that game. Then in the final two games he led the team to victory and finished second in total scoring in the state tournament. His scoring was twice what he had normally been producing.

Bearing his testimony the following week in meeting, he remarked that when the pressure became great and the burden difficult to bear, he would hear the encouraging cries of his family above the roar of the crowd and would be inspired to try harder.

The courage of this young man taught us all a lesson that day. One of the gifts of a loving family is the encouragement and confidence we receive to magnify ourselves. Is your family one of strength, help, and support one for another, or do you waste and depreciate one of the greatest gifts of our eternal Father with jealousy, bickering, or the lack of interest of one for another? Do you fail to communicate the love you have for each other and thus deprive yourself of some of life's choicest moments?

Influences of home

One of our prophets has said: "I have but one thought in my heart for the young folk of the Church and that is that they be happy. I know of no other place than home where more happiness can be found in this life. It is possible to make home a bit of heaven; indeed, I picture heaven to be a continuation of the ideal home." (President David O. McKay, Gospel Ideals, p. 490.)

"Consider your ways." Isn't this the time to bring that sweet influence of the Lord into your home?

The home we have just purchased since moving west has one unique feature. The small study provided has an adjoining large closet about one-fourth the size of the entire study. We thought when we were considering the purchase of the home that this closet was an error in design. Since occupying the home, it has become one of my favorite places. Here is where I can shut myself off from the world and communicate with my Father in heaven. "But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly." (Matt. 6:6.)

Consider your ways

"Consider your ways." Couldn't your life stand some open rewarding by the Father? Isn't this the time to learn how to communicate with our Father which is in heaven?

I leave you my witness that I know that God lives. I know that his Son is directing the affairs of this church today through his chosen prophet. I sustain and support him.

"Consider your ways." If that witness has not been given to you, isn't now the time to seek it? Come and join with us, and let us continue to build the kingdom of God here and now, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

Thank you, Elder Perry, for calling our attention to a very vital matter. Elder L. Tom Perry, Assistant to the Twelve, has just spoken. Elder Robert L. Simpson, Assistant to the Twelve, will now address us.

Elder Robert L. Simpson

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

My beloved brothers and sisters: I am grateful for this opportunity and with each of you express gratitude for this lovely choir. I always have a little glimpse into heaven as I listen to them sing, and I feel lifted up. This entire conference has been lifted and edified by their great singing this morning.

I feel closer to heaven and have better insight as to what heaven might be like as I feel the spirit of you wonderful leaders assembled here today. There is a feeling of unity, a feeling of strength, a feeling of wanting to do that which the Lord has asked us to do. I am grateful to be in your presence. I often think of President David O. McKay's great observation that heaven would be just an extension of the ideal home. I believe that with all my heart, and it is that feeling that I sense with us here.

God's work and glory

Speaking of heaven and the hereafter. I would like to address my remarks to things I feel would be imperative in order that we might have the great privilege of one day living in the very presence of our Heavenly Father, which should be the objective of every Latter-day Saint.

It has been truthfully said that the Savior is even more concerned for our success here in mortality than we ourselves are, the reason being, of course, that he has greater capacity for concern and love than do we mortals. He also has a superior knowledge of the gospel plan and man's potential in God's divine, eternal scheme. As stated by one prophet, God's work and glory is achieved through our attainment of immortality and eternal life. (See Moses 1:39.)

Someone once suggested that it would be relatively simple for Christ to do all of the religious teaching here on earth. How easy it would be for the Creator to deliver every sermon and to teach every Sunday School class by means of closed-circuit television! Each religious meeting place could be equipped with a large video screen, and the master teacher of all time could then present every gospel lesson and deliver every sermon in a way that would hold us spellbound and indeed convert even the most critical. I suppose it would also be within his power to take over all of the compassionate service for mankind, but such is contrary to the development of God's children.

Our brother's keeper

Before the foundations of this earth were laid, a glorious decision was made allowing you and me to be our brother's keeper. By faith and service we would be able to achieve a degree of glory in the hereafter suited to our Christlike efforts and our Christlike attainments.

Adversity, heartache, bitter disappointment, grievous transgression, and disability are but a few of the obstacles that beset the inhabitants of this world. Few, if any, escape. None would have to linger in despair for long, however, if man could just bring himself to heed that one great teaching recorded in the 25th chapter of Matthew. You all remember it.

On this occasion the Savior was describing the day of judgment, wherein those to be judged were divided, some on the right hand and some on the left. Finding themselves in a favored position, those on the right expressed surprise and wanted to know why the reward had come to them. The Savior replied:

"For I was an hungred, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me in:

"Naked, and ye clothed me: I was sick, and ye visited me: I was in prison, and ye came unto me." (Matt. 25:35-36.)

Then the righteous answered, stating that not once had they found him hungry or thirsty or a stranger; and then the Savior's classic teaching: "Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." (Matt. 25:40.)

Other expressions of the Savior further confirm the same charges. He said: "Feed my sheep" (John 21:16); "... all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them" (Matt. 7:12). Then, having set the perfect example of service during his ministry, he concluded by saying, "Go, and do thou likewise." (Luke 10:37.)

Help for unfortunate

During the past 12 months it has been my privilege to work closely with many emotionally disturbed people; others who have transgressed; some who have found themselves out of harmony with society; still others who were lonely and afraid. It has not been a year of discouragement and despair, however, because the vast majority of these people have made an important decision, and they have said: "I want to change my life. I am ready to take direction from someone who really cares." And in this church, we have bishops and stake presidents who really care.

How touching it was to hear a hardened prisoner say: "That is the first time anybody ever told me they loved me." This was after a six-year-old girl kissed him on the cheek during a Church-sponsored family home evening visit in the prison.

Consider with me an unwed mother who came to her bishop with some reluctance. Her heart was belligerent, and she also had a drug problem; but months later, following compassionate service by many, she was heard to say: "Life was over for me. I didn't want to live anymore, but things are different now, and I know the true meaning of God's love."

A confirmed alcoholic found a new lease on life because an assigned couple had won his confidence, and they were there when he needed them. His problem is now history. His own family is back together for the first time in years.

A sexual deviant discovered with help that his problem was not God-given, as so many had told him in the past, but rather self-acquired from an early age. He recently declared with confidence: "I have conquered Satan himself. Nothing can stop me now."

Following the Savior's example

Every success story of the past year has been the result of special effort on the part of people who cared. They cared enough to give some time and to be sincere and compassionate; in other words, to follow the great example set by the Savior.

The only joy that is comparable with the joy of the one receiving the help is the glow that seems to emanate from the one who has given so unselfishly of his time and strength to quietly help someone in need.

The Savior did not seem to be so much involved in giving money.

You will remember that his gifts were in the form of personal attention, in performing an administration, and in sharing the gifts of the Spirit. In fact, it was the Savior who said: "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. . . ." (John 14:27.) We could add to peace the gift of love, the gift of immortality, the gift of eternal life, the gift of understanding, the gift of compassion, the gift of eternal justice. All of these gifts are beyond monetary consideration and could well be our gift to someone sometime, if we weren't "too busy."

Acceptable in good works

Members of this church understand clearly that baptism is essential for entrance into the celestial kingdom. We also know and understand that total fulfillment can only be found in that ultimate celestial state called eternal life or exaltation, which, of course, is to live eternally in his holy presence.

Only those who have been justified and sanctified through service to their fellowmen can hope to reach such a lofty goal. To be justified is to be found acceptable in our "good works" as well as by our superior faith. James used this excellent example:

"If a brother or sister be naked, and destitute of daily food,

"And one of you say unto them, Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled; notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body; what doth it profit?" (James 2:15-16.)

After citing other similar examples, he concludes with this thought: "Ye see then how that by works a man is justified, and not by faith only." (James 2:24.)

Moroni explained that we are sanctified "by the grace of God" as we become "perfect in Christ" and "deny not his power." (Moro. 10:33.)

Concern for others

No man can become perfect in Christ" without a deep, abiding, and sincere concern for his fellow beings. This example just read from James cites physical needs. However, there are also emotional problems about us in every direction. Loneliness and discouragement, for example, are two of Satan's most effective tools against us.

Is there someone you know who needs a friend, a friend who is willing to listen to him? The Church is reaching out to such people as never before. Resource volunteers are being organized throughout the Church to help carry out one of the Savior's most sacred challenges.

There are those who associate high calling in the Church with guaranteed rights to the blessings of heaven, but I wish to declare without reservation that the ultimate judgment for every man will be on the simplest terms, and most certainly on what each has done to bless other people in a quiet, unassuming way.

"Go, and do thou likewise"

If this life's effort is to be justified, then there should be a major and continuing attempt to justify or, in other words, to conform our actions with the example of the Master. The central theme of his mortal span was purely and simply serving those about him. He fulfilled an eternal truth which should be a part of your life and my life. "And whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant." (Matt. 20:27.)

If our life's effort is to be sanctified or, in other words, ratified by the standards of eternal truth, then our actions must be in harmony with the sanctifying principles of the gospel, which most certainly includes sincere concern for others and a concerted effort to alleviate their problems.

I can think of no better guarantee for the future, your future and my future, than to follow the admonition of the Savior when he said at the beginning of his ministry: "Come and follow me" (Matt. 19: 21); and then, after showing the way, he said very simply, "Go, and do thou likewise."

Brothers and sisters, may we go and do likewise, is my fervent prayer in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

After Elder Simpson's address, an interlude of organ music was played by Alexander Schreiner, and the Tabernacle Choir sang the number, "Seek Him Who Made the Seven Stars."

President Harold B. Lee

We welcome those joining us on television and radio in this first session of the 143rd Annual Conference of the Church.

Elder Marvin J. Ashton of the Council of the Twelve will be our concluding speaker.

Elder Marvin J. Ashton

Of the Council of the Twelve

A few weeks ago on a day when this area was experiencing one of its worst snowstorms, and that is saying quite a bit because we had plenty of severe weather this past winter, a handsome young serviceman and his beautiful bride-to-be encountered extreme difficulty in getting to the Salt Lake Temple for their marriage appointment. She was in one location in the Salt Lake Valley and he was to come from another nearby town. Heavy snows and winds had closed the highways during the night and early morning hours. After many hours of anxious waiting, some of us were able to help them get to the temple and complete their marriage plans before the day was over.

"I'm really nobody"

How grateful they, their families, and friends were for the assistance and concern in their keeping this most important appointment.

My friend—we will call him Bill—expressed his deep gratitude with, "Thank you very much for all you did to make our wedding possible. I don't understand why you went to all this trouble to help me. Really, I'm nobody."

I am sure Bill meant his comment to be a most sincere compliment, but I responded to it firmly, but I hope kindly, with, "Bill, I have never helped a 'nobody' in my life. In the kingdom of our Heavenly Father no man is a 'nobody.'"

This tendency to wrongfully identify ourselves was again brought to my attention the other day during an interview with a troubled wife. Her marriage is in great difficulty. She has tried earnestly to correct the communication blocks with her husband but with little success. She is grateful for the time her bishop has spent in counseling. Her stake president has also been most patient and understanding in his willingness to try and help.

All of her problems are not resolved, but she is making progress. Her many contacts with properly channeled priesthood direction have left her not only grateful, but somewhat amazed. Her concluding observation the other day was, "I just don't understand all of you people giving so much time and showing so much concern. After all, I'm really 'nobody.'"

We are somebody

I am certain our Heavenly Father is displeased when we refer to ourselves as "nobody." How fair are we when we classify ourselves a "nobody"? How fair are we to our families? How fair are we to our God?

We do ourselves a great injustice when we allow ourselves, through tragedy, misfortune, challenge, discouragement, or whatever the earthly situation, to so identify ourselves. No matter how or where we find ourselves, we cannot with any justification label ourselves "nobody."

As children of God we are somebody. He will build us, mold us, and magnify us if we will but hold our heads up, our arms out, and walk with him. What a great blessing to be created in his image and know of our true potential in and through him! What a great blessing to know that in his strength we can do all things!

Teaching of Ammon

Ammon taught a great lesson not only to his brother Aaron, but to all of us in this day, in Alma 26:10-12:

"And it came to pass that when Ammon had said these words, his brother Aaron rebuked him, saying: Ammon, I fear that thy joy doth carry thee away unto boasting.

"But Ammon said unto him: I do not boast in my own strength, nor in my own wisdom; but behold, my joy is full, yea, my heart is brim with joy, and I will rejoice in my God.

"Yea, I know . . . as to my strength I am weak; therefore I will not boast of myself, but I will boast of my God, for in his strength I can do all things; yea, behold, many mighty miracles we have wrought in this land, for which we will praise his name forever."

Labeling others

As grievous as labeling ourselves as a "nobody" is man's tendency to classify others as a "nobody." Sometimes mankind is prone to identify the stranger or the unknown as a nobody. Often this is done for self-convenience and an unwillingness to listen. Countless numbers today reject Joseph Smith and his message because they will not accept a 14-year-old "nobody." Others turn away from eternal restored truths available today because they will not accept a 19-year-old elder or a 21-year-old lady missionary or a neighbor down the street because they are "nobody," so they may suppose.

There is no doubt in my mind that one of the reasons our Savior Jesus Christ was rejected and crucified was because in the eyes of the world he was blindly viewed as a "nobody," humbly born in a manger, an advocate of such strange doctrine as "Peace on earth, good will toward men."

An obscure boy a "somebody"

I bear witness to you and the world that Joseph Smith knew with earth-shattering impact he was "somebody" when, in answer to humble prayer, God appeared with his Son, Jesus Christ, and spoke unto Joseph, calling him by name. God through the centuries has often chosen what the world would classify as a "nobody" to bear his truths. Listen to Joseph Smith's thoughts and self-analysis in this area:

"It caused me serious reflection then, and often has since, how very strange it was that an obscure boy, of a little over fourteen years of age, and one, too, who was doomed to the necessity of obtaining a scanty maintenance by his daily labor, should be thought a character of sufficient importance to attract the attention of the great ones of the most popular sects of the day, and in a manner to create in them a spirit of the most bitter persecution and reviling. But strange or not, so it was, and it was the cause of great sorrow to myself.

"However, it was nevertheless a fact that I had beheld a vision. . . ." (Joseph Smith 2:23-24.)

May I remind all of us that Joseph Smith referred to himself as "an obscure boy" but never as a "nobody." Joseph Smith was sustained all the days of his perilous life by the knowledge that in God's strength he could accomplish all things.

Destructive philosophy

God help us to realize that one of our greatest responsibilities and privileges is to lift a self-labeled "nobody" to a "somebody," who is wanted, needed, and desirable. Our first obligation in this area of stewardship is to begin with self. "I am nobody" is a destructive philosophy. It is a tool of the deceiver.

It is heartbreaking when youth in difficulty look up and respond to offered guidance with, "What does it matter? I'm nobody."

It is just as disturbing when a questioned student on campus responds with, "I am no one special on campus. I'm just one of the thousands. I'm really nobody."

Lesson from missionary

May we learn an important lesson from a missionary recently interviewed. This elder, in answer to the question, "How often do you receive letters from your parents?" responded with, "Very, very seldom."

"What are you doing about it?" I asked.

"I'm still writing them every week."

Here is a young man who may have had some excuse to pity himself with a "nobody" label when his parents don't bother to write, but he is having no part of this kind of attitude. Further conversation with him emphatically convinced me that here is a young man who is really someone. If his parents don't write, that is their responsibility. His responsibility is to write, and that is just what he is doing with enthusiasm. I have never met this missionary's mother or father, probably never will, but wherever they are, in my mind they are "somebody" just to have him for their son. This missionary will succeed because he knows he is someone and is conducting himself accordingly.

Worth of every soul

More than once during the past few months President Harold B. Lee has called me to his office to listen with him to someone he has invited to share a suggestion, concern, bewilderment, or heartache. Some might well conclude for President Lee that he just doesn't have time for the least of these his brethren, but he knows well the worth of every soul in the kingdom. I recall one saying to President Lee at the time of departure, "I can't believe you would take the time to listen to someone like me."

To mothers, fathers, husbands, wives, and children everywhere, we declare that regardless of your present station in life you are someone special. Remember, you may be an obscure boy, girl, man, or woman, but you are not a "nobody." Please enjoy with me one of the truly great parables in all of the holy scriptures as we think along this subject.

The prodigal son

"A certain man had two sons:

"And the younger of them said to his father, Father, give me the portion of goods that falleth to me. And he divided unto them his living.

"And not many days after the younger son gathered all together, and took his journey into a far country, and there wasted his substance with riotous living.

"And when he had spent all, there arose a mighty famine in that land; and he began to be in want.

"And he went and joined himself to a citizen of that country; and he sent him into his fields to feed swine.

"And he would fain have filled his belly with the husks that the swine did eat: and no man gave unto him.

"And when he came to himself, he said, How many hired servants of my father's have bread enough and to spare, and I perish with hunger!

"I will arise and go to my father, and will say unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven, and before thee,

"And am no more worthy to be called thy son: make me as one of thy hired servants.

"And he arose, and came to his father. But when he was yet a great way off, his father saw him, and had compassion, and ran, and fell on his neck, and kissed him.

"And the son said unto him,

Father, I have sinned against heaven, and in thy sight, and am no more worthy to be called thy son.

"But the father said to his servants, Bring forth the best robe, and put it on him; and put a ring on his hand, and shoes on his feet:

"And bring hither the fatted calf, and kill it; and let us eat, and be merry:

"For this my son was dead, and is alive again; he was lost, and is found. And they began to be merry.

"Now his elder son was in the field: and as he came and drew nigh to the house, he heard music and dancing.

"And he called one of the servants and asked what these things meant.

"And he said unto him, Thy brother is come; and thy father hath killed the fatted calf, because he hath received him safe and sound.

"And he was angry, and would not go in: therefore came his father out, and intreated him.

"And he answering said to his father, Lo, these many years do I serve thee, neither transgressed I at any time thy commandment: and yet thou never gavest me a kid, that I might make merry with my friends:

"But as soon as this thy son was come, which hath devoured thy living with harlots, thou has killed for him the fatted calf.

"And he said unto him, Son, thou art ever with me, and all that I have is thine.

"It was meet that we should make merry, and be glad: for this thy brother was dead, and is alive again; and was lost, and is found." (Luke 15:11-32.)

Father's response

Brothers and sisters, think well again on these points, if you will. "Father, divide your goods and give me my share. I am going off on my own" In the days ahead he wasted his possessions with riotous living. He became so low, so hungry, he lived with the swine. "Father, I have sinned against heaven, and in thy sight, and am no more worthy to be called thy son." His heart was crying out, "I am lower than the low. I am now absolutely nothing—I am absolutely nobody."

Please weigh the impact of the father's response once more. He saw the son coming; he ran to him; he kissed him; he placed his best robe on him; he killed the fatted calf; and they made merry together. This self-declared "nobody" was his son; he was "dead, and is alive again; he was lost, and is found."

In the father's joy he also taught well his older, bewildered son that he too was someone. "Son, thou art ever with me, and all that I have is thine." Contemplate, if you will, the death—yes, even the eternal proportions—of "all that I have is thine." I declare with all the strength I possess that we have a Heavenly Father who claims and loves all of us regardless of where our steps have taken us. You are his son and you are his daughter, and he loves you.

Proper self-image

Do not allow yourself to be self-condemning. Avoid discouragement. Teach yourself correct principles and govern yourself with honor. Appropriately involve yourself in helping others. As we develop proper self-image in ourselves and others, I promise you the "nobody" attitude will completely disappear. Ever remember wherever you are today within the sound of my voice that you are someone.

God lives. He too is someone—real and eternal—and he wants us to be someone with him. I bear witness that in his strength we can become like him. I leave you this my witness and my testimony humbly and in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

Elder Marvin J. Ashton of the Council of the Twelve has just given the concluding address.

We are grateful for the cordial response from the managers and operators of over 350 television and radio stations in offering their facilities to make the proceedings of this conference available to millions throughout many areas of the world.

These proceedings are being broadcast over stations in countries of Latin America by means of satellite transmission.

Through special arrangements of the Armed Forces Radio and Television Network, this session will be televised to bases of the Armed Forces throughout the Pacific.

We shall conclude this session of the conference with the Tabernacle Choir singing, "Crossing the Bar."

Following the singing, the benediction will be pronounced by Elder William H. Bennett, Assistant to the Twelve. This conference will then be adjourned until two o'clock this afternoon.

The number, "Crossing the Bar," was sung by the Tabernacle Choir.

Elder William H. Bennett, Assistant to the Twelve, offered the closing prayer.

The conference was adjourned until 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

FIRST DAY AFTERNOON MEETING

SECOND SESSION

The second session of the conference convened at 2 p.m. on Friday April 6, 1973, with President Harold B. Lee presiding and conducting the meeting.

The choral music for this session was provided by the Ogden Institute of Religion Combined Choruses, with Ladd Cropper conducting and Robert Cundick at the organ.

President Lee made the following introductory statement:

President Harold B. Lee

At this the second session of the 143rd Annual Conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, we extend warm greetings to all assembled in this historic Tabernacle and to the many members of the Church and friends tuned to these proceedings by radio and television.

We are pleased to welcome special guests present this afternoon—government and educational leaders, our regional representatives and mission representatives, stake and mission presidencies, temple presidencies, bishoprics, and members of the general auxiliary boards.

During the past two days the general officers and teachers of the Primary Association have been holding their annual conference. May the Lord's choicest blessings be with these faithful sisters for the outstanding service they are rendering to the children of the Church.

The proceedings of this conference will be carried from coast to coast in the United States and Canada over many television and radio stations, originating with KSL in Salt Lake City.

Through the miracle of satellite transmission, sessions of this conference will be heard over radio in countries of Central and South America, Mexico and Australia.

Countries in Europe, South and Central America, Africa, and parts of Asia will be able to receive broadcasts of these proceedings over International Shortwave Radio.

We are grateful to the owners and operators of the radio and television stations for their cooperation in making possible such an extensive coverage of this conference.

The General Priesthood Conference to be held Saturday evening will be transmitted over closed-circuit from the Salt Lake Tabernacle to over 180,000 men of the priesthood assembled in approximately 800 buildings throughout the United States and Canada.

We are favored this afternoon by the presence of the combined choruses of the Ogden Institute of Religion with Ladd Cropper conducting and Robert Cundick at the organ.

The chorus will begin this service by singing "The Morning Breaks, the Shadows Flee". The invocation will then be offered by Elder Harold R. Boyer, Regional Representative of the Twelve.

The Combined Choruses of the Ogden Institute of Religion sang "The Morning Breaks, the Shadows Flee."

The invocation was offered by Elder Harold R. Boyer, Regional Representative of the Twelve.

President Lee

The chorus will now sing "O How Lovely Was the Morning."

The combined choruses sang "O
How Lovely Was the Morning."

President Lee

Elder Francis M. Gibbons, Secretary to the First Presidency and Clerk of this Conference, will now present the statistical report of the Church for the year 1972. This will be followed by the reading of the auditors report by Elder Wilford G. Edling of the Church Finance Committee.

Elder Francis M. Gibbons

Statistical Report 1972

For the information of the members of the Church.

The First Presidency issued the following statistical report concerning the membership of the Church at the end of the year 1972.

Church Units:

Number of Stakes of Zion	592
Number of Wards	4,365
Number of Independent Branches in Stakes	1,029
Total Wards and Independent Branches in Stakes	5,394
Number of Mission Branches	1,891
Number of Full-time Missions	101

Church Membership:

In the Stakes	2,716,769
In the Missions	511,021
Total Membership	3,227,790

Priesthood:

Members Holding the Aaronic Priesthood

Deacons	139,194
Teachers	101,042
Priests	160,993

Total Number Holding Aaronic Priesthood 401,229

Members Holding the Melchizedek Priesthood

Elders	264,465
Seventies	24,228
High Priests	93,344

Total Number Holding Melchizedek Priesthood 382,037

Grand Total, Members Holding Aaronic or

Melchizedek Priesthood 783,266

An Increase of 30,216 during the year

Church Growth:

Children blessed in stakes and missions -----	69,695
Children of record baptized in stakes and missions -----	58,343
Converts baptized in stakes and missions -----	91,237

Auxiliary Enrollment:

Relief Society -----	715,071
Sunday School -----	2,442,033
Aaronic Priesthood MIA—Young Men -----	164,925
Aaronic Priesthood MIA—Young Women -----	186,393
Primary Association -----	478,769

Social Statistics

Birth rate per thousand -----	26.43
Number of persons married per thousand -----	15.39
Death rate per thousand -----	4.74

Welfare

Number of persons assisted -----	102,961
Number placed in remunerative employment -----	14,502
Man-days of work donated to the welfare plan -----	187,800
Unit-days of equipment use donated -----	7,140

Genealogical Society

Names cleared for proxy temple ordinances (endowments)-----2,181,918

Genealogical records microfilmed in 20 countries during the year brought the total to 756,062 one hundred foot rolls of microfilm for use of the Church which are the equivalent of over 3,607,002 printed volumes of 300 pages each.

Temple Ordinances

Number of ordinances performed in the 15 operating temples:
For the living -----	68,376
For the dead -----	9,046,194
Total Number of ordinances -----	9,114,570

Church School System: (1971-72 school year)

Total cumulative enrollments in Church schools, including
Institutes and Seminaries -----	257,388

Those Who Have Passed Away

President Joseph Fielding Smith, Tenth President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, at the age of 95 on July 2, 1972

Lula Maughan Jones Isaacson, widow of the late Elder Thorpe B. Isaacson,
 Assistant to the Council of the Twelve
 Lalene Hendricks Hart, widow of the late Charles H. Hart, member of the First Council of Seventy
 June B. Thayne, president of the Chesapeake Stake of Zion
 Elmo R. Smith, president of the Oakland-Berkeley Stake of Zion
 E. Earl Hawkes, publisher and general manager of the Deseret News
 Alfred W. Uhrhan, executive secretary of the General Welfare Committee
 Gus P. Backman, prominent Salt Lake community and business leader

Wilford G. Edling

To the First Presidency of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Dear Brethren:

We have reviewed the report of the financial operations which involve the general funds of the Church, together with other organizations for which accounts are maintained by the Financial Department of the Church, for the fiscal year ended August 31, 1972. Attention was given particularly to the accounting and auditing procedures followed as to funds received and to the manner in which expenditures are controlled. We have determined that the expenditures of such funds were authorized by the First Presidency and by budgetary procedures. The budget is authorized by the Council on Disposition of the Tithes comprised of the First Presidency, the Council of the Twelve, and the Presiding Bishopric.

The Financial Department of the Church has kept pace with current technological developments in record keeping and employs modern data processing equipment in maintaining its accounts. Auditing techniques and procedures are keeping abreast of the increased use of data processing equipment.

A regular audit of the organizations referred to above is conducted on a world-wide basis by the Church Auditing Department, which is completely independent of all other departments. The audit of local funds of wards and stakes is assigned to stake appointed auditors. Incorporated businesses owned or controlled by the Church, for which accounts are not maintained in the Financial Department are audited by professional auditing firms or by governmental regulatory agencies. New and expanded accounting controls and auditing procedures are being inaugurated in the Welfare Department pursuant to the reorganization of that Department.

Based upon our review of the financial reports of the operations which involve the general funds of the Church, and explanations made by personnel of the Financial and Auditing Departments, we are of the opinion that the general funds of the Church have been properly accounted for and expenditures of funds during the fiscal year ended August 31, 1972 were made in accordance with the established procedures outlined herein.

Respectfully submitted,

CHURCH FINANCE COMMITTEE

Wilford G. Edling
 Harold H. Bennett
 Glenn E. Nielson
 Weston E. Hamilton

President Harold B. Lee

Thank you, Brother Gibbons and Brother Edling.

President N. Eldon Tanner,

first counselor in the First Presidency of the Church, will now present the General Authorities, General Officers, and General Auxiliary Officers of the Church for the sustaining vote of the General Conference, following which Elder Bruce R. McConkie of the Council of the Twelve will be our first speaker.

President N. Eldon Tanner

President N. Eldon Tanner then presented the General Authorities, General Officers, and General Auxiliary Officers of the Church for the sustaining vote of the conference as follows:

GENERAL AUTHORITIES AND OFFICERS OF THE CHURCH

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY

Harold B. Lee, Prophet, Seer, and Revelator, and President of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints
 Nathan Eldon Tanner, First Counselor in the First Presidency
 Marion G. Romney, Second Counselor in the First Presidency

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL OF THE TWELVE APOSTLES

Spencer W. Kimball

QUORUM OF THE TWELVE APOSTLES

Spencer W. Kimball	Howard W. Hunter
Ezra Taft Benson	Gordon B. Hinckley
Mark E. Petersen	Thomas S. Monson
Delbert L. Stapley	Boyd K. Packer
LeGrand Richards	Marvin J. Ashton
Hugh B. Brown	Bruce R. McConkie

PATRIARCH TO THE CHURCH

Eldred G. Smith

The Counselors in the First Presidency, the Twelve Apostles, and the Patriarch to the Church as Prophets, Seers, and Revelators.

ASSISTANTS TO THE TWELVE

Alma Sonne	Marion D. Hanks
ElRay L. Christiansen	Joseph Anderson
Sterling W. Sill	David B. Haight
Henry D. Taylor	William H. Bennett
Alvin R. Dyer	John H. Vandenberg
Franklin D. Richards	Robert L. Simpson
Theodore M. Burton	O. Leslie Stone
Bernard P. Brockbank	James E. Faust
James A. Cullimore	L. Tom Perry

TRUSTEE-IN-TRUST

Harold B. Lee
as Trustee-in-Trust for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

THE FIRST COUNCIL OF SEVENTY

Seymour Dilworth Young	Hartman Rector, Jr.
Milton R. Hunter	Loren C. Dunn
Albert Theodore Tuttle	Rex D. Pinegar
Paul H. Dunn

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC

Victor L. Brown, Presiding Bishop
H. Burke Peterson, First Counselor
Vaughn J. Featherstone, Second Counselor

REGIONAL REPRESENTATIVES AND MISSION REPRESENTATIVES

All Regional Representatives of the Quorum of the Twelve and Mission Representatives of the Quorum of the Twelve and the First Council of Seventy as they are at present constituted.

HISTORICAL DEPARTMENT

Howard W. Hunter and Bruce R. McConkie, Advisors
Alvin R. Dyer, Managing Director
Joseph Anderson, Assistant Managing Director
Leonard J. Arrington, Church Historian
Earl E. Olson, Church Archivist
Donald T. Schmidt, Church Librarian

WELFARE SERVICES

Marvin J. Ashton, Advisor
Victor L. Brown, Chairman
Robert L. Simpson, Managing Director, Social Services
Junior Wright Child, Managing Director, Church Welfare
Dr. James O. Mason, Commissioner of Health Services

FAMILY HOME EVENING COMMITTEE

Boyd K. Packer, Advisor
James A. Cullimore, Managing Director

PRIESTHOOD MISSIONARY COMMITTEE

Spencer W. Kimball, Chairman of Executive Committee;
Gordon B. Hinckley, Thomas S. Monson, and Bruce R. McConkie,
Vice Chairmen
Loren C. Dunn, Managing Director

MELCHIZEDEK PRIESTHOOD COMMITTEE

Thomas S. Monson
Boyd K. Packer

Marvin J. Ashton
Bruce R. McConkie

PRIESTHOOD GENEALOGICAL COMMITTEE

Mark E. Petersen and Howard W. Hunter, Advisors
Theodore M. Burton, Managing Director

MUSIC COMMITTEE

Mark E. Petersen and Boyd K. Packer, Advisors
O. Leslie Stone, Managing Director

PHYSICAL FACILITIES DEPARTMENT

Marvin J. Ashton, Advisor
John H. Vandenberg, Managing Director

DEPARTMENT OF INTERNAL COMMUNICATIONS

Thomas S. Monson, Boyd K. Packer, and Marvin J. Ashton, Advisors
J. Thomas Fyans, Managing Director

DEPARTMENT OF EXTERNAL COMMUNICATIONS

Mark E. Petersen and Gordon B. Hinckley, Advisors
Wendell J. Ashton, Managing Director

CHURCH BOARD OF EDUCATION

Harold B. Lee
Nathan Eldon Tanner
Marion G. Romney
Spencer W. Kimball
Ezra Taft Benson
Mark E. Petersen
Delbert L. Stapley
LeGrand Richards
Hugh B. Brown
Howard W. Hunter
Gordon B. Hinckley

Thomas S. Monson
Boyd K. Packer
Marvin J. Ashton
Bruce R. McConkie
Alvin R. Dyer
Marion D. Hanks
A. Theodore Tuttle
Paul H. Dunn
Victor L. Brown
Belle S. Spafford

COMMISSIONER, CHURCH EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM

Neal A. Maxwell

CHURCH FINANCE COMMITTEE

Wilford G. Edling
Harold H. Bennett
Glenn E. Nielson
Weston E. Hamilton

CHURCH AUDITOR

James A. Norberg

TABERNACLE CHOIR

Isaac M. Stewart, President

Richard P. Condie, Conductor

Jay E. Welch, Assistant Conductor

Alexander Schreiner, Chief Organist

Robert Cundick, Organist

Roy M. Darley, Organist

Frank W. Asper, Organist Emeritus

MELCHIZEDEK PRIESTHOOD MIA

Thomas S. Monson, Boyd K. Packer, and Marvin J. Ashton, and Bruce R. McConkie, Advisors

James E. Faust, Managing Director

Marion D. Hanks and L. Tom Perry, Assistant Managing Directors
with all members of the Board as at present constituted.

AARONIC PRIESTHOOD MIA

Under the direction of the Presiding Bishopric:

Victor L. Brown, H. Burke Peterson, and Vaughn J. Featherstone

YOUNG MEN'S MUTUAL IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION

Robert L. Backman, General President

LeGrand R. Curtis, First Counselor

Jack H. Goasland, Jr., Second Counselor

with all members of the Board as at present constituted.

YOUNG WOMEN'S MUTUAL IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION

Ruth Hardy Funk, President

Hortense H. Child, First Counselor

Ardith G. Kapp, Second Counselor

with all members of the Board as at present constituted.

RELIEF SOCIETY

Belle Smith Spafford, President

Marianne Clark Sharp, First Counselor

Louise Wallace Madsen, Second Counselor

with all members of the Board as at present constituted.

SUNDAY SCHOOL

Russell M. Nelson, General President

Joseph B. Wirthlin, First Counselor

Richard L. Warner, Second Counselor

with all members of the Board as at present constituted.

PRIMARY ASSOCIATION

LaVern Watts Parmley, President
 Naomi Ward Randall, First Counselor
 Florence Reece Lane, Second Counselor
 with all members of the Board as at present constituted.

President Tanner

President Lee, as nearly as I can tell, the voting has been unanimous in favor of all officers presented.

President Harold B. Lee

Thank you wonderful saints for your sustaining vote. You never appreciate it more than when you are standing in a position of trust and have that kind of support.

We shall now hear from Elder Bruce R. McConkie of the Council of the Twelve.

Elder Bruce R. McConkie

Of the Council of the Twelve

Peter said, "If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God" (1 Pet. 4:11), which means he must be guided by the power of the Holy Ghost; and this is the thing, above all else, that I desire at this time.

This morning we heard the chief officer, the chief oracle of the kingdom of God on earth, give the mind and will and voice of the Lord to the Latter-day Saints and to the world. I can think of nothing more important at this time than to follow in that pattern, and speak as President Lee speaks, unless it is at all times to live as he lives so that I can have the association, eternally, of the kind of people with whom he will associate.

I have counseled with the Lord as to what I should say today; have made some suggestions to him as to what I thought proper, subject, of course, to his approving concurrence; have received that concurrence; and if I may now be given an uttering tongue and you may be given a listening ear, then all of us together shall be edified as we now seek to worship the Lord in spirit and in truth.

"Upon Judea's Plains"

I have written a text of my own which I have entitled "Upon Judea's Plains."

I stood upon Judea's plains,
 And heard celestial sounds and strains;

I heard an angel, free from sin,
 Announce the birth of David's kin.

On shepherds watching sheep by night,
 There came a shining, glorious light,

As holy choirs from heaven's dome
 Saw God's own Son make clay his home.

And voices sweet sang this reprise:
 "To God on high, let praise arise;
 And peace, good will to men on earth;
 This is the day of Jesus' birth."

To me there came this witness sure:
 "He is God's Son, supreme and pure;
 To earth he came, my soul to save
 From sin and death and from the grave."

Salvation in Christ

Now salvation is in Christ. He is our Savior and Redeemer. He came into the world to redeem men from the temporal and spiritual death brought into the world by the fall of Adam, and he gave to us a plan and system of salvation that is called the gospel of Jesus Christ. This plan of salvation is that all men everywhere should have faith in Christ; should repent of their sins; should covenant in the waters of baptism to keep the commandments and serve God with all their heart, might, mind, and strength; that they should then receive the gift and companionship of the Holy Spirit and thereafter live in righteousness and devotion all their days, with the assurance and promise that by so doing they shall gain peace in this life and eternal glory in the life to come.

Now we are the agents and representatives of the Lord. He has given us the fullness of his everlasting gospel. The heavens have been opened in our day. The voice of God is heard again. Angels have come from his presence. Keys and power, authority and priesthood have been given again to mortal men, and once again we have all of the laws and the prerogatives and possess all of the powers that are needed to save and exalt a human soul. We have in this kingdom, in this church, the keys of the kingdom of God, the keys of salvation for all men everywhere.

Commission to proclaim the truth

And he has given us the same commission that he gave to people in ancient days who had similar powers, and that commission is to carry his word to all the world and make salvation available to all his children everywhere. Now this places upon us the obligation of learning how we are going to do this thing, this thing of such incomparable and transcendent magnitude. How are we going to proclaim the truths of salvation among our own people and take the message of the restoration to the world?

There are some eternal principles involved here, and what we do in our day is not only the same in principle, but is exactly and precisely what the prophets and righteous men have done in all ages past.

To teach and to warn

In the early days of this dispensation the Lord said, "... the elders, priests and teachers of this church shall teach the principles of my gospel, which are in the Bible and the Book of Mormon, in the which is the fulness of the gospel." (D&C 42:12.) Then he said on another occasion that we were sent out "to testify and warn the people. . . ." (D&C 88:81.)

I suppose these two commissions—on the one hand to teach the doctrines of the gospel, and on the other hand to testify by personal knowledge that we know that the things that we are proclaiming are true—I suppose these are perfectly illustrated in the ministry of the sons of Mosiah. The record says that "they were men of a sound understanding," who "had searched the scriptures diligently, that they might know the word of God. But this is not all; they had given themselves to much prayer, and fasting; therefore they had the spirit of prophecy, and the spirit of revelation, and when they taught, they taught with power and authority of God." (Al. 17:2-3.)

Obligation to know

Now this gives us two premises.

On the one hand we are obligated and required to know the doctrines of the Church. We are to treasure up the words of eternal life. We are to reason as intelligently as we are able. We are to use every faculty and capacity with which we are endowed to proclaim the message of salvation and to make it intelligent to ourselves and to our Father's other children. But after we have done that, and also in the process of doing it, we are obligated to bear testimony—to let the world know and our associate members of the Church know—that in our hearts, by the revelation of the Holy Spirit to our souls, we know of the truth and divinity of the work and of the doctrines that we teach.

Now let me, if I may, take a classical illustration from the ancient records of how this is done. Peter and his associates had the same obligation for their day that we have for ours: to carry the message of salvation to the ends of the earth. I suppose Peter read and taught the revelations that Isaiah and the prophets gave about Christ and his gospel. He reasoned with the people about them. He followed the divine counsel, "Come now, and let us reason together. . . ." (Isa. 1:18.) He obeyed the divine decree, ". . . bring forth your strong reasons." (Isa. 41:21.)

Personal witness

But he did something more than that. After he had taught the doctrines and after he had reasoned, he bore a personal witness of the truth and divinity of what he was presenting to his fellowmen; and the Lord prepared him to do just that by giving him spiritual experiences, by letting the power of the Holy Spirit rest upon him.

You will recall, for instance, that Peter and some others of the Twelve and a small group of saints were assembled in an upper room; that the Lord Jesus appeared; that the people there assembled were terrified and affrighted; and that the Lord said to them: "Why are ye troubled? and why do thoughts arise in your hearts? Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself: handle me, and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have." (Luke 24:38-39.) Then they stretched forth their hands and felt the wound marks that scarred his body. He called for meat and ate it before them.

Thomas was absent on this occasion and believed not the testimony of his fellow disciples; eight days later the Lord made a similar appearance to the whole group and said to him: "Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into my side; and be not faithless, but believing." Thomas said: "My Lord and my God." (See John 20:24-28.)

All this was done to show that Jesus had come forth from the tomb with a tangible body. It was the Lord's way of giving to Peter and his associates a witness of the truth and divinity of his divine Sonship. If he rose from the dead, he was the Son of God; if he was the Son of God, then the gospel of salvation they were proclaiming was true; and so their obligation was to establish in the minds of men that Jesus rose from the dead. Now as I say, they might have attempted to do this by quoting Isaiah, or reasoning out of the revelations, which of course they did; but having so done, they then had to bear a personal witness; and I now read a sample of such a witness that Peter bore. He said to a group of assembled gentiles:

Peter's witness

"The word which God sent unto the children of Israel, preaching peace by Jesus Christ: (he is Lord of all:)

"That word, I say, ye know, which was published throughout all Judaea, and began from Galilee, after the baptism which John preached;

"How God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Ghost and with power: who went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil; for God was with him.

"And we are witnesses of all things which he did both in the land of the Jews, and in Jerusalem; whom they slew and hanged on a tree:

"Him God raised up the third day, and shewed him openly;

"Not to all the people, but unto witnesses chosen before of God, even to us, who did eat and drink with him after he rose from the dead.

"And he commanded us to preach unto the people, and to testify that it is he which was ordained of God to be the Judge of quick and dead." (Acts 10:36-42.)

And then comes this comprehensive, all-inclusive statement: "To him give all the prophets witness, that through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins." (Acts 10:43.)

Let me read one other testimony that Peter bore:

"For we have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eyewitnesses of his majesty.

"For he received from God the Father honour and glory, when there came such a voice to him from the excellent glory, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.

"And this voice which came from heaven we heard, when we were with him in the holy mount." (2 Pet. 1:16-18.)

The seal of testimony

Now I do not minimize in any degree or to any extent the obligation that rests upon us to be gospel scholars, to search the revelations, to learn how to reason and analyze, to present the message of salvation among ourselves and to the world with all the power and ability we have; but that standing alone does not suffice. When that is all over, we have to comply with the command the Lord gave for us in this day: ". . . ye are my witnesses, saith the Lord, that I am God." (Isa. 43: 12.) We have to put an approving, divine seal on the doctrine that we teach, and that seal is the seal of testimony, the seal of a personal knowledge borne of the Holy Ghost.

Now Peter could have reasoned at great length, and after having so done people could have argued with him and said, "You don't understand the scriptures. Your interpretations are in error. This or that is wrong." But you can't argue with a testimony, and so after Peter had reasoned, if he then said to them, as he must have done in substance and in thought content on many occasions, if he said to them, "I was in an upper room. The Lord Jesus came through the wall. He appeared to us. I recognized him. He was the same person with whom I had labored and traveled for three and a half years. He is the person who lived in my home in Capernaum. I then felt the nail marks in his hands and in his feet. I thrust my hand into his side. I was there when he ate food and drank before us. I know he is the Son of God. The Holy Spirit of God has borne this witness to my soul"—if he said this to them, there was nothing left to debate. You can't argue with that kind of a presentation. You can say, as Festus said to Paul: "Thou art beside thyself; much learning doth make thee mad" (Acts 26:24), but in the final analysis all you can do is accept or reject the witness that is borne. It is either true or it is false. There is no middle ground.

As one having authority

Now how do you prove and establish that the Father and the Son appeared to Joseph Smith; that angels came in our day; that there has been a restoration of the gospel; that all the glorious things we present to the world are true? Well, you reason out of the revelations. You can make a good case; and that isn't any problem. The truth is with us. The Lord is the author of the system we have received. But after you have reasoned and after you have analyzed, you have got to stand as a personal witness who knows what he is saying. You have to do what the sons of Mosiah did—speak and teach by the spirit of prophecy and the spirit of revelation; and the result is that you speak as one having authority. This is the great thing that separates us from the world, and thanks be to God we have this knowledge. We have received this revelation, and we are in a position to speak as those having authority.

And I attempt with all the vigor of my soul so to do on this occasion, because I am one, among many among great hosts in latter-day Israel, who has this knowledge. I know of myself of the truth and the divinity of this work and of the doctrine which I now teach.

"In an Upper Room"

We began with "Upon Judea's Plains." Let us close with "In an Upper Room."

We sat at meat, our souls in pain,
For wicked men our Lord had slain:
We'd seen him on the cross of doom;
His body lay in Joseph's tomb.

Then by our board, he stood once more:

He lives, he lives—now as afore!
He ate, then drank; we saw, then felt,
As at his feet in awe we knelt.

A calm command to Thomas came:
"Feel thou my hands, they are the same

As when I hung upon the tree,
And suffered death for me and thee."

To me he said, in solemn tones:
"My body feel; 'tis flesh and bones."
My soul cried out: "Bow 'neath his rod;
Acclaim him Savior, Lord, and God!"

And of this I testify, in solemnity and sobriety, with full knowledge of what I speak. In the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

I am sure that the Church and the world will be strengthened by the testimony of the newest of our special witnesses whom the Lord has called to this great service, Elder Bruce R. McConkie of the Council of the Twelve who has just spoken to us.

The congregation and chorus will now join in singing "We Thank Thee, O God, for a Prophet."

After the singing, Elder Paul H. Dunn of the First Council of Seventy will address us.

The congregation and chorus sang "We Thank Thee, O God, for a Prophet."

President Lee

Elder Paul H. Dunn of the First

Council of Seventy will now address us. He will be followed by Elder

John H. Vandenberg, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve.

Elder Paul H. Dunn

Of the First Council of the Seventy

This is always a wonderful sight and a great occasion, brothers and sisters, and I thrill to add my testimony to that of our president and these great leaders who have preceded me. How delighted I felt this afternoon to see these young people assembled and to hear their sweet voices tell of, I think, the greatest story since the birth of our Savior.

Someone once said, "I am intensely interested in the future because I expect to spend the rest of my days there." I get excited about young people such as these because they project that kind of a positive future. We love and trust them. Seeing them seated behind me brings to mind a short story from Mt. Kisco, New York, reported in the Reader's Digest.

Little red schoolhouse

"Once upon a time, there was a little red schoolhouse with one big room for 27 children. The teacher sat with an American flag on one side of her and a blackboard on the other. The children sat in rows facing her, the littlest ones in front. The youngest was seven, and she was very little. The biggest was 16, and he was six feet tall. The youngest was smart, and she could read with the other children. The biggest was dumb, but he was strong and could help the teacher carry in wood. In bad weather, he carried the littlest girl across the puddle in front of the schoolhouse. And sometimes she helped him with his reading.

"Then one day the state built a big highway, right past the schoolhouse door. And the State Education Department came by and said, 'Great things are happening in education. There are special teachers for arithmetic, reading, art and music. If you combine with other schoolhouses, you could have a great big school where your children could have all the advantages. And big yellow buses could carry your children over the new highway right up to the school door.' So the parents voted to consolidate, and the little red schoolhouse was abandoned.

"At first things went well in the big school. But after a while, the State Education Department said that it wasn't providing the children with enough meaningful experiences. And some parents complained that the children were not learning to read and write and figure as well as they had in the little red schoolhouse. 'We will try some new things,' said the educators. So they tried the ungraded primer, where fast readers were not slowed down by slow readers, and where children who had trouble with numbers did not get moved on to the next grade before they could add 3 and 5. This helped, but not enough.

"'We will try something more,' the educators said. 'We will tear down some walls at the new school, so the children will be working together in one big room. That way, there will be less peer-group competition.'

"Finally, an important educator came along, looked at the school and said, 'This is good, but it is not good enough. It is too big, and the children are losing their identity. There are not enough interpersonal relationships in the infrastructure. What we really need is a one-room schoolhouse. And since red is a cheerful color, I think we ought to paint it red." (From Mt. Kisco, N.Y., Patent Trader, in Reader's Digest, March 1973, p. 68. Used by permission.)

Emphasis on individual

The educator in this story did not mean that the consolidated school, the special teachers, or the ungraded primer were not advantages. The point of the story is that along with the wonderful new discoveries in education, the emphasis must still be placed upon the individual and upon his needs and relationships with others.

This philosophy applies just as importantly to Church organizations as it does to the little red schoolhouse. In a revelation given to the Prophet Joseph Smith just prior to the organization of the Church, the Lord said:

"Remember the worth of souls is great in the sight of God;

"For, behold, the Lord your Redeemer suffered death in the flesh; wherefore he suffered the pain of all men, that all men might repent and come unto him.

"And he hath risen again from the dead, that he might bring all men unto him, on conditions of repentance." (D&C 18:10-12.)

Our Lord's response to the Pharisees' question, "Why do they on the sabbath day that which is not lawful?" was, "The sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath." (Mark 2:24, 27.)

Concern for people

I understand from what the Lord has revealed to us through the prophets that people are his greatest concern. We are his children. We are somebody, as Elder Ashton so wonderfully stated this morning. We are his children, and he continually reveals himself through the prophets so that one day we can be like him.

Programs, then, wonderfully inspired programs, like the Sabbath, exist to help people. If we are not careful, it is very easy to put the mechanics of the program ahead of the person. Jesus was constantly trying to put the spirit back into the letter of the law. Our first priority, I feel, as parents, leaders, and teachers should be the individual within the home or Church program.

A piece of property

I remember some years ago an experience I had while directing one of the religious education programs of the Church in Southern California.

One of my responsibilities as a coordinator was to secure property, eventually erect an institute building, and then provide a religious program for our college youth. We had secured a wonderful institute site adjacent to the Los Angeles State College. Shortly after the transaction was consummated, the State of California indicated to me that they wanted to take the property by right of eminent domain, which was their prerogative. I checked with my superiors and they said, "Look into the legal side and see if we still don't have a chance." I did. We went into court for a hearing. The judge was impressed with the program of the Church and what we do for youth and people. We were sent back to do some additional homework and gather added information.

Worth of a soul

The day came for the final hearing, and I had about eight hours of work to do in four when at that very moment about ten o'clock one morning a knock came at the door, and because of my frustration I almost said (but I didn't), "COME IN!" Instead I said, "Come in." And in the framework of that door stood a 19-year-old USC freshman student who had refused our offers to come and join our group on four previous occasions. His head bowed, hands in his pockets, he said, "Brother Dunn, I have got to see you, now." And I almost said (but I didn't), "Can't you see I am busy?" Because I was. Fortunately I had the presence of mind to invite him in; and as he took a chair, several questions went through my mind.

Question number 1, "What are you going to court for this morning, Paul?" "Well, to try to save a piece of property." "What do you want the piece of property for, Paul?" "Well, to erect a building." "Well, what do you want a building for?" "Well, to teach some students." "What just knocked on your door?" "Oh, a student." And wouldn't you know, he took the whole four hours.

The time came for legal counsel to arrive, and we went to court. I don't know all of the ramifications. We lost the hearing and eventually the piece of property, and it took us two years to secure another site. You would be happy with what the Church has done at Los Angeles State College, but more important, we saved the boy. Had it been your son, I think you would agree that we made the right decision.

God grant us the vision as leaders, teachers, and parents to put people first. Remember the worth of souls is great in the sight of God. I add my personal witness. God lives. Jesus is the Christ. This is his church. This is his prophet. I so testify in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

Thank you, Brother Dunn. Elder Paul H. Dunn of the First Council of Seventy has just spoken to us.

Elder John H. Vandenberg, Assistant to the Twelve, will now address us. He will be followed by Bishop Vaughn J. Featherstone of the Presiding Bishopric.

Elder John H. Vandenberg

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

It was a wintry Sunday morning in northern New York. The temperature was several degrees below freezing. The walks were icy; roads were blocked with heavy snowdrifts. No one came to church that morning except the minister and an 89-year-old woman, who had hobbled ten blocks from where she lived.

Surprised at seeing her, the minister called her by name and asked: "How did you get here on such a stormy morning?"

"My heart gets here first," was the cheerful reply, "and then it's easy for the rest of me." (Quote, January 26, 1973, p. 5.)

Persuasions of the heart

This simple illustration brings to mind that all individuals are confronted with decisions to make every day, and whatever the choice, it is commensurate with the persuasion of the heart.

These persuasions of the heart are related to two opposing forces constantly at work within every human being. They are the forces of good and evil, which the Master referred to as God and mammon. Coupled with these forces is the individual's power to reason, which only man, of all God's creations, possesses. This enables him to make choices. It is man's control valve of what he wants to be. The forces governed by his own reasoning determine the nature and quality of the choice made. Thus, that which we call character is formed. We refer to this privilege of choice as the agency of man.

It has been said that "every day is election day, for throughout every hour of every day we each exercise our right of choice. We don't have to have a local or national election in order to elect or vote. . . . A man's election can determine the deciding vote for or against his own success. . . . You elect to gain a thorough knowledge of your business or you don't. You elect to be honest or you don't. You elect to save a part of what you earn or you don't. You elect to always do your best or you don't. And by your own election you will be defeated or you will succeed." (Jim Love, R&R Magazine, Research and Review Service of America, Inc., vol. 10, p. 64.)

The principle of agency

Our Father in heaven was aware of the reality of this principle of agency in the beginning. We read from the scriptures in some detail:

"Now the Lord had shown unto me, Abraham, the intelligences that were organized before the world was; . . .

"And God saw these souls that they were good. . . .

"And there stood one among them that was like unto God, and he said unto those who were with him:

We will go down, for there is space there, and we will take of these materials, and we will make an earth whereon these may dwell;

"And we will prove them herewith, to see if they will do all things whatsoever the Lord their God shall command them;

"And they who keep their first estate shall be added upon; . . . and they who keep their second estate shall have glory added upon their heads for ever and ever.

"And the Lord said: Whom shall I send? And one answered like unto the Son of Man: Here am I, send me." (Abr. 3:22-27.) And that one said, "Father, thy will be done, and the glory be thine forever." (Moses 4:2.)

" . . . And another answered and said: Here am I, send me." (Abr. 3:27.)

"I will be thy son, and I will redeem all mankind, that one soul shall not be lost, and surely I will do it; wherefore give me thine honor." (Moses 4:1.)

" . . . And the Lord said: I will send the first.

"And the second was angry, and kept not his first estate. . . ." (Abr. 3:27-28.) "And he became Satan, . . . the father of all lies, to deceive and to blind men, and to lead them captive at his will, even as many as would not hearken unto my voice." (Moses 4:4.)

Satan rebelled against God and "sought to destroy the agency of man, which I, the Lord God, had given him. . . ." (Moses 4:3.)

Unfortunately, many do not realize the quality and blessing of that gift of agency of man. If we would but reason the matter, we would come to realize as is expressed in this thought: "Choice is an element of human dignity. Without the power of choice, a man is a lot less than a man. Without the exercise of choice a man never discovers what he can be or what he can do. Choice is the key to the future." (George E. Farling, "Youth Can't, But Must," Weslyan Methodist.)

Author of man's agency

Since the authorship of the agency of man is God's, should we not look to him for the best media to help us to control our choices? The media he has given to us are the words spoken by his prophets, as are recorded in the scriptures. Jesus confirms this in responding to the recreant Jews of his time, who accused him of breaking the Sabbath by healing a man on that day. He included in his rebuke to them these words:

"And the Father himself, which hath sent me, hath borne witness of me. Ye have neither heard his voice at any time, nor seen his shape.

"And ye have not his word abiding in you: for whom he hath sent, him ye believe not.

"Search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me.

"And ye will not come to me, that ye might have life." (John 5:37-40.)

Answers in the scriptures

The guide to the answer to their problem was to be found in the scriptures. He rebuked them for not accepting the scriptures that they had. The guide to the solution to every problem of life is to be found there. The knowledge on which to pursue our reasoning is in them. Listen to the counsel of Paul to Timothy:

"And that from a child thou hast known the holy scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Jesus Christ.

"All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness:

"That the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." (2 Tim. 3:15-17.)

As fellow workers for the cause of building the kingdom of God, they are our source of faith, commitment, determination, and leadership; doctrine for the foundation of our decisions. Let us refer to the scriptures for a few well-known examples to illustrate. I refer to the example of the faith of Job, a very affluent, God-fearing man, having much of the world's goods and a fine family. Overnight, he suffered the sudden loss of all his earthly possessions and his children and then responded to the situation with faith and realism.

He "rent his mantle, and shaved his head, and fell down upon the ground, and worshipped,

"And said, Naked came I out of my mother's womb, and naked shall I return thither: the Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord." (Job 1:20-21.)

Then upon being rendered with bodily affliction and poor health, his own wife chided him and said to him, "Dost thou still retain thine integrity? curse God, and die."

Job answered, "Thou speakest as one of the foolish women speaketh. What? shall we receive good at the hand of God, and shall we not receive evil?" (Job 2:9-10.)

And then in the midst of all his afflictions, Job gave this testimony: "For I know that my redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth: And though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God." (Job 19:25-26.)

Commitment

As to commitment, is there a more touching example of devotion than Ruth to her mother-in-law, Naomi, as Naomi pled with Ruth to return to her own people following the death of her husband, when Ruth clave unto her and said:

"Intreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee: for whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge: thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God:

"Where thou diest, will I die, and there will I be buried: the Lord do so to me, and more also, if ought but death part thee and me." (Ruth 1:16-17.)

And Queen Esther, in her determination to save her kindred people from destruction, seeking God's help through fasting, instructed Mordecai: "Go, gather together all the Jews that are present in Shushan, and fast ye for me, and neither eat nor drink three days, night or day: I also and my maidens will fast likewise; and so will I go in unto the king, which is not according to the law: and if I perish, I perish." (Esther 4:16.)

And Joshua the leader, as he turned the hearts of the belligerent people by his example of choice, spoke to them: "Now therefore fear the Lord, and serve him in sincerity and in truth: and put away the gods which your fathers served on the other side of the flood, and in Egypt; and serve ye the Lord.

"And if it seem evil unto you to serve the Lord, choose you this day whom ye will serve; whether the gods which your fathers served that were on the other side of the flood, or the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell: but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord.

"And the people answered and said, God forbid that we should forsake the Lord, to serve other gods;

"And the people said unto Joshua, The Lord our God will we serve, and his voice will we obey." (Josh. 24:14-16, 24.)

Making proper choices

These are but a few of the unnumbered examples to be found in the scriptures, but even as we examine these few evidences of outstanding characters, our spirits receive the inspiration of their strength. Reasoning tells us that the development of their lives had to be built on making proper choices. They were established on truth. Their examples teach us celestial lessons.

The Lord's call to us is: "Come now, and let us reason together. . . ." (Isa. 1:18.) He wants us to listen to and consider his doctrine. The scriptures tell us this: ". . . that men might be made partakers of the glories which were to be revealed, the Lord sent forth the fulness of his gospel, his everlasting covenant, reasoning in plainness and simplicity." (D&C 133:57.)

He wants us to become acquainted with his gospel, to test it, to prove it, to participate in it, and to use it as a base on which to make our decisions. This is that men might base their choices on truth. When reason is joined with truth, there is convincing logic that sets up the path in our hearts that leads upward and onward to a nobler life.

Reason is only compatible with truth. Error and evil, no matter how one may try to reason with it, still remain error and evil leading to chaos. It is difficult to understand that anyone, after examining the truth, could "say unto God, Depart from us; for we desire not the knowledge of thy ways." (Job 21:14.)

One of the sad expressions of the scriptures is when Christ said:

"O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not! Behold, your house is left unto you desolate." (Matt. 23: 37-38.)

The expression is applicable in this day to those who deliberately will not come and reason with the Lord.

Let us incline our hearts toward God, that we may receive these words of John:

"Beloved, if our heart condemn us not, then have we confidence toward God.

"And whatsoever we ask, we receive of him, because we keep his commandments, and do those things that are pleasing in his sight.

"And this is his commandment, That we should believe on the name of his Son Jesus Christ, and love one another, as he gave us commandment.

"And he that keepeth his commandments dwelleth in him, and he in him. And hereby we know that he abideth in us, by the Spirit which he hath given us." (1 John 3:21-24.)

In the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

Elder John H. Vandenberg, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve, has just addressed us.

Bishop Vaughn J. Featherstone, second counselor in the Presiding Bishopric, will now address us. He will be followed by Elder Ezra Taft Benson of the Council of the Twelve, who will be the concluding speaker.

Bishop Vaughn J. Featherstone

Second Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric

President Romney recently said, "Welfare is not a program of the Church; it is of the essence of the Church." I truly believe that. Welfare is more than just furnishing the temporal needs of the Church members. Welfare is for every single member of the Church. It involves the 96 percent who do not need to be assisted by the commodities and by those things furnished by the bishop's storehouse. Welfare is for those who have, to give, as well as those who have not, to receive.

All are beggars

Now the scriptures are replete with verses bearing witness to what President Romney has said. In Mosiah, King Benjamin said:

"... and ye will not suffer that the beggar putteth up his petition to you in vain. . . .

"Perhaps thou shalt say: The man has brought upon himself his misery; therefore I will stay my hand, and will not give unto him of my food, nor impart unto him of my substance . . . for his punishments are just—

"But . . . whosoever doeth this the same hath great cause to repent; and except he repenteth of that which he hath done he perisheth forever, and hath no interest in the kingdom of God.

"For behold, are we not all beggars? . . ." (Mosiah 4:16-18.)

And then clearly Paul said: "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymball." (1 Cor. 13:1.)

Rich man and Lazarus

And then, of course, the great Savior of heaven and earth, in one of his great parables, taught us a most profound lesson. He said:

"There was a certain rich man, which was clothed in purple and fine linen, and fared sumptuously every day:

"And there was a certain beggar named Lazarus, which was laid at his gate, full of sores,

"And desiring to be fed with the crumbs which fell from the rich man's table: moreover the dogs came and licked his sores.

"And it came to pass, that the beggar died, and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom: the rich man also died and was buried;

"And in hell he lift up his eyes, being in torments, and seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom.

"And he cried and said, Father Abraham, have mercy on me, and send Lazarus, that he may dip the tip of his finger in water, and cool my tongue; for I am tormented in this flame.

"But Abraham said, Son, remember that thou in thy lifetime receivedst thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things: but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented.

"And beside all this, between us and you there is a great gulf fixed: so that they which would pass from hence to you cannot; neither can they pass to us, that would come from thence.

"Then he said, I pray thee therefore, father, that thou wouldest send him to my father's house:

"For I have five brethren; that he may testify unto them, lest they also come into this place of torment.

"Abraham saith unto him, They have Moses and the prophets; let them hear them.

"And he said, Nay, father Abraham; but if one went unto them from the dead, they will repent.

"And he said unto him, If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead." (Luke 16:19-31.)

I believe the Savior here teaches us a great lesson. There are those who have want, and in his great charitable way he will provide, for I believe the pure love of Christ is welfare. I believe it seeks out beyond the dimensions of that which we do. I think it is charity in its purest form.

"The Touch of the Master's Hand"

Myra Brooks Welch in her great poem, "The Touch of the Master's Hand," said:

"'Twas battered and scarred, and the auctioneer

Thought it scarcely worth his while
To waste much time on the old violin,

But held it up with a smile:
'What am I bidden, good folks,'
he cried,

'Who'll start the bidding for me?'

'A dollar, a dollar'; then, 'Two!'

'Only two?

Two dollars, and who'll make it three?

Three dollars, once; three dollars,
twice;

Going for three—' But no,
From the room, far back, a gray-haired man

Came forward and picked up the bow;

Then, wiping the dust from the old violin,

And tightening the loose strings,
He played a melody pure and sweet

As sweet as a caroling angel sings

"The music ceased, and the auctioneer,

With a voice that was quiet and low,

Said, 'What am I bid for the old violin?'

And he held it up with the bow.
'A thousand dollars, and who'll make it two?

Two thousand! And who'll make it three?

Three thousand, once, three thousand, twice,

And going, and gone!' said he.

The people cheered, but some of them cried,

'We do not quite understand What changed its worth.' Swift came the reply:

'The touch of a master's hand.'

"And many a man with life out of tune,

And battered and scarred with sin,
Is auctioned cheap to the thoughtless crowd,

Much like the old violin.

A 'mess of pottage,' a glass of wine;

A game—and he travels on.

He's 'going' once, and 'going' twice,

He's 'going' and almost 'gone.'

But the Master comes, and the foolish crowd

Never can quite understand

The worth of a soul and the change that's wrought

By the touch of the Master's hand."

Caring for all

I believe that is what it is. It is more than just physical welfare. It is the social and emotional needs furnished and provided and trained and taught in the Church. It is taking care of the health of those who have twisted bodies. I believe we have a great and sacred responsibility in this area. I think President Lee probably said it more beautifully in our day than any I have read. In 1946 in the October conference, he said:

"I know there are powers that can draw close to one who fills his heart with . . . love. . . . I came to a night, some years ago, when on my bed, I realized that before I could be worthy of the high place to which I had been called, I must love and forgive every soul that walked the earth, and in that time I came to know and I received a peace and a direction, and a comfort, and an inspiration, that told me things to come and gave me impressions that I knew were from a divine source." (Conference Report, October 1946, p. 146.)

Isn't it having the prophet feel the responsibility of caring for every living soul on the earth, loving and forgiving them?

Story of Goates family

I have a great friend, Brother Les Goates, a great and gifted writer, and I asked him if I could lift a part of a story. He told how welfare first came into his home:

"But 'as for me and my house,' the welfare program began in the Old Field west of Lehi on the Saratoga Road in the autumn of 1918, that terribly climactic year of World War I during which more than 14 million people died of that awful scourge 'the black plague,' or Spanish influenza.

"Winter came early that year and froze much of the sugar beet crop in the ground. My dad and brother Francis were desperately trying to get out of the frosty ground one load of beets each day which they would plow out of the ground, cut off the tops, and toss the beets, one at a time, into the huge red beet wagon and then haul the load off to the sugar factory. It was slow and tedious work due to the frost and the lack of farm help, since my brother Floyd and I were in the army and Francis, or Franz, as everybody called him, was too young for the military service.

"While they were thusly engaged in harvesting the family's only cash crop and were having their evening meal one day, a phone call came through from our eldest brother, George Albert, superintendent of the State Industrial School in Ogden, bearing the tragic news that Kenneth, nine-year-old son of our brother Charles, the school farm manager, had been stricken with the dread 'flu,' and after only a few hours of violent sickness, had died on his father's lap; and would dad please come to Ogden and bring the boy home and lay him away in the family plot in the Lehi Cemetery.

"My father cranked up his old flap-curtained Chevrolet and headed for Five Points in Ogden to bring his little grandson home for burial. When he arrived at the home he found 'Charl' sprawled across the cold form of his dear one, the ugly brown discharge of the black plague oozing from his ears and nose and virtually burning up with fever.

"Take my boy home,' muttered the stricken young father, 'and lay him away in the family lot and come back for me tomorrow.'

"Father brought Kenneth home, made a coffin in his carpenter shop, and mother and our sisters, Jennie, Emma, and Hazel, placed a cushion and a lining in it, and then dad went with Franz and two kind neighbors to dig the grave. So many were dying the families had to do the grave digging. A brief graveside service was all that was permitted.

"The folks had scarcely returned from the cemetery when the telephone rang again and George Albert (Bert) was on the line with another terrifying message: Charl had died and two of his beautiful little girls—Vesta, 7, and Elaine, 5—were critically ill, and two babies—Raeldon, 4, and Pauline, 3—had been stricken.

"Our good cousins, the Larkin undertaking people, were able to get a casket for Charl and they sent him home in a railroad baggage car. Father and young Franz brought the body from the railroad station and placed it on the front porch of our old country home for an impromptu neighborhood viewing but folks were afraid to come near the body of a black plague victim. Father and Francis meanwhile had gone with neighbors to get the grave ready and arrange a short service in which the great, noble spirit of Charles Hyrum Goates was commended into the keeping of his Maker.

"Next day my sturdy, unconquerable old dad was called on still another of his grim missions—this time to bring home Vesta, the smiling one with the raven hair and big blue eyes.

"When he arrived at the home he found Juliett, the grief-crazed mother, kneeling at the crib of darling little Elaine, the blue-eyed baby angel with the golden curls. Juliett was sobbing wearily and praying: 'Oh, Father in heaven, not this one, please! Let me keep my baby! Do not take any more of my darlings from me!'

"Before father arrived home with Vesta the dread word had come again. Elaine had gone to join her daddy, brother Kenneth, and Sister Vesta. And so it was that father made another heartbreaking journey to bring home and lay away a fourth member of his family, all within the week.

"The telephone did not ring the evening of the day they laid away Elaine nor were there any more sad tidings of death the next morning. It was assumed that George A. and his courageous companion Della, although afflicted, had been able to save the little ones Raeldon and Pauline; and it was such a relief that Cousin Reba Munns, a nurse, had been able to come in and help.

"After breakfast dad said to Franz, 'Well, son, we had better get down to the field and see if we can get another load of beets out of the ground before they get frozen in any tighter. Hitch up and let's be on our way.'

"Francis drove the four-horse outfit down the driveway and dad climbed aboard. As they drove along the Saratoga Road, they passed wagon after wagon-load of beets being hauled to the factory and driven by neighborhood farmers. As they passed by, each driver would wave a greeting: 'Hi ya, Uncle George,' 'Sure sorry, George,' 'Tough break, George,' 'You've got a lot of friends, George.'

"On the last wagon was the town comedian, freckled-faced Jasper Rolfe. He waved a cheery greeting and called out: 'That's all of 'em, Uncle George.'

"My dad turned to Francis and said: 'I wish it was all of ours.'

"When they arrived at the farm gate, Francis jumped down off the big red beet wagon and opened the gate as we drove onto the field. He pulled up, stopped the team, paused a moment and scanned the field, from left to right and back and forth—and lo and behold, there wasn't a sugar beet on the whole field. Then it dawned upon him what Jasper Rolfe meant when he called out: 'That's all of 'em, Uncle George!'

"Then dad got down off the wagon, picked up a handful of the rich, brown soil he loved so much, and then in his thumbless left hand a beet top, and he looked for a moment at these symbols of his labor, as if he couldn't believe his eyes.

"Then father sat down on a pile of beet tops—this man who brought four of his loved ones home for burial in the course of only six days; made caskets, dug graves, and even helped with the burial clothing—this amazing man who never faltered, nor flinched, nor wavered throughout this agonizing ordeal—sat down on a pile of beet tops and sobbed like a little child.

"Then he arose, wiped his eyes with his big, red bandanna handkerchief, looked up at the sky, and said: 'Thanks, Father, for the elders of our ward.'

The Lord's way

Isn't that what the Lord would want us to do if he were here to show us the way, for didn't he entreat us by saying:

"Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.

"Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls.

"For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light." (Matt. 11:28-30.)

Who received the greater blessing? Was it the elders who went out into the field and harvested Brother Goates' load of beets? I want you to know they received a great blessing.

And now in conclusion, you remember the words of Paul. He said: "And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity." (1 Cor. 13:13.)

And I pray that the charity of Jesus Christ will be with and abide with each one of us, that we will understand the total dimension of welfare services in the Church, in the name of Jesus Christ, our Master. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

I think it is easy to understand how the Lord called a man like Bishop Featherstone to this position in the Presiding Bishopric.

Elder Ezra Taft Benson of the Council of the Twelve will now be our concluding speaker.

Elder Ezra Taft Benson

Of the Council of the Twelve

The prophet Ezekiel declared:

"Son of man, I have made thee a watchman unto the house of Israel: therefore hear the word at my mouth, and give them warning from me.

"When I say unto the wicked, Thou shalt surely die; and thou givest him not warning, nor speakest to warn the wicked from his wicked way, to save his life; the same wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thine hand.

"Yet if thou warn the wicked, and he turn not from his wickedness, nor from his wicked way, he shall die in his iniquity; but thou hast delivered thy soul." (Ezek. 3:17-19.)

Warning voices

The inspired Book of Mormon prophets saw our day and warned us of the strategy of the adversary. Hear their words:

"For behold, at that day shall he [the devil] rage in the hearts of the children of men, and stir them up to anger against that which is good.

"And others will he pacify, and lull them away into carnal security. . . .

". . . wo be unto him that hearkeneth unto the precepts of men, and denieth the power of God. . . ." (2 Ne. 28:20-21, 26.)

Through a modern prophet, Joseph Smith, the Lord has given this further warning: "Wherefore the voice of the Lord is unto the ends of the earth, that all that will hear may hear:

". . . and the day cometh that they who will not hear the voice of the Lord, neither the voice of his servants, neither give heed to the words of the prophets and apostles, shall be cut off from among the people;

"For they have strayed from mine ordinances, and have broken mine everlasting covenant;

"They seek not the Lord to establish his righteousness, but every man walketh in his own way, and after the image of his own God, whose image is in the likeness of the world. . . .

"What I the Lord have spoken, I have spoken, and I excuse not myself; and though the heavens and the earth pass away, my word shall not pass away, but shall all be fulfilled, whether by mine own voice, or by the voice of my servants, it is the same." (D&C 1:11, 14-16, 38.)

These warnings were given 140 years ago. The fulfillment is now. We are living witnesses, unless we are blinded by our own complacency and the craftiness of evil men.

Watchmen on the tower

As watchmen on the tower of Zion, it is our obligation and right as leaders to speak out against current evils—evils that strike at the very foundation of all we hold dear as the true church of Christ and as members of Christian nations.

As one of these watchmen, with a love for humanity, I accept humbly this obligation and challenge and gratefully strive to do my duty without fear. In times as serious as these, we must not permit fear of criticism to keep us from doing our duty, even at the risk of our counsel being tabbed as political, as government becomes more and more entwined in our daily lives.

In the crisis through which we are now passing, we have been fully warned. This has brought forth some criticism. There are some of us who do not want to hear the message. It embarrasses us. The things which are threatening our lives, our welfare, our freedoms are the very things some of us have been condoning. Many do not want to be disturbed as they continue to enjoy their comfortable complacency.

The Church is founded on eternal truth. We do not compromise principle. We do not surrender our standards regardless of current trends or pressures. Our allegiance to truth as a church is unwavering. Speaking out against immoral or unjust actions has been the burden of prophets and disciples of God from time immemorial. It was for this very reason that many of them were persecuted. Nevertheless, it was their God-given task, as watchmen on the tower, to warn the people.

Age of appeasement

We live in an age of appeasement—the sacrificing of principle. Appeasement is not the answer. It is never the right answer.

One of these modern Church watchmen has given this sound warning:

"A milk-and-water allegiance kills; while a passionate devotion gives life and soul to any cause and its adherents. The troubles of the world may largely be laid at the doors of those who are neither hot nor cold; who always follow the line of least resistance; whose timid hearts flutter at taking sides for truth. As in the great Council in the heavens, so in the Church of Christ on earth, there can be no neutrality. We are, or we are not, on the side of the Lord. An unrelenting faith, contemptuous of all compromise, will lead the Church and every member of it, to triumph and the achievement of our high destiny.

"The final conquerors of the world will be the men and women, few or many matters not, who fearlessly and unflinchingly cling to truth, and who are able to say no, as well as yes, on whose lofty banner is inscribed: No compromise with error. . . ."

"Tolerance is not conformity to the world's view and practices. We must not surrender our beliefs to get along with people, however beloved or influential they may be. Too high a price may be paid for social standing or even for harmony. . . . The Gospel rests upon eternal truth; and truth can never be deserted safely." (John A. Widtsoe, Conference Report, April 1941, pp. 117, 116.)

It has been well said that "our greatest national problem is erosion. Not erosion of the soil, but erosion of the national morality."

A spiritual foundation

The United States of America has been great because it has been free. It has been free because it has trusted in God and was founded upon the principles of freedom set forth in the word of God. This nation has a spiritual foundation. To me, this land has a prophetic history.

In the year 1831 Alexis de Tocqueville, the famous French historian, came to our country at the request of the French government to study our penal institutions. He also made a close study of our political and social institutions. In less than ten years, de Tocqueville had become world-famous, as the result of the four-volume work that he wrote, entitled Democracy in America. Here is his own stirring explanation of the greatness of America:

"I sought for the greatness and genius of America in her commodious harbors and her ample rivers, and it was not there; in her fertile fields and boundless prairies, and it was not there; in her rich mines and her vast world commerce, and it was not there. Not until I went to the churches of America and heard her pulpits aflame with righteousness did I understand the secret of her genius and power. America is great because she is good, and if America ever ceases to be good, America will cease to be great." (Prophets, Principles and National Survival, compiled by Jerreld L. Newquist [Salt Lake City, Publishers Press, 1964], p. 60.)

False ideologies

How strong is our will to remain free—to be good? False thinking and false ideologies, dressed in the most pleasing forms, quietly—almost without our knowing it—seek to reduce our moral defenses and to captivate our minds. They entice with bright promises of security, cradle-to-grave guarantees of many kinds. They masquerade under various names, but all may be recognized by one thing—one thing they all have in common: to erode away character and man's freedom to think and act for himself.

Effort will be made to lull us away into a false security. Proposals will be and are being offered and programs sponsored that have wide appeal. Attractive labels are usually attached to the most dangerous programs, often in the name of public welfare and personal security. Again, let us not be misled.

Freedom can be killed by neglect as well as by direct attack.

Too long have too many Americans, and people of the free world generally, stood by as silent accessories to the crimes of assault against freedom—assault against basic economic and spiritual principles and traditions that have made nations strong.

Road of goodness

Let us strive for progress down the road of goodness and freedom. With the help and blessings of the Lord, the free people of the United States and the free world can and will face tomorrow without fear, without doubt, and with full confidence. We do not fear the phony population explosion, nor do we fear a shortage of food, if we can be free and good. The Lord has declared, "... the earth is full, and there is enough and to spare. . . ." (D&C 104:17.) We can accept this promise with confidence.

President Calvin Coolidge pinpointed the problem some years ago with these words:

"We do not need more material development, we need more spiritual development. We do not need more intellectual power, we need more moral power. We do not need more knowledge, we need more character. We do not need more government, we need more culture. We do not need more law, we need more religion. We do not need more of the things that are seen, we need more of the things that are unseen. It is on that side of life that it is desirable to put the emphasis at the present time. If that side is strengthened, the other side will take care of itself. It is that side which is the foundation of all else. If the foundation be firm, the superstructure will stand." (Prophets, Principles, and National Survival, p. 35.)

Downfall of Rome

As a free people, we are following very closely in many respects the pattern which led to the downfall of the great Roman Empire. A group of well-known historians has summarized those conditions leading to the downfall of Rome in these words:

"... Rome had known a pioneer beginning not unlike our own pioneer heritage, and then entered into two centuries of greatness, reaching its pinnacle in the second of those centuries, going into the decline and collapse in the third. Yet, the sins of decay were becoming apparent in the latter years of that second century.

"It is written that there were vast increases in the number of the idle rich, and the idle poor. The latter (the idle poor) were put on a permanent dole, a welfare system not unlike our own. As this system became permanent, the recipients of public largesse (welfare) increased in number. They organized into a political block with sizable power. They were not hesitant about making their demands known. Nor was the government hesitant about agreeing to their demands . . . and with ever-increasing frequency. Would-be emperors catered to them. The great, solid middle class—Rome's strength then as ours is today—was taxed more and more to support a bureaucracy that kept growing larger, and even more powerful. Surtaxes were imposed upon incomes to meet emergencies. The government engaged in deficit spending. The denarius, a silver coin similar to our half dollar, began to lose its silvery hue. It took on a copper color as the government reduced the silver content.

"Even then, Gresham's law was at work, because the real silver coin soon disappeared. It went into hiding.

"Military service was an obligation highly honored by the Romans. Indeed, a foreigner could win Roman citizenship simply by volunteering for service in the legions of Rome. But, with increasing affluence and opulence, the young men of Rome began avoiding this service, finding excuses to remain in the soft and sordid life of the city. They took to using cosmetics and wearing feminine-like hairdos and garments, until it became difficult, the historians tell us, to tell the sexes apart.

"Among the teachers and scholars was a group called the Cynics whose number let their hair and beards grow, and who wore slovenly clothes, and professed indifference to worldly goods as they heaped scorn on what they called 'middle class values.'

"The morals declined. It became unsafe to walk in the countryside or the city streets. Rioting was commonplace and sometimes whole sections of towns and cities were burned.

"And, all the time, the twin diseases of confiscatory taxation and creeping inflation were waiting to deliver the death blow.

"Then finally, all these forces overcame the energy and ambition of the middle class.

"Rome fell.

"We are now approaching the end of our second century." (Address by Governor Ronald Reagan of California at Eisenhower College, New York, 1969.)

Gibbon's account

In 1787 Edward Gibbon completed his noble work The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire. Here is the way he accounted for the fall:

1. The undermining of the dignity and sanctity of the home, which is the basis of human society.

2. Higher and higher taxes and the spending of public monies for free bread and circuses for the populace.

3. The mad craze for pleasure, sports becoming every year more and more exciting and brutal.

4. The building of gigantic armaments when the real enemy was within the decadence of the people.

5. The decay of religion—faith fading into mere form, losing touch with life, and becoming impotent to warn and guide the people.

Is there a parallel for us in America today? Could the same reasons that destroyed Rome destroy America and possibly other countries of the free world?

For eight years in Washington I had this prayerful statement on my desk: "O God, give us men with a mandate higher than the ballot box."

Lessons of history

The lessons of history, many of them very sobering, ought to be turned to during this hour of our great achievements, because during the hour of our success is our greatest danger. Even during the hour of our great prosperity, a nation may sow the seeds of its own destruction. History reveals that rarely is a great civilization conquered from without unless it has weakened or destroyed itself within.

The lessons of history stand as guideposts to help us safely chart the course for the future.

As American citizens, as citizens of the nations of the free world, we need to rouse ourselves to the problems which confront us as great Christian nations. We must recognize that these fundamental, basic principles—moral and spiritual—lay at the very foundation of our past achievements. To continue to enjoy present blessings, we must return to these basic and fundamental principles. Economics and morals are both part of one inseparable body of truth. They must be in harmony. We need to square our actions with these eternal verities.

Eternal verities

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints stands firm in support of the great spiritual and moral principles which have been the basic traditions of the free world. We oppose every evil effort to downgrade or challenge the eternal verities which have undergirded civilization from the beginning.

We will use every honorable means to strengthen the home and family; to encourage obedience to the first and great commandment to multiply and replenish the earth through noble parenthood; and to strengthen character through adherence to high spiritual and moral principles.

In The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints chastity will never be out of date. We have one standard for men and women, and that standard is moral purity. We oppose and abhor the damnable practice of wholesale abortion and every other unholy and impure act which strikes at the very foundation of the home and family, our most basic institutions.

A continuation of these immoral practices will surely bring down the wrath and judgments of the Almighty.

In our concentration upon materialism and material acquisitions, are we forgetting the spiritual basis upon which our prosperity, security, and freedom rest? God help us to repent of our evil ways and humble ourselves before the offended power.

A nation on its knees

There is great safety in a nation on its knees.

What assurance it would give of the much-needed blessings of the Lord if the American people, and people everywhere, could all be found daily—night and morning—on their knees expressing gratitude for blessings already received, acknowledging our dependence upon

God, and seeking his divine guidance.

The spectacle of a nation praying is more awe-inspiring, more powerful, than the explosion of an atomic bomb. The force of prayer is greater than any possible combination of man-controlled powers, because "prayer is man's greatest means of tapping the resources of God." The Founding Fathers accept this eternal verity. Do we? Will we?

Yes, it is in our own enlightened self-interest to engage in this simple practice, this powerful practice of prayer. Roger Babson said many years ago: "What this country needs more than anything else is old-fashioned family prayer." Yes, our greatest need is a return to the old-fashioned, time-tested verities.

God help us, as free men, to recognize the source of our blessings, the threat to our freedom and our moral and spiritual standards, and the need for humble, yet courageous, action to preserve these priceless, time-tested blessings, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

This powerful address to which we have just listened was from Elder Ezra Taft Benson of the Council of the Twelve, who has been our concluding speaker.

A special welfare meeting will be held at 7:30 a.m. tomorrow morning (Saturday) in the Assembly Hall on Temple Square. Regional representatives, stake presidencies, high councilors involved in welfare work, bishoprics, and stake and ward Relief Society presidencies are invited to attend.

All sessions of the conference will be received over KSL Radio and KIRO Radio—Seattle beginning at midnight tonight, and can be heard in many areas as has been previously announced.

The singing for this session has been furnished by the Combined Choruses of the Ogden Institute of Religion. We are grateful for your presence, you wonderful young men and women, here today, and for the beautiful numbers you have rendered at this session of the conference.

Brother Cropper, we commend you. Thank you for your great service. Brother Cropper has been conducting the chorus and Brother Robert Cundick has been at the organ. They will now favor us with "The Creation."

Following the singing, the benediction will be offered by Elder Edward Y. Okazaki, Mission Representative of the Twelve and the First Council of Seventy. He formerly presided over one of the missions in Japan.

This conference will then be adjourned until 10:00 a.m. tomorrow morning.

The number, "The Creation," was sung by the Combined Choruses of the Ogden Institute of Religion.

Elder Edward Y. Okazaki, Mission Representative of the Twelve and First Council of Seventy, offered the closing prayer.

The conference was then adjourned until Saturday morning at 10 o'clock.

SECOND DAY MORNING MEETING

THIRD SESSION

The third session of the conference convened in the Salt Lake Tabernacle on Saturday, April 7, 1973, at 10 o'clock a.m.

President Harold B. Lee presided and conducted.

The Tabernacle Choir furnished the music for this meeting. Richard P. Condie directed the choir. Alexander Schreiner was at the organ.

President Lee made the following opening statement:

President Harold B. Lee

To all assembled here in this historic Tabernacle and to the many tuned to these proceedings by radio and television, we extend our blessings and warm greetings at this the third session of the 143rd Annual Conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

We are pleased to welcome special guests here in attendance—educational leaders, regional representatives and mission representatives, stake and mission presidencies, temple presidencies, bishoprics, members of the general auxiliary boards, and others.

Sessions of this conference will be received by millions in the United States and Canada over hundreds of radio and television stations cooperating to provide the extensive coverage of this conference.

The Tabernacle Choir under the direction of Richard P. Condie with Alexander Schreiner at the organ, will now sing that stirring hymn, "Carry on, Carry on," following which Elder Bernard P. Brockbank, Assistant to the Twelve, will offer the invocation.

The Tabernacle Choir sang "Carry On."

The invocation was offered by Elder Bernard P. Brockbank, Assistant to the Twelve.

President Lee

The Tabernacle Choir will now favor us with "Behold, The Lamb of God," after which we shall hear from President N. Eldon Tanner of the First Presidency.

The choir sang the song, "Behold, the Lamb of God."

President Lee

It shall now be our privilege to hear from President N. Eldon Tanner, our devoted and loyal first counselor in the First Presidency of the Church.

President N. Eldon Tanner

First Counselor in the First Presidency

One of God's greatest gifts to man is freedom of choice.

At an early period in the journey through life, man finds himself at a crossroad where he must choose one of two great highways—the right, leading to progress and happiness; and the wrong, leading to retardation and sorrow. There exists this eternal law that each human soul, through the choices he makes, will shape his own destiny. Our success or failure, peace or discontent, happiness or misery, depend on the choices we make each day.

According to the scriptures, the first and most important question pertaining to the individual was that of freedom of choice. Before the world was, and in a great council in heaven, God the Father presented his plan to organize and people the earth.

He explained that his spirit children would go to earth, gain bodies of flesh and blood, be tried and tested in all things to see if they would keep all of his commandments, and prepare to come back to his eternal presence.

Two plans presented

Lucifer, a son of the morning, came forth with his plan to redeem all mankind by force, that not one soul would be lost, for which he wanted the honor. Then Christ presented his plan, which was to follow the will of the Father and allow all men to choose for themselves, and the glory would go to the Father. Christ's plan was accepted, and all who come to dwell upon the earth in bodies of flesh and blood elected in that great council to follow Jesus Christ. Satan rebelled and influenced a third of the hosts of heaven to follow him.

As recorded in Moses, God said:

"Wherefore, because that Satan rebelled against me, and sought to destroy the agency of man, which I, the Lord God, had given him, and also, that I should give unto him mine own power; by the power of mine Only Begotten, I caused that he should be cast down;

"And he became Satan, yea, even the devil, the father of all lies, to deceive and to blind men, and to lead them captive at his will, even as many as would not hearken unto my voice." (Moses 4:3-4. Italics added.)

Satan's plan to destroy

At that time, Satan, with his followers, committed himself to destroy our free agency and the cause of righteousness. He began his nefarious work in the Garden of Eden by successfully tempting Adam and Eve to partake of the forbidden fruit. God had said:

"Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat,

"But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it, nevertheless, thou mayest choose for thyself, for it is given unto thee. . . ." (Moses 3:16-17. Italics added.)

While Satan is determined to destroy us, the Savior says: ". . . this is my work and my glory—to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man." (Moses 1:39.)

He gave his life so that all mankind might enjoy immortality; and through his gospel and the teachings of the prophets, both ancient and modern, we are given a clear understanding of the purpose of life and how to distinguish right from wrong, with promises of salvation and exaltation to all who keep the commandments. But remember that Satan has committed himself to destroy mankind and is continually at work to accomplish this one thing. The scriptures tell us:

"Satan stirreth them up, that he may lead their souls to destruction.

"And thus he has laid a cunning plan, thinking to destroy the work of God; . . .

"And . . . he . . . leadeth them along until he draggeth their souls down to hell; . . .

"And thus he goeth up and down, to and fro in the earth, seeking to destroy the souls of men." (D&C 10:22-23, 26-27.)

Examples of Satan's influence

The reality of Satan and the power and influence he wields have been evident since that first temptation in the Garden of Eden. He influenced Cain to slay his brother Abel, which resulted in great suffering and sorrow. The Book of Mormon is replete with examples of the destruction of individuals and groups who refused to follow the teachings of the Lord and instead succumbed to the influence of Satan.

Now, in the Bible we have the story of the great flood, when, because of the wickedness of the people, none but Noah and his family were spared. We know what happened to the great cities of Sodom and Gomorrah because the people chose to follow Satan. In secular history we read of the fall of the Roman Empire; and accounts are too numerous to mention of the destruction of other civilizations, cities, and individuals who chose to turn away from the Lord.

In a recent challenging speech, which was titled "Who Is Tampering with the Soul of America?" Jenkin Lloyd Jones said the pathway of history is littered with the bones of dead states and fallen empires. He points out that Rome did not fall because its walls were low, but because Rome itself was low. The sensuality, orgies, and gradually weakened fibre of a once self-disciplined people brought Rome down. (Speech delivered to the American Society of Newspaper Editors.)

As we sow, so shall we reap

With all of these examples, what more or greater evidence do we need to convince us that when we choose evil rather than good, we lose our freedom and become the slaves of those who would destroy us and deprive us of the blessings attendant upon righteousness? As we make our choices each day, we must keep in mind that as we sow, so shall we reap. We cannot sow seeds of iniquity and reap a harvest of blessings. Let me relate a story to illustrate.

A certain man, well up on the ladder of success, had great prospects for a very bright future. Then one day at a businessmen's luncheon he decided that social drinking would make him more popular and successful. He soon began looking forward to the cocktail hours, and then found they didn't come often enough. Finally he became an alcoholic, lost his job, his wife, and his friends. Because of the wrong choice at a moment of decision, he had lost everything he once so hopefully and diligently set out to accomplish.

On the other hand, we have the examples of Joseph, who was sold into Egypt; of Moses, who led the Israelites from bondage; of Daniel, through whom the Lord gave marvelous prophecies and predictions and of whom it was said, as he was taken from the lion's den: ". . . no manner of hurt was found upon him, because he believed in his God." (Dan. 6:23.) They, with many others, had the courage to say no to temptation and to choose the right, and thereby save themselves and their people from destruction.

Self-discipline

Self-discipline is essential in helping us make proper choices. It is much easier to drift than to row, to slide downhill than to climb up. Satan is constantly at work to drag us down by placing temptations in our way in the form of alcohol, tobacco, drugs, pornography, deceit, dishonesty, and flattery, always waiting to catch us in our misdeeds.

How can we combat the evil that surrounds us and which is so prevalent in the world today? Satan is trying harder than ever before to claim souls for his own domain. We must and we can thwart him, but only by choosing to follow the teachings of Jesus Christ and making our influence an active and positive force. As leaders, as parents, as teachers, and as neighbors, all good people everywhere who are striving for liberty and freedom, peace, success, happiness, and for eternal life with our Father in heaven must by example and precept be actively engaged in fighting against those forces which are threatening us and endangering our well-being and that of our children.

Child discipline

Don't let us be fooled or misled by the claim extant in the world today that restraints and conventions are damaging to the psyche of a child. In promoting a permissive and unrestricted society, they would have a child undisciplined for misbehavior. This is a false premise, and we are better advised to heed the counsel of the Lord when he said:

"And again, inasmuch as parents have children in Zion, or in any of her stakes which are organized, that teach them not to understand the doctrine of repentance, faith in Christ the Son of the living God, and of baptism and the gift of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of the hands, when eight years old, the sin be upon the heads of the parents.

"And they shall also teach their children to pray, and to walk uprightly before the Lord." (D&C 68:25, 28.)

Children do not learn by themselves how to distinguish right from wrong. Parents have to determine the child's readiness to assume responsibility and his capacity to make sound decisions, to evaluate alternatives, and the results of doing so. While we are teaching them, we have the responsibility to discipline them and to see that they do what is right. If a child is besmudged with dirt, we do not let him wait until he grows up to decide whether or not he will bathe. We do not let him wait to decide whether or not he will take his medicine when sick, or go to school or to church. By example, persuasion, and love we see that he does what we know is best for him. We cannot overemphasize the importance of example. The late J. Edgar Hoover said that if fathers and mothers would take their children to Sunday School and church regularly, they could strike a felling blow against the forces that contribute to juvenile delinquency.

Choosing the right

Parents also should teach their children early in life the glorious concept and fact that they are spirit children of God, and that choosing to follow the teachings of Jesus Christ is the only way to enjoy success and happiness here and eternal life hereafter. They must be taught that Satan is real and that he will use all agencies at his disposal to tempt them to do wrong, to lead them astray, make them his captives, and keep them from the supreme happiness and exaltation they could otherwise enjoy.

To meet the serious issues facing us in our respective communities today, we must be examples of virtue and righteousness ourselves and choose today to take our stand on the moral issues which threaten us. We do not want our civilization to decay and fall because we failed to keep it on a high spiritual plane and allowed it to sink to the level where the animal instincts and passions dominate.

Collapse of moral standards

Let me refer again to Jenkin Lloyd Jones. He said that we are suffering from a collapse of moral standards and the blunting of our capacity for righteous indignation. Then, referring to our Puritan ancestors, he said: "For all their exaggerated attention to sin, their philosophy rested on a great granite rock. Man was the master of his soul. You didn't have to be bad. You could and should be better. And if you wanted to escape the eternal fires, you'd well better be."

Then concerning our present-day entertainment he said:

"Can anyone deny that movies are dirtier than ever? But they don't call it dirt. They call it 'realism.' Why do we let them fool us? Why do we nod owlishly when they tell us that filth is merely a daring art form, that licentiousness is really social comment? Isn't it plain that the financially-harassed movie industry is putting gobs of sex in the darkened drive-ins in an effort to lure curious teenagers away? . . . Last week the screen industry solemnly announced that henceforth perversion and homosexuality would no longer be barred from the screen provided the subjects were handled with 'delicacy and taste.'" What nonsense!

"We are drowning our youngsters in violence, cynicism, and sadism piped into the living room and even the nursery. The grandchildren of the kids who used to weep because The Little Match Girl froze to death now feel cheated if she isn't slugged, raped, and thrown into a Bessemer converter. . . .

"The quick-buck boys have apparently convinced our bumfuzzled judges that there is no difference between a peep show and a moral lecture.

" . . . We have reached the point where we should re-examine the debilitating philosophy of permissiveness. Let this not be confused with the philosophy of liberty. . . .

"It's time we hit the sawdust trail. It's time we revived the idea that there is such a thing as sin—just plain old willful sin. It is time we brought self-discipline back into style."

Fight against evil

It is also time we realized that these are all Satan's ways of destroying mankind. Now, what must we do? If there is pornography or obscenity in bookstores, on television or radio, or in places of entertainment, if there are those who would make more easily available to the young and inexperienced alcohol and its attendant evils, including drunken driving, highway fatalities, broken homes, and if we are threatened with the passage of laws which violate the commandments of God, it is our duty and responsibility as individuals to speak out, to organize, and to protect ourselves and our community against such encroachments. We have seen how people react to the high price of food. It is far more important that we react effectively against the immorality and evil in our communities which threaten the morals and the very lives of our children. As President Nixon has said, the only way to attack crime in America is the way crime attacks the people—without pity.

Stand firm

People who argue that they have constitutional rights and want to use what they call their free agency to accomplish unrighteous ends abuse the idea of free agency and deprive others of their constitutional rights. While many of our problems are caused by those who are deliberately trying to further their own selfish and devilish interests, there is also a vocal, misled minority which is responsible for other problems as they exist in our country and in our communities. We must be equally vocal and firm in our efforts to maintain the quality of our surroundings, where we can enjoy family solidarity, which is the strength of any nation. We must take a firm stand against the concerted efforts in many areas to destroy the family unit.

Opposition in all things

As we contemplate these devastating conditions rampant in the world today—the wars, death, suffering, poverty, and disease—and while many question why God permits such troublous conditions to plague us, let us remember that man himself is responsible. Even though the innocent suffer with the wicked in many instances, all the strife and contention and wickedness abroad in the land today is because man has chosen to follow Satan instead of accepting and living according to the teachings of Jesus Christ. From the beginning we have been told that there must be opposition in all things in order that we might progress according to God's plan for us. Again we turn to the scriptures:

"For it must needs be, that there is an opposition in all things. If not so, . . . righteousness could not be brought to pass, neither wickedness, neither holiness nor misery, neither good nor bad. . . .

"Wherefore, the Lord God gave unto man that he should act for himself. Wherefore, man could not act for himself save it should be that he was enticed by the one or the other.

"Wherefore, men are free according to the flesh; and all things are given them which are expedient unto man. And they are free to choose liberty and eternal life, through the great mediation of all men, or to choose captivity and death, according to the captivity and power of the devil; for he seeketh that all men might be miserable like unto himself." (2 Ne. 2:11, 16, 27.)

The restored gospel

Men are not created to be miserable, for "men are, that they might have joy." (2 Ne. 2:25.) To assist us and guide us in our choices, to counteract the forces of Satan, and to give us the joy and happiness for which we are all seeking, God has seen fit through his Son Jesus Christ to reestablish upon the earth in these, the latter days, his church and kingdom, with the restored gospel in its fullness. He has reestablished the priesthood, which is the power to act in God's name, with a prophet through whom God speaks to direct us. I join with thousands of others in bearing witness to all the world that the gospel alone offers the only true way to happiness and peace which passeth understanding, and eternal life to all who will accept it and keep the commandments.

Daily choices

Yes, every day of our lives we are determining by our choices whether we shall reap good or evil, whether salvation or destruction, whether eternal life with our Father or the utter despair at being cast out from his presence. Each day we choose whether or not we believe in God the Eternal Father and in his Son Jesus Christ, and whether or not we will accept their teachings and keep the commandments.

We choose whether or not we will accept President Harold B. Lee as a prophet of God, listen to his voice, and follow him, in the sure knowledge that he is the mouthpiece of the Lord and the leader of God's children on the earth today. We choose whether or not we are prepared to accept and live by the Articles of Faith and be honest, true, chaste, benevolent, virtuous, honorable and upright in our dealings with our fellowmen, showing our love for them by being good neighbors. As we choose to seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, we can know that all other things for our good will be added unto us.

We cannot go astray if we listen to the prophet's voice and follow him, and as we do so we will be led in the path of truth and righteousness and enjoy the love, respect, and confidence of our fellowmen, and eventually enjoy eternal life with our Father in heaven. Or we may refuse and lose all these great blessings.

"Nevertheless, thou mayest choose for thyself."

May we choose wisely, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

The Tabernacle Choir sang the song, "Souls of the Righteous," following President Tanner's address, without announcement.

President Harold B. Lee

We have just heard from President N. Eldon Tanner, first counselor in the First Presidency of the Church, who has delivered one of the most timely messages, to set the tone and course this Church should take, and all other righteous people, to combat the permissiveness that is to be found in the world today. I would hope that everybody listening would apply the wisdom that he has given to us.

The Tabernacle Choir has just sung "Souls of the Righteous."

Elder Thomas S. Monson of the Council of the Twelve will now address us.

Elder Thomas S. Monson

Of the Council of the Twelve

Some 23 years ago I was called as a young man to serve as the bishop of a large ward in Salt Lake City. The magnitude of the calling was overwhelming and the responsibility frightening. My inadequacy humbled me. But my Heavenly Father did not leave me to wander in darkness and in silence, uninstructed or uninspired. In his own way he revealed the lessons he would have me learn.

Legacy of Kathleen McKee

One evening at a late hour my telephone rang. I heard a voice say, "Bishop Monson, this is the hospital calling. Kathleen McKee, a member of your congregation, has just passed away. Our records reveal that she had no next of kin, but your name is listed as the one to be notified in the event of her death. Could you come to the hospital right away?"

Upon arriving there, I was presented with a sealed envelope which contained a key to the modest apartment in which Kathleen McKee had lived. A childless widow 73 years of age, she had enjoyed but few of life's luxuries and possessed scarcely sufficient of its necessities. In the twilight of her life she had become a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Being a quiet and overly reserved person, little was known about her life.

That same night I entered her tidy basement apartment, turned the light switch, and in a moment discovered a letter written ever so meticulously in Kathleen McKee's own hand. It rested face up on a small table and read:

"Bishop Monson,

"I think I shall not return from the hospital. In the dresser drawer is a small insurance policy which will cover funeral expenses. The furniture may be given to my neighbors.

"In the kitchen are my three precious canaries. Two of them are beautiful, yellow-gold in color, and are perfectly marked. On their cages I have noted the names of friends to whom they are to be given. In the third cage is 'Billie.' He is my favorite. Billie looks a bit scrubby, and his yellow hue is marred by gray on his wings. Will you and your family make a home for him? He isn't the prettiest, but his song is the best."

World made brighter

In the days that followed, I learned much more about Kathleen McKee. She had befriended many neighbors in need. She had given cheer and comfort almost daily to a cripple who lived down the street. Indeed, she had brightened each life she touched. Kathleen McKee was much like "Billie," her prized yellow canary with gray on its wings. She was not blessed with beauty, gifted with poise, nor honored by posterity. Yet her song helped others to more willingly bear their burdens and more ably shoulder their tasks. She lived the message of the verse:

"Go, gladden the lonely, the dreary;
Go, comfort the weeping, the weary;
Go, scatter kind deeds on your way;
Oh, make the world brighter today!"

—Deseret Sunday School Songs,
1909, No. 197

Yellow canaries with gray

The world is filled with yellow canaries with gray on their wings. The pity is that so precious few of them have learned to sing. Perhaps the clear notes of proper example have not sounded in their ears or found lodgment in their hearts.

Some are young people who don't know who they are, what they can be or even want to be. They are afraid, but they don't know of what. They are angry, but they don't know at whom. They are rejected, and they don't know why. All they want is to be somebody.

Others are stooped with age, burdened with care, or filled with doubt—living lives far below the level of their capacities.

All of us are prone to excuse our own mediocre performance. We blame our misfortunes, our disfigurements, or our so-called handicaps. Victims of our own rationalization, we say silently to ourselves: "I'm just too weak," or "I'm not cut out for better things." Others soar beyond our meager accomplishments. Envy and discouragement then take their toll.

Can we not appreciate that our very business in life is not to get ahead of others, but to get ahead of ourselves? To break our own records, to outstrip our yesterdays by our todays, to bear our trials more beautifully than we ever dreamed we could, to give as we have never given, to do our work with more force and a finer finish than ever—this is the true idea: to get ahead of ourselves.

Sons and daughters of God

To live greatly, we must develop the capacity to face trouble with courage, disappointment with cheerfulness, and triumph with humility. You ask, "How might we achieve these goals?" I answer, "By getting a true perspective of who we really are!" We are sons and daughters of a living God, in whose image we have been created. Think of that truth: "Created in the image of God." We cannot sincerely hold this conviction without experiencing a profound new sense of strength and power, even the strength to live the commandments of God, the power to resist the temptations of Satan.

Outward appearance

True, we live in a world where moral character oftentimes is relegated to a position secondary to facial beauty or personal charm. We read and hear of local, national, and international beauty contests. Throngs pay tribute to Miss America, Miss World, and Miss Universe. Athletic prowess, too, has its following. The winter games, the world Olympics, the tournaments of international scope bring forth the adoring applause of the enthralled crowd. Such are the ways of men!

But what are the inspired words of God? From a time of long ago the counsel of Samuel the prophet echoes in our ears: "... the Lord seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart." (1 Sam. 16:7.)

Sham and hypocrisy found no place with the King of kings and the Lord of lords. He denounced the scribes and Pharisees for their vanity and shallow lives, their pretense and feigned righteousness. He called them "whited sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead men's bones." (Matt. 23:27.)

They, like the beautiful yellow canaries, were outwardly handsome, but a true song came not from their hearts.

To their counterparts on this continent God's prophet declared: "For behold, ye do love money, and your substance, and your fine apparel, and the adorning of your churches, more than ye love the poor and the needy, the sick and the afflicted. . . .

"Why are ye ashamed to take upon you the name of Christ? . . .

"Why do ye adorn yourselves with that which hath no life, and yet suffer the hungry, and the needy, and the naked, and the sick and the afflicted to pass by you, and notice them not?" (Morm. 8:37-39.)

The better life

The Master could be found mingling with the poor, the down-trodden, the oppressed, and the afflicted. He brought hope to the hopeless, strength to the weak, and freedom to the captive. He taught of the better life to come—even eternal life. This knowledge ever directs those who receive the divine injunction: "Follow thou me." It guided Peter. It motivated Paul. It can determine our personal destiny. Can we make the decision to follow in righteousness and truth the Redeemer of the world? With his help a rebellious boy can become an obedient man, a wayward girl can cast aside the old self and begin anew. Indeed, the gospel of Jesus Christ can change men's lives.

Call of the fisherman

In his epistle to the Corinthians, the apostle Paul taught: "... God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty." (1 Cor. 1:27.)

When the Savior sought a man of faith, he did not select him from the throng of self-righteous who were found regularly in the synagogue. Rather, he called him from among the fishermen of Capernaum.

While teaching on the seashore, he saw two ships standing by the lake. He entered one and asked its owner to put it out a little from the land so he might not be pressed upon by the crowd. After teaching further, he said to Simon, "Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets."

Simon answered: "Master, we have toiled all the night, and have taken nothing: nevertheless at thy word I will let down the net. And when they had this done, they inclosed a great multitude of fishes. . . . When Simon Peter saw it, he fell down at Jesus' knees, saying, Depart from me; for I am a sinful man, O Lord." (Luke 5:4-6, 8.)

Came the reply: "Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men." (Matt. 4:19.) Simon the fisherman had received his call. Doubting, disbelieving, unschooled, untrained, impetuous Simon did not find the way of the Lord a highway of ease nor a path free from pain. He was to hear the rebuke: "O thou of little faith" (Matt. 14:31), and likewise the denunciation, "Get thee behind me, Satan: thou art an offence unto me" (Matt. 16:23). Yet, when the Master asked him, ". . . whom say ye that I am?" Peter answered: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." (Matt. 16:15-16.)

Simon, man of doubt, had become Peter, apostle of faith. A yellow canary with gray on his wings qualified for the Master's full confidence and abiding love.

Saul of Tarsus

When the Savior was to choose a missionary of zeal and power, he found him not among his advocates but amidst his adversaries. Saul of Tarsus made havoc of the church and breathed out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord. But this was before the experience of Damascus Way. Of Saul, the Lord declared: ". . . he is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel: . . . I will shew him how great things he must suffer for my name's sake." (Acts 9:15-16.)

Saul the persecutor became Paul the proselyter. Like the yellow canary with gray on his wings, Paul, too, had his blemishes. He himself said: "And lest I should be exalted above measure through the abundance of the revelations, there was given to me a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan to buffet me. . . . For this thing I besought the Lord thrice, that it might depart from me. And he said unto me, My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness. . . ." (2 Cor. 12:7-9.)

Both Paul and Peter were to expend their strength and forfeit their lives in the cause of truth. The Redeemer chose imperfect men to teach the way to perfection. He did so then. He does so now—even yellow canaries with gray on their wings.

A call to serve

He calls you and me to serve him here below and sets us to the tasks he would have us fulfill. The commitment is total. There is no conflict of conscience. And in our struggle, should we stumble, then let us plead: "Lead us, oh lead us, great Molder of men; out of the darkness to strive once again." (From the "Fight Song," Yonkers High School.)

Our appointed task may appear insignificant, unnecessary, unnoticed. We may be tempted to question:

"Father, where shall I work today?"

And my love flowed warm and free.
Then he pointed out a tiny spot
And said, 'Tend that for me.'

I answered quickly, 'Oh no, not that!

Why, no one would ever see,
No matter how well my work was done.

Not that little place for me.'
And the word he spoke, it was not stern;

He answered me tenderly:
'Ah, little one, search that heart of thine;

Art thou working for them or for me?

'Nazareth was a little place,
And so was Galilee.'"

—Meade MacGuire

My prayer today is that we indeed will follow the Man of Galilee. May we praise his name, and so order our lives as to reflect our love. May we ever remember that to us God our Father gave his Son, and that for us Jesus Christ gave his life. I testify that he lives and pray we may be worthy of such a divine gift, in the name of Jesus Christ the Lord. Amen.

Following Elder Monson's address, the choir sang without announcement the hymn, "Though Deepening Trials."

President Harold B. Lee

The choir and congregation will now join in singing "The Spirit of God Like A Fire Is Burning," following which we shall hear from Elder Loren C. Dunn of the First Council of Seventy.

The choir and congregation sang "The Spirit of God Like A Fire Is Burning."

President Lee

To those of the television and radio audience who have just joined us in this third session of the 143rd Annual Conference of the Church, we are convened in the historic Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City, Utah.

We shall now hear from Elder Loren C. Dunn of the First Council of Seventy. He will be followed by Elder Henry D. Taylor, Assistant to the Twelve.

Elder Loren C. Dunn

Of the First Council of the Seventy

During the few minutes that I am before you, I would like to address my remarks to those who are not of this faith; and since we are all the children of God, I would like to refer to you as my brothers and sisters.

With the approach of the Easter season, the world takes note of the greatest event known to mankind. The literalness of the death and burial and resurrection of Jesus Christ lifts him above the status of a great man or an inspired leader. To overcome death for all mankind, Jesus Christ had to be the Son of God and the Redeemer and Savior of the world.

Two accounts of resurrection

To members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, this miraculous event has double meaning. For there are two sources to which we can look for an account of the resurrection. The one, of course, is the Holy Bible. Who can help but gain peace and reassurance from the words of John which say, "Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live" (John 11:25), or the words of Mark describing the experience of those going to the tomb after the death of the Savior: "And entering into the sepulchre, they saw a young man sitting on the right side, clothed in a long white garment; and they were affrighted. And he saith unto them, Be not affrighted: Ye seek Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified: he is risen; he is not here: behold the place where they laid him" (Mark 16:5-6).

Following these experiences in the land of the Bible, another people in a far-off land, a remnant of the house of Israel who also had prophets and kept their own scriptural record, recorded the following concerning the resurrected Lord:

"And it came to pass, as they understood they cast their eyes up again towards heaven; and behold, they saw a Man descending out of heaven; and he was clothed in a white robe; and he came down and stood in the midst of them; and the eyes of the whole multitude were turned upon him, and they durst not open their mouths, even one to another, and wist not what it meant, for they thought it was an angel that had appeared unto them.

"And it came to pass that he stretched forth his hand and spake unto the people, saying:

"Behold, I am Jesus Christ, whom the prophets testified shall come into the world.

"And behold, I am the light and the life of the world; and I have drunk out of that bitter cup which the Father hath given me, and have glorified the Father in taking upon me the sins of the world, in the which I have suffered the will of the Father in all things from the beginning." (3 Ne. 11:8-11.)

A second witness

A second evidence then is recorded to verify what was mentioned in the Holy Bible concerning the resurrection of the Savior. This second witness for Christ can be found in the volume of scripture known as the Book of Mormon. It is a compilation of the writings of the prophets of God who were part of the great civilization which lived anciently in the Americas. These prophets taught the gospel of Jesus Christ as did their counterparts in the Holy Land, and they spoke of the birth and life of the Savior and also of his death and resurrection—although these events would transpire in another part of the world.

The highlight of this great record was when the resurrected Savior appeared to these people and taught them the same gospel and the principles of salvation that he had presented to those who were his disciples in the Holy Land. It was only a matter of three generations from that time, however, when the people had almost entirely rejected the teachings of Jesus Christ. They had become warlike and even rejected the prophets.

The Book of Mormon

One of the last prophets to live

was a man by the name of Mormon, who took all of the records and abridged them. For this reason the volume is known as the Book of Mormon. Mormon passed the sacred records to his son Moroni, who was one of the last followers of Christ in that generation, himself being a hunted man because of his beliefs. It was made known to Moroni and to other prophets that the Lord would bring this record forward in a later generation of time, to testify of the events that took place in Jerusalem and to convince mankind that Jesus Christ is the Son of God and that there is a plan whereby man can be saved and receive eternal life.

Being commanded of the Lord, the prophet Moroni buried the record in a hill, and there it remained until the year 1827, when a young man by the name of Joseph Smith was shown by a divine messenger where the record was hidden and was given power to translate it so that the world might have a second evidence that the basic truths of the Bible are correct.

There were witnesses to the translation of these plates. In a joint statement Oliver Cowdery, David Whitmer, and Martin Harris gave the following testimony: "BE IT KNOWN unto all nations, kindreds, tongues, and people, unto whom this work shall come: That we, through the grace of God the Father, and our Lord Jesus Christ, have seen the plates which contain this record, . . . And we also know that they have been translated by the gift and power of God, for his voice hath declared it unto us; wherefore we know of a surety that the work is true." (Book of Mormon: The Testimony of the Three Witnesses.)

Purpose of Book of Mormon

The reason for the Book of Mormon coming forth in this generation of time can be found on the title page of the book, which is part of the translated record and which says in part, "And also to the convincing of the Jew and Gentile that JESUS is the CHRIST, the ETERNAL GOD, manifesting himself unto all nations." The Book of Mormon, then, is a means whereby men can be convinced that God lives and that Jesus Christ is his Son and Savior of the world.

This book, then, bears record of the divine Sonship of Jesus Christ and recognizes him as Redeemer of the world. This passage from 3rd Nephi in the Book of Mormon is a good example:

"Behold, I am Jesus Christ the Son of God. I created the heavens and the earth, and all things that in them are. . . .

"Behold, I have come unto the world to bring redemption unto the world, to save the world from sin.

"Therefore, whoso repenteth and cometh unto me as a little child, him will I receive, for of such is the kingdom of God. Behold, for such I have laid down my life, and have taken it up again; therefore repent, and come unto me ye ends of the earth, and be saved." (3 Ne. 9:15, 21-22.)

A second message

A second message of the Book of Mormon is to teach mankind the plan of salvation in its pure and basic form so that we might know what the Lord expects of us in order to be saved. Again, an example of this can be found from the words of the Savior in 3rd Nephi, which are as follows:

"And this is my doctrine, and it is the doctrine which the Father hath given unto me; . . . and I bear record that the Father commandeth all men, everywhere, to repent and believe in me.

"And whoso believeth in me, and is baptized, the same shall be saved; and they are they who shall inherit the kingdom of God." (3 Ne. 11:32-33.)

At the same time the Savior spoke these words, he also commissioned certain disciples with specific authority to perform the baptism just spoken of. He also explained what he meant by repentance and what steps must be taken in order to gain this repentance.

Divinely inspired

And finally, if the Book of Mormon is true, then it must attest to the fact that Joseph Smith, the translator of this record, was a prophet of God and was divinely inspired to bring forth this work. In the revelation concerning the coming forth of the Book of Mormon the Lord referred to Joseph Smith in the following way: "... he has translated the book, even that part which I have commanded him, and as your Lord and your God liveth it is true." (D&C 17:6.)

Joseph Smith once made the statement that the Book of Mormon was the keystone of this religion, that a person could get closer to God by following its precepts than by any other book. Joseph Smith has long since passed away. But The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and the Book of Mormon live on as a sign and witness to all nations that Jesus Christ is the Son of God and that there is a way to return to the presence of God and that the basic truths of the Holy Bible are correct.

A promise

Realizing that there would be those who might say, "Yes, but how can we know?"—the last prophet to write in the book gave this promise to all who want to know and in these words:

"Behold, I would exhort you that when ye shall read these things, if it be wisdom in God that ye should read them, that ye would remember how merciful the Lord hath been unto the children of men, from the creation of Adam even down until the time that ye shall receive these things, and ponder it in your hearts.

"And when ye shall receive these things, I would exhort you that ye would ask God, the Eternal Father, in the name of Christ, if these things are not true; and if ye shall ask with a sincere heart, with real intent, having faith in Christ, he will manifest the truth of it unto you, by the power of the Holy Ghost.

"And by the power of the Holy Ghost ye may know the truth of all things." (Moro. 10:3-5.)

This promise is made, then, to all who want to know, that if they will read these things and ponder them in their hearts and do it prayerfully, the truth will be made known unto them.

The Church today

Today the Church is known as The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, to distinguish it from the church of Jesus Christ that existed at the time of the New Testament and the Book of Mormon.

As in the ancient church, it has apostles and prophets at the head, and it teaches that all mankind can be saved through obedience to the principles and ordinances of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

We believe that the Savior literally leads his church through direct and continuous revelation to its leaders. We believe too that all mankind are the sons and daughters of God and that if they will prayerfully and honestly seek him, he will bless them with a realization of the truthfulness of these things. We believe that Jesus Christ will come again to the earth, and when he does, he will reign as King of kings, as the resurrected Lord and as the Prince of Peace.

To this I bear my humble witness that I know God lives and that Jesus the Christ is his Son, and that this work is true, for the Lord God has revealed it to me. And if we are the children of God, then all men can and should have this experience, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

We have just listened to Elder Loren C. Dunn of the First Council of Seventy.

Elder Henry D. Taylor, Assistant to the Twelve, will now address us.

Elder Henry D. Taylor

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

On the evening of his betrayal, Jesus met with his Twelve Apostles in an upper room guest chamber in Jerusalem to observe the annual Feast of the Passover.

Previously, Judas Iscariot, one of the Twelve, had bargained with the chief priests and had agreed to betray the Lord for a price of 30 pieces of silver. Jesus, being aware of this treachery, sat at the table with the Twelve. He said sorrowfully: "Verily, I say unto you, that one of you shall betray me." (Matt. 26:21.)

After they had eaten, Jesus blessed the bread and wine and in a simple but impressive manner instituted the sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

A beautiful, inspirational discourse was then delivered by the Savior, who concluded the sermon with a prayer. Before they left the guest chamber in the building, a hymn or psalm was sung. Then Jesus and the 11 apostles departed. Judas had previously left the group to meet the enemies of Christ.

Events at Gethsemane

Jesus and his associates passed through one of the several gates in the wall of Jerusalem, crossed over the brook called Cedron, and entered an olive orchard, known as Gethsemane, on the slope of Mount Olivet. This was a favorite meeting place for the Lord and his apostles.

Entering the garden, Jesus asked eight of the apostles to remain behind; then with Peter, James, and John, he went a short distance, where he requested them to wait and watch. Going on alone a little ways, he knelt and prayed to his Father, saying: "O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me [but then came this beautiful lesson]; nevertheless, not as I will, but as thou wilt." (Matt. 26:39.)

Three times he prayed, and we read: "And being in agony he prayed more earnestly; and his sweat was as it were great drops of blood falling to the ground." (Luke 22:44.)

Elder James E. Talmage, a member of the Twelve in our dispensation, made this observation: "Christ's agony in the garden is unfathomable to the finite mind, both as to intensity and cause. The thought that He suffered through fear of death is untenable. Death to Him was preliminary to resurrection and triumphal return to the Father from whom He had come, and to a state of glory even beyond what He had before possessed; and, moreover, it was within His power to lay down His life voluntarily." Then Elder Talmage testifies: "In some manner, actual and terribly real, though to man incomprehensible, the Savior took upon Himself the burden of the sins of mankind from Adam to the end of the world." (Jesus the Christ, p. 613.)

Sacrament re-instituted

Following the Savior's crucifixion and resurrection came the long dark night of the apostasy. Finally the heavens were reopened and the voice of the Lord was heard again on the earth. The gospel and priesthood were restored, and the church of Jesus Christ was reestablished in these latter days. Then from the Lord came this admonition to the members of the Church: "And that thou mayest more fully keep thyself unspotted from the world, thou shalt go to the house of prayer and offer up thy sacraments upon my holy day." (D&C 59:9.)

And then the Lord further instructed: "It is expedient that the Church meet together often to partake of bread and wine in the remembrance of the Lord Jesus." (D&C 20:75.)

In these words was the sacrament of the Lord's Supper authorized in our day, the dispensation of the fulness of times. The bread and water, duly consecrated by prayer, become emblems of the Lord's body and blood, to be partaken of reverently and in remembrance of him.

The sacrament is a sacred and solemn service. As we partake of the sacrament, we make covenants with the Lord. This is not unusual, because Latter-day Saints are a covenant-making people.

Sacramental prayers

There are few set prayers in the Church, and the sacramental prayers, which came from the Lord by revelation, are two of them. We should listen attentively as the prayers are given and realize—

First, that the bread and water are in remembrance of the body and blood which the Savior shed for us;

Secondly, that we pledge to take upon ourselves the name of the Lord Jesus;

Thirdly, that we will keep the commandments that he has given us; and,

Fourthly, that we promise we will always remember him.

There is one part of the prayer that I should like to emphasize. It is this: "that we will always remember him."

Remembering the Savior

Of what do we think when we remember Jesus Christ, the Savior?

Do we think or remember that he is a member of the Godhead or Trinity, together with God our Eternal Father and the Holy Ghost, the three personages comprising the great presiding council of the universe?

Do we recall that Jesus was the Creator of this world and the chief executive in carrying out the wishes of the Father? John the Beloved, who referred to the Savior as "the Word," gives this testimony: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God.

"The same was in the beginning with God.

"All things were made by him; and without him was not anything made that was made." (John 1:1-3.)

Do we remember that at the great council in the heavens in which we participated as preexistent spiritual beings, he presented a plan in which he offered his life, and that he was willing to suffer death to atone for the sins that would come into the world? In doing this he would assure us of a resurrection from the dead, and he would make salvation possible for us, his brothers and sisters, and thus become our Savior.

Do we remember his intense agony and suffering in the Garden of Gethsemane, as he took upon himself the sins of mankind?

Our obligation

As we partake of the sacrament, do we remember that we enjoy membership in the restored church which bears his name; do we resolve that we will strive to demonstrate our appreciation by responding to calls and assignments made by our leaders; and do we commit ourselves to do everything within our power to help build up his church?

And, finally, do we remember the promises and assurances given to us by the Savior, that he will return once again, in what is referred to as his second coming? Do we remember that those who are faithful and keep his commandments may again have the privilege of entering his presence and that of our Father in heaven?

Blessing promised

We learn, then, from the beautiful sacramental prayers that, first, the bread and water are taken in remembrance of the body and of the blood that the Savior shed for us; secondly, that we pledge to take upon us the name of the Lord Jesus Christ; and thirdly, we promise that we will always remember him, and that we will keep the commandments which he has given us. And if we do these things, we are then in a position to realize the meaningful promise: "that we may always have his Spirit to be with us."

What a wonderful blessing it would be if we could always have the Spirit of the Savior in our lives to guide and direct us!

Gaining the Spirit

While Wilford Woodruff was crossing the ocean on his final mission to Great Britain, he testified that the martyred Prophet, Joseph Smith, and his brother Hyrum appeared to him in his cabin aboard the ship. The vessel had been caught in a terrible storm, which had abated as a result of the prayers of the brethren. Hear Brother Woodruff's own words of what happened: "The night following [the storm] Joseph and Hyrum visited me, and the Prophet laid before me a great many things. Among other things, he told me to get the Spirit of God, as we all needed it."

Many years later Brigham Young, after his death, also appeared to Brother Woodruff and said virtually the same thing—the importance of gaining and keeping the Spirit of the Lord in our lives.

One of the surest ways to obtain and retain the Spirit of the Lord is to so live and keep ourselves unspotted from the sins of the world that we can partake worthily of the Lord's Supper each week as we attend our sacrament meetings.

That we may do this and thus obtain the blessings predicated upon this law, is my humble prayer, which I ask in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

Following Elder Taylor's address, the Tabernacle Choir sang without announcement the song, "Arise, My Soul, Arise."

President Harold B. Lee

We have just listened to Elder Henry D. Taylor, Assistant to the Twelve, followed by the Tabernacle

Choir singing "Arise, My Soul, Arise."

We shall now be pleased to hear from Elder Gordon B. Hinckley of the Council of the Twelve, who will be our concluding speaker.

Elder Gordon B. Hinckley

Of the Council of the Twelve

My beloved associates in this great work. I never come into this Tabernacle without thinking of the devotion and sacrifice of our pioneer fathers who constructed it as a house of God. They dedicated and consecrated it to worship and the teaching of truth. A great and sacred trust is placed in us, as we occupy this pulpit, to speak words of faith. To that end I humbly seek the direction of the Holy Spirit.

Response of convert

Mine has been the opportunity to meet many wonderful men and women in various parts of the world. A few of them have left an indelible impression upon me. One such was a naval officer from Asia, a brilliant young man who had been brought to the United States for advanced training. Some of his associates in the United States Navy, whose behavior had attracted him, shared with him at his request their religious beliefs. He was not a Christian, but he was interested. They told him of the Savior of the world, of Jesus born in Bethlehem, who gave his life for all mankind. They told him of the appearance of God, the Eternal Father, and the resurrected Lord to the boy Joseph Smith. They spoke of modern prophets. They taught him the gospel of the Master. The Spirit touched his heart, and he was baptized.

He was introduced to me just before he was to return to his native land. We spoke of these things, and then I said, "Your people are not Christians. You come from a land where Christians have had a difficult time. What will happen when you return home a Christian and, more particularly, a Mormon Christian?"

His face clouded, and he replied, "My family will be disappointed. I suppose they will cast me out. They will regard me as dead. As for my future and my career, I assume that all opportunity will be foreclosed against me."

I asked, "Are you willing to pay so great a price for the gospel?"

His dark eyes, moistened by tears, shone from his handsome brown face as he answered, "It's true, isn't it?"

Ashamed at having asked the question, I responded, "Yes, it's true."

To which he replied, "Then what else matters?"

These are the questions I should like to leave with you this morning: "It's true, isn't it? Then what else matters?"

Reasons for church growth

Yesterday the growth statistics of the Church were presented. They are impressive and gratifying. They called to mind a recent broadcast of one of the nation's popular television programs in which Joe Garagiola interviewed the Reverend Dean M. Kelley of the National Council of Churches, who spoke of the declining membership of some of the larger, well-known religious bodies and also of the accelerating growth of others. He gave as the reason for the decline: "Because they have become permissive; they allow just anybody to become members or remain members. They don't insist on any rigorous requirements of belief or of contributions." He pointed out, on the other hand, that those groups which require sacrifice of time and effort and means are enjoying vigorous growth.

He then went on to say: "The fastest growing church [of] over a million members in this country is the Mormon Church, the Latter-day Saints, with headquarters in Salt Lake City, which is growing at five percent a year, [and] that's a very rapid increase."

This is a most striking commentary, and one that should concern every thoughtful man and woman. One thing that it says is that a religion which requires devotion, which asks for sacrifice, which demands discipline, also enjoys the loyalty of its membership and the interest and respect of others.

No equivocations

It was ever thus. The Savior did not equivocate when he said to Nicodemus: "Except a man be born of the water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." (John 3:5.) There were no exceptions. There was no permissiveness in complying with the rule. It was so in other matters of which he spoke.

Paul never hedged nor quibbled when setting forth the requirements of the gospel of Jesus Christ. It is so today. The Lord himself declared that "strait is the gate and narrow is the way." Any system dealing with the eternal consequences of human behavior must set guidelines and adhere to them, and no system can long command the loyalties of men that does not expect of them certain measures of discipline, and particularly of self-discipline. The cost in comfort may be great. The sacrifice may be real. But this very demanding reality is the substance of which come character and strength and nobility.

Permissiveness never produced greatness. Integrity, loyalty, strength are virtues whose sinews are developed through the struggles that go on within a man as he practices self-discipline under the demands of divinely spoken truth.

Motivation by convictions

But there is another side of the coin, without which this self-discipline is little more than an exercise. Discipline imposed for the sake of discipline is repressive. It is not in the spirit of the gospel of Jesus Christ. It is usually enforced by fear, and its results are negative.

But that which is positive, which comes of personal conviction, builds and lifts and strengthens in a marvelous manner. In matters of religion, when a man is motivated by great and powerful convictions of truth, then he disciplines himself, not because of demands made upon him by the Church but because of the knowledge within his heart that God lives; that he is a child of God with an eternal and limitless potential; that there is joy in service and satisfaction in laboring in a great cause.

The remarkable progress of this church, to which the Reverend Kelley referred, is not so much the result of the requirements of the Church upon its members as it is the result of the conviction in the hearts of those members that this is in very deed the work of God, and that happiness and peace and satisfaction are found in righteous service.

Strength of Church

We are gathered today on Temple Square in this historic Tabernacle, surrounded by other remarkable buildings, but the strength of the Church is not in these buildings, nor in its thousands of houses of worship across the world, nor in its universities and hospitals. These are all facilities, desirable, means to an end, but only auxiliary to that which is the true strength. As President Lee indicated yesterday, the strength of this church lies in the hearts of its people, in the individual testimony and conviction of the truth of this work. When an individual has that witness and testimony, the requirements of the Church become challenges rather than burdens. Declared the Savior: "... my yoke is easy, and my burden is light." (Matt. 11:30.)

The yoke of Church responsibility, the burden of Church leadership become opportunities rather than problems to him who wears the mantle of dedicated membership in the Church of Jesus Christ.

Miracle of conversion

While attending a conference in the East the other day, I listened to the experience of an engineer who joined the Church some months ago. The missionaries had called at his home, and his wife had invited them in. She had eagerly responded to their message, while he felt himself being pulled in against his will. One evening she indicated that she wished to be baptized. He flew into a fit of anger. Didn't she know what this meant? This would mean time. This would mean the payment of tithing. This would mean giving up their friends. This would mean no more smoking. He threw on his coat, walked out into the night, slamming the door behind him. He walked the streets, swearing at his wife, swearing at the missionaries, swearing at himself for ever permitting them to teach them. As he grew tired, his anger cooled, and a spirit of prayer somehow came into his heart. He prayed as he walked. He pleaded with God for an answer to his questions. And then an impression, clear and unequivocal, came almost as if a voice had spoken with words that said, "It's true."

"It's true," he said to himself again and again. "It's true." A peace came into his heart. As he walked toward home, the restrictions, the demands, the requirements over which he had been so incensed began to appear as opportunities. When he opened the door, he found his wife had been on her knees.

Then, before the congregation to whom he told this, he spoke of the gladness that had come into their lives. Tithing was not a problem. The sharing of their substance with God who had given them everything seemed little enough. Time for service was not a problem. This required only a little careful budgeting of the hours of the week. Responsibility was not a problem. Out of it came growth and a new outlook on life. And then this man of intellect and training, this engineer accustomed to dealing with the facts of the physical world in which we live, bore solemn testimony with moistened eyes of the miracle that had come into his life.

So it is with hundreds of thousands in many lands—men and women of capacity and training, of business and the professions, hard-headed, practical men who do things in the work of the world, in whose hearts there burns a silent witness that God lives, that Jesus is the Christ, that this work is divine, that it was restored to earth for the blessing of all who will partake of its opportunities.

Said the Lord: "Behold, I stand at the door and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me." (Rev. 3:20.)

Every man may know

Jesus, speaking to the Jews in the temple, said: "My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me.

"If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." (John 7:16-17.)

This is the wonder of this work, that every man may know for himself. He is not dependent on the teacher or the preacher or the missionary, except as they might instruct and bear witness. As Job declared long ago: "... there is a spirit in man; and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding." (Job 32:8.)

Each man may know for himself that it is true through the gift of the Holy Spirit, and with as certain an assurance as that the sun will rise in the morning. And knowing that it is true, he will be inclined to discipline himself as becomes one who has a knowledge of the meaning and purpose of life, of his great responsibility to his fellowmen, of his responsibility to his family, of his responsibility to God.

"Learn of me," said the Lord, "and listen to my words; walk in the meekness of my Spirit, and you shall have peace in me." (D&C 19:23.)

This is "the peace that passeth all understanding," because it comes not of the mind, but of the Spirit, and "the things of God are understood by the Spirit of God."

Testimony of young woman

A brilliant and highly educated young woman spoke in Berchtesgaden, Germany, to a conference of American military personnel who were members of the Church. I was there and heard her. She was a major in the army, a medical doctor, a highly respected specialist in her field. She said:

"More than anything else in the world, I wanted to serve God. But try as I might, I could not find him. The miracle of it all is that he found me. One Saturday afternoon in September 1969 I was at home in Berkeley, California, and heard my doorbell ring. There were two young men there, dressed in suits, with white shirts and ties. Their hair was neatly combed. I was so impressed with them that I said: 'I don't know what you're selling, but I'll buy it.' One of the young men said: 'We aren't selling anything. We're missionaries of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and we would like to talk with you.' I invited them to come in, and they spoke about their faith.

"This was the beginning of my testimony. I am thankful beyond words for the privilege and honor of being a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. The joy and peace this glad gospel has brought to my heart is heaven on earth. My testimony of this work is the most precious thing in my life, a gift from my Heavenly Father, for which I will be eternally thankful."

This knowledge comes now just as it came anciently. It so came to my friend, the naval officer from Asia. It so came to the engineer in the East whose words I quoted. It so came to this medical doctor whose testimony I have repeated. In this hall there are thousands who could speak similarly. Across the world there are now millions. And if there be any within the sound of my voice who are searching for the witness of the Holy Spirit in these matters, I give you my testimony that it may be had. It will come now just as it came to Peter of old:

The rock of revelation

"When Jesus came into the coasts of Caesarea Philippi, he asked his disciples, . . . whom say ye that I am?

"And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the Living God.

"And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, Simon Barjona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven.

"And I also say unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." (Matt. 16:13-18.)

This rock of revelation is the source of knowledge concerning the things of God. It is the witness of the Holy Spirit that testifies of eternal truth, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against any man who seeks it, who accepts it, who cultivates it, and who lives by it.

Of these sacred things I offer my solemn testimony and invoke the blessings of this knowledge upon all earnest seekers after truth, in the name of the author of truth, even the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

Without announcement, the Tabernacle Choir sang "God So Loved the World" following Elder Hinckley's address.

President Harold B. Lee

Elder Gordon B. Hinckley of the Council of the Twelve has just spoken to us followed by the Tabernacle Choir singing "God So Loved the World."

We are grateful to the owners and managers of over 300 television and radio stations for offering their facilities as a public service to make proceedings of this conference available to millions throughout many areas of the world.

We shall now conclude this third session of the conference with the Tabernacle Choir singing "The Lord Is My Shepherd" after which the benediction will be pronounced by Elder James A. Cullimore, Assistant to the Twelve.

This conference will then be adjourned until two o'clock this afternoon.

The Choir sang "The Lord Is My Shepherd."

The benediction was offered by Elder James A. Cullimore, Assistant to the Twelve.

The conference was then adjourned until two o'clock p.m.

SECOND DAY AFTERNOON MEETING

FOURTH SESSION

The fourth session of the conference convened in the Salt Lake Tabernacle on Saturday, April 7, 1973, at 2 o'clock p.m.

President Harold B. Lee was present and presided. He also conducted this session of the conference.

The music for this session was rendered by the Combined Primary Children's Chorus of the Bountiful, Kaysville, and Woods Cross Regions, with Sister Pat Maughan conducting. Roy M. Darley was at the organ. Before the opening of the conference meeting, they sang the song, "Reverence." President Lee then made the following introductory comments:

President Harold B. Lee

We are convened in the Tabernacle in Salt Lake City in the fourth general session of the 143rd Annual Conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. We extend a cordial welcome to all present here this afternoon, and to our television and radio audience.

We are especially grateful to the owners and operators of numerous radio and television stations for the extensive coverage they have given to the proceedings of this conference, originating with KSL in Salt Lake City.

By means of satellite transmission, sessions of this conference will be heard over radio stations in Australia and countries of South America.

The General Priesthood Conference to be held this evening will be transmitted over closed-circuit from the Salt Lake Tabernacle to over 180,000 men of the priesthood assembled in approximately 800 buildings throughout the United States and Canada, and by way of closed-circuit television to nine buildings in Salt Lake City and on the campus of the Brigham Young University.

The music for this session will be rendered by the Combined Primary Children's Chorus of the Bountiful, Kaysville, and Woods Cross Regions, with Sister Pat Maughan conducting. Roy M. Darley is at the organ. We have been favored by beautiful prelude music rendered by these sweet children. They sang the song "Reverence," and I see the audience has caught the meaning of what they have been singing.

We shall begin this service by the Primary Children's Chorus singing "I Think When I Read that Sweet Story," and "I Wonder When He Comes Again."

The invocation will then be offered by Elder Peter L. Morley, Regional Representative of the Twelve.

The Combined Primary Children's Chorus sang the numbers "I Think When I Read that Sweet Story" and "I Wonder When He Comes Again."

The opening prayer was offered by Elder Peter L. Morley, Regional Representative of the Twelve.

President Lee

The Primary Chorus will now sing "Christ and His Little Ones," after which Elder Boyd K. Packer of the Council of the Twelve will be our first speaker.

The Primary Children's Chorus sang the song "Christ and His Little Ones."

President Lee

We shall now hear from Elder Boyd K. Packer of the Council of the Twelve. He will be followed by Elder David B. Haight, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve.

Elder Boyd K. Packer

Of the Council of the Twelve

Who has not been touched by the singing of these innocent children? I think of the account in Third Nephi, chapter 17, when the Lord commanded that the little ones should be brought. As they brought them they placed them upon the ground. He commanded that the multitude should give way until all the little ones were there. Then he commanded that the multitude should kneel. He knelt among the little children and prayed.

"Behold your little ones"

The account records:

"... The eye hath never seen, neither hath the ear heard, before, so great and marvelous things as we saw and heard Jesus speak unto the Father;

"And no tongue can speak, neither can there be written by any man, neither can the hearts of men conceive so great and marvelous things as we both saw and heard Jesus speak. . . ."

After the prayer, it is recorded that he wept. And then, "he took their little children, one by one, and blessed them, and prayed unto the Father for them.

"And when he had done this he wept again;

"And he spake unto the multitude, and said unto them: Behold your little ones." (3 Ne. 17:16-17, 21-23.)

I confess, I am not ashamed to confess, that little children get inside of me very easily. We have a little fellow at home not quite four. All he has to say to turn lights on in me is one word, "Dad." I am indebted to him for some of the help with this assignment today.

Talk to children

"... children are an heritage of the Lord" (Ps. 127:3), and I desire today to talk to little children. Many of them are here in the choir. Others, a great number of them, are listening in. I think the grown-ups won't mind if I don't talk to them.

There is something very important that I want to say to you children. Something I hope you'll always remember. Something you should learn when you are children and things are easy to remember.

Did you know that you lived before you were born on earth? Before you were born to your father and mother you lived in the spirit world.

That is a very important thing to know. It explains many things that otherwise are very difficult to understand. Many people in the world do not know that, but it is the truth.

When you were born into this life you were not created then. Only your physical body was created. You came from somewhere. You left the presence of your Heavenly Father, for it was your time to live upon the earth.

Reasons for mortality

There were two reasons you were to come into this life. First, to receive a mortal body. This is a great blessing. Our Heavenly Father arranged things so that through a very sacred expression of love between your father and mother your body was conceived and began to grow. Then at some time, I don't know just when, your spirit entered into your body and you became a living person. But it did not all begin with your birth as a little baby.

Your body becomes an instrument of your mind and the foundation of your character. Through life in a mortal body you can learn to control matter, and that will be very important to you through all eternity.

Pretend, my little friends, that my hand represents your spirit. It is alive. It can move by itself. Suppose that this glove represents your mortal body. It cannot move. When the spirit enters into your mortal body, then it can move and act and live. Now you are a person—a spirit with a body, living on the earth.

Death a separation

It was not intended that we stay here forever. Just for a lifetime. Little ones, you are just beginning your lifetime. Your grandparents and great-grandparents are nearly finished with theirs. It wasn't long ago that they were little fellows and little girls just like you are now. But one day they will leave this mortal existence, and so will you.

Someday, because of old age, or perhaps a disease, or an accident, the spirit and the body will be separated. We then say a person has died. Death is a separation. All of this was according to a plan.

Remember my hand represents your spirit and the glove represents your body. While you are alive the spirit inside the body can cause it to work and to act and to live.

When I separate them, the glove, which represents your body, is taken away from your spirit; it cannot move anymore. It just falls down and is dead. But your spirit is still alive.

"A spirit born of God is an immortal thing. When the body dies, the spirit does not die." (First Presidency, Improvement Era, March 1912, p. 463.)

It is important that you get in your mind what death is. Death is a separation.

The part of you that looks out through your eyes and allows you to think and smile and act and to know and to be, that is your spirit and that is eternal. It cannot die.

Do you remember when someone, perhaps a grandmother, died? Remember your parents explained to you that it was just her body lying in the casket, that grandmother had gone to live with Heavenly Father, and that she would be waiting there. You remember having them say that, don't you?

Death is a separation and is according to the plan. If the plan ended there, it would be too bad, because we came to obtain a body and it would be lost.

God's plan

When he made it possible for us to come into this world, our Heavenly Father also made it possible for us to return to him, because he is our Father and he loves us. Do not think that because we are living on this earth, away from him, and because we can't see him, he has forgotten us.

Didn't you notice, when your older brother was away on his mission, or your sister was away at school, how your parents did not stop loving them? Sometimes it seemed to you they loved them more than they did you. At least they would talk about them and sometimes worry about them. They sent help and messages to encourage them. Distance can make love grow stronger.

Little children, our Heavenly Father knew that we would need help. So, in the plan, he provided for someone to come into the world and help us.

This was Jesus Christ, the Son of God. He is a spirit child as all of us are; but also, Jesus was his Only Begotten Son on the earth. I speak very reverently of him. And he it was, my little friends, who made it possible for us to overcome death and get things put back the way they should be.

You are learning about him in Sunday School, in Primary, and in family home evening. It is very important that you remember him and learn all you can about what he did.

He overcame the mortal death for us. Through the atonement, he made it possible for our spirit and body to be one again. Because of him we will be resurrected. He made it possible for us to be resurrected, for the spirit and the body to be put back together. That is what the resurrection is. That is a gift from him. And all men will receive it. That is why he is called our Savior, our Redeemer.

Learning good from evil

The second reason you came here was to be tested: something like going away to school to learn good from evil. It is very important for us to be able to know the right from the wrong.

It is important for us to know that there is an evil one who will tempt you to do wrong. Because of this, there is another separation you should know about. Even when you are very young you should know about it. There is another separation that you need to think about—not the separation of the body from the spirit; rather, a separation from our Heavenly Father.

If we remain separated from him and can't get back to his presence, then it would be as though we were spiritually dead. And that would not be good. This separation is like a second death, a spiritual death.

You are now learning to read, and you can begin to read the scriptures: the Bible, especially the Book of Mormon, the Doctrine and Covenants, and the Pearl of Great Price. From them we know that little children can learn spiritual truths. For the prophet said:

"... he imparteth his word by angels unto men, yea, not only men but women also. Now this is not all; little children do have words given unto them many times which confound the wise and the learned." (Al. 32:23.)

Importance of cleanliness

In the scriptures we learn that our spirits must be clean, in order to return to the presence of our Heavenly Father:

"... there cannot any unclean thing enter into the kingdom of God..." (1 Ne. 15:34.)

Two important things must happen to us then. First, somehow we must get our body back after we die—that is, we want to be resurrected; and we must find a way to keep ourselves clean, spiritually clean, so that we will not be separated from our Heavenly Father and may return to where he is when we leave this earth life.

We are sure you will overcome mortal death. You will be resurrected because of what Christ did for us. Whether or not you overcome the spiritual death—that separation from the presence of our Heavenly Father—will depend a great deal upon you.

When Jesus Christ was living on the earth, he taught his gospel and organized his church. If we live the gospel, we will remain spiritually clean. Even when we make mistakes, there is a way to become clean again. That is what repentance is.

Steps to enter church

To enter his church we must have faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.

We must repent, and we must be baptized.

Baptism is like being buried in the water. When we come out of the water, it is like being born again, and we are clean. We receive a remission of our sins. That means they are taken away. We can retain this remission of our sins if we will.

We are then confirmed members of his church, The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. We may have the gift of the Holy Ghost to guide us. That is like receiving messages from our heavenly home, to show us the way to go.

The Lord called prophets and apostles to lead his church. He has always revealed his will through his prophets.

An apostle of the Lord

Let me tell you something I learned when I was about your age. I think I was about six or seven years old. My brother and I (we were about the same age) walked to the stake conference together. I can still go in that building in Brigham City and go back just under the balcony, and say, "I was sitting about there when it happened."

What was it that happened? There was a man speaking at the pulpit, Elder George Albert Smith. He was a member of the Council of the Twelve at that time. I do not remember what he said, whether he was talking about the Word of Wisdom, or about repentance, or about baptism. But somehow while he was speaking it was fixed in my little-boy mind that there stood a servant of the Lord. I have never lost that testimony or that feeling. In my mind I came to know that he was an apostle of the Lord Jesus Christ.

My little friends, although I sit now in the Council of the Twelve, I have never lost that feeling about these men. Often when we meet in the Council, I look around the circle and know again that these are the apostles of the Lord Jesus Christ upon the earth. They are special witnesses of him.

A time of testing

Little ones, you will be tested, perhaps more than any generation that ever lived here. You will meet many people who do not believe in Christ. Some will be agents for the evil one and teach wickedness. Sometimes this will be very tempting. There will be times when you will make mistakes (and all of us make mistakes). There will be times when you will wonder if you can live the way he taught we should live. When you are tested, when you are disappointed, or ashamed, or when you are sad, remember him and pray to your Heavenly Father in his name.

Some men will say that he did not come to earth. But he did. Some will say that he is not the Son of God. But he is. Some will say that he has no servants upon the face of the earth. But he has. For he lives. I know that he lives. In his church there are many thousands who can bear witness of him, and I bear witness of him, and tell you again the things you should remember, things you should learn when you are yet a little one.

Remember that each of you is a child of our Heavenly Father. That is why we call him our Father.

You lived before you came to this earth. You came to receive a mortal body and to be tested.

Redemption of Christ

When your life is over, your spirit and body will be separated. We call that death.

Our Heavenly Father sent his Son, Jesus Christ, to redeem us. Because of what he has done we will be resurrected.

There is another kind of death you should think of. That is the separation from the presence of our Heavenly Father. If we will be baptized and live his gospel, we may be redeemed from this second death.

Our Heavenly Father loves us, and we have a Lord and Savior.

I thank God for a church where you, our little children, are precious above all things. I thank God for our Savior who suffered the little children to come unto him.

You sang these words, just a few minutes ago:

"I think when I read that sweet story of old,

When Jesus was here among men,
How he called little children like lambs to his fold,

I should like to have been with him then.

"I wish that his hands had been placed on my head,
That his arms had been thrown around me,

That I might have seen his kind look when he said,

'Let the little ones come unto me.'"

—Sing with Me, no. B-69

My little brothers and sisters, my little children, I know that God lives. I know something of how it feels to have his hand put upon you, to call you to his service. I bear witness and share with you the witness that has been given me, that special witness. He is the Christ! He loves us! I pray for you, our little ones, and plead with him to behold our little ones and to bless them, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

Isn't it wonderful that we have a father and a grandfather in the Council who knows how to talk to little children? Elder Boyd K. Packer of the Council of the Twelve has just addressed us.

We shall now hear from Elder David B. Haight, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve. He will be followed by Elder Hartman Rector, Jr., of the First Council of Seventy.

Elder David B. Haight

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

In the brief period that I occupy this pulpit, I pray that my remarks may be in harmony with the spirit of this conference. I acknowledge the divinity of the direction the Church is receiving from President Harold B. Lee, our prophet, and the strength and wisdom of President Tanner and President Romney and all of the other General Authorities as they assist in guiding and encouraging the Church membership throughout the world to live lives that are compatible with the gospel of Jesus Christ.

We have all been greatly touched by these beautiful voices of the Primary children, and I hope to direct my remarks to those who have a great responsibility regarding these precious lives.

Scale of values

As I view the struggles of mankind in this challenging time, I reflect on the familiar phrase of Henry Van Dyke, which most high school students were required at one time to memorize. Van Dyke wrote:

"Four things a man must learn to do,
If he would make a record true,
To think without confusion clearly,
To love his fellowmen sincerely,
To act from honest motives purely,
To trust in God and heaven
securely."

"To trust in God and heaven securely." Wouldn't there be a feeling of great security if you knew that your home produced sons and daughters who trust in God securely—really trust in him, believing in him and in his Son, Jesus Christ, the Savior of the world?

In these times, it can be difficult to think clearly, to hold to a high degree of integrity and loyalty, and to maintain lofty ideals in a generation that seems to have lost its scale of values. The current wave of permissiveness in many areas of our lives is being encouraged by false interpretations of our true, basic, moral principles.

False prophets

The Savior warned us of these times:

"... there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall shew great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect." (Matt. 24:24.)

Unfortunately, along with much of the world, some of our loved ones are influenced by false prophets, false Christs, and modern movements of spiritualism. Some have become victims of satanic influences because they do not understand or realize the power of the adversary who knows human weaknesses and is ever present.

Eternal struggle with evil

Who is this evil power? Is he real? Does he exist?

John the Revelator capsuled that powerful struggle in heaven, the outcome of which has such an impact on all of humanity:

"And there was war in heaven: Michael and his angels fought against the dragon; and the dragon fought and his angels,

"And prevailed not; . . .

"And the great dragon was cast out, that old serpent, called the Devil, . . . which deceiveth the whole world: he was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with him.

"And I heard a loud voice saying in heaven, Now is come salvation, . . . for the accuser of our brethren is cast down. . . .

"... Woe to the inhabitants of the earth. . . ! for the devil is come down unto you, having great wrath, because he knoweth that he hath but a short time." (Rev. 12:7-10, 12.)

There is an eternal struggle with evil forces. John the Revelator has warned us, "Woe to the inhabitants of the earth. . . !" He is speaking to all of us. He says, Be on guard; beware.

Warning of evil power

The Lord God also warns us in modern revelation:

"Wherefore, because that Satan rebelled against me, and sought to destroy the agency of man, which I, the Lord God, had given him, and also, that I should give unto him mine own power; by the power of mine Only Begotten, I caused that he should be cast down;

"And he became Satan, yea, even the devil, the father of all lies, to deceive and to blind men, and to lead them captive at his will, even as many as would not hearken unto my voice." (Moses 4:3-4.)

Does God's warning of this evil power come through to us clearly? "... to deceive . . . to blind men . . . lead them captive . . . as many as would not hearken unto my voice." This evil is influencing the rapid deterioration of our sacred, moral principles that seems to be sweeping the land. Some neighborhood movie houses now show films that neither parents nor society would have tolerated a few years ago. Hard-core pornography is now available at candy stores and supermarkets at popular prices.

In the brief period of the past ten years, this country and most of the free world have been converted into a space-age Sodom and Gomorrah, aided by some publishers, movie producers, and even some so-called educators. Moral principles have been eclipsed by the blind, ungodly pursuit of pleasure—pleasure at any price.

Alma in the Book of Mormon records Korihor's sad experience with Satan:

"... behold, the devil hath deceived me; for he appeared unto me in the form of an angel, and said unto me: ... There is no God; yea, and he taught me that which I should say. And I have taught his words; ... and I taught them, even until I had much success, ... that I verily believed that they were true; and for this cause I withstood the truth; even until I have brought this great curse upon me." (Al. 30:53.)

Reality of Satan

Many people who believe at least tentatively in the reality of God have a much harder time believing in the reality of the devil. Some even soft-pedal the subject and go along with the popular idea that the devil is a purely mythological creature.

Some people roar with laughter as a television comic remarks, "The devil made me do it." Well, maybe he did! He will always try.

To deny the existence of Satan and the reality of his evil power and influence is as foolish as ignoring the existence of electricity. We know electricity is real; we see and feel its power. We also know about war, hatred, backbiting, false witness, cheating, and the broken hearts and broken homes caused by the moral sins of modern Babylon. Do members of this church feel a lack of evidence in the reality of Satan and his power?

We are told that some of the "very elect" will be enticed and deceived. Couldn't this "very elect" include your sons and daughters, even though through baptism they have already accepted Christ as their Savior? Wouldn't the evil one concentrate on them if he found a weakness or an opportunity?

Experience of college student

A college student hoping to repent of some serious mistakes and straighten out his life told me only a few days ago of an influence which, for a time, controlled his life. His desire to have some expert ski equipment encouraged him to accept a job on Sundays and evenings. This prevented him from attending priesthood and other Sunday meetings. Now he was too tired to attend early morning seminary. With his new, fancy ski equipment, he made the high school team and made some new friends. To be "with it," he started to smoke and soon moved to marijuana and from marijuana to LSD. His father and mother now appeared old-fashioned to him. He moved from his parents' home to live with his newfound friends in an old house. The house had extra rooms, so they invited a young lady—also on drugs—to move in. His father tried to visit him, to communicate through letters. But this young man now felt completely disenchanted with church and home. After these tragic mistakes, he finally came to his senses and moved home with his parents. He told me, "The devil seemed to be in charge of my life."

Need of parental direction

After interviewing the youth in his ward, a dedicated bishop recently commented on the lack of spiritual direction given by some parents to their own teenage sons and daughters. He said, "Bishops and teachers can't do it all. Parents must teach their children of the pitfalls of evil." This bishop then compared differences in priorities in the homes as reflected in his interviews with the youth. One girl said, "I know the gospel is true; I live it; I keep the commandments; no problems." Another young lady remarked, "I don't accept all of it; I'm battling with some parts; we never discuss it at home."

"... never discuss it at home." What a tragedy! Strengthen your home. Teach your loved ones to distinguish between Satan and our Savior. Teach your loved ones that "all things which are good cometh of God; and that which is evil cometh of the devil; for the devil is an enemy unto God, ... and inviteth and enticeth to sin." (Moro. 7:12.)

Not explaining these eternal truths of the gospel in the warm atmosphere of your home could be the difference between exaltation and darkness. At a crucial moment in a youth's life, the humble testimony of mother and father could be recalled and make the difference in a critical decision.

True happiness in this life and the life to come is found in keeping the commandments of God. "... you shall live by every word that proceedeth forth from the mouth of God." (D&C 84:44.)

Influence of devil

I bear witness this day that the devil is real. I have felt of his influence. The apostle Paul knew firsthand of his power. As Saul of Tarsus he persecuted the saints; locked them in prison; gave voice against them when they were put to death. Saul, now the believer and great apostle, encouraged the followers of Christ at Ephesus:

"Put on the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil.

"For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world. . . ." (Eph. 6:11-12.)

Shield of righteousness

If you and your loved ones keep and live the commandments of God, following the counsel of his living prophet to strengthen your homes, this protecting armor of God that Paul referred to will fit comfortably; the shield of righteousness will be sufficient to withstand the evil darts; and your loved ones will find great joy and salvation, for they will have learned and will know how—

"To think without confusion clearly,
To love his fellowmen sincerely,
To act from honest motives purely,
To trust in God and heaven
securely."

May this be your lot with you and your families, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ, our Savior. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

Thank you, Elder Haight. We have just listened to Elder David B. Haight, Assistant to the Twelve.

We shall now be pleased to hear from Elder Hartman Rector, Jr., of the First Council of Seventy.

Elder Hartman Rector, Jr.

Of the First Council of the Seventy

Following the theme that was so masterfully developed this morning by President Tanner, I would like to present a few thoughts on success.

Success is that illusive and almost indefinable goal to which all men are looking, but success is hardly ever the same thing to two different people.

Definition of success

The dictionary defines success as "the favorable termination of a venture," which implies it is a risky, daring, or dangerous undertaking. A second definition is, "the attainment of wealth, favor, or eminence," and surely this is the most commonly used definition today.

We are prone to apply the term successful to those who look prosperous or wealthy or appear to have scaled the pinnacle of accomplishment in their own particular profession. Whether a man be a doctor, lawyer, financier, builder, politician, an admiral or a general, an actor, an airline pilot, or an athlete, all these and many others have the term success applied to them. But is this really success?

Man's definition of success is, many times, very difficult to comprehend. Some feel to be right is to be successful. Henry Clay said he would rather be right than president. Perhaps he felt successful: he ran for the presidency three times and failed all three times. "Even a stopped clock is right twice a day. After some years it can boast a long series of successes." (Abner-Eschenbach.)

"The reasonable man will know that the actual magnitude of success obtained bears no real relation to the amount of pleasure that is conveyed; the man who becomes prime minister or wins a Nobel prize is not really more elated than he who secures a trophy for playing Ping Pong or wins a bronze medal for growing large chrysanthemums." (Harold Necholson.)

Attainment of joy

The Lord doesn't seem to measure success in terms of attainment of position or power or wealth. A prophet in the Book of Mormon (where, by the way, the most succinct and unvarnished truths can be found) said, "But behold, all things have been done in the wisdom of him who knoweth all things. Adam fell that men might be; and men are, that they might have joy." (2 Ne. 2:24-25.) If man is that he might have joy, then success to the Lord must include the attainment of real joy. On the basis of this definition, then, no one is really successful who is not happy.

If this be the Lord's definition, then there is precious little success in this world. Success in its practical application seems to be more a state of mind than anything else. Obviously, many people never make it because they are ungrateful. They are not thankful for what they have; therefore, they are unhappy and thus are not successful. I have never seen a happy person who was not thankful for what he had, to paraphrase the Prophet Joseph Smith, who stated that "doubt and faith cannot exist in the same person at the same time." (6th Lecture on Faith.) It is also doubtful that success and unhappiness can exist in the same person at the same time.

Generally speaking, we are unhappy because we are dissatisfied, and this because we pursue after things that cannot make us happy, even if we obtain them. In the words of H. W. Beecher, "Success is full of promise till men get it, and then is as a last year's nest, from which the bird has flown."

Everything has its price

There is a great lesson to be learned here. Some think of success as obtaining "something for nothing" or the securing of a great bargain. The words of James Russell Lowell seem particularly applicable. He said, "Earth gets its price from what Earth gives us." In order to be happy, it is particularly important that we learn that everything has its price and not expect something for nothing. This seems to be what earth life is all about—to teach us the lesson that as ye sow, so shall ye reap. We cannot receive something for nothing; on the contrary, we will pay for everything we receive. To continue with Lowell's quote:

"Earth gets its price from what Earth gives us;
The beggar is taxed for a corner to die in, . . .
We bargain for the graves we lie in;
At the devil's booth are all things sold,
Each ounce of dross costs its ounce of gold;
For a cap and bells our lives we pay,
Bubbles we buy with a whole soul's tasking.
For 'tis heaven alone that is given away,
'Tis only God may be had for the asking. . . ."

("The Vision of Sir Launfal," Stanza 3.)

Material possessions

How true this is! We pursue after bubbles many times, thinking they will make us happy and that obtaining this particular bubble would make us successful. There are many, many bubbles for sale. This is another word for material possessions, which the world would have us believe are necessary to make us happy. We get the idea from modern advertising that happiness comes from the accumulation of material possessions. We must have a new house, a new car, or a snowmobile, or maybe even a boat.

Elder ElRay L. Christiansen tells an interesting story about his neighbor who bought a boat. He really couldn't afford a boat; but he bought it anyway, because he had a credit card. In order to pay for the boat, he had to take a second job, which meant he had to work on Saturday. This, of course, left one day per week on which he could use the boat. When do you suppose that was? Yes, you are right—it was Sunday. But he loved his boat and invited Brother Christiansen over to admire it, saying, "Isn't it beautiful? What shall we name it?" (Now, you see, it is a member of the family—it has to have a name.)

Brother Christiansen said, "Why don't you call it The Sabbath Breaker?" (Conference Report, April 1962, p. 33.) Now, please don't misunderstand me—I have nothing against boats. I have a friend who has a boat, and he calls his boat "Never on Sunday," which, of course, is a better name for a boat.

There is no real joy or happiness in the accumulation of material possessions. There are too many people today who are so miserable in this life that they cannot stand themselves. They are seeking any avenue of escape—to get out of this life, even to taking their own lives. Many of these people have material possessions heaped up in piles all around them—and many of their associates would say they were successful. But material possessions have not made them happy.

Seeking righteousness

The Master emphasized this when he said, "For what is a man profited, if he gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" (Matt. 16:26.) And then he added significantly, "But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." (Matt. 6:33.)

A young man came to see me recently who had been called by the Lord to fill a mission. He was a fine young man—handsome, strong, sharp—but he said he didn't want to go on his mission because there were other things that he would rather do. As we visited he told me that one thing he would rather do was drive a dune buggy. We talked about the relative merits of trading eternal life for a dune buggy; and he decided, perhaps, that was not exactly a fair exchange. I suggested to him that if he still wanted to drive a dune buggy after he had filled his mission, the Lord would probably let him do so, since the Lord always grants unto men "according to their desire." (Al. 29:4.)

We must not be misled. The only real joy and happiness we can know here upon this earth, as well as in the eternities, will come through obedience to the Lord's commandments. Alma's statement that "wickedness never was happiness" (Al. 41:10) is still valid. Again he has said, "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." (John 13:17.) He did not say, but could have said, "Unhappy are ye if you don't."

Sometimes young people get upset because they do not know what profession to follow. They feel it is so vital that they must have a revelation from the Lord, so they will know what to do with their lives.

Generally speaking, I'm not sure that the Lord really cares what we choose as a vocation—whether we are a plumber or a librarian—so long as we keep the commandments of God. Of course, it is sometimes easier to keep the commandments when we are happy in our professions, and to that extent it is important that we do something we enjoy.

Success in the home

The Lord, through living prophets as well as prophets in earlier times, has made it abundantly clear where real joy can be found, and he has placed the emphasis for real joy squarely on the family. President David O. McKay's statement that "no other success can compensate for failure in the home" will forever live in our hearts.

President Harold B. Lee uttered an equally significant statement when he said, "Now, you husbands, remember that the most important of the Lord's work that you will ever do will be the work you do within the walls of your own home." (First Presidency Directive, April 14, 1969.) These statements and others update and reemphasize the Lord's injunction to Adam and Eve in the Garden when he commanded them to "be fruitful, and multiply and replenish the earth." (Gen. 1:28.) Why should they do this? "That ye may have joy and rejoicing in your posterity."

The Lord gives no commandments to his children that are not calculated to make them happy and thus successful. Therefore, he has added to the basic commandment of "be fruitful and multiply and replenish the earth," the reason for so doing: that you may have joy and rejoicing in your posterity.

Lehi's statement that "man is that he might have joy" takes on even more significance in light of this and the foregoing statement made by living prophets. And the Prophet

Joseph Smith also added to this statement when he said, "Happiness is the object and design of our existence; and will be the end thereof, if we pursue the path that leads to it. . . ." (Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith; p. 255.)

Path to temple altar

From what we have considered, that path inevitably leads to the altar of the temple. I have, many times, seen the Spirit lift choice young people who had come to the temple to become a family; and it seemed to me in these instances that the temple became a "heavenly family house," the sealing room became a "heavenly family room," and the altar of the temple became a "heavenly family altar." For as they knelt there, they were joined by the Lord through his priesthood for all eternity and thus were made "one," a family, in the Lord. The importance of this ordinance cannot be overemphasized, for if we raise a family outside the temple, we may lose it. We have no promise with respect to the continuation of family ties after we leave this life unless the covenants have been solemnized at the altar of the temple. Otherwise, it is only "until death do ye part."

God is the Heavenly Father of the human family. He is obviously concerned with families. If you doubt it, look around you! We are all his children—we belong to him. For this reason, he has commanded that a house be built for his family.

Our heavenly and eternal Father wants us to be happy, so he has established and ordained families as the basic unit of his church. Yes—and also of exaltation in his celestial kingdom. Happiness seems vital to success, or is it that success is vital to happiness? Either way, I do not believe I have ever seen happy parents who had unhappy children; and, conversely, I have never seen unhappy children who had happy parents.

Eternal life

So, then, what is required of parents, who have been so joined in the Lord's house, concerning their children? First, they are to love each other—this is so vital; then they are to welcome choice spirits from the Lord and teach them to love the Lord, keep his commandments, and walk uprightly before him. When they do this, they have given these children the foundation for attaining real joy here in this world and in the world to come. For they will have eternal life, which is the ultimate success, and they will be made rich. ". . . Behold, he that has eternal life is rich." (D&C 6:7.)

May this be our goal, and may we be willing to pay the price to obtain it and not be taken in by all the misinformation which is abroad in the land today about birth control, abortion and sex education, and other Satan-inspired philosophies; that we may look to the Lord and follow his living prophets and oracles today. I pray that we will, for I bear witness that God our Heavenly Father lives, and that he hears and answers prayers, and that he is concerned about his children, so much so that he sent his Only Begotten Son that we might have immortality and eternal life.

May we follow him, and may we keep his commandments, and may we be successful, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

He to whom you have just listened is Elder Hartman Rector, Jr., of the First Council of Seventy. I am sure from these addresses that there will be many young college students who will find a basis for setting their goals for the future.

The congregation and children's chorus will now join in singing "Redeemer of Israel." After the singing Elder O. Leslie Stone, Assistant to the Twelve, will address us.

The hymn, "Redeemer of Israel," was sung by the congregation.

President Lee

Elder O. Leslie Stone, Assistant to the Twelve, will now address us. He will be followed by Elder Rex D. Pinegar of the First Council of Seventy, who is currently serving as the president of the North Carolina-Virginia Mission.

Elder O. Leslie Stone

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

I am sure that as grandfathers and fathers, you rejoice with me in these children who have rendered the singing at this session of the conference. They are wonderful. Being a grandfather of 14, I have learned to love grandchildren.

I am reminded of the grandfather who got on the airplane. As he went down the aisle looking for a seat, he came to an attractive woman, and he said, "Are you a grandmother?" And she said, "Yes, I am." So he passed her up. He went on and repeated it again. Finally he asked a lady, "Are you a grandmother?" And she said, "No, I am not." He said, "May I sit down? I want to talk about my grandchildren."

In the few moments allotted to me, I would like to discuss the subject of faith, what it means, and how it affects us as individuals.

Prayers answered

When I made preparation for this talk, I had no idea that in our family we would be called on so soon to exercise great faith and prayers for the well-being of my sweet companion, who underwent major surgery just last Monday. Our faith and prayers were answered, and I want to thank all of my brethren here and all of my friends and others who joined with us in their faith and prayers for her recovery. She is listening from her hospital bed. I would like to take just a moment to tell her how much I love her. She has been a wonderful companion for 49 years this month. She has been an inspiration to me all the days that we have been married. She has been a fine mother and grandmother. We are looking forward to her return from the hospital.

Faith defined

The apostle Paul tells us: "... faith is the substance of things hoped for, and the evidence of things not seen." (Heb. 11:1.) Faith and belief have been used synonymously, and it is sometimes difficult for us to differentiate between the two. There is a difference.

We cannot have faith without belief, but we can believe without having faith. Belief is the foundation of faith. Faith is trusting in our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ.

Faith requires action

The scriptures contain many assurances of salvation to those who exercise faith and obey the commandments. One such assurance is found in Mark 16:16, which reads: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." Note that the Lord said: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." In other words, we must do more than believe—we must act. Faith is the motivating force that impels action.

In James 2:20 we read: "But wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead?"

Many believe that God will provide, but we cannot sit idly by and expect to get results. The Lord requires us to work for that which we seek. If we do our part and exercise faith, then we are promised he will help us in all our righteous undertakings. However, if we do not do our part, how can we expect the help of our Heavenly Father? Our late President David O. McKay said, "The rich rewards come only to the strenuous strugglers." In other words, to those who not only have faith but are willing to work and sacrifice in order to achieve their goals.

Gaining faith

Some may ask, "How do we gain faith?" The answer is that we gain faith just as we gain any other attribute. We must first establish a foundation, and then cultivate our thoughts and actions.

Joseph Smith said: "Faith comes by hearing the word of God, through the testimony of the servants of God. . . ." (Documentary History of the Church, vol. 3, p. 379.) Our very presence in meetings of this conference will tend to increase our faith because we come here with a desire to learn and to worship, to be motivated, and to be spiritually uplifted.

I testify to all within the sound of my voice that my attendance at general conferences over a period of many years, hearing the testimonies of our leaders here and in other places, has constantly increased my faith and helped me to build a strong testimony as to the truthfulness of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

Ways to build faith

Partaking of the sacrament administered by those having authority is a great aid to faith. The broken bread symbolizes the broken flesh of our Redeemer, and the holy cup represents his atoning blood. Reading the scriptures nurtures faith. Earnest prayer is essential to increasing one's faith. Prayer is vocalized faith.

Right living is the greatest of all faith builders. Sin is the greatest of all faith destroyers. Even small sins destroy faith. Vanity, pride, selfishness, greed, and hatred wound the fine spirit of God which nurtures and gives life to faith.

Ceaseless striving to find the bright light of living faith purifies the heart, strengthens the will, and develops sterling character.

The constant exercise of our faith by lofty thinking, prayer, devotion, and acts of righteousness is just as essential to spiritual health as physical exercise is to the health of the body. Like all priceless things, faith, if lost, is hard to regain. Eternal vigilance is the price of our faith. In order to retain our faith we must keep ourselves in tune with our Heavenly Father by living in accordance with the principles and ordinances of the gospel.

The faith of Moses

Moses exercised faith when he led the children of Israel out of bondage. The Lord instructed him what to do, and he had faith that it could be done. He gathered the Israelites and proceeded on the journey. You will remember that they were closely followed by the Egyptians, who wanted to prevent their leaving.

They reached the Red Sea, and the Israelites felt there was no chance of escape. The sea lay before them and the Egyptians behind. Some said: "... it had been better for us to serve the Egyptians, than that we should die in the wilderness."

Moses told them: "Fear ye not. . . the Lord shall fight for you and ye shall hold your peace."

The Lord, speaking to Moses, said:

"... lift thou up thy rod, and stretch out thine hand over the sea, and divide it: and the children of Israel shall go on dry ground through the midst of the sea.

"And Moses stretched out his hand over the sea; and the Lord caused the sea to go back by a strong east wind all that night, and made the sea dry land, and the waters were divided.

"And the children of Israel went into the midst of the sea upon the dry ground: and the waters were a wall unto them on their right hand, and on their left.

"And the Egyptians pursued, and went in after them to the midst of the sea, even all Pharaoh's horses, his chariots, and his horsemen." (Exod. 14:12-14, 16, 21-23.)

And then the Lord told Moses to stretch out his hand, and the water would come back and destroy the Egyptians. Moses again exercised his faith in God, and the Egyptians were destroyed.

Joseph Smith's demonstration of faith

The Prophet Joseph demonstrated great faith throughout his ministry. When he was only 14, he was reading the scriptures, and in the first chapter of James, fifth and sixth verses, he read:

"If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him.

"But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering. For he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed."

This passage of scripture rocked his very soul, for he felt that if ever a person needed wisdom in deciding what to do, it was he.

He believed; he had faith; his faith impelled action, and so he went into the woods to pray. His prayers were answered.

How different our lives would be if it had not been for the strong faith of the Prophet Joseph!

Brigham Young, a man of faith

Brigham Young was a man of great faith. He had faith in a living God. He had faith in every principle and doctrine revealed and taught by the Prophet Joseph. He had faith in himself.

He once made this statement:

"If the Latter-day Saints will walk up to their privileges, and exercise faith in the name of Jesus Christ, and live in the enjoyment of the fulness of the Holy Ghost constantly day by day, there is nothing on the face of the earth that they could ask for, that would not be given to them." (Journal of Discourses, vol. 11, p. 114.)

The Latter-day Saint pioneers certainly demonstrated great faith when they crossed the plains. They left their homes and most of their worldly belongings. Some of them left their families and friends to follow the Church leaders to an unknown land. The reason was obvious: they had great faith. They sought and found a place where they could exercise their faith, worship in peace, and serve the Lord.

Patience and faith

Sometimes we become impatient because the world is converted so slowly. In our impatience, we wonder why God does not reveal himself in majesty and glory, that the whole world might instantly be brought to their knees to worship him. But when we think intelligently about the matter, we understand that God's slow, patient way of converting the world is best. When people are required to believe largely upon the testimony of others, they are compelled to grip the threads of truth firmly and hold on until they can develop strong faith. God's plan makes it necessary for us to nurture, cultivate, and enlarge our faith. In this long, patient process of developing our faith, we acquire fortitude and strength of character. These sterling qualities are of eternal worth.

I have been thrilled with the faith manifested by many of our recently returned prisoners of war. Many have expressed their faith in God, their faith in their families, and their faith in this great country and its leaders.

It is indeed gratifying to hear these expressions of love, faith, and gratitude from these men who have suffered so much. This is in such contrast to those who have protested everything our leaders have done to bring about the release of our prisoners and to reunite them with their families. I am sure we all feel grateful that this has been accomplished, and join together in giving thanks to our Heavenly Father for these great blessings. Our prayers and love are extended to all of these men, that they might get reestablished in the stream of life; that they might have joy in their labors and continue to show love for their God, their families, their country, and their fellowmen.

Need for faith

There has never been a time in our lives, the history of the Church, or the history of our nation, when there existed a greater need for faith than today.

We need faith in the restored gospel of Jesus Christ, faith in our church leaders, faith in America, faith in ourselves.

I conclude by bearing my witness as to the truthfulness of the gospel of Jesus Christ. The greatest blessings we have received in our family have been when we have been most liberal with our time, our means, and our efforts in carrying out our responsibilities in the Church. These blessings are available to everyone if they will but have faith, accept the gospel of Jesus Christ, and then live in conformity with its teachings.

It is my humble prayer that each of us will increase our faith day by day; that we will keep the commandments; that we will love, honor, and sustain our prophet, President Harold B. Lee, and all who are closely associated with him in building the kingdom of God; that we will so live as to be true to the end and worthy to receive the greatest of all blessings, which is salvation, exaltation, and eternal life in the kingdom of our Heavenly Father.

In the name of Jesus Christ.
Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

Yes, our beloved Sister Stone, in your hospital room, the expressions of love of your husband, and his great sermon on faith prompts us to assure you that you have our love and our faith which we in this great conference extend to you at this time.

We shall now be pleased to hear from Elder Rex D. Pinegar of the First Council of Seventy, and he will be followed by Elder LeGrand Richards of the Council of the Twelve.

Elder Rex D. Pinegar

Of the First Council of the Seventy

My dear brothers and sisters: It is a great privilege to be here with you on this occasion. I bring you greetings from the greatest group of missionaries in the world. It is a marvelous thing to labor among them and to feel the strength of the Lord as he works through them and the Saints to bring the gospel of Jesus Christ to his children.

Sharing the gospel

The blessing of sharing the gospel message is overwhelming. I am often filled with the feelings I think Paul may have had when he wrote to the saints at Ephesus, regarding his call to serve the Lord:

"Whereof I was made a minister, according to the gift of the grace of God given unto me . . .

"Unto me, who am less than the least of all saints, is this grace given, that I should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ;

"According to the eternal purpose which he purposed in Christ Jesus, our Lord:

"In whom we have boldness and access with confidence by the faith of him.

"For this cause I bow my knees unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ." (Eph. 3:7-8, 11-12, 14.)

This same feeling of humble gratitude seems to fill the hearts of every member and missionary who becomes involved in sharing the gospel. As we see the peace and assurance that come to those who receive the gospel, we become more conscious of the great obligation and opportunity we have to share the restored gospel of Jesus Christ with our friends and neighbors, our brothers and sisters.

A sacred responsibility

The Lord has spoken clearly regarding this sacred responsibility and the condemnation which rests upon members of his church should we fail to keep this commandment. On September 23, 1832, having given commandment unto the Twelve concerning the preaching of the gospel, the Lord then stated:

"And this revelation unto you, and commandment, is in force from this very hour upon all the world, and the gospel is unto all who have not received it.

"But, verily I say unto all those to whom the kingdom has been given—from you it must be preached unto them. . . ." (D&C 84:75-76.)

Joseph Smith has said that the greatest and most important duty we have is to teach others the gospel. He declared the same thing about doing the work for the dead. Each of these activities makes available to others the blessings of membership in the kingdom of God.

Fulfilling this sacred assignment to "warn our neighbors" brings unspeakable joys to both the receiver and the giver of the gift. Many families throughout the Church are experiencing the joys of doing this most important work. Not only are they "laying up in store that they perish not," but they are helping our nonmember brothers and sisters to become eligible for these same blessings. They are finding that missionary work is not a task, but a glorious opportunity to assist the Lord in his greatest work—saving the souls of men.

The Jones family

There are many ways one may help others find the Lord. The Jones family, in Raleigh, North Carolina, assisted the Lord by preparing a copy of the Book of Mormon with their family picture and testimony inside the front cover. They then invited the missionaries to their home to meet some close friends, the Browns. The next day the missionaries went to the Browns and presented to them this copy of the Book of Mormon as a gift from the Jones family. The Browns were so appreciative of the gift that they agreed to read, ponder, and pray about this marvelous book of scripture. They did. The elders continued to teach them. The Jones family continued to fellowship them. Today the entire Brown family enjoys church membership.

Virginia branch

Members in a small Virginia branch recently asked for missionaries to labor with them in spreading the gospel in that area. They felt they could arrange at least five meetings per week for the missionaries with interested friends and neighbors. The members have found many more than they had supposed waiting to hear their message. For the past three months the elders have held from four to eight meetings per day. There have been so many meetings that one of the missionaries wrote on the bottom of his weekly report: "Dear President: I am sorry. We have been so busy teaching, we haven't had time to tract; but don't worry, we'll do better next week!"

These missionaries had spent 65 hours that week teaching the message of the gospel of Jesus Christ to friends the members had found. This small branch has made tremendous growth in attendance and home teaching. Several persons who had been absent from church meetings for some time are now active. Through member participation, missionary work has become the solution to several of their problems.

Captive audience

There is a dentist who shares the gospel at every opportunity—to the "captive audience" in his chair, at the service station where he takes his car, at the post office, even at his neighbor's home as he seeks advice in running his farm—just everywhere. He says he has read the Book of Mormon until he feels he understands the love and peace the sons of Mosiah felt when they went to preach to the Lamanites. And, I believe, he has the same zeal they had.

Through his efforts during the past year, missionaries have been introduced to hundreds of people and have brought four families into the Church. This fine member and his home teaching companion diligently go before the elders and set up meetings. He feels the people respond more readily to him because he is a permanent resident in the area. Again, member-missionary oneness has brought the light and peace of the gospel of Christ into the lives of those seeking the truth.

Correspondence with friend

Another member, many miles away, shared the gospel in correspondence to a friend in Richmond, Virginia. A wonderful experience followed. Two missionaries were tracting one day in Richmond. One had been ill; the other felt uneasy as they walked the streets, knowing that his companion was not at his best. Both desired to persevere, however.

After two hours of having little success, they knocked on a door and introduced themselves as missionaries with The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. "Oh, yes," the woman replied, "Ann Smith sent you." The elders looked at each other, shook their heads, then told her they were just knocking at the doors in the neighborhood and that no person in particular had sent them to her. She invited them in; the husband and other family members were present in the room.

She then told the missionaries something that caused them to marvel. She said, "Just an hour or two ago I finished reading a letter that I had received today from my dearest friend who lives in California. A year ago her husband and she were converted to The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and were recently married in the temple. When we last heard, their marriage was falling apart, and she confided in me the sad situation. But today I received this ten-page letter telling me all about your church and the marvelous change it has made in their lives."

She allowed the missionaries to read the contents of that letter, which covered Relief Society, Primary, Sunday School, MIA, and much, much more. Then they read a short note at the bottom, which said, "I will be sending two missionaries to your house to teach you more about the Church."

After hearing the elders' message, she said, with tears streaming down her face, "I believe the Lord sent you to us."

When members and missionaries work faithfully together, they become as one and the Lord can use them to achieve his purposes among his children. The Lord had united as one the efforts of this faithful member and these diligent missionaries, to bring this family instruction which, if followed, will bring them joy and peace beyond measure and lead them back into the presence of our Heavenly Father.

Something better

Today we live in a time of trouble and turmoil. Many people are disturbed, discouraged, confused, and looking for something better. The Lord has provided that "something better" in the gospel of Jesus Christ. He has shown his love and concern for us in our time by appearing to a prophet, by revealing the Book of Mormon, and by restoring his church with his authority and power. We have the truth, the authority and power. Now it is our individual and family responsibility and our joy to share these blessings with others.

One way

President Joseph Fielding Smith, in addressing the British area conference of the Church, said:

"There is only one plan of salvation. There is only one way for men to gain a celestial inheritance of eternal glory, and that is to forsake the world, have faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, enter his kingdom through the door of baptism, receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, and then keep his commandments.

"We respect our Father's other children of all sects, parties, and denominations, and have no desire except to see them receive the added light and knowledge that has come to us by revelation, and to become with us inheritors of the great blessings of the restoration of the gospel.

"But we have the plan of salvation; we administer the gospel; and the gospel is the sole hope of the world, the one way that will bring peace on earth and right the wrongs that exist in all nations." ("To the Saints in Great Britain," ENSIGN, September 1971, pp. 3-4.)

Charge to share

Brothers and sisters, we have the charge to share "the unsearchable riches" of Christ with all of Heavenly Father's children. We are blessed to have the promise of Ephraim to bring the blessings of the gospel to them. May we keep the commandment to "preach the gospel unto them" who have not yet received the kingdom, by working as one in the Lord's great missionary effort.

Each of us can give a Book of Mormon to a friend or business associate, each can invite someone to his home to be introduced to our Heavenly Father, each can write a letter to someone else, sharing testimony of these revealed truths and extending an invitation to them to receive the Lord's plan. Yes, as you build your desire to be a missionary for the Lord, he will open up the way.

Paul's promise

We invite all men everywhere to join with us that we might receive the blessing described by Paul when he wrote that the Lord "would grant you, according to the riches of his glory, to be strengthened with might by his Spirit in the inner man;

"That Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, being rooted and grounded in love,

"May be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height;

"And to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fulness of God.

"Now unto him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us,

"Unto him be glory in the church by Christ Jesus throughout all ages, world without end. . . ." (Eph. 3:16-21.)

I solemnly declare my witness to you that Jesus is the Christ, that this is his church, and that President Harold B. Lee is his anointed prophet and seer today, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

Isn't it wonderful to get a breath of freshness from the mission field. Thank you, President Pinegar.

Elder LeGrand Richards of the Council of the Twelve will be our concluding speaker.

Elder LeGrand Richards

Of the Council of the Twelve

Having spent nearly ten years in the mission field, I can appreciate very much the spirit that Brother Pinegar brings to us from the mission field. To me, missionary work is the greatest thing in all the world. I have the privilege nearly every week of talking to the new groups of missionaries before they leave for their missions. My assignment has been to discuss the use and the value of the holy scriptures.

The holy scriptures

"Just think," I say, "what would we know about our Father in heaven and his great love for us in giving us his Only Begotten Son, and his great atoning sacrifice for us, and why he created this earth, and why we are here, where we are going, and how to get there—if we didn't have the holy scriptures?" I thank the Lord for the information that has come to us through the restoration of the gospel to help us to understand the holy scriptures.

Now, we don't only live in the past, by what is in the scriptures that has already transpired, for Isaiah said the Lord hath declared "the end from the beginning." (See Isa. 46: 10.) It is all there in the holy scriptures when we know how to understand it. He said, "The grass withereth, the flower fadeth: but the word of our God shall stand forever." (Isa. 40:8.)

Prophecy of second coming

I think of the words of the Lord to the prophet Malachi when he said: "Behold, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me: and the Lord, whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to his temple. . . . But who may abide the day of his coming? . . . for he is like a refiner's fire, and like fullers' soap." (Mal. 3:1-2.)

Obviously that had no reference to his first coming. He did not come suddenly to his temple. All men could abide the day of his coming. He did not come cleansing and purifying as a refiner's fire and fullers' soap, but we are told that when he shall come in the latter days, the wicked shall cry out, and "then shall they begin to say to the mountains, Fall on us; and to the hills, Cover us." (Luke 23:30.)

If the Lord were to send a messenger to prepare the way for his coming, that messenger could be none other than a prophet. You remember Amos said, "Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets." (Amos 3:7.) When John the Baptist was sent to prepare the way for the Savior in the meridian of time, the Savior bore testimony that there was no greater prophet in Israel than John the Baptist. (See Luke 7:28.)

Now, it being true that the Lord would send a messenger in these latter days to prepare for the second coming of the Savior, just as he did at his first coming, it is important that we learn what that messenger has to say to the world. I think it is a wonderful thing that the Lord has indicated the end from the beginning. I would just like to refer to a few of the prophecies that relate to the day in which we live.

John the Revelator

For instance, when John was banished upon the Isle of Patmos, the angel of the Lord said, "Come up hither, and I will shew thee things which must be hereafter." (Rev. 4:1.) This was 30 years after the crucifixion of the Savior. He saw the power that would be given to Satan to make war with the saints (and the saints were the followers of Jesus) and to overcome them and to rule over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations (see Rev. 13:7), showing a complete apostasy from the original church.

But the Lord didn't leave it at that. This same angel showed John another angel flying in the midst of heaven, "having the everlasting gospel [and that is the only gospel that can save men] to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people." (Rev. 14:6.) That isn't the gospel of men. That is the gospel of Jesus Christ that has been restored.

Now why do you suppose that that passage of scripture is in the Bible, if we are not to look for an angel coming with the everlasting gospel to be preached to them that dwell upon the earth, to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people? That doesn't leave anybody out, and that is why the Lord had to send his messenger so that this work could be restored to the earth.

Worship of true God

Now John did not only see that the angel would bring the everlasting gospel, but he would call men back to the worship of the true and the living God "that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters." (Rev. 14:7.) And if you will just stop to think, at the time that Joseph Smith had that marvelous vision of the Father and the Son, he saw that they were two glorified personages, that they were not three in one, without body, parts, or passions. There wasn't a church in the world at that time, so far as we know, that was worshipping the true and the living God; so when the angel was to come with the everlasting gospel, he was also to bring men back to the worship of the true and living God who made the heavens and the earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters.

In fact, at that time the whole Christian world believed in a God without body, parts, or passions. That means he had no eyes; he couldn't see. He had no ears; he couldn't hear. He had no voice; he couldn't speak. How could they believe in such a god as that?

Moses knew that this condition would prevail, because when he went to lead the children of Israel into the promised land, he told them that they would not remain there long, but that they would be scattered among the nations, and that they would "serve gods, the work of men's hands [that is, man's doing], . . . which neither see, nor hear, nor, eat, nor smell." (Deut. 4:28.)

Seeking after God

And then Moses said that in the latter days (and we live in the latter days), if Israel would seek after God, they would surely find him. (See Deut. 4:29.) The Prophet Joseph sought after him, and he found him.

Why do you think that should be in the Bible if it should not happen? And when we announce that it has happened in our day, you would think that men would want to know more about it. When the apostles asked Jesus for the sign of his second coming and the end of the world, he told them of the wars and pestilence and earthquakes and famine, and we read a lot about them. Then he said, "And this gospel of the kingdom [the gospel that he taught] shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." (Matt. 24:14.)

Joy in missionary service

If we expect to see him come again, we have to look for the preaching of that very same gospel, and that is the message of every Mormon elder who goes out into the world to bear testimony of the truth. I tell the missionaries, "If you can bring to people an understanding and a faith to believe in this message, it will be worth more than if you were to give them a million dollars."

I heard a missionary reporting his mission up in Oregon some years ago. He himself was a convert to the Church, and he came down with his fist on the pulpit and said he wouldn't take a check for a million dollars for the experience of his mission, to go out and share with the world these marvelous truths.

I sat back of him, and I asked myself: Would you take a check for a million dollars for your first mission over in the little land of Holland? I began counting the families whom I had been instrumental in bringing into the Church, who have come to Zion and sent their boys and girls on missions. What kind of a man would I be if I were to sell them out of the Church for a million dollars? I could not do that for all the money in this world. There is nothing else, no riches, that can compare with the joy and the happiness that come from this great missionary program of the Church.

Isaiah's prophecy

Then let us consider some other prophecies. For example, the Lord said through Isaiah:

"Forasmuch as this people draw near me with their mouth, and with their lips do honour me, but have removed their heart far from me, and their fear toward me is taught by the precept of men:

"Therefore, behold, I will proceed to do a marvellous work among this people, even a marvellous work and a wonder: for the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid." (Isa. 29:13-14.)

Book of Mormon prophecy

There are so many marvelous things that have happened in the restoration of the gospel. Take the Book of Mormon, for example. Why, that is a miracle that no man can account for, if he will read it and study it. The greatest criticism of that book has come from those who have never read it. Yet it is full of marvelous truths that no man could have written with the knowledge that was available at the time that book was published.

The Book of Mormon tells us that when Lehi was in the desert, he told his son Joseph that the Lord had promised Joseph who was sold into Egypt that he would raise up a prophet in the latter days from his loins like unto Moses; that his name would be Joseph, his father's name would be Joseph, and that he should bring forth his word. (See 2 Ne. 3:6, 9, 15.) That obviously was the Prophet Joseph Smith. He brought us the Book of Mormon. He brought us the Doctrine and Covenants. He brought us the Pearl of Great Price and many other writings.

Then the Lord said: "... unto him will I give power to bring forth my word . . . and not to the bringing forth my word only, . . . but to the convincing them of my word, which shall have already gone forth among them." (2 Ne. 3:11.) In other words, he would bring them to a true understanding of the Bible that had gone forth among them.

Then he said, "[He] shall bring my people unto salvation." (2 Ne. 3:15.) Why? Because he had the holy priesthood restored so that he could administer the saving ordinances of the gospel. And then the Lord adds, "And I will make him great in mine eyes." (2 Ne. 3:8.) Whatever the world may think of the prophet of this dispensation, the Lord knew he would be great, for he had him in waiting for three thousand years when he promised Joseph that out of his loins he would raise up a prophet in our day.

I would like to mention an experience to indicate what I think he meant when he said, "... unto him will I give power to bring forth my word ... and not to the bringing forth my word only, ... but to the convincing them of my word, which shall have already gone forth among them."

Talk to Bible class

While I was on my first mission in Holland, I was invited to speak to a Bible class of businessmen in The Hague. They met every week, holding a Bible class. We met in the home of a prominent furniture dealer; the only woman there was the daughter of the man of the house.

They invited me to speak for an hour and a half and explain our doctrine of universal salvation, which includes the work for the dead. I gave them chapter and verse and let them read these passages from their own Bibles so they would believe more completely, as they seemed to think we have a different Bible. Then I closed my Bible and laid it on the table, folded my arms, and waited for their comments.

The first comment came from the daughter of the man of the house. She said, "Father, I just can't understand it. I have never attended one of these Bible classes in my life that you haven't had the last word to say on everything, and tonight you haven't said a word."

The father shook his head and said, "My daughter, there isn't anything to say." He said, "This man has been teaching us things we have never heard of, and has been teaching them to us out of our own Bibles."

That is what the Lord meant when he said that the prophet he would raise up would not only bring forth his word, but would bring men to the convincing of his word that had already gone forth among them.

Sermon on eternal marriage

I preached a sermon down in Quitman, Georgia, on the eternal duration of the marriage covenant and the family unit. At the end of the meeting I stood at the door, and a man came up and introduced himself as a minister of the gospel. Since I had quoted what the major churches had to say about that principle, and not one of them believed in the eternal duration of the marriage covenant and the family unit, I said to this minister: "Did I misquote you tonight?"

"No, Mr. Richards, but it is just like you say, we don't believe all the things our churches teach."

I said, "You don't believe them either." Then I said, "Why don't you go back and teach your people the truth. They will take it from you, but they are not ready to take it from the Mormon elders yet."

He said, "I will see you again," and that was all I could get out of him that night.

The next time I went there, about four months later, he was standing out in front of the church. We shook hands. I said, "I would certainly be interested to know what you thought of my last sermon here."

He said, "Mr. Richards, I have been thinking about it ever since. I believe every word you said, only I would like to have heard the rest of it."

Here was a man occupying a pulpit in his own church who believed every word I said, and yet he couldn't teach it to his people.

Attendance at church convention

I am going to tell you one more experience. A few years ago two of the major churches on the west coast, including California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Utah, and Nevada, were holding a convention here in Salt Lake. Their leader wrote a letter to President McKay and asked if he would send one of the General Authorities to attend their convention and talk for two hours in the morning session and tell them the story of Mormonism, and then remain as their guest for lunch, and then remain for an hour and a half in the afternoon and let them ask questions. I got the assignment—and I was glad to get it! I tell the missionaries that you never need to argue with anybody when you learn how to tell our story.

Some of these ministers wanted to get away on earlier planes up to the Northwest, so they set the luncheon back a half an hour, and they gave me two and a half hours in that morning meeting. I explained the restoration of the gospel, the difference between a restoration and a reformation, and at the conclusion of my talk I only got one question out of all these ministers and church leaders.

The man in charge said, "Mr. Richards, you have told us that you believe that God is a personal God."

I said, "That is right."

He said, "We have heard it said that you believe that God has a wife. Would you explain that to us?"

I think he thought he had me in trouble, and so rather facetiously I said, "I don't see how in the world he could have a son without a wife, do you?"

And they all began to titter. I didn't have any more trouble with that question.

The Lord's blueprint

At the close of my remarks, I told them that while I was the Presiding Bishop of the Church, we had charge of the building program. We had the plans prepared for the Los Angeles Temple. One day we took them and showed them to the First Presidency, but we didn't have the electrical or plumbing plans completed. We had 84 pages about 4 feet long and 2½ feet wide, and I imagine you have all seen blueprints. I said, "Now you could take those blueprints and try to fit them to every building in this world, but there is only one building they will fit, and that is the Mormon temple down in Los Angeles." Then I said, "Of course you can find buildings that have material in them such as cement, lumber, electrical wiring, plumbing, and so forth, but you can't find any building that they will fit."

Then I held up the Bible. I said, "Here is the Lord's blueprint. Isaiah said the Lord had declared the end from the beginning. It is all here. Now," I said, "you could take this, the Lord's blueprint, and try to fit it to every church in this world, but there is only one church that it will fit, and that is The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Now," I said, "I will proceed to illustrate to you what I mean."

Meaning of Biblical passages

I said that in Canon Frederick William Farrar's work Life of Christ (Cassell, 1902), he said there were two passages in the New Testament for which he could find no excuse. The first is John 10:16, where Jesus said, "And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd."

I said, "Do any of you men know why that is in the Bible? Do any of you know any church in the world that does know why it is in the Bible? Well, we know all about it." And then I explained the promise to Joseph of a new land in the utmost bounds of the everlasting hills, and in describing that land, Moses uses the word precious five times in just a few verses. (See Deut. 33:13-16.)

I said, "Do any of you know where that land of Joseph is?" Then I explained that it was the land of America, and that Jesus visited his people here in America, and he told them that they were the other sheep of whom he spoke to his disciples. (See 2 Ne. 15:21.) He said that not at any time did the Father command him to tell his disciples who the other sheep were, only that he had other sheep. (See 3 Ne. 15:15-17.)

The other passage they couldn't understand was the one where Paul said, "Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? why are they then baptized for the dead?" (1 Cor. 15:29.) I said, "Do any of you know why that is in the Bible? Do any of you know any church in the world that does know why it is in the Bible?" Then I explained this doctrine to them.

I quoted to them the words of Peter following the day of Pentecost, when he said to those who had put to death the Christ, "And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you: Whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." (Acts 3:20-21.)

A restitution

That is not a reformation; that is a restitution. I said, "That is what I have been telling you here for two hours and a half, and you can't look for the coming of the Savior as was promised by Peter and the prophets until there has been a restitution, and not a reformation."

When I concluded, the man in charge said, "Mr. Richards, this has been one of the most interesting experiences of my entire life." That is what Isaiah meant when he said, ". . . the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid." (Isa. 29:14.)

I bear you my witness that there isn't a man or a woman in this world who really loves the Lord with all their heart who wouldn't join this church if they would just take time to find out what it is, for I know that it is God's eternal truth. He has sent his messenger to prepare the way for his coming. I pray God to bless us and help us all to be missionaries. I leave you my blessing in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

How can anybody doubt after they have heard LeGrand Richards! Thank you, and the Lord preserve him and his kind.

Elder LeGrand Richards of the Council of the Twelve has been our concluding speaker.

We remind the brethren of the General Priesthood Meeting which will convene here in the Tabernacle this evening at 7 o'clock.

The Sunday morning session will be broadcast by many radio and television stations in the Western United States, and by short-wave radio to England, Europe, Mexico, South America, Central America, Africa, and parts of Asia.

The nationwide CBS Radio Tabernacle Choir Broadcast will be from 9:30 to 10:00 a.m. Those desiring to attend this broadcast must be in their seats no later than 9:15 a.m.

We are grateful to the children of this Primary Chorus for their rendering of the inspiring music we have heard here today. Thank you lovely children for your presence at this session this afternoon. We haven't heard any noise back of us. We think you have been listening. We believe the brethren have been talking to you too.

The Children's Chorus, with Sister Pat Maughan conducting and Roy M. Darley at the organ, will now sing, "Where Love Is."

The benediction will then be offered by Elder G. Carlos Smith, former president of the Southeast Asia Mission and now a Regional Representative of the Twelve.

The Children's Chorus sang the number, "Where Love Is."

The benediction was offered by Elder G. Carlos Smith, Regional Representative of the Twelve.

The general sessions were then adjourned until Sunday morning at 10 o'clock.

GENERAL PRIESTHOOD MEETING

FIFTH SESSION

The General Priesthood Meeting of the Church convened at 7 o'clock p.m., Saturday, April 7, 1973, with President Harold B. Lee presiding and conducting.

The Aaronic Priesthood Chorus of the Oquirrh and Tooele Regions furnished the choral music for this session. Jerold Ottley served as the conductor, and Robert Cundick was at the organ.

President Lee made the following opening statement:

President Harold B. Lee

Brethren, we are assembled in this the General Priesthood Session of the 143rd Annual Conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

These services are being relayed by closed circuit transmission and will reach members of the priesthood gathered in the Assembly Hall and in approximately 800 other separate locations from coast to coast and in Canada. It is estimated that approximately 180,000 will participate in this meeting by direct wire.

We extend our greetings and blessings to all the priesthood members assembled here in the Tabernacle and in various buildings throughout the United States and Canada.

The singing during this session will be furnished by the Aaronic Priesthood Chorus of the Oquirrh and Tooele Regions with Jerold Ottley conducting and Robert Cundick at the organ.

We shall begin this service by the chorus singing "Joseph Smith's First Prayer."

Following the singing, Elder Milton R. Hunter of the First Council of Seventy will offer the invocation.

"Joseph Smith's First Prayer" was sung by the Aaronic Priesthood Chorus.

Elder Milton R. Hunter of the First Council of Seventy offered the opening prayer.

President Lee

The Aaronic Priesthood Chorus will now favor us with "I Know That My Redeemer Lives."

The Aaronic Priesthood Chorus sang "I Know That My Redeemer Lives."

President Lee

Bishop Victor L. Brown, Presiding Bishop of the Church, will be our first speaker this evening.

Bishop Brown will be followed by Elder Robert L. Backman.

Bishop Victor L. Brown

Presiding Bishop

This is a wonderful sight, brethren, to see so many priesthood holders gathered in one hall, and then to recognize so many gathered throughout the various other chapels and buildings. I am grateful to be with you tonight and to participate in this priesthood meeting.

New MIA organizations

On November 9, 1972, the First Presidency announced the organization of the Melchizedek Priesthood MIA and the Aaronic Priesthood MIA. This decision by the First Presidency and the Council of the Twelve will have great impact on the lives of the members of the Church in years to come. President Lee referred to it as potentially one of the most significant changes in the Church in our lifetime. Having been involved in the development of the plan, I can testify to you that it came through inspiration from the Lord.

In great measure it fulfills the prophecy of President Joseph F. Smith, who said, "We expect to see the day, if we live long enough (and if some of us don't live long enough to see it, there are others who will), when every council of the Priesthood in The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will understand its duty, will assume its own responsibility, . . . to the uttermost, according to the intelligence and ability possessed by it. When that day shall come, there will not be so much necessity for work that is now being done by the auxiliary organizations, because it will be done by the regular quorums of the Priesthood. The Lord designed and comprehended it from the beginning, and He has made provision in the Church whereby every need may be met and satisfied through the regular organizations of the Priesthood." (Conference Report, April 1906, p. 3.)

Aaronic Priesthood MIA

In the Lord's eyes the basic responsibility for our young people first rests jointly with parents and with the youth themselves. The Church and its organizations exist to aid parents in their sacred callings. It is in this light that we discuss the Aaronic Priesthood MIA this evening. With this change in organization, the Presiding Bishopric as the presidency of the Aaronic Priesthood, assisted by the Aaronic Priesthood MIA Young Men's and Young Women's presidencies and boards, became responsible on the general level for supporting the parents of youth ages 12 to 18. The MIA under this reorganization becomes part of the priesthood and is no longer an auxiliary.

Until tonight, this change has been limited to the general level of the Church. It is my great honor and privilege now to introduce this change, as far as the Aaronic Priesthood MIA is concerned, to the stakes, missions, wards, and branches of the Church. What I shall tell you now has the approval and support of the First Presidency, the Quorum of the Twelve, and all of the General Authorities.

Ward organization

Let us begin with the ward organization. The bishopric is the presidency of the Aaronic Priesthood. This now means the total priesthood responsibility for Aaronic Priesthood MIA in the ward. The bishopric is directly responsible for all young men and women between the ages of 12 and 18. The bishop is president of the priests quorum and responsible for all priest-age boys and Laurel-age girls. One counselor is responsible for all teacher-age boys and Mia Maid-age girls; the other counselor, for the deacon-age boys and Beehive-age girls.

The bishopric will call and set apart four adult male leaders. One will be the president of the Aaronic Priesthood MIA Young Men. He will coordinate all activities of the adult youth leaders in the above three age groups under the direction of the bishopric. He will in large measure assume the responsibilities formerly held by the general secretary-Aaronic Priesthood youth. The other three will be advisers to these specific age groups and will be responsible for all their activities and functions. For instance, the deacons' adviser will teach the deacons quorum in priesthood meeting, be the Scoutmaster, and be involved in the activities of all the 12-through 13-year-old boys. The other two advisers will have the same responsibilities for their age groups.

The bishopric will likewise call four adult women leaders. One will be set apart as the president of the Aaronic Priesthood MIA Young Women. The other three will be set apart as advisers to the three age groups, namely, Laurels, Mia Maids, and Beehive girls, just as their counterparts are the advisers to the young men. The Aaronic Priesthood MIA Young Women's president will then coordinate all activities for the young women under the direct supervision of the bishopric, as does her counterpart for the young men.

Service and activity committee

A service and activity committee composed of not more than three men and/or women will be called to function under the direction of both presidents to provide leadership in these areas with special emphasis on service. There is a great desire in the hearts of our young people to be of service to their fellowmen—service such as helping a widow with her yard, taking a family home evening program to an elderly shut-in, helping the poor, the sick, the handicapped, or those who are in emotional distress. This limited committee will also be responsible for the activity projects, such as dance, drama, sports, athletics, etc. These leaders will not be known as drama director, dance director, etc., but will function on a broad base.

When the bishopric and Aaronic Priesthood MIA presidents and youth leaders request assistance in service and activity areas, this committee or its members individually will assume the responsibility. The committee will have available to them specialists in various areas of activity on a temporary basis. They may be adults or youth. For instance, a drama night will be directed by a member of the activity committee assisted by a specialist whom the bishop calls for that special project only.

The two presidents of the Aaronic Priesthood MIA will each have a secretary to complete the ward organization.

Youth committee

The bishop's youth committee, composed of quorum and class officers, will continue to function but with greater emphasis placed on leadership training for the youth. Young quorum and class presidencies have much to offer if helped to learn and allowed to perform in their callings. It is of the utmost urgency that every bishop in the Church organize his bishop's youth committee and help them to function effectively in this new organization. Their involvement and contribution are of great importance to this realignment of responsibilities.

The bishopric now has more direct priesthood responsibility for all youth of the ward between 12 and 18 than ever before. This responsibility is in partnership with parents, and it is essential that the energy and talent of youth themselves be used.

This modified organization is primarily ward oriented.

Stake organization

In many aspects the stake organization parallels that of the ward. The stake presidency is the presidency of the Melchizedek and Aaronic priesthoods of the stake. One member of the stake presidency will be appointed chairman of the Aaronic Priesthood MIA of the stake. He will supervise matters involving the youth between 12 and 18 in the stake under the overall direction of the stake presidency.

Four high councilors will serve under his supervision. One will be designated as the adviser to the Aaronic Priesthood MIA of the stake. This includes young men and young women. There are no Aaronic Priesthood MIA presidents on the stake level. This high councilor will see that the entire youth program of the stake functions properly, of course, reporting to the chairman. A second high councilor adviser will be responsible for the young men of priest age, another of teacher age, and the third of deacon age. They will also work with the advisers of the young women of the same age group.

The stake president will call four adult women advisers. One will be set apart as the adviser to the Aaronic Priesthood MIA Young Women of the stake. Another will be the adviser to Laurel-age girls, another to the Mia Maid-age girls, and the fourth the Beehive-age girls. To assist these leaders, there will be an assistant stake clerk for the young men and a young women's secretary.

As on the ward level, a service and activity committee of not more than three adults, men and/or women, will be called. Again, they will not be known as dance or drama directors, etc. They will function under the supervision of the advisers to the Aaronic Priesthood MIA. As needed, they will have specialists available to them on a temporary basis to perform a stake service or activity for a single project. These may be adults or youth. A stake youth committee will be formed as needed to further involve the young people themselves.

Regional activity

Regional activity for these ages is to be deemphasized. If it seems appropriate to have regional activities, the service will be provided through temporary appointments from the Quorum of the Twelve or, in the case of athletics, through the Melchizedek Priesthood MIA regional organization.

These changes have been presented to all Regional Representatives of the Twelve. Bishops and stake presidents will receive more detailed information in the near future, including job descriptions of each position. This organization is to provide experiences that focus on the relationship that youth have with the Savior.

Objectives listed

In summary, may I list some of the objectives of these changes:

1. Aaronic Priesthood MIA actually is now priesthood oriented.

2. Our interest is centered on each individual youth, not on programs alone. We must provide activities for those who do not presently come to church as well as for those who do.

3. Direct involvement of young people themselves is of the utmost importance.

4. There will be greater accountability for our stewardship as leaders.

5. All that is done is intended to strengthen the family.

6. Finally, because of the emphasis on people rather than programs, local leaders, both youth and adult, will have the opportunity to determine in great measure the appropriate activities for their young people.

Implementation of program

Inasmuch as these modifications will be reviewed in detail at June Conference, it is essential that the new stake Aaronic Priesthood MIA organization be implemented as soon as possible so that the proper stake officers will come to conference. We realize there will be limitations of distance as far as attendance at June Conference is concerned, but would hope that all stakes throughout the Church would implement the new organization as soon as possible. Sufficient information will come through the mail for this to be accomplished. Stake leaders will then train ward officers so that the entire program on both the stake and ward levels will be functioning by September 1 of this year. Until instructions come after June Conference, the ward organization and program should continue as at present.

You will be interested to know that June Conference is not an auxiliary conference but will be a priesthood conference. The First Presidency will preside and conduct the opening and closing sessions of the conference. President Harold B. Lee will give the keynote address.

Never has the Lord blessed the earth with a finer generation of youth, nor has there ever been a time when Satan has been more active in influencing the lives of our people. I pray the stake presidencies, bishoprics, and all leaders of youth will sense the urgency of the needs and the lateness of the hour, that we may be magnified and made equal to our responsibilities, that through our love of youth and dedicated leadership, all young men and women in our stakes, wards, and branches may taste the sweetness of the gospel of Jesus Christ and draw close to him in this life so they will be worthy to be with him in the life to come. In the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

We will next hear from Elder Robert L. Backman, President of the Aaronic Priesthood YMMIA.

Elder Robert L. Backman

President, Aaronic Priesthood MIA

My beloved brethren: Last Saturday I was honored to speak to several hundred young men and women graduating seminary students from the high schools in Utah Valley. Under the leadership of a council of their own peers, they had planned a full day's activity, which included visits to Welfare Square and the Beehive House, a talent assembly, a devotional and testimony meeting, and a lovely dance. To my knowledge, the only adult who took active part was the area supervisor who introduced me. The rest of the adults present were there to give silent support and, by evening, were feeling their age after sharing a day of youthful vitality and enthusiastic activity.

Testimonies of youth

I wish every adult leader in the Church could have been in attendance to share the spirit of that testimony meeting. With deep emotion, one lovely girl spoke of her reaction when it was discovered that her father had cancer. How she prayed and prayed that he be healed, then came to the realization that her prayers were selfish—that our loving Father in heaven was in control and that she should submit to his will. She evidenced a very mature outlook on life, something that some of us as adults never experience in a lifetime of living.

A handsome young man, obviously a football player, told of how his testimony had been strengthened through association with fine, faithful friends, most of them a year older than he. Graduating from high school and soon to be separated from one another, they had a "last fling" together, a visit to the lovely grounds of the Provo Temple. Then they went to a quiet spot where in the late evening hours 12 future leaders of the Church bore their testimonies of the divinity of the gospel and expressed their love for one another.

I have never heard so many expressions of love for friends and adult leaders who had influenced their lives.

The meeting was closed with "I Know That My Redeemer Lives." I have never heard those beautiful lyrics sung with more genuine feeling. Tears fell freely as those great young people sang from their hearts.

A royal generation

I mention their experience because it is so typical of many other experiences I have enjoyed among this royal generation of youth. As Bishop Brown has stated, there has never been a finer generation. I have great confidence that the kingdom of God will be in capable hands as they assume their future roles of leadership, and I am equally confident that they now are capable of assuming much more responsibility for their own welfare than we have been willing to give them.

With the new direction given to the Aaronic Priesthood MIA program, it now becomes our responsibility as adult leaders to give our youth the opportunity to grow in their capacity to lead, to serve, and to love.

Opportunities for leadership

What a challenge adult leaders have in helping youth, particularly youth leaders, to learn their duty and perform to their fullest capacity while still leaving room for their own initiative and challenge as they anxiously engage in a good cause, doing many things of their own free will.

The Church leadership of the future will be built upon the foundation that is laid today. If youth are denied opportunities to test their own strength, then the leadership foundation will be weak and unready. Equally as serious, however, is thrusting unprepared youth leaders into situations in which they fail because the demands of that situation exceed their experience and capacity. Discouragement and doubt will result. The balance between enough responsibility and too much calls for fasting, prayer, and diligent service by youth and adult leadership as they labor together to build the kingdom. The Aaronic Priesthood MIA organization as introduced by Bishop Brown provides a setting where such a fine balance may be struck. With the bishopric of the ward—the presidency of the Aaronic Priesthood—in direct charge, the bishop's youth committee, composed of the priests group leader, the Aaronic Priesthood quorum presidents, the girl class presidents, and the adult presidents of the Aaronic Priesthood MIA, becomes a forum where youth leaders can communicate with the bishopric. They can be totally involved in selecting their activities and be tested and taught great leadership principles without being smothered by too many adult leaders. Yet, this youth committee expands to the ward Aaronic Priesthood council with the addition of the adult leaders of the age groups, who can temper unbridled enthusiasm and zeal with their experience and practicality, exercising some degree of control without dominating the youth councils.

Bishops, an effective youth committee is vital to the success of your Aaronic Priesthood program. It may surprise you what these bright young people will come up with in the way of individual and group service projects and meaningful activities or suggestions for implementing their program.

Youth service projects

If you have not discovered it yet, you will. Our young men and women have a deep sense of purpose and a keen appreciation for our social needs. They want to be of service; they want to be useful; they want to make this a better world in which to live. Witness the joy of the youth who gathered by the hundreds to clean ditches and gather the debris left by the recent floods in southern Arizona, or those who cleaned up an entire Utah community in a day of service.

An active youth committee in Cache Valley made it their project to take care of the aged and shut-ins. Each week the girls would prepare suppers and the boys would prepare lessons or activities to take to the homes of the unfortunate, giving them plenty of tender loving care in a family home evening situation. What do you think that did for those young people to be involved in such a worthy, compassionate service?

Their deep desire to be of service and to demonstrate their love can even benefit the bishop. In Sacramento, California, while the bishop was away on vacation with his family, the youth committee determined to paint his house. These young people had the time of their lives working together and anticipating the pleasant surprise of the bishop when he returned. A real bond of love was established between the youth and their bishop with such meaningful service.

Bishops, we urge you to make use of your youth committee; make it the effective instrument it should be to meet the needs of the youth of your ward. I hope every one of you will keep in mind the words President David O. McKay gave us so stirringly: "The spirituality of a ward will be commensurate with the activity of the youth."

Leaders of youth

You will note, from Bishop Brown's explanation, that each member of the bishopric has been given a particular age group—both boys and girls—to direct. What a marvelous opportunity this gives for the presidency of the Aaronic Priesthood to help our youth leaders learn the duties and responsibilities of their respective callings. And what a blessing it will be for our youth leaders to enjoy a close relationship with the great youth leaders of the ward.

Duties of quorum presidencies

To you Aaronic Priesthood quorum leaders, I hope you understand that the Lord outlined your duties as presidents of the Aaronic Priesthood quorums. He directed you to preside, to sit in council with your quorum members, and to teach them their duty. He didn't give that assignment to your advisers; he gave it to you. You share the responsibility, with the bishopric, of blessing the lives of every member of your quorum as you fulfill your sacred calling. What a transformation takes place when young Jack Smith becomes President John Smith, deacons quorum president, entitled to revelation from the Lord in directing the affairs of that quorum, and President Smith really assumes the responsibilities of his office. You are too young for such responsibility? The apostle Paul sensed something of the inadequacy young men feel when they are thrust into leadership.

He counseled his young "son in the faith," Timothy, "Let no man despise thy youth. . . ." (1 Tim. 4:12.)

Dana Miller was approaching his twelfth birthday, looking forward to becoming a deacon. One evening, just prior to his birthday, the front doorbell rang. Dana's father, a high counselor in the stake, answered the door to find three young men on the porch. "We are the deacons presidency and have come to call on your son, Dana." Admitting these quorum leaders, Brother Miller retired to another room while the presidency sat down with Dana and outlined his duties and responsibilities as a priesthood holder. That visit had more impact on a boy's life than hours of counseling from an adult could have. Today Dana is president of the deacons quorum. What kind of a president do you think he is with that kind of an introduction to the priesthood and example from his leaders?

The Lord has assured us, "For the power is in them, wherein they are agents unto themselves." (D&C 58:28.)

Organized workers

My beloved young brethren, why are we so anxious to have you assume responsibility and learn your duties as priesthood bearers? Perhaps our reason was best stated by Elder Ezra Taft Benson in a speech he delivered to an Explorer conference several years ago. He said: "We are not a church of organized sitters; we are a church of organized workers, and we want you to get into it with all your enthusiasm and power. Young men, my brethren, we want you on the field. We want you sweating it out. We want you to have responsibility because you grow under responsibility."

Challenge given

You royal generation, you special people that God has reserved to come forth in this day, may God bless you with an understanding of who you are and bless you with a knowledge and understanding of the mission that he has in store for you. May your lives reflect that you are disciples of Jesus Christ, and may you, like our elder brother, grow in "wisdom and stature, and in favour with God and man" (Luke 2:52), that you will be prepared for the awesome responsibilities that he has before you. I challenge you to do so, to honor your priesthood and to show these good brethren of ours, who are placing increased responsibility on you as bearers of the priesthood, that you are worthy of that honor.

I bear my witness to you that God is our Father, that he loves you. He has given you the opportunity to come to this life to gain a body and to experience the joys and the sorrows of life that you can return to him and be prepared for even greater service. May God bless all of us who render service to him. May we honor our priesthood and truly represent his cause, I pray humbly in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

Elder James E. Faust, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve, and Managing Director of the Melchizedek Priesthood MIA, will now address us.

Elder James E. Faust

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

My beloved brethren, I am humbled and honored by the transcending privilege of being able to speak to you in this great assemblage of the priesthood.

I express appreciation to the First Presidency for the assignment that I share with my choice colleagues, Elders Marion D. Hanks and L. Tom Perry, to have concern for the adult single members of the Church over 18 who have, on occasion, been referred to as the "forgotten ones." I am grateful to our advisers of the Twelve, Elders Thomas S. Monson, Boyd K. Packer, Marvin J. Ashton, and Bruce R. McConkie, for their constant interest and support, and to our director, Jeffrey R. Holland, as well as to the faithful and dedicated members of the general board.

Single adult members

During the past few months, we have spent many hours listening. Most of the single adult members are well adjusted to life and its problems, but they still need the loving attention from the Church and its members to reaffirm their usefulness and the love that God has for each of them. They are not problem people, but many have problems, often not of their own making. A choice friend reminds us, "If you don't have any problems, just wait awhile."

We have been deeply moved and sobered as we have heard a common thread running through the expressions of many of the single adults. Loneliness and discouragement are for some their most constant companions. One great soul who has a good bishop, a good home teacher, a good position, and comfortable circumstances said, "I don't need more to do; I just need someone to do it with." This becomes a matter of great concern when we consider that approximately one-third of the adults in the United States are single.

Being left out

The proper and rightful focus of the Church on the home and the family frequently causes the single members who have no companion and family to feel left out. One writes, "Many members of the Church treat a divorcee as if she had leprosy. I have lived in a certain LDS ward in Salt Lake for several years, where they had a widows' and widowers' party every year at Christmas time. I was never invited. I have always lived a good life and believe the Savior would have invited me. I am acquainted with some who have experienced both death and divorce, and they say that divorce is worse than death."

Still another writes, "Believe me, with the Church emphasis on families and children, we are already thoroughly aware that we are 'oddballs.' It has been a real pleasure to be accepted as a normal person."

Reaching the one

We must begin by trying to reach the one—every single individual. We want all to feel that they belong to the Church in the context of Paul's message to the Ephesians: "... ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellowcitizens with the saints, and of the household of God." (Eph. 2:19.) In our minds we draw two circles: one for the Young Adults, who are of the ages 18 to 25 and include all, whether at home, away from home, on campus, on missions, or in the military, within the circle. We draw another circle and include all of those age 26 and over in the Special Interests, whether never married, widow, widower, or divorced. Everyone who is single belongs in one of these two circles. There are none who are outside the circles.

Brother Hanks recently reminded us of how the Lord directed Ananias to the one. Ananias was sent to the street called Straight to restore the sight of Saul of Tarsus, stricken blind at the time of his conversion. Ananias responded by reminding the Lord of how much evil Saul had done. The Lord said, "Go thy way: for he is a chosen vessel unto me. . . ." (Acts 9:15.) Paul states that Ananias "came unto me, . . . and said unto me, Brother Saul. . . ." (Acts 22:13.)

Somehow we must reach the one—every single one—for they are "chosen vessels" unto the Lord.

Speaking to the single members, President Lee recently said, "In your ranks are some of the noblest members of the Church—faithful, valiant, striving to live the Lord's commandments, to help build up the kingdom on earth, and to serve your fellowmen."

As we undertake to reach the one, we should remember the counsel of the Lord to Samuel, as he was sent to the house of Jesse to find the one who should reign over Israel. The Lord said to Samuel, "Look not on his countenance, or on the height of his stature . . . , for the Lord seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart." (1 Sam. 16:7.)

Guiding principles

We believe that each single adult member of the Church may be reached through three fundamental principles: (1) priesthood direction and correlation, (2) individual involvement, and (3) flexibility.

All activities will function under the priesthood.

Individual involvement

Under the principle of individual involvement, priesthood leaders will advise and direct, but should encourage the growth and development of the single adults by delegating to them all appropriate responsibility in conceiving, planning, preparing, and executing their activities. This should be done within the context of the recent teaching of the General Authorities by President Lee, when he referred to the scripture, "Wherefore, now let every man learn his duty. . . ." (D&C 107:99.) President Lee placed the emphasis on let, in the sense of permitting or allowing those given responsibilities to function within their callings without unnecessary restrictions.

It is hoped that priesthood leaders will make things happen by letting or permitting single members to involve themselves in planning and carrying out their activities locally, directed toward service. Through service, wounds can be turned into muscles for living. Leaders from the single members' groups themselves must be sufficiently innovative and creative to involve each one.

Flexibility in program

There may be complete flexibility in age groupings and in organizing according to their specific interests.

It is not intended that detailed programs will be sent out from Church headquarters. We hope to be sending principles, options, and models for local implementation into local programs and to stimulate other activities. Elder Packer suggests that you are being sent a cookbook, rather than a casserole. We will be asking the stake presidents to share their successful recipes with others.

There are limitless opportunities and possibilities within the concepts of the principles announced, which can be summed up in the statement of the Prophet Joseph Smith when asked how he governed his people.

His response was, "I teach them correct principles, and they govern themselves."

The First Presidency has recently authorized ward leaders to organize single adults not living at home for family home evening, with one designated as the leader. It was made clear that the group should not be called a family and the leader cannot appropriately be designated as a father. Monday evening will be the most convenient for these groups to meet.

There has been complete cooperation between Bishop Brown and his counselors directing Aaronic Priesthood MIA, Sister Spafford and her counselors in the Relief Society, and the managing directors of Melchizedek Priesthood MIA. We are all interested in having our combined efforts fit together with all other Church activities in the interest of all members of the Church.

Additional instructions

Within the next few weeks, priesthood leaders throughout the Church will be receiving more detailed instructions from the First Presidency for the implementation of the adult single members' activities of the Church. All will wish to study these instructions carefully and to follow them. One stake president, who has been leading out in these activities, recently said, "This program is not more work for the priesthood leaders, but it is an aid to them, if they will let the single members themselves organize and plan their own activities."

What is proposed is a way to reach the one and have each feel that someone cares and that each has a place in the Lord's church. Too often we are thoughtless and insensitive to the feelings of these choice souls among us. One well-meaning priesthood leader, concerned about one of these choice single women, whose heart was aching for companionship and a more fulfilling life, asked, "Why don't you get a husband?" She replied in good humor, "Brother, I would love to, but I can't go pick one off a tree."

Reaching the one will involve reaching out in many ways. Recent research indicates that 40 percent of the 18- to 22-year-olds feel that they do not have a single friend they can rely upon. Gerald A. Speedy, commenting on this problem, said, "Think what it would be like not to have a single friend. It is almost impossible to comprehend. Without a friend, a person is in a state of potential crisis."

Personal testimony

I bear solemn witness to the divinity of this great and marvelous work and to the continuing inspiration that has come from the Lord through his chosen prophet, who has been far ahead of all of the thinking and the planning that has been done. Somehow, some way, we must reach the one, every single one, for they are "chosen vessels" unto the Lord. President Lee's message to the single members is sublime: "To you, the words of the Master have a special meaning: 'He that findeth his life shall lose it; and he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it.' " (Matt. 10:39.) That this may be so, I pray humbly in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

The congregation and chorus will now join in singing, "Israel, Israel, God Is Calling."

The song, "Israel, Israel, God Is Calling," was sung by the congregation.

President Lee

We will now be pleased to hear from President Marion G. Romney of the First Presidency.

President Marion G. Romney

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

My beloved brethren of the priesthood:

I encourage each of us and, if I had the power, I would inspire each of us to magnify our callings in the priesthood.

Covenant of priesthood bearers

When we accepted ordination to the priesthood, we covenanted with the Lord that we would magnify our callings. At the same time, he covenanted with us that if we do so, we shall be "sanctified by the Spirit unto the renewing of [our] bodies" and "become the sons of . . . Abraham, and the church and kingdom, and the elect of God," and unto us shall be given all that the "Father hath." (See D&C 84:33-38.)

The specified penalty for breaking our covenant and "altogether [turning] therefrom" is that we "shall not have forgiveness of sins in this world nor in the world to come." (D&C 84:41.)

The Lord further said to the brethren assembled at the time he revealed the covenant:

"And I now give unto you a commandment to beware concerning yourselves, to give diligent heed to the words of eternal life.

"For you shall live by every word that proceedeth forth from the mouth of God." (D&C 84:43-44.)

In order to magnify our callings in the priesthood, three things at least are necessary:

One is that we have a motivating desire to do so.

Another is that we search and ponder the words of eternal life.

And a third is that we pray.

Motivating desire

Over and over again the scriptures teach that men receive from the Lord according to their desires. Alma declared:

"... I know that [God] granteth unto men according to their desire, whether it be unto death or unto life; yea, I know that he alloteth unto men according to their wills, whether they be unto salvation or unto destruction." (Al. 29:4.)

Jesus acted on this principle. In John's parchment record, he wrote:

"... the Lord said unto me: John, my beloved, what desirest thou? ...

"And I said unto him: Lord, give unto me power over death, that I may live and bring souls unto thee.

"And the Lord said unto me: Verily, verily, I say unto thee, because thou desirest this thou shalt tarry until I come in my glory, and shalt prophesy before nations, kindreds, tongues and people." (D&C 7:1-3.)

At the opening of this last dispensation, the Lord said to the Prophet's father: "... if ye have desires to serve God ye are called to the work." (D&C 4:3.)

And two months later he said to Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery: "... as you desire of me so it shall be unto you. ..." (D&C 6:8.)

The importance of desire is dramatically pointed up in this quotation from the 18th section of the Doctrine and Covenants:

"And now, behold, there are others who are called to declare my gospel, both unto Gentile and unto Jew;

"Yea, even twelve; and the Twelve shall be my disciples, and they shall take upon them my name; and the Twelve are they who shall desire to take upon them my name with full purpose of heart.

"And if they desire to take upon them my name with full purpose of heart, they are called. . . .

"And now, behold, I give unto you, Oliver Cowdery, and also unto David Whitmer, that you shall search out the Twelve, who shall have the desires of which I have spoken;

"And by their desires and their works you shall know them." (D&C 18:26-28, 37-38. Italics added.)

The desire these men were to have was not a desire to be called to an office. It was a desire to take upon themselves the name of Christ "with full purpose of heart."

Self-serving ambition

I remember one occasion in the mission field when I was trying to stir an interest in a discouraged missionary. I finally asked him, "Isn't there anything that you desire?" He said, "Yes, Brother Romney, I desire to be an apostle."

No one should seek to be appointed to any particular office in the Church. Such an aspiration is not a righteous desire; it is a self-serving ambition. We should have a motivating desire to magnify our callings in the priesthood, whatever they may be. We should demonstrate that desire by living the gospel and diligently performing whatever service we are called upon to render. Holding a particular office in the Church will never save a person. One's salvation depends upon how well he discharges the duties of the service to which he is called. The Prophet Joseph said:

"From a retrospect of the requirements of the servants of God to preach the Gospel, we find few qualified even to be Priests, and if a Priest understands his duty, his calling, and ministry, and preaches by the Holy Ghost, his enjoyment is as great as if he were one of the Presidency; and his services are necessary in the body, as are also those of Teachers and Deacons." (Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith [Deseret Book Co., 1961], p. 112).

Motivating conviction

Nor is an effective desire a mere wish. It is not impassive; it is a motivating conviction which moves one to action. One of the things it impels a priesthood bearer to do is to search and ponder the words of eternal life.

Since we cannot "live by [the words which] proceedeth forth from the mouth of God" unless we know what they are, it is imperative that we study them. This the Lord has directed us to do.

As the Jews disputed with Jesus because he said that God was his Father, he pointedly responded: "Search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me." (John 5:39.)

In the Lord's preface to his Book of Commandments, he said: "Search these commandments, for they are true and faithful, and the prophecies and promises which are in them shall all be fulfilled." (D&C 1:37.)

We are under divine instruction to "teach the principles of [the] gospel, which are in the Bible and the Book of Mormon." (D&C 42:

12.) This we cannot do unless we know what they are.

To Joseph the Prophet, Oliver Cowdery, and John Whitmer, the Lord said: "Behold, I say unto you that you shall let your time be devoted to the studying of the scriptures. . . ." (D&C 26:1.)

To the Saints in Kirtland, he said, concerning the instruction he had given them, "Hearken ye to these words. Behold, I am Jesus Christ, the Savior of the world. Treasure these things up in your hearts, and let the solemnities of eternity rest upon your minds." (D&C 43:34.)

Pondering the things of God

As I have read the scriptures, I have been challenged by the word ponder, so frequently used in the Book of Mormon. The dictionary says that ponder means "to weigh mentally, think deeply about, deliberate, meditate." Moroni thus used the term as he closed his record:

"Behold, I would exhort you that when ye shall read these things . . . that ye would remember how merciful the Lord hath been unto the children of men . . . and ponder it in your hearts." (Moro. 10:3. Italics added.)

Jesus said to the Nephites:

"I perceive that ye are weak, that ye cannot understand all my words. . . .

"Therefore, go ye unto your homes, and ponder upon the things which I have said, and ask of the Father, in my name, that ye may understand. . . ." (3 Ne. 17:2-3. Italics added.)

Pondering is, in my feeling, a form of prayer. It has, at least, been an approach to the Spirit of the Lord on many occasions. Nephi tells us of one such occasion:

"For it came to pass," he wrote, "after I had desired to know the things that my father had seen, and believing that the Lord was able to make them known unto me, as I sat pondering in mine heart I was caught away in the Spirit of the Lord, yea, into an exceeding high mountain. . . ." (1 Ne. 11:1. Italics added.)

Then follows Nephi's account of the great vision he was given by the Spirit of the Lord, because he believed the words of his prophet father and had such a great desire to know more that he pondered and prayed about them.

Experience of Joseph F. Smith

President Joseph F. Smith tells us that "on the third of October, in the year nineteen hundred and eighteen, I sat in my room pondering over the Scriptures. . . ." He had particular reference at this time to Peter's statement that Christ "went and preached unto the spirits in prison" (1 Pet. 3:19) while his body lay in the grave.

"As I pondered over these things which are written," President Smith continued, "the eyes of my understanding were opened, and the Spirit of the Lord rested upon me, and I saw the hosts of the dead, both small and great. . . ." He then gives us an account of his great vision concerning missionary work among the spirits of the dead. (Gospel Doctrine [Deseret Book Co., 1939], p. 472. Italics added.)

Prayer opens the door

Desiring, searching, and pondering over "the words of eternal life," all three of them together, as important as they are, would be inadequate without prayer.

Prayer is the catalyst with which we open the door to the Savior. "Behold," he says, "I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me." (Rev. 3:20.)

From the very beginning we have been instructed to pray. The Lord commanded Adam and Eve to "worship the Lord their God," and he later sent an angel to say to them, "thou shalt repent and call upon God in the name of the Son forevermore." (Moses 5:5, 8.)

Watch and pray

Jesus instructed the Nephites:

"Behold, verily, verily, I say unto you, ye must watch and pray always lest ye enter into temptation; for Satan desireth to have you, that he may sift you as wheat.

"Therefore ye must always pray unto the Father in my name;

"Pray in your families unto the Father, always in my name, that your wives and your children may be blessed." (3 Ne. 18:18-19, 21.)

In this dispensation, even before the Church was organized, the Lord said to the Prophet:

"Pray always, that you may come off conqueror; yea, that you may conquer Satan, and that you may escape the hands of the servants of Satan that do uphold his work." (D&C 10:5.)

He instructed the priests to "visit the house of each member, and exhort them to pray vocally and in secret. . . ." (D&C 20:47, 51.)

Of Church members who went to build up Jackson County, Missouri, he said: ". . . he that observeth not his prayers before the Lord in the season thereof, let him be had in remembrance before the judge of my people." (D&C 68:33.)

And finally, he said: ". . . pray always lest that wicked one have power in you, and remove you out of your place." (D&C 93:49.)

Nephi's exhortation

In conclusion, I ask you to listen to Nephi's exhortation. I hope it moves you as deeply as it does me. He said:

"... behold, my beloved brethren, ...

"... I said unto you, feast upon the words of Christ; for behold, the words of Christ will tell you all things what ye should do.

"Wherefore, now after I have spoken these words, if ye cannot understand them it will be because ye ask not, neither do ye knock; wherefore, ye are not brought into the light, but must perish in the dark.

"And now, my beloved brethren, I perceive that ye ponder still in your hearts; and it grieveth me that I must speak concerning this thing. For if ye would hearken unto the Spirit which teacheth a man to pray ye would know that ye must pray; for the evil spirit teacheth not a man to pray, but teacheth him that he must not pray.

"But behold, I say unto you that ye must pray always, and not faint; that ye must not perform any thing unto the Lord save in the first place ye shall pray unto the Father in the name of Christ, that he will consecrate thy performance unto thee, that thy performance may be for the welfare of thy soul." (2 Ne. 32:1, 3-4, 8-9.)

That the Lord will help each of us bearers of the holy priesthood to acquire such a powerful motivating desire that we will, through searching and pondering upon the words of eternal life and praying about them, be led to magnify our callings in the priesthood, and that we may thereby qualify ourselves to receive the promised blessings of the "covenant which belongeth to the priesthood," I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

President N. Eldon Tanner will now speak to us.

President N. Eldon Tanner

First Counselor in the First Presidency

It is a great privilege, honor, and responsibility to stand before and speak to the priesthood assembled in this historic Tabernacle and in the 800 other buildings in the United States and Canada. This is the largest group of priesthood ever gathered to hear the voice of the Prophet, and when we think that they can hear this through closed circuit transmission as he speaks to them, it reminds me that we have an open conduit and a private closed circuit or wave length by which we can speak to our Heavenly Father and hear him, if we keep in tune and hear him, if we keep in tune and try to listen to him.

Appreciation of priesthood

I often wonder if we really appreciate what the priesthood means. President Romney, who is so close to the Lord, has given us some instructions tonight which, if we would follow, would help us to appreciate the priesthood and enjoy the blessings of those who magnify their callings in the priesthood. If I should say in my talk tonight to magnify the priesthood, I should like it to mean to be in complete harmony with President Romney, to magnify the priesthood in the office which you hold, because that is what we should do, my brethren. We have this heavy responsibility placed upon us when we are given the priesthood of God.

Every time I think of the priesthood, I think of the great honor and privilege we have of speaking and acting in the name of our Heavenly Father, and the responsibility it places upon us. I often say, "What are we going to do about it? Are we going to realize who we are, what we have, and what our responsibilities are?"

I would like to say to you young men: Have a good time; play basketball, play football; play tennis; play anything you want to play, and do anything you want to do as long as it is right, but honor your priesthood wherever you are, that you might be an example to the world.

Importance of family

I would like to deal briefly with the question of how we as priesthood holders should live, and I would like to say just a few words first about the family. The father must realize always that the family is the most important thing in his life. He should never neglect his family. As he looks after his family, he should remember that if he is going to enjoy the family now and throughout eternity, it is essential that they live according to the teachings of the gospel, and remember that "no other success can compensate for failure in the home." Remember too that it is in the home that the most impressive teachings are taught and where the lives of our children are shaped.

If the father will love God, love his wife, love his family, and honor his priesthood, he will have very little to worry about. If all the priesthood would do that throughout the world, what a great influence we would have. Some will be saying: "What about the girls, and the mothers, and the women?" The same is true for them, but I am speaking to the priesthood and how they should act.

Keep the Sabbath day holy. Keep the Word of Wisdom strictly. Pray always, and be honest with one another and with your fellowmen. Study the gospel. Know what is expected of us, why we are here, that we are actually spirit children of God, and as such we must keep ourselves morally clean. And that is one thing, fathers, that we should teach our boys to do.

I should like to give you, as I speak about the family and fathers, an example by reading what Sister McKay said about President David O. McKay: "I am very, very proud of my husband. He is just as lovely, just as courteous, just as polite, just as kind and just as sweet in our home as he is anywhere else, and I am very proud of him. And I am grateful for him. I cannot see anything wrong with him. I pray that our brethren will try to follow his example in every way, shape, and form."

And I can't think of much better advice, brethren, for us to have.

Example of good teaching

As an example of good teaching, I remember a young man telling me one day about his parents and how they taught him the importance of going to the temple and preparing himself to be worthy to go into the house of the Lord by going to the temple regularly. As they were preparing to go to the temple, they would talk about it, and the experiences they would have, and what a great privilege it was to go to the temple, and to go regularly. When they would return from the temple, they would talk about it, and how lovely it was to see a young couple married in the temple, realizing that they could then be parents of spirit children of God, and what a great privilege it was for them to be there in the temple. This boy could hardly wait then for the time to come when he could go in and receive his own endowments, and he knew how important it was to prepare himself to be clean and pure and to go there knowing that the Lord would accept him.

Appreciation for father

Personally, I should like to express the appreciation I have always felt for my father. Father taught us to pray. It seemed that he was talking directly to the Lord when he kneeled down in family prayer. He taught us to pray privately. He was honest and honorable in all of his dealings. I wish I had time to tell you some of the experiences I had to let me know that he was honest and upright in his dealings with his fellowmen. He magnified his priesthood, and he expected us to do it. He always showed great love for Mother.

He used to take us hunting or fishing, as busy as we were on the farm. He found it difficult, I am sure, to leave, but he would go with us, and he would never go on Sunday; he never thought of that. We always attended our meetings regularly with him. I remember some of my friends saying, "I wish I had a dad like yours. It is sure great to be with him." And I can tell you that we boys—there were four of us—would rather be with our dad than anybody else because he was a good father. Fathers, it is important that you be with your boys so they can see how you live, and you can see how they live.

Expression of confidence

I remember Father's placing confidence in me. We used to work on the farm, as I said before, and he would call me in the evening or early morning to discuss his plans, his program for the day, and ask me what I thought about it. Should we do this or should we do that? I felt that I was a part of it. I know now that he had his plans pretty well formed, but he showed that confidence in me. And realizing that I was part of it, I worked my head off to accomplish it, and I loved my dad for it.

And then I remember him saying to me one day, "You know, my son, I would rather have you helping me than any hired man I have. I have full confidence in you, and you surely do a good day's work." Such an expression of confidence and appreciation makes one more determined to do well what he is expected to do.

It is very important that we help our boys set their goals high and then set about to reach them. We must understand that Satan is there and is real, as has been told us twice tonight, and is determined to destroy us, to discourage us, to tempt us, and to lead us astray.

Representing the Lord

I should like to repeat a beautiful experience, which is very touching to me. I hope Bishop Featherstone won't mind my mentioning him as the one about whom I am going to speak. This happened just after they moved here from their lovely home, where they had many friends and were very popular. He had come home after work and had gotten into his lounging clothes, and his young son, Joe, said, "Dad, I wish you would give me a special blessing so that I can adjust and feel at home and be happy here."

His father went upstairs and changed his clothes. As he was coming down, his wife said, "Surely you are not going out tonight." He said, "I am going to give someone a blessing." And then he said, "Joe has asked for a special blessing, and I wanted to be dressed and ready to honor the priesthood and to show Joe the interest I have in him, and to make it possible for him to enjoy the blessings through the faith he has in me and the priesthood."

Brethren, that is the spirit to have. And, of course, as he told his wife, you can naturally imagine what happened. She shed tears as she realized she had a husband, the father of her son, who would be an example and be so interested in him that he would be prepared to represent the Lord in the priesthood that he holds.

Responsibility for Aaronic Priesthood

I would like to say just a few words to the bishops, to the other officers in the wards and stakes, including the stake presidents, and to mission presidents. We have a heavy responsibility; and especially the bishop, with his counselors, has the responsibility for the Aaronic Priesthood. Much has been said about that tonight, but I would like to say just a few words. "You should know every boy by his first name. Show an interest in him; stay close to him. When you know his first name, use it. You remember when God the Father and his Son Jesus Christ appeared to Joseph, and he asked the question, God turned to him and said, "Joseph," calling him by name, "this is my beloved Son." (See Joseph Smith 2:17.) A boy likes to hear his name called.

Let us remember and remind our boys always, when they are officiating as holders of the priesthood, that they are representing the Lord. They can have their good times every other place and play the way they want to do, but when they are officiating in the priesthood, they should realize that they are representing the Lord, and be so dressed and so prepared and humble and reverent as to properly represent him.

Readiness for priesthood

And bishops, it is important that we help them to understand and appreciate what the priesthood means. When I was a bishop I had six boys in my ward old enough to be ordained elders. I could only recommend five of them, because one of them wasn't ready. We had talked about it several times, and he had said to me, "I am not worthy." He felt very bad about it, but he didn't expect to be recommended to the stake president. His uncle came to me and said, "You are surely not going to hold that boy back with his five friends going forward." He pled with me to let him go. He said, "You will be driving him out of the Church if you don't."

I explained to this man, "The priesthood is the most important thing that we can give this boy. We are not handing the priesthood out on a silver platter. This boy and I understand each other, and he is not ready to be ordained an elder." And he wasn't recommended.

A few years later I was attending a general conference right here on this Temple Square, and a young man came up to me and said, "President Tanner, you wouldn't remember me. I am the boy whom you didn't recommend to be ordained an elder." As he put his hand out, he said, "I want to thank you for it. I am a bishop now in California. If you had recommended me when I wasn't worthy, I possibly never would have appreciated what the priesthood is and what is expected of one, and surely I would never have been a bishop as I am today."

Bishops, these young men don't expect something for nothing. They don't appreciate anything they get for nothing, and they should realize and appreciate just what the priesthood means and then be prepared to qualify and be worthy before they are advanced.

Encouragement to advance

By a searching interview, know that they are ready for a temple recommend, for advancement in the priesthood, for a mission, or anything that you are considering them for, and be sure they are ready. It is certainly no kindness to recommend someone when he is not ready—in fact, it is a great disservice and it shouldn't be done. Help them to appreciate what it means and the importance of being ready and worthy. Encourage them, let them know that you love them, and do all you can to help them prepare.

I would like to say, bishops, that as fathers of the wards you have the great privilege, the great joy of directing all the affairs in the ward and of helping these young men to become the kind of young men who will be the leaders in the ward and in the stake, and someday sitting on this stand—some of them certainly will be. Help them to prepare and help them to appreciate that they might be holding responsible positions. And let me say this to you tonight: It is not possible for everyone holding the priesthood to be called to positions of leadership, but holding the priesthood of God is a great privilege, a great blessing, and it alone, if we honor it, will prepare us for salvation and exaltation, if we are ready to serve the Lord wherever we are called. The priesthood of God is something the world doesn't have.

Judges in Israel

Bishops, you have an additional responsibility. You are judges in Israel, and you should always judge and deal with the transgressor with love and confidence, with a desire in your heart to help him, and carry out your responsibilities to deal with him. Stake and mission presidents also have this responsibility. It is important that when you know there is iniquity, you be kind enough to show an interest in the transgressor and bring him to repentance, and that is a kindness. Love all, but tolerate no iniquity. When it appears that something is wrong, it is your duty to investigate and handle all cases of transgression according to the seriousness of the case. By moving promptly, you might be able to prevent further transgression.

Study the scriptures and the handbook and do as they direct. Bishops and stake presidents must not shirk this responsibility. Anyone who says that he has never disciplined, disfellowshipped, or excommunicated anyone, and that he never intends to, has an entirely wrong attitude and may himself be held accountable.

The Lord has said, "Any member of the church of Christ transgressing, or being overtaken in a fault, shall be dealt with as the scriptures direct." (D&C 20:80.)

And President John Taylor said this: "Furthermore, I have heard of some Bishops who have been seeking to cover up the iniquities of men; I tell them, in the name of God, they will have to bear them themselves, and meet that judgment; and I tell you that any man who tampers with iniquity, he will have to bear that iniquity, and if any of you want to partake of the sins of men, or uphold them, you will have to bear them. Do you hear it, you Bishops and you Presidents? God will require it at your hands. You are not placed in a position to tamper with the principles of righteousness, nor to cover up the infamies and corruptions of men."

Cases to be handled

The cases that are to be handled by the Church include but are not limited to fornication, adultery, homosexual acts, abortion, or other infractions of the moral code; intemperance; criminal acts involving moral turpitude, such as burglary, dishonesty, theft, or murder; apostasy; open opposition to and deliberate disobedience of the rules and regulations of the Church; cruelty to spouse or children; advocating or practicing so-called plural marriage; or any un-Christianlike conduct in violation of the law and order of the Church.

Those who are guilty of transgression are never happy until they confess their sins and repent. Experience has proven that every transgressor who is dealt with as he should be, with love and a desire to help and with the proper discipline, is able to start out anew with a clear conscience and can then and only then progress as he could not do otherwise. He will thank you for it, and as you try to help him, the Lord will bless both you and the repentant individual.

Keeping morally clean

I would like to say just a few words to the boys and young men as priesthood holders—the young men particularly. You have been told what your responsibility is tonight. I want to impress upon you the importance of keeping morally clean. Prepare yourselves for the great blessings that come only through the priesthood, such as temple blessings, filling missions, and doing other things that you can do in the offices you hold. No man, young or old, who holds the priesthood of God can honor that priesthood without honoring and respecting womanhood. Any young man should be prepared to protect a woman's virtue with his life, if necessary, and never be guilty of lusting after a woman or doing anything that would degrade her or cause her to lose her virtue. Every young woman has a perfect right to feel safe in going out with a young man holding the priesthood, knowing that he will respect and protect her in every way.

We all know that the morals of the world are loose. Though we are in the world, we must not be of it. Whether your associates are members of the Church or not, and whether or not they are transgressors, they will expect you who hold the priesthood to honor that priesthood and will respect you if you do. Otherwise, they lose confidence in you and respect for you and for the Church.

If we would live each day so that we could look the bishop, branch president, the stake president, the president of the Church, or the Lord in the eye and say, "I am doing my best to magnify my priesthood," then we would be safe.

Worthiness for callings

No young man guilty of serious transgression should apply for a temple recommend or expect to be called on a mission or wish to be advanced in the priesthood until he has repented and is worthy of such a call. I can think of no greater disappointment, sadness, or sorrow that can come to anyone than to have a missionary who is not worthy, not dedicated, and guilty of transgression, be sent home dishonorably released, disfellowshipped, or excommunicated. This is a great disappointment to his companion, and it makes the mission president's heart bleed to have to deal with one of his missionaries who is guilty of transgression either before coming or while in the mission field, and then to have the difficult responsibility of sending him home. It distresses the parents and grieves the bishop and stake president and those with whom he has worked so closely. It is an affront to the Lord and seriously affects the life of the missionary.

May the Lord help us to appreciate who we are and to live accordingly, realizing that we do hold the priesthood of God in the church of Jesus Christ, the only men in the world who hold the authority to speak in God's name. Assembled here tonight in these different buildings, every priesthood office of the Church is represented, and the success and progress of this church depend on you as individuals who hold the priesthood. May we prove worthy, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

We have here Captain Larry J. Chesley, Major Jay C. Hess, and Lieutenant Commander David J. Rollins. Will you stand up, please? Captain Chesley, United States Air Force, was a prisoner of war for seven years. He comes from the Burley Stake, Star Ward. Major Jay Hess, United States Air Force, was a prisoner of war for six years, from Bountiful East Stake. Lieutenant Commander Rollins, United States Navy, a prisoner of war for six years, is from the San Diego North Stake.

Representative of servicemen

These three young men represent many of those boys who have gone through the fire of adversity. We just want you men to know that our hearts have been touched by the announcement of your faith, your confidence in your country and in your commander-in-chief, that you have come through thus far. We want to say to you that we have been praying, we have been hoping with every means at our command; and we now say to the priesthood, brethren, will you put your arms around these boys, and help them now to make their adjustments as may be necessary in their homecoming.

The Lord bless you, brethren.

We love you and the many others who have been in these circumstances and have come through the fire, and have now been prepared to go forward. You will be the kind of men that we look to for the standards of our youth in the years that lie ahead. Thank you, brethren. We welcome you home.

Our hearts go out to the many others, to the mothers and fathers in the thousands of homes where the boys didn't come home. We are having an Easter program where they have asked me to respond, seeing what might be done to ease the aching hearts of the thousands of others who didn't come home. There is hope. Thank God for the promise of the gospel and the blessings that lie beyond the grave.

Aaronic and Melchizedek Priesthood MIA

Just a word now about what has been said regarding the Aaronic Priesthood MIA and the Melchizedek Priesthood MIA. I am sure that you listened to President Romney and heard him define that word ponder, and then made its application; that is what we are asking you to do now, and not go out as a Monday morning quarterback and try to do all the second-guessing. I want to say to you that there is no topic that has received longer and more searching, prayerful discussion by the General Authorities of the Church than the matters that pertain to the young people of the Aaronic and Melchizedek Priesthood groups, and the women of similar ages.

May I just make this one statement, so that you will get this thing in proper focus. These announced Aaronic Priesthood and Melchizedek Priesthood MIAs do not do away with the Young Men's and Young Women's Mutual Improvement Associations. What is intended, as you see this unfold, is that the programs will go forward, but with priesthood identity the like of which they have not enjoyed before. And we sincerely believe that if you fully understand and this program is fully comprehended, as the priesthood identity is now explained, many of those who have not been active will now be brought into activity; and the priesthood and the youth and the young adults, and those over 25, and many others who have felt themselves forgotten souls will now, under the leadership of these great leaders, move forward. We hope that there will not one be missed, and everybody will be taken into focus by the great plan of salvation.

Social activities to be unified

As I have gone out to youth conferences on various occasions, I have asked, "What is your greatest problem?" And surprisingly, the leaders have always said something like this: "We want to have you put all the youth organizations belonging to the same church together." We have had our campus stakes, institutes, M Men and Gleaners, Delta Phi, Lambda Delta Sigma, Latter-day Saint Student Associations, all of them, and sometimes the same ones clamoring to be with the others in the group. Institutionalized, these same groups will still function as far as religious activities are concerned; but so far as the activity part of the program, the social part, is concerned, we trust that as you see this move into action, you will see that our youth of these various organizations, of these various groupings, will now be brought together so that there will be a wider relationship than there has ever been before. Hopefully there will be a greater chance for young people to find companionship within their groups, and eventually, we hope, in temple marriage.

Suspend judgment, then, and ponder what has been said tonight until you receive further instructions, which will be given you in detail, as the brethren have explained.

Questionable predictions

I have a letter from some man who seemingly has found something in the hieroglyphics of some discovery that is the answer to a lot of the things that lay ahead for the world. And interestingly enough, as I looked at this, my mind reflected back to an address I heard delivered from this pulpit by President Anthony W. Ivins on October 4, 1931. Just why I thought of that—I suppose it was intended that I should—is because he gave an address at that conference and used as his text the recently published book called Our Bible in Stone. Many of you remember this treated principally the erection, the symbolism, and the prophetic character of the pyramid of Gizeh, or in Greek, the Cheops. Students of the pyramid, after a study of the measurements, symbols, and the record of the pyramid, if it had a record, said that the year 1928 would witness the beginning of a period of great tribulation, which would culminate with intensity in 1936. That period, according to the reckoning of the students, would close with the advent of the Lord and the establishment of a period of peace, happiness, and goodwill among men.

Counsel of President Ivins

Then President Ivins gave these wise words of counsel with reference to this book: "Now, my brethren . . . I have referred to this little book and its contents as I desire that you might understand. It will undoubtedly go into the mission field and our elders may make use of it. I simply want to warn you against sensationalism of any kind. . . . I do not say that his conclusions are wrong, but I do say that they do not come to us as the voice of the Church, nor are they to be accepted as such."

Then he said something that seems very significant to me. He said: "Brother J. Golden Kimball told us yesterday that he was a great believer in dreams that come true." I wish you would think of that. That accords with my feelings. I am a great believer in dreams that have come true.

"I am reminded of the fact," he said, "that immediately after the close of the World War these students of the Pyramids announced and published it that according to their measurements and calculations there would begin in the year 1928 a period which would bring tribulation and sorrow to the people of the world; that they would be required to humble themselves before the Lord, and that that period of tribulation would continue until the year 1936. . . . We all know that a part of this dream at least has come true."

After commenting on the financial condition throughout the nations at that time, in the 1930s, President Ivins then concluded his remarks with these profound words of wisdom: "Well, now, my brethren and sisters, what about it all? Just be calm and turn to the Lord.

. . . I pleaded with the people to put their houses in order and get out of debt, for I knew this was coming, because God himself through his Only Begotten Son had declared it.

"Now, my brethren and sisters, if the Church has anything to say to you it will come from them direct and not from the writings of other men. It will come to you in a manner that you will understand it. It will not be speculative. It will come to you philosophically, truthfully, and governed by common sense. God bless you," he said, "is my humble prayer. . . ." (Conference Report, October 1931, pp. 87-94.)

Repetition of warning

Now this is something that needs repeating to this great body of priesthood, because we have a rash of writings by certain persons who claim to be of good standing in the Church, going into considerable detail as they recite their past and present Church affiliations and activities in the foreword, interlude, and advertising. There are sensational predictions and observations, and to make their writings appear to have Church sanction, they use quotations and addresses from Church leaders, past and present, taken out of context in such a way as to make it appear as though these quotations were the endorsement of the book they wish to sell to Church members, who may thereby be induced to accept their writings as from unquestioned sources.

Now we have also had some who claim to be in good standing in order to take advantage of the gathering of the Saints at some of our general conferences, and who have gone so far as to program group meetings for their own interest, with the obvious hope that by doing so, many of our conference visitors may be urged to attend their meetings, even if it may have necessitated their absence from vitally important instructional sessions of the conference.

Furthermore, some designing individuals have solicited opportunities to speak at church gatherings, firesides, priesthood quorums, sacrament meetings. Now, brethren, we feel it is of the utmost importance to lift a warning voice so that our people will be safeguarded against such tactics as an all too obvious self-seeking opportunity to spread their own propaganda for their own interests.

We must urge that priesthood leaders use careful discretion in screening out those whose motives may be subject to serious questions.

Revelation to Edward Partridge

Now a word about magnifying the priesthood. Much has been said about that tonight. I would like to read a portion of a short revelation given through the Prophet Joseph Smith to Edward Partridge in 1830:

"Thus saith the Lord God, the Mighty One of Israel: Behold, I say unto you, my servant Edward, that you are blessed, and your sins are forgiven you, and you are called to preach my gospel as with the voice of a trumpet;

"And I will lay my hand upon you by the hand of my servant Sidney Rigdon, and you shall receive my Spirit, the Holy Ghost, even the Comforter, which shall teach you the peaceable things of the kingdom;

"And now this calling and commandment give I unto you concerning all men—

"That as many as shall come before my servants Sidney Rigdon and Joseph Smith, Jun., embracing this calling, . . . shall be ordained and sent forth to preach the everlasting gospel among the nations. . .

"And this commandment shall be given unto the elders of my church, that every man which will embrace it with singleness of heart may be ordained and sent forth, even as I have spoken.

"I am Jesus Christ, the Son of God; wherefore, gird up your loins, and I will suddenly come to my temple. . . ." (D&C 36:1-2, 4-5, 7-8.)

Now, I want to refer particularly to this one verse, and then make a few comments about magnifying the priesthood. Notice what the Lord said: "And I will lay my hand upon you [Edward Partridge] by the hand of my servant Sidney Rigdon, and you shall receive my Spirit, the Holy Ghost, even the Comforter, which shall teach you the peaceable things of the kingdom."

Duties of Aaronic Priesthood

The other night I had a group of young Cub Scouts, who are about the age to become ordained deacons, and I said to these young men, "When you get to be deacons, what will be the duties of a deacon?"

And they all said, "The duty of the deacon is to pass the sacrament."

And I said, "Now I would like you to think of this a little differently. That isn't the way to explain the duty of a deacon. What does it mean to pass the sacrament? When a deacon carries the emblems of the bread and water which have been blessed to the good of those to whom it shall be passed, it is then a renewal of a covenant that if they will keep the commandments of God and remember the Lord Jesus Christ, for whom those emblems stand, they will have the Spirit of the Lord to be with them."

A deacon, then, has the responsibility of representing the Lord to carry these emblems and thus be the Lord's agent in submitting these to the body of the Church.

When you ask a teacher what are his duties, he may answer, "Well, it's to do home teaching." But you may wish to say to him, "When you do home teaching you are representing the Lord, to visit the home of each member, to see that they are doing their duty, and to see that they are all keeping the commandments of God". The duties of a priest—the priest "is to preach, teach, expound, exhort, and baptize, and administer the sacrament; and to visit the house of each member, and exhort them to pray vocally and in secret and attend to all family duties." They should have in mind when they are acting in those capacities, it is as though they were acting for and responsible to the Lord when they perform their duties.

Meaning of priesthood

When we officiate in the name of the Lord, as holders of the priesthood, we are doing it in the name and in behalf of our Heavenly Father. Priesthood is the power by which our Heavenly Father works through men, through deacons, through teachers, through priests, and I have a feeling that we are not impressing that upon our young men. They are not taking the understanding of their priesthood as seriously as they might. If they did, they would always want to appear as President Tanner has said of Bishop Featherstone. They would always want to appear at their best when they are exercising their priesthood. Their hair would be properly groomed; their clothing and appearance would reflect the sanctity they should feel in the performance of their priesthood duties. I have had that same feeling. I have never performed an ordinance, such as administering to the sick, without first excusing myself, if I were out in the garden or somewhere, until I was properly clothed, to make the best appearance I could, because I felt in so doing I was drawing close to the Lord himself, and I want to appear at my best in his presence.

Brethren, I am afraid that some of our elders do not understand this, that when they are officiating as elders of the Church, or as seventies or as high priests, it is as though when they perform the ordinance, the Lord through them is acting upon the heads of those for whom they minister. I have often thought one of the reasons why we are not magnifying our priesthood is because we don't understand that as holders of the priesthood, He is working through us by the power of the holy priesthood, and I would wish that we could all have that feeling, and so teach our young people what it means to hold the priesthood and to magnify it.

Power of the priesthood

Now tonight, brethren, we have touched a number of subjects. We come to you, one of the greatest bodies of priesthood that has ever been assembled, so we understand. What an influence! At the sessions of this conference you have had your attention called to some of the most dangerous trends in our public life—sex education, pornography, permissiveness—running rampant over the world. Brethren of the priesthood, this army, if they would reach out with all the influence that they could wield and really magnify their priesthood as the representatives of our Heavenly Father, could engender such a power and might that by the use of our priesthood in our various communities, these things would not be allowed to continue without a sturdy defense on the part of the priesthood of the living God.

Strengthening the home

We must call ourselves to new service and new responsibilities, and not stand idly by and let these things go without challenge. Our youth are in danger. Keep your home ties strong, brethren. See to it, as we have all tried to say, and as I have repeated it many times and some have quoted it in this conference, that "the greatest of the Lord's work you brethren will ever do as fathers will be within the walls of your own home." Don't neglect your wives, you brethren. Don't neglect your children. Take time for family home evening. Draw your children around about you. Teach them, guide them, and guard them. There was never a time when we needed so much the strength and the solidarity of the home. If we will do that, this church will grow by leaps and bounds in strength and influence throughout the world. No longer need you be considered as a hiss and byword. We should stand four-square for the things that are honorable, righteous, pure, virtuous, and true.

Need for loyalty

Brethren of the priesthood, we love you. We stand ready. As you pray for us, we will try to meet that high expectation, God being our helper. We realize the magnitude of the responsibility we bear, and except we can be assured of your faith and your loyalty, and your unquestioned one hundred percent keeping of the commandments of God, we cannot meet it.

I quoted in the opening session of this conference a wonderful letter that I received from a student body president who is greatly concerned about things going on on the campus and 'round about in the society where he moves, and then his statement was, "I can assure you that every Latter-day Saint on this campus who is keeping the commandments of God one hundred percent is supporting and sustaining you." Brethren, I know that that is true throughout this whole church. Every Latter-day Saint who is keeping the commandments is following the leadership of the Church. By that same token, if you find those who are not willing to follow the leadership of the Church, you may be sure it is a certainty that they are not keeping the commandments of God one hundred percent.

A call to arms

So it is a call to arms—arms to do what? To keep the commandments of God in order that we might lay claim to the blessings we need so much in this day of uncertainty, in this crazy mixed-up world, as some have spoken of it, and our youth have seemed to feel. In these new movements with our young people, our only hope is that by intensifying the responsibility of the priesthood with the youth organizations we can strengthen their hands and reach out to these young men and women who need so much the shepherding influence of the priesthood, for in so doing we feel sure we can help to raise up a righteous generation that will carry on the work throughout the ages that lie ahead of us.

Solemn witness

I bear you my solemn witness, my beloved brethren, that these things that have been spoken tonight have been spoken under the inspiration of the Lord, and we give it to you for your pondering, for your prayerful consideration, suspending judgment, and not raising your voices in criticism, but carrying on the youth organizations as they now exist until these brethren have given you the full details of just what lies ahead; then you can begin to see the merits of what it is all about.

So I bear you that witness and leave you my blessing this night, and pray God's blessings upon you, the priesthood of the Church, the strength of Zion, the backbone of the kingdom of God on earth. So I pray and leave you my blessing, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

The sessions of this General Conference will be received by millions in the United States and Canada over many television and radio stations cooperating to provide extensive coverage of this conference.

Over 80 radio stations will broadcast conference Sunday morning in major cities of Mexico and Central America, and by satellite in countries of South America, to a potential Latin American audience of 60 million people.

The nationwide CBS Radio Tabernacle Choir Broadcast will be from 9:30 to 10:00 Sunday morning. Those desiring to attend must be in their seats before 9:15 a.m.

Now brethren, in leaving this great priesthood meeting tonight, we remind you, as we always do, to obey traffic rules, to use caution, and always to be courteous in driving.

The music for this priesthood session has been furnished by this lovely Aaronic Priesthood Chorus from the Oquirrh and Tooele Regions with Jerold Ottley conducting, and Robert Cundick at the organ. Boys, we deeply appreciate the inspiring music and the service you young men have rendered here tonight. Brother Ottley and Brother Cundick, we thank you again for your great service.

The chorus will now close this meeting with "Abide With Me," following which Elder Robert W. Barker, Regional Representative of the Twelve, will offer the benediction.

The conference will then be adjourned until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

The hymn, "Abide With Me," was sung by the Aaronic Priesthood Chorus.

Elder Robert W. Barker, Regional Representative of the Twelve, offered the benediction.

The conference was adjourned until tomorrow at 10 o'clock a.m.

THIRD DAY MORNING MEETING

SIXTH SESSION

The sixth session of the conference convened in the Tabernacle on Sunday, April 8, 1973, at 10 o'clock a.m.

President Harold B. Lee presided at this session and conducted the meeting.

The Salt Lake Tabernacle Choir, under the direction of Richard P. Condie, with Alexander Schreiner at the organ, furnished the music for this session.

Before the opening of the meeting, the Tabernacle Choir without announcement sang the song, "Awake, Ye Saints."

President Lee then made the following remarks:

President Harold B. Lee

It is our pleasure to welcome all present this morning in this historic Tabernacle—general and local Church leaders, special guests, educational and civic leaders, and thousands of members of the Church from far and near in this sixth session of the 143rd Annual Conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Sessions of this conference will be received by millions in the United States and Canada over hundreds of radio and television stations cooperating to provide the extensive coverage of this conference.

The Tabernacle Choir, which opened these services singing "Awake, Ye Saints" under the direction of Richard P. Condie, with Alexander Schreiner at the organ, will now favor us with "Eternal Father," following which Bishop H. Burke Peterson, first counselor in the Presiding Bishopric, will offer the invocation.

The number, "Eternal Father" was sung by the Tabernacle Choir.

Bishop H. Burke Peterson, first counselor in the Presiding Bishopric, offered the opening prayer.

After the prayer and without announcement, the Tabernacle Choir sang "The King of Love My Shepherd Is."

President Harold B. Lee

The Tabernacle Choir has sung "The King of Love My Shepherd Is."

We will now be pleased to hear from President Marion G. Romney, Second Counselor in the First Presidency of the Church and a noble defender of the faith.

President Marion G. Romney

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

My beloved brothers, sisters, and friends, members and nonmembers, wherever you are: I have a very important message for you today, but what I say will be but words unless we enjoy the Spirit of the Lord. I therefore invite you to join with me in a prayer that the Lord will bless us all while I speak.

Offspring of God

The truth I desire to emphasize today is that we mortals are in very deed the literal offspring of God. If men understood, believed, and accepted this truth and lived by it, our sick and dying society would be reformed and redeemed, and men would have peace here and now and eternal joy in the hereafter.

Members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints accept this concept as a basic doctrine of their theology. The lives of those who have given it thought enough to realize its implications are controlled by it; it gives meaning and direction to all their thoughts and deeds. This is so because they know that it is the universal law of nature in the plant, animal, and human worlds for reproducing offspring to reach in final maturity the likeness of their parents.

They reason that the same law is in force with respect to the offspring of God. Their objective is, therefore, to someday be like their heavenly parents.

They not only so reason; they know they may so become because God has revealed the fact that it is his work and glory to bring to pass their eternal life (Moses 1:39), which is the life God lives.

Gospel taught anciently

Adam, the first man, knew that he was a son of God. He walked and talked with him in the Garden of Eden before the fall. After the fall, "Adam and Eve, his wife, called upon the name of the Lord, and they heard the voice of the Lord from the way toward the Garden of Eden, speaking unto them. . . ." (Moses 5:4-5.)

Later, the Lord sent an angel who taught them the gospel plan, whereupon, "Adam and Eve blessed the name of God, and they made all things known unto their sons and their daughters." Then "Satan came among them, saying: . . . Believe it not; and they believed it not, and they loved Satan more than God. And men began from that time forth to be carnal, sensual, and devilish." (Moses 5:12-13.)

From then until now, most men, like the first generation of Adam's posterity, have "believed it not," although God has repeatedly revealed it to all the prophets from Adam to Noah. He likewise revealed it to Abraham and thereafter to Moses "at a time when Moses was caught up into an exceedingly high mountain.

"And he saw God face to face, and he talked with him, . . .

"And God spake unto Moses, saying: Behold, I am the Lord God Almighty, . . .

" . . . behold, thou art my son; . . .

"And I have a work for thee, Moses, my son; and thou art in the similitude of mine Only Begotten; and mine Only Begotten is and shall be the Savior, for he is full of grace and truth; . . .

"And now, behold, this one thing I show unto thee, Moses, my son; for thou art in the world, and now I show it unto thee." (Moses 1:1-4, 6-7. Italics added.)

In this short scripture, the Lord

three times addressed Moses as "my son."

Paul, in his great speech on Mars' hill, speaking of God, said: "... in him we live, and move, and have our being; ... for we are ... his offspring." (Acts 17:28.)

Begotten sons and daughters

Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery declared "that he lives!

"For we saw him, ... and we heard the voice bearing record ...

"That by him, and through him, and of him, the worlds are and were created, and the inhabitants thereof are begotten sons and daughters unto God." (D&C 76:22-24.)

"Begotten sons and daughters unto God." Can this be true in light of the fact that we all know that we are begotten sons and daughters of our earthly fathers? Yes, it is true because human souls are dual beings—spirits tabernacled in bodies of flesh and bone. The revelation says, "... the spirit and the body are the soul of man." (D&C 88:15.) God is the father of man's spirit, even as his earthly father is the father of his mortal body.

Nature of a spirit

The nature of a spirit is plainly revealed in the scriptures. A clear word picture of a spirit is recorded in the third chapter of Ether in the Book of Mormon, which gives an account of the appearance of Jesus Christ, as a spirit, some 2200 years before he was born to Mary in the flesh. The record says that Jesus stood before the brother of Jared in the form and likeness of a man and said:

"... Behold, I am Jesus Christ ...

"... Seest thou that ye are created after mine own image? Yea, even all men were created in the beginning after mine own image.

"Behold, this body, which ye now behold, is the body of my spirit; and man have I created after the body of my spirit; and even as I appear unto thee to be in the spirit will I appear unto my people in the flesh." (Eth. 3:14-16.)

Corroborating this truth, Jesus declared to Joseph Smith as late as 1833:

"... I was in the beginning with the Father, and am the First-born [meaning, of course, the firstborn spirit];

"Ye were also in the beginning with the Father; that which is Spirit" (D&C 93:21, 23.)

Abraham's vision

We learn something more about our spirits in their premortal state from a record made by Abraham of a vision in which he was shown a multitude of spirits assembled in a great heavenly council. Consideration was there being given to the creation of this earth as a place upon which they, the spirits, could come and receive bodies of flesh and bone, thus becoming human souls. The plan provided that after a probationary period in mortality they should die—that is to say, their eternal spirit bodies and their corruptible mortal bodies would be separated. Later on, in resurrection, they would be reunited as immortal souls.

Abraham also learned that if during their sojourn on this earth they proved faithful, they would, as resurrected beings, be permitted to come back into the presence of their Heavenly Father—the Father of their spirits—and enjoy eternal progression. These are the words of Abraham:

"Now the Lord had shown unto me, Abraham, the intelligences that were organized before the world was; ...

"And God saw these souls that they were good, . . . and he said: These I will make my rulers; for he stood among those that were spirits, . . . and he said unto me: Abraham, thou art one of them; thou wast chosen before thou wast born.

"And there stood one among them that was like unto God [and this was Jesus Christ, the firstborn spirit], and he said unto those who were with him: We will go down, for there is space there, and we will take of these materials, and we will make an earth whereon these may dwell;

"And we will prove them herewith, to see if they will do all things whatsoever the Lord their God shall command them;

"And they who keep their first estate shall be added upon [this refers to us; we kept our first estate and were added upon by receiving mortal bodies]; . . . and they who keep their second estate [that is, this life] shall have glory added upon their heads for ever and ever." (Abr. 3:22-26.)

Such is the revealed truth concerning man's lofty estate.

Alexander Pope's portrayal

By way of contrast, consider Alexander Pope's portrayal of the predicament into which man has fallen, as a result of his having rejected the revealed word of God as to his identity. Pope pictures him as being—

"Placed on this isthmus of a middle state,
A being darkly wise and rudely great:
With too much knowledge for the Sceptic side,
With too much weakness for the Stoic's pride,
He hangs between, in doubt to act or rest;

In doubt to deem himself a God or Beast;
In doubt his mind or body to prefer;
Born but to die, and reas'ning but to err;
Alike in ignorance, his reason such.
Whether he thinks too little or too much;
Chaos of thought and passion,
all confused;
Still by himself abused or disabused;
Created half to rise, and half to fall;
Great Lord of all things, yet a prey to all;
Sole judge of truth, in endless
error hurl'd;
The glory, jest, and riddle of the world! . . .

"Fix'd like a plant on his peculiar spot,
To draw nutrition, propagate, and
rot. . . .

"On life's vast ocean diversely we sail,
Reason the card, but Passion is the gale. . . .

"And hence one Master-passion in the breast,
Like Aaron's serpent, swallows up the rest."

—"An Essay on Man," Epistle II

Block to spiritual growth

The theory that man is other than the offspring of God has been, and, so long as it is accepted and acted upon, will continue to be, a major factor in blocking man's spiritual growth and in corrupting his morals.

That it would be so was clearly predictable. In the mind of its devotee, any such theory as Pope's doubt as to whether "to deem himself a God or Beast" is resolved in favor of being a beast; and his doubt as to whether to prefer "his mind or body," in favor of his body.

The concept that man is a beast relieves him of a sense of accountability and encourages him to adopt the fatalistic attitude of "eat, drink, and be merry, for tomorrow we die." He becomes, in truth, as Pope says:

"Fix'd like a plant on his peculiar spot,
To draw nutrition, propagate, and rot. . . .

"On life's vast ocean diversely we sail,
Reason the card, but Passion is the gale

"And hence one Master-passion in the breast, Like Aaron's serpent, swallows up the rest."

A child of God

The truth is, my beloved brethren and sisters, man is a child of God—a God in embryo. Every righteous soul responds with empathy to the children singing:

"I am a child of God,
And he has sent me here, . . .
If I but learn to do his will
I'll live with him once more.

"Lead me, guide me, walk beside me,
Help me find the way.
Teach me all that I must do
To live with him some day."

—Naomi W. Randall

That man is a child of God is the most important knowledge available to mortals. Such knowledge is beyond the ken of the uninspired mind. Neither logic, science, philosophy, nor any other field of worldly learning has ever been, or ever will be, able to find it out. Those who limit their search to such learning techniques will continue to be as they have always been, "Ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth." (2 Tim. 3:7.)

The only means by which such knowledge can be had is divine revelation. Fortunately for us, as has already been shown, it has been so revealed repeatedly from Adam until today.

Difference in aspirations

The aspirations, desires, and motivations of one who accepts, believes, and by the power of the Holy Spirit obtains a witness to the truth that he is a begotten son or daughter unto God differs from the aspirations of him who believes otherwise, as the growing vine differs from the severed branch.

Knowing that he is a child of God, one does not doubt whether to "deem himself a God or Beast." He is not of "chaos . . . thought," driven by "passion" and "all confused." He is not "fix'd like a plant on his peculiar spot, to draw nutrition, propagate, and rot." He thinks of himself, as the scriptures teach, possessed of the innate ability, as are all other reproducing offspring, to reach in final maturity the status of his heavenly parents and have "glory added upon [his] head for ever and ever." (Abr. 3:26.) This is his goal.

Acceptance of God's laws

He accepts the Ten Commandments, the Sermon on the Mount, the Word of Wisdom, and every other direction and commandment given of God to be statements of laws, the observance of which is indispensable to the attainment of his goal, to reach which he has dedicated his life.

He strives to respond to the Master's invitation:

"Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." (Matt. 11:28.)

And to his challenge:

"... be [ye] perfect even as I, or your Father who is in heaven is perfect." (3 Ne. 12:48.)

He knows that the wise and proper response is to heed the Lord's command to "beware concerning yourselves, to give diligent heed to the words of eternal life. For you shall live by every word that proceedeth forth from the mouth of God." (D&C 84:43-44.)

He believes implicitly the Lord's promise that "it shall come to pass that every soul who forsaketh his sins and cometh unto me, and calleth on my name, and obeyeth my voice, and keepeth my commandments, shall see my face and know that I am." (D&C 93:1.)

Faith of the prophets

He joins with Job in declaring, "I know that my redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth: And though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God." (Job 19:25-26.)

He joins with Alma in his wish:

"O that I were an angel, and could have the wish of mine heart, that I might go forth and speak with the trump of God, with a voice to shake the earth, and cry repentance unto every people!

"Yea, I would declare unto every soul, as with the voice of thunder, repentance and the plan of redemption, that they should repent and come unto our God, that there might not be more sorrow upon all the face of the earth." (Al. 29:1-2.)

And finally, with Nephi he resolves:

"I will go and do the things which the Lord hath commanded, for I know that the Lord giveth no commandments unto the children of men, save he shall prepare a way for them that they may accomplish the thing which he commandeth them." (1 Ne. 3:7.)

I add my personal testimony that I know that I am a son of God, and that you, my beloved listeners, are individually a son or a daughter of God, and that this knowledge implemented in our lives will lift us back into his presence through the atoning sacrifice of our Savior, Jesus Christ; and in his name I leave you this witness, even so. Amen.

After President Romney's address and without announcement, the Tabernacle Choir sang "Thy Will Be Done."

President Harold B. Lee

We heard from President Marion G. Romney, second counselor in the First Presidency of the Church, followed by the Tabernacle Choir singing "Thy Will Be Done."

Many on television and radio have just tuned in on this conference, and we wish to extend to them also our sincere greetings.

Elder Delbert L. Stapley of the Council of the Twelve will now address us.

Elder Delbert L. Stapley

Of the Council of the Twelve

My brothers, sisters, friends, and all who are listening to the messages of this conference via radio and television: It is always difficult to follow President Romney because there is much meat in the talks and sermons he gives.

Our need for God

Today many people of the world are questioning their belief in God, thinking they have progressed intellectually and scientifically beyond their need for his guidance in the affairs of life. They choose to forget that he is the source of all knowledge, he controls all life, and all things are his works of creation.

Man cannot afford to forsake God, depending solely upon his own intelligence. Such a course can only lead to utter confusion and ultimate destruction. Not knowing the mind, will, and purpose of an infinite God, man does not have, regardless of his advanced knowledge, the wisdom and judgment, nor the correct answers to solve all world problems. With implicit faith we must all turn to the God of our fathers in humility and sincere prayer for counsel and guidance.

The prophet Isaiah admonished the children of Israel to "seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near:

"Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon." (Isa. 55:6-7.)

This counsel is as important for us today as it was in those ancient times. Worsening, frustrating world problems, aggravated by a general departure from true Christian teachings and ethical practices, give warning of impending dangers and much sorrow unless man forsakes sin and turns to God in sincere repentance. Only by avoiding the pitfalls of evil and following Isaiah's counsel can we expect to receive God's mercy and his abundant pardon.

The gospel plan

The gospel of Jesus Christ is the only sure basis for a righteous life. No other plan, moral code, or creed can match or supplant its teachings. The gospel is a wise and guiding set of laws, principles, and ordinances for all men to live by.

The weakness and foolishness of many today cause them to be more interested in the teachings of man than in the teachings of God, as found in both ancient and modern scriptures. Unfortunately, for the most part, the thoughts of mortal men are centered in this temporal life and not on the eternal life. The philosophies of men cannot replace nor transcend gospel philosophy as given in the revelations of God, nor can the science of man replace the truths revealed by God through his prophets.

God's ways are not man's ways, but are infinitely superior thereto. The Lord proclaimed to the prophet Isaiah:

"For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, . . .

"For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts." (Isa. 55:8-9.)

By revelation the Savior has furnished the following formula to guide our path to eternal glory:

"Verily, thus saith the Lord: It shall come to pass that every soul who forsaketh his sins and cometh unto me, and calleth on my name, and obeyeth my voice, and keepeth my commandments, shall see my face and know that I am;

"And that I am the true light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world." (D&C 93:1-2.)

Faith in God

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints teaches the complete way of life. Our whole life requires that we reach constantly for high ideals and noble standards of true Christian conduct. The faith of Latter-day Saints should not depend upon the wisdom of men, but upon the knowledge and power of God.

"Be not deceived," warned the apostle Paul; "God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.

"For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." (Gal. 6:7-8.)

Seek learning by faith and earnest prayer to know the mind and will of the Lord. Have the courage to obey. Remember, the Lord gives no commandment or law unto the children of men that he himself does not obey. Obedience is a loving principle of a just God, and through obedience we can gain power from on high.

Repentance

In this mortal life we not only have the opportunity, but the moral obligation, to right our wrongs. We should repent of our evil doings and confess them in order to give our lives spiritual direction. We are counseled to have faith in our Eternal Father and in his Son, our Redeemer. We should seek the desire, through righteous living, to once again dwell with them in the heavenly mansions they have prepared for the faithful. The following scripture sustains this thought:

"For if you will that I give you a place in the celestial world, you must prepare yourselves by doing the things which I have commanded you and required of you." (D&C 78:7.)

It is unfortunate that so many have to learn the lessons of life the hard way, but what a great blessing it is to have an Eternal Father who cares enough to teach us, to bring us to repentance, and to forgive. Hear the words of encouragement as given to the prophet Ezekiel: "Have I any pleasure at all that the wicked should die? saith the Lord God: and not that he should return from his ways, and live?" (Ezek. 18:23.)

The importance of man

The Lord expressed to Moses great concern for the welfare of his children when he said: "... behold, this is my work and my glory—to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man." (Moses 1:39.)

Immortality is assured to all of us through the atonement of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. But eternal life is a personal responsibility we must earn and be worthy of.

David the Psalmist emphasized the importance of man in this inspired statement:

"What is man, that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man, that thou visitest him?

"For thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, and hast crowned him with glory and honour.

"Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of thy hands; thou hast put all things under his feet." (Ps. 8:4-6.)

Man's recent scientific and technological accomplishments, his desire and courage to explore the universe, and his attainment in so many fields of learning testify he is a child of God and, therefore, should always look to God for guidance and further light and truth.

Unity

God has revealed that he desires all of his people to grow together in the unity of faith, understanding, and devotion. The apostle Paul so encouraged the Corinthian saints: "Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment." (1 Cor. 1:10.)

We are here to help each other progress, to inspire one another unto love and good works, and not just to sit in judgment. Our responsibility is to give encouragement to those who are inactive and erring. We have a duty to "see that there is no iniquity in the Church, neither hardness with each other, neither lying, backbiting, nor evil speaking." (D&C 20:54.)

This teaching was emphasized by the apostle Peter when he gave this advice:

"... be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another, love as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous:"

"Not rendering evil for evil, or railing for railing; but contrariwise blessing; knowing that ye are thereunto called, that ye should inherit a blessing." (1 Pet. 3:8-9.)

Strength of the Church

The real strength of the Church is in the character and dedication of its members. The apostle Paul instructed the Corinthians: "Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel." (1 Cor. 9:14.) This counsel can be applied to every member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints—that by living the gospel and setting a good example we are automatically preaching its tenets and showing the right way for others to follow. The greatest gift we can give another is the gift of a good example.

President Spencer W. Kimball said: "Our challenge today is to be a light unto the world. . . . if the three million members of the Church would live the gospel principles, all the errors of the world would evaporate. The world would come to us, and we would change the frustration of the world to the peace of the gospel." (Church News, February 26, 1972, p. 13.)

I plead with all members of the Church to actively and honestly live the gospel of Christ. Our eternal happiness and joy depends upon the kind of life we chart and live here in mortality. The apostle Paul taught: "Ye cannot drink the cup of the Lord, and the cup of devils: ye cannot be partakers of the Lord's table, and of the table of devils." (1 Cor. 10:21.) In other words, we cannot serve two masters, for either we will hate the one and love the other, or else we will hold to the one and despise the other. We cannot serve both God and mammon. (See Matt. 6:24.)

Obedience to gospel requirements

Anyone who thinks he can obtain eternal goals some other way than outlined in the gospel of Christ should remember the Savior classified such as a thief and robber. (See John 10:1.) Christ gave this parable to his disciples:

"Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchant man, seeking goodly pearls:

"Who, when he had found one pearl of great price, went and sold all that he had, and bought it." (Matt. 13:45-46.)

Each of us has the responsibility to seek that goodly pearl, the kingdom of heaven, which is, according to the Savior's parable, the pearl of great price. Its attainment is worth every effort and sacrifice we make. To be saved in the kingdom of God is the greatest of all the gifts of God, for there is no gift greater than the gift of salvation, and he that hath eternal life, proclaims the Lord, is rich. (See D&C 6:13, 7.)

To those members who are not living the gospel, I challenge you to do so, obeying all gospel requirements and attending church regularly for a full year. Then compare your life after a year's trial of faithful gospel living with your previous manner of living, and ask yourself conscientiously which way is best. Give the gospel a chance in your life by living it, to prove its worth and value to you and to your family.

The Holy Ghost

Live to be worthy of the companionship of the Holy Ghost. If you have its spiritual influence, it will bring conviction into your hearts. It will build testimony and create in you a desire to love the Lord. You will manifest that love by keeping his laws and commandments and serving him. The Holy Spirit will testify to the truth of these teachings and you will know, as the apostle Paul knew, that the gospel of Jesus Christ is the power of God unto salvation. (See Rom 1:16.)

It will also give you the perfect assurance that the Lord's way is the only way one can find the abundant life the Savior promised.

I extend this challenge to all people everywhere who desire to know the truth and who are not satisfied with their present lives and associations. It takes courage to accept the challenge to seek the Lord while he may be found and call upon him while he is near; but I promise you, if you do so, it will pay off in dividends of peace of mind, joy of heart, comfort of soul, satisfaction of personal needs, and a love that never fails.

Personal Testimony

Now, brothers, sisters, and friends, I know that God lives. I know that Jesus is the Christ, our Redeemer and Savior, the very Son of God. He sacrificed his own life upon the cross that we might live eternally. He broke the bonds of death through his resurrection, which guarantees the resurrection of all mankind. He bought us with the price of his own blood. We can show our gratitude by living righteously and setting a proper example to all people everywhere.

May God bless and guide us aright; may we be blessed with the spiritual strength to close the door to all temptations of evil and walk uprightly before the Lord, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

After Elder Stapley's address, the choir sang the hymn, "An Angel from on High," without announcement.

President Harold B. Lee

He to whom we have just listened is Elder Delbert L. Stapley of the Council of the Twelve, followed by the choir singing "An Angel from on High."

The choir and congregation will now join in singing "Come, O Thou King of Kings" following which we shall hear from Elder Sterling W. Sill, Assistant to the Twelve.

The choir and congregation sang "Come, O Thou King of Kings."

President Harold B. Lee

To those of the television and radio audience who have just joined us in this sixth session of the 143rd Annual Conference of the Church, we are convened in the historic Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City, Utah.

We shall now hear from Elder Sterling W. Sill, Assistant to the Twelve. He will be followed by Elder Joseph Anderson, Assistant to the Twelve.

Elder Sterling W. Sill

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

My brothers and sisters: I appreciate very much this privilege of having some part with you in these great general conferences of the Church. This is the place where we come each six months to be instructed in our duties and built up in our faith. This is where some of the most important business of the Church is transacted. And then twice each year we have this thrilling, exciting experience of holding up our hands and making a personal covenant with the Lord that we will sustain and support those who are placed in authority over us in the Church and that we will also keep all of the Lord's commandments.

The other evening I reread Saint Paul's famous twelfth chapter of First Corinthians, in which he compared the various parts of the human body with the spiritual gifts and ecclesiastical offices which have been placed in the Church. He said that all were necessary and that the eye could not say to the hand, "I have no need of thee." And each six months, as I see the thousands of raised hands in this assembly, I like to think of the great power and many important duties, both symbolic and otherwise, that we hold in our hands.

Uses of our hands

The Lord has placed in our hands the responsibility for working out our eternal exaltation in fear and trembling before him. When we are sick we have hands placed upon our heads and we are given a blessing for the restoration of our health. By the laying on of hands we confirm people members of the Church. We confer the Holy Ghost. We ordain people to the priesthood, and we set them apart for that portion of the work of the Lord that they are called to perform. We raise our hands in salute. We hold them over our hearts as we take our pledge of allegiance to the flag. We clasp hands in friendship and fellowship. We lay them upon the shoulders of our friends to give commendation and encouragement. With a pair of willing, ambitious, capable, clean hands, we can move mountains and we can save souls.

It was probably one of the greatest good fortunes of our lives when creation decided to flatten out the ends of both of our arms and place a hand on each one. When you put on your shirt in the morning, just imagine how you would get along if you had any other device except a hand on the end of your arm. Just suppose that you had a hoof or a claw or a wing, or a pair of pliers.

The story is told of a young man who went blind in his early youth. Many years later after an operation, the first thing that his newly restored vision rested upon was his own hand, and he thought he had never imagined anything quite so wonderful as his own hand with its circulation system, its communication system, its temperature control, its self-healing ability, and its wonderful covering of skin.

Our fingers

Or think of the usefulness of these wonderful little bony levers that we call fingers. They can readily be trained to play the piano, dial telephone numbers, and do the accounting. Someone once said that a man's best friends are his fingers. He said, "About the only thing that a man can really count on these days are his fingers."

I would like to remind you of an assignment that the Lord once gave to the fingers of the Israelites when he instituted this ancient custom of wearing phylacteries. The Lord knew then what every one of us ought to know now, that there are certain passages in the scriptures that must never be forgotten if our lives are to be successful. Therefore, to help the people to remember, he required that they write some of these passages down on pieces of parchment, encase them in little leather tubes, and bind them across their foreheads and between their eyes. They were required to hang them around their necks and bind them on their arms like wrist watches and wear them like rings upon their fingers. About this custom the Lord said to the people: "And these words, which I command thee this day, shall be in thine heart:

"And thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up.

"And thou shalt bind them for a sign upon thine hand, and they shall be as frontlets between thine eyes." (Deut. 6:6-8.)

You will recall that your mother used to make an interesting adaptation of this idea. When she sent you on an important errand, the purpose of which she did not want you to forget, she helped you to remember by tying a red string on your finger with a bow on the top so that no matter where you went or what you did, you would always remember what your mother wanted you to do. And that is about what the Lord did to the children of Israel.

When I raise up my hand to make my personal covenant with the Lord, I try to imagine which phylacteries he would most like to see on my hand, and here are some of the things that I have been thinking about.

The thumb

The first finger on the hand is the thumb. The thumb serves as the anchor man of the hand. And the first law of any success says that "you must know your business." Lord Bacon said, "Knowledge is power." Jesus said, "... this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent." (John 17:3.)

Dr. Henry C. Link once pointed out that "nothing puts so much order into human life as to live by a set of sound principles." And the most sound principles are the principles of the gospel of Jesus Christ. However, before we can live by them very effectively, we must know what they are.

The first question that Adam and Eve were asked to decide when they were placed in the Garden of Eden was whether or not they would eat the fruit from the tree of knowledge of good and evil. And after they had eaten, God said, “. . . the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil.” (Gen. 3:22.)

I would just like to point out in passing that the right kind of knowledge still tends to have that effect upon people. It still tends to make men and women become as God. A flaming sword was placed in the Garden of Eden to guard the tree of life, but fortunately for us there is no flaming sword guarding the tree of knowledge, and each one of us may eat to his heart's content. And maybe you can think of something more exciting than that, but I don't know what it would be. In this great age of restoration and enlightenment we can know about as much as we want to know about any subject, including God and his program for our eternal exaltation.

The second finger (Pointing finger)

The second finger is the pointing finger. This is the finger you use to show people the way. This is the directing finger. And the second law of success says that you must be a convert before you can be a disciple. You must be a convert before you can be a leader. You must be a convert before you can show other people the way.

Jesus said to Peter, “Simon, . . . when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren.” (Luke 22:31-32.) Peter may have been a little bit offended at this, as he probably felt that as the chief apostle, he was already converted; but what happened that very night at the house of Caiaphas when he denied the Lord three times may have indicated that even Peter was not fully converted. And it would help us if we made up a great credenda of beliefs and had strong, well-worked-out convictions centered in each one.

The third finger (Big finger)

The third finger is the big finger. This is the power finger. It has the best location on the hand. The third law of success says that you must WANT to succeed—in capital letters. If I want to succeed in letters an inch high, I will fail. But if I want to succeed in letters a yard high, then I will succeed.

The Lord said, “. . . if ye have desires to serve God ye are called to the work.” (D&C 4:3.) If we don't WANT to do it we can't do it. Alma said that God grants unto every man according to his desires. (See Al. 29:4.) And we ought to spend a lot more time than we ordinarily do in increasing the volume and intensity of our righteous desires.

A young man once came to Socrates and said, “Mr. Socrates, I have come sixteen hundred miles to talk to you about wisdom and learning.” He said, “You are a man of wisdom and learning and I would like to be a man of wisdom and learning. Would you teach me how to be a man of wisdom and learning?”

Socrates said, “Come, follow me.” And he led the way down to the seashore.

Then they waded out into the water up to their waists. Then Socrates seized his friend and held his head under the water. His friend struggled and kicked and bucked and tried to get away but Socrates held him down. Now if you hold somebody's head under the water long enough he will eventually become fairly peaceable, and when this man had quit kicking, Socrates carried him out on the bank and laid him out to dry, and he went back to the marketplace.

After this man had thawed out a little bit he came back to Socrates to find the reason for this rather unusual behavior, and Socrates said to him, "When your head was under the water, what was the one thing you wanted more than anything else?"

And he said, "More than anything else I wanted air."

Then Socrates said, "When you want wisdom and learning like you wanted air, you won't need to ask anybody to give it to you."

When we really WANT to be disciples of Christ, in capital letters, when we really WANT to be servants of the Master, then everything else will be easy. Someone once said to Mozart, "Would you teach me how to write symphonies?" Mozart said, "You are too young to write symphonies." The young man said, "But you were fifteen years younger than I am when you began writing symphonies." Mozart said, "But I didn't have to ask anybody to teach me." Only when we get some of these great qualities inside of ourselves are we in a position to make progress.

The fourth finger (Ring finger)

Now the fourth finger is the ring finger. This is the finger that you use to fall in love with. This is the finger you get married with. This is the family finger. This is where you wear your family home evening phylactery. This is the finger that represents the source of most of your education and your satisfactions and your eternal happiness for both here and hereafter.

Shakespeare said, "No profit comes where there is no pleasure taken." You can't do very well that which you don't enjoy doing. If we don't get great pleasure out of our families, we should repent, because we are doing something wrong. If the work of the Lord seems burdensome and makes us weary, or if we don't get exhilaration and uplift out of that part of the work of the world that life has given us to do, then we should repent. We need some more powerful satisfactions from life.

The last finger (Little finger)

Now the last finger is the little finger. This is the weakest finger. This is the finger that has the poorest position on the hand, and we might imagine that we could just take him off the team and throw him away without losing very much. However, the big finger cannot say to the little finger, "I have no need of thee." The little finger may come at the end of the line-up, but that is the quarterback position, and you don't need a great big man to be the quarterback, providing the other members of the team are fully qualified and effectively functioning. That is, the thumb knows his business backwards and forwards and upside down and standing on his head. The pointing finger has some powerful, well-developed convictions about it; the big finger WANTS to do it, in capital letters; the ring finger gets great satisfaction from doing it; and all the little finger has to do is to do it. He is the worker. He is the one who takes care of the mechanics of production. He is the one that handles the checkup and does the follow-through. He is the one Jesus came calling for when he pleaded for "doers of the word" and not just hearers and talkers only.

Someone has said, "My, oh my, what miracles we could accomplish if our hands moved as fast as our tongues." He said, "After all is said and done, there is usually a lot more said than done."

Personal covenant

As I sit here on this platform each conference and raise up my hand to make my personal covenant with the Lord, it is stimulating to me to remember that the President of the Church sits directly behind me and God is over my head, and I would not like to have either of them feel that my hand was not clean or that any of my necessary phylacteries were missing. And if I had the gift of speech and the power to plant a conviction that I would like to have, I would say to the millions of people in the world who are earnestly seeking to be disciples of the Master to hold up their hands to God and make a solemn covenant with him to keep all of his commandments.

And I would remind everyone of that thrilling occasion when Moses was leading the children of Israel in their battle against the Amalekites. Moses took the rod of God in his hands and went to the top of a sacred mount, where he held up his hands to God over the battle; and as long as Moses held up his hands, Israel prevailed. But when he let his hands down, the Amalekites prevailed. And as Moses' arms became heavy with weariness, Aaron and Hur stood on either side of Moses and helped him to hold up his hands until the battle was won. (See Exod. 17:8-12.)

If we all hold up clean, honest, industrious hands to God, then his work will prevail. And then it will not be long before the prayer of the Master is fulfilled wherein he said to his Father, "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven." (Matt. 6:10.) And may God bless you, my brothers and sisters, that all of us together may effectively hold up our hands to God and that our covenants may be acceptable to him. For this I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

We have just listened to Elder Sterling W. Sill, Assistant to the Twelve. Elder Joseph Anderson, Assistant to the Twelve, will now address us.

Elder Joseph Anderson

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

Enoch, the sixth from Adam, was most certainly one of the great prophets of all time, for he walked and talked with the Lord for three hundred years, according to the scriptures. Imagine the understanding that entered his mind, the enlargement of his soul, and the eternal truths that were revealed to him by the Creator of the earth and the heavens.

Revelation to Enoch

In the Book of Moses in the Pearl of Great Price, we read:

"And I saw the Lord; and he stood before my face, and he talked with me, even as a man talketh one with another, face to face; and he said unto me: Look, and I will show unto thee the world for the space of many generations." (Moses 7:4.)

The Lord showed unto Enoch all the inhabitants of the earth, and he told him all the doings of the children of men. He saw the wickedness of the people, the flood which covered the earth in the days of Noah. He saw the day of the coming of the Son of Man in the flesh in the meridian of time; he beheld him lifted upon the cross; he saw the mourning of the creations of God and heard the earth groan; and in answer to Enoch's inquiry and pleading, the Lord said to Enoch:

"As I live, even so will I come in the last days, in the days of wickedness and vengeance. . . the day shall come that the earth shall rest, but before that day the heavens shall be darkened, and a veil of darkness shall cover the earth; and the heavens shall shake, and also the earth; and great tribulations shall be among the children of men, but my people will I preserve." (Moses 7:60-61.)

Plan fully charted

Our Father and his Beloved Son knew before man was placed upon the earth, and before this world was created, the story of man's existence upon this earth—the plan of life here and salvation and exaltation in the life to come. The dispensations of time were understood, the purpose of earth life was known, and the development of that plan was fully charted. Otherwise, how could the Lord show unto Enoch, as he did to other prophets also, the history of this world, including the families that should dwell upon the earth throughout the centuries of its existence?

Rulers chosen

In the Book of Abraham we read:

"Now the Lord had shown unto me, Abraham, the intelligences that were organized before the world was; and among all these there were many of the noble and great ones;

"And God saw these souls that they were good, and he stood in the midst of them, and he said: These I will make my rulers; for he stood among those that were spirits, and he saw that they were good; and he said unto me: Abraham, thou art one of them; thou wast chosen before thou wast born." (Abr. 3:22-23.)

In the first chapter of the book of Jeremiah in the Bible, the Lord, in speaking to the prophet Jeremiah, said: "Before I formed thee in the belly I knew thee; and before thou camest forth out of the womb I sanctified thee, and I ordained thee a prophet unto the nations." (Jer. 1:5.)

Gospel dispensations

Not only did the Lord know who were to be his rulers, but undoubtedly there was a chart or outline prepared showing the times of the various dispensations of the gospel, the things that would happen in those dispensations, and the conditions that would precede those periods of time.

The scriptures record the prophecies of God's servants relative to these things. And from the time of Adam, the Lord through his prophets has foretold the events that would precede his second coming, the time when the gospel of our Lord should be restored to earth and proclaimed to all mankind.

Nebuchadnezzar's dream

When King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon conquered Israel, he arranged to have brought to Babylon some of the princes of Israel; the record says: "Children in whom was no blemish, but well favoured, and skilful in all wisdom, and cunning in knowledge, and understanding science. . . ." (Dan. 1:4.) Among these princes who were brought into Babylon was the Hebrew prophet, Daniel.

In the book of Daniel in the Bible, we read of a dream that Nebuchadnezzar had, which dream gave him great concern. The account says that upon awakening he was unable to recall the dream. He called upon the wise men of Babylon, the magicians, the sorcerers and Chaldeans, to tell him the dream and to give him the interpretation thereof. This, of course, was an unusual request, and these wise men were greatly agitated; they were unable to comply with the king's demand.

Daniel's interpretation

The king had told them that if they did not make these things known to him, they would be destroyed. Daniel, recognizing the predicament, inquired of the Lord and was inspired by him to make known to Nebuchadnezzar the information he requested. He recalled to the king the dream and gave him the interpretation thereof.

In his dream Nebuchadnezzar had seen a great image like unto a man. The head of the image was of gold and represented the Babylonian kingdom of Nebuchadnezzar. The other various parts of the image represented the kingdoms that would follow. The account relates that, among other things, Daniel reminded the king: "Thou sawest till that a stone was cut out without hands, which smote the image upon his feet that were of iron and clay, and brake them to pieces." (Dan. 2:34.) He further said that "in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed. . . ." (Dan. 2:44.)

The Lord knew in the days of Nebuchadnezzar the kingdoms that would come forth upon the earth. He knew the time when his kingdom, God's kingdom, would be set up. He knew those choice souls, his prophets in this dispensation, Joseph Smith and those who have succeeded him. He knew and knows today the destiny of his church and kingdom, that it will roll forth and accomplish the purposes indicated in that remarkable dream.

Callings foretold

How is it possible that in our day through his patriarchs and prophets the Lord can and does make known conditions pertaining to the future? How can they foretell that certain persons will be apostles and prophets in his church, even when such individuals are merely small children or young men at the time of the foretelling?

As an illustration, it was made known to Presidents Joseph F. Smith, Heber J. Grant, David O. McKay, and others that they would one day be in the leading councils of the Church, that they would be apostles of the Lord Jesus Christ, that they would become presidents of the Church in this dispensation. And to many others it has been made known that they would be appointed to positions of eminence, which predictions have been fulfilled.

President Joseph F. Smith

". . . both Presidents Wilford Woodruff and Lorenzo Snow had prophesied that Joseph F. Smith [the father of President Joseph Fielding Smith] would sometime become president of the Church. Thirty-seven years earlier in the Hawaiian Islands when President Snow, then a member of the Council of Twelve, nearly lost his life by drowning, he declared that the Lord made known to him 'that this young man, Joseph F. Smith. . . would some day be the Prophet of God on the earth.' President Woodruff was once relating to a group of children some incidents in the life of the Prophet Joseph Smith. 'He turned to Elder Joseph F. Smith and asked him to arise to his feet. Elder Smith complied. "Look at him, children," Wilford Woodruff said, ". . . He will become the President of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. I want everyone of you to remember what I have told you this morning." " " (Joseph Fielding Smith, Jr., and John J Stewart, The Life of Joseph Fielding Smith [Deseret Book Co., 1972], p. 124.)

President Heber J. Grant

When Heber J. Grant, who became the seventh president of the Church, was a child playing on the floor in a Relief Society meeting, Eliza R. Snow, who was truly a prophetess, gave him a blessing in tongues, which was interpreted by Sister Zina Y. Card, to the effect that that little boy would someday be an apostle of the Lord Jesus Christ.

On another occasion Heber C. Kimball, one of the counselors to President Brigham Young in the First Presidency of the Church, stood that same boy on a table and prophesied that someday he would be a greater man in the Church than his father, and his father, Jedediah M. Grant, was a counselor to President Brigham Young.

Again, when Brother Grant, at the age of 24 years, was president of the Tooele Stake, Patriarch John Rowberry gave him a patriarchal blessing in which he was told that he would someday be in the leading councils of the Church; and after the blessing was given, he told Brother Grant: "Heber, I dare not tell you what I saw when I had my hands upon your head."

Brother Grant later, after becoming president of the Church, said that when Brother Rowberry made that statement it went through his mind just as if a voice said it, "You will someday be the president of the Church." Brother Grant thought it was such a presumption on his part to even think such a thought that he never mentioned it to anyone until after he did become president of the Church.

President David O. McKay

On one occasion, when President David O. McKay was in his youth serving as a missionary in the land of Scotland, a very spiritual missionary meeting was held under the direction of Elder James McMurrin, a counselor in the mission presidency. As testimonies were borne and spiritual experiences mentioned, President McMurrin turned to President McKay and said: "Elder McKay, I'll say to you as the Savior said to Peter, 'Satan hath desired to have you, that he may sift you as wheat: But I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not: and when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren.'" He then said, "If you are faithful you will yet stand in the leading councils of the Church."

Other similar experiences could be related.

As was the case with Abraham and Jeremiah and others of the ancient prophets, these men, leaders of God's kingdom in this dispensation, were chosen before they were born to represent him in this last dispensation.

Events of last dispensation

It is interesting to read the history of the past wherein are related conditions leading up to the ushering in of this dispensation of the gospel: the work that was done by the reformers, Luther, Calvin, Knox, and others; the manner in which the way was opened for the printing of the Bible so that the people generally could have the privilege of reading God's word; the miraculous development of the art of printing; how the spirit of freedom came into the hearts of people who wanted to worship God according to the dictates of their conscience; the coming of the Pilgrim fathers to this land in search of freedom and liberty; the war for independence; the establishment of the Constitution—all looking forward to the time and preparing the way for the restoration of the gospel, the opening of this dispensation.

The dispensation of the fulness of times was introduced upon the earth by the visit to the boy Joseph Smith of the Father and the Son and other heavenly beings. Darkness was dissipated and there came an outpouring of light and intelligence. The kingdom of God, as indicated in the dream of Nebuchadnezzar, has been established upon the earth and is rolling forth as the stone cut out of the mountain without hands, and it will continue to do so, looking forward to the time of the coming of the Lord.

The timetable of life

Through his experience and his omniscience, our Heavenly Father knows the end from the beginning. Through his prophets he has revealed and does reveal the history of mankind, the timetable of life upon this planet.

This is the dispensation of the fulness of times, when the keys of all former dispensations have been given to the prophets of the restoration, a time when God has spoken from the heavens and angels have appeared to man, a time when men and women have the Holy Ghost conferred upon them, and by the power of the Holy Ghost we may know the truth of all things. There is need for this great power in the earth today.

The history of this world is in fulfillment of the plan prepared in the heavens before this earth was created. That which the world calls Mormonism is based upon the rock of revelation. It is the gospel of Jesus Christ, the eternal truth, the plan of life and salvation. I testify to these things in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

We have just listened to Elder Joseph Anderson, an Assistant to the Twelve.

We will now be pleased to hear from President Spencer W. Kimball, President of the Council of the Twelve, who will be our concluding speaker.

President Spencer W. Kimball

President of the Council of the Twelve

Brothers and sisters and friends: Much has already been said in this conference about the powerful influence for good that the family and home training have been and will be upon the rising generation. For the past three months President Harold B. Lee has been speaking through film the great story Strengthening the Home. It is going to many people in many lands and in many languages.

Family and home life

It seems that while the world accepts the spurious and the vulgar and the errors, there is an increasing number of wise leaders who write and speak of the importance of the family and home life.

One such leader wrote: "... strong family life is indispensable, not merely to the culture but actually the survival of any people."

(Paul Popenoe, Family Life, September 1972.)

He continues: "In the history of mankind one nation after another has followed this pattern [of degrading the family life and substituting other patterns for it] and they have disappeared."

The family provides the involvement in selfless activities and the acceptance of responsibility. He says, again:

"... for the well being of the community; for the very existence of the nation, one of the first questions asked about any proposed change in the culture should be, 'Will it strengthen the family?'"

Great plan of life

The Lord organized the whole program in the beginning with a father who procreates, provides, and loves and directs, and a mother who conceives and bears and nurtures and feeds and trains. The Lord could have organized it otherwise but chose to have a unit with responsibility and purposeful associations where children train and discipline each other and come to love, honor, and appreciate each other. The family is the great plan of life as conceived and organized by our Father in heaven.

To any thoughtful person it must be obvious that intimate association without marriage is sin; that children without parenthood and family life is tragedy; that society without basic family life is without foundation and will disintegrate into nothingness and oblivion.

The Father knew all this when he gave this command to his children in November 1831. He was not arguing that there should be families. He seemed to take that for granted and commanded: "... as parents have children in Zion ...

they shall also teach their children to pray and to walk uprightly before the Lord." (D&C 68:25, 28.)

We see the blessings of family life as we make contrasts. In the address above referred to, President Lee gave these figures:

"Of 180,000 divorces recorded by the Census Bureau ... 57 percent were in homes where there were no children; 21.2 percent where there was only one child; and in families with five or more children, divorces were less than one percent."

This is a telling story.

Training in the home

Once when I talked to leaders in a foreign world where different ideologies touch their children, I asked how the parents were able to hold their children and keep them from the evil, and their reply was so natural and so proper:

"We train our children in our homes so completely in the way of right and truth that the destructive, godless philosophies and heresies of their other teachers run off without penetrating, like water on a duck's back, and our children remain true to the faith."

Ah, that is the answer. Family life, home life, home evenings, dedicated, selfless parents. That is the way the Lord ordained our lives to be.

Checklist for success

More than a decade ago a major in the U.S. Air Force told of his test flights. He was born of goodly parents who taught him righteousness. He had flown 25 different types of military aircraft in 4,000 hours in the air. He had flown 142 combat missions in Korea and had received many distinguished medals. He told us that "before takeoff every pilot takes a few moments to make a last-minute check of his engine, flight controls, hydraulic and pneumatic systems and other essential sub-systems of his aircraft to be sure the flight can at least begin safely. . . . His reactions to emergency conditions must be instinctive and as infallible as human thought and reflexes permit.

" . . . Yet, there is something missing on the printed checklist which to me has become as necessary to a successful flight as lowering the wheels for a smooth landing. It is a prayer to ask my Father in heaven to bless me that my best judgment and skill will guide my actions, especially in periods of stress. There have been several instances . . . in which I know the answer to this prayer has been received with dramatic suddenness. . . ."

Being born of goodly parents in a goodly home with goodly training in his infancy, childhood, and youth, he seemed to feel secure in his hazardous work.

Preparation dispels fear

This major was unafraid, for he was prepared. He knew the power of the Lord's statement: "If ye are prepared, ye shall not fear." (D&C 38:30.)

Someone said that "fear and fortitude are opposites but both are necessary for the growth of character. . . . wholesome fear generates its own antibodies."

These three lines were lettered on the mantel in an English hotel at the time of Dunkirk, a time when every man or boy who could navigate, no matter how amateurishly, found a hero in himself brave enough to help rescue England's army:

"Fear knocked at the door.

Faith answered.

No one was there."

During the blitzkrieg, many a man saw a sign down by the London docks and followed its suggestion: "If your knees are knocking, kneel on them."

Again, the revelation says, "If ye are prepared, ye shall not fear."

Early training

That preparation comes from infancy and childhood training, when faith is born and character established. It is a bit late to try to build faith when the ship is sinking or the plane is falling or the head-on collision is certain.

One air navigator gave us this: "I had said my prayer back in the fifteenth orbit"; and another: "Courage is said to be fear that has said its prayers."

If children are tuned in on the right wave length, if they are taught early the responsibilities of time and eternities, they will usually react properly when engulfed in emergencies. If they have conscientiously and faithfully done all that is expected of them, nothing can be too far wrong. The Nephite prophet insisted: ". . . ye pour out your souls in your closets, and your secret places; and in your wilderness." (Al. 34:26.)

Legacy to children

And what a great legacy to our children Isaiah promised: "And all thy children shall be taught of the Lord and great shall be the peace of thy children." (Isa. 54:13.)

Surely every good parent would like this peace for his offspring. It comes from the simple life of the true Latter-day Saint as he makes his home and family supreme.

"Pray in your families unto the Father, always in my name, that your wives and your children may be blessed." (3 Ne. 18:21.)

Is that too much to ask?

I was in Idaho Falls and was the guest in a home of a typical Church family. There were a dedicated set of parents and many children. The oldest was in military duty in the dreaded South Pacific, and the hearts of the family followed him from place to place. They handed me his latest letter from the war zone. I read this:

"There have been times when we were so scared, we would tremble, but the fear was out of our minds with prayer and the knowledge that we were being guided by the Lord.

"Dad, I love my religion and I am proud that I had someone like you and Mother to teach me to pray. Then I also know that you are praying for me each morning and night. . . ."

Spirituality in the home

Spirituality is born in the home and is nurtured in the home evenings, in the twice-a-day and oftener daily prayers, in the weekly meetings when the family goes en masse. That spirituality as the foundation of one's life comes to his rescue when emergency strikes.

Security is not born of inexhaustible wealth but of unquenchable faith. And generally that kind of faith is born and nurtured in the home and in childhood.

Prayer is the passport to spiritual power.

The time at home

From World War II comes a story of a young Utah boy who was called to serve his country in the faraway places across several time zones.

On his wrist he wore the conventional wristband watch to tell him the time in the area in which he was living. But strangely enough, he carried a larger, old-time heavier watch in his pocket, which gave another time of day. His buddies noted that frequently he would look at his wrist watch, then turn to the old-fashioned one in his pocket, and this led them, in their curiosity, to ask him why the additional watch. Unembarrassed, he promptly said:

"The wristwatch tells me the time here where we are, but the big watch which Pa gave me tells me what time it is in UTAH. You see," he continued, "mine is a large family—a very close family. When the big watch says 5 a.m. I know Dad is rolling out to milk the cows. And any night when it says 7:30, I know the whole family is around a well-spread table on their knees thanking the Lord for what's on the table and asking Him to watch over me and keep me clean and honorable. It's those things that make me want to fight when the goin' gets tough. . . . I can find out what time it is here easy enough. What I want to know is what time it is in UTAH." (Adapted from Vaughn R. Kimball, "The Right Time at Home," Reader's Digest, May 1944, p. 43.)

I knew this family well. I knew the sailor slightly. I knew this father. His cows had to feed a large family, but his greater interest was the growing children who needed more than milk and bread. I have knelt in mighty prayer with this wonderful family. The home training has carried through to the eternal blessing of this large family.

Faithfulness to family duties

O my beloved hearers, what a world it would be if a million families in this church were to be on their knees like this every night and morning! And what a world it would be if nearly a hundred million families in this great land and other hundreds in other lands were praying for their sons and daughters twice daily. And what a world this would be if a billion families through the world were in home evenings and church activity and were on their physical knees pouring out their souls for their children, their families, their leaders, their governments!

This kind of family life could bring us back toward the translation experience of righteous Enoch. The millennium would be ushered in. Enoch was asked questions about himself; he answered, among other things, ". . . my father taught me in all the ways of God." (Moses 6: 41.) And Enoch walked with God and he was not, for God took him.

Enoch and his people dwelt in righteousness in the City of Holiness, even Zion. And Zion was taken up into heaven.

Yes, here is the answer: righteous, teaching parents; obedient, loving children; faithfulness to family duties.

These qualities in a home make for security and character in the lives of children.

Parental love

The following verses of Adelaide Proctor, written more than a century ago, emphasize unity of the family and real parental love.

A childless man of wealth offers ease and security in exchange for one of seven children. Which shall it be?

"Which shall it be? Which shall it be?

I looked at John, John looked at me,
And when I found that I must speak,
My voice seemed strangely low and weak:

"Tell me again what Robert said,"
And then I, listening, bent my head.
This is his letter:

'I will give

*A house and land while you shall live,
If, in return, from out your seven,
One child to me for aye is given.'*

"I looked at John's old garments worn;

I thought of all that he had borne
Of poverty, and work, and care,
Which I, though willing, could not share;

I thought of seven young mouths to feed,

Of seven little children's need,
And then of this.

"Come, John," said I,
'We'll choose among them as they lie
Asleep.' So, walking hand in hand,
Dear John and I surveyed our band:
First to the cradle lightly stepped,
Where Lilian, the baby, slept.
Softly the father stooped to lay
His rough hand down in a loving way,

When dream or whisper made her stir,

And huskily he said: 'Not her!'

"We stooped beside the trundle bed,
And one long ray of twilight shed
Athwart the boyish faces there,
In sleep so beautiful and fair;
I saw on James's rough, red cheek
A tear undried. E'er John could speak,

'He's but a baby, too,' said I,
And kissed him as we hurried by.

"Pale, patient, Robbie's angel face
Still in his sleep bore suffering's trace.

'No, for a thousand crowns, not him!'

He whispered, while our eyes were dim.

"Poor Dick! bad Dick! our wayward son—

Turbulent, restless, idle one—Could he be spared? Nay, He who gave

Bade us befriend him to the grave;
Only a mother's heart could be Patient enough for such as he;
'And so,' said John, 'I would not dare

To take him from her bedside prayer.'

"Then stole we softly up above,

And knelt by Mary, child of love;
 'Perhaps for her 'twould better be,'
 I said to John. Quite silently
 He lifted up a curl that lay
 Across her cheek in a wilful way,
 And shook his head: 'Nay, love, not thee,'

The while my heart beat audibly.

"Only one more, our eldest lad,
 Trusty and truthful, good and glad,
 So like his father. 'No, John, no!
 I cannot, will not, let him go.'

"And so we wrote, in courteous way,
 We could not give one child away;
 And afterward toil lighter seemed,
 Thinking of that of which we dreamed,

Happy in truth that not one face
 Was missed from its accustomed place;

Thankful to work for all the seven,
 Trusting the rest to One in heaven."

May we in the Church and in this world come to know the Lord's ways and follow them explicitly, I pray.

I add my solemn witness that President Harold B. Lee is the Lord's divinely called prophet to this world,
 in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

After President Kimball's address and without announcement, the Tabernacle Choir sang "Reverently and Meekly Now."

President Harold B. Lee

President Spencer W. Kimball, President of the Council of the Twelve, has just spoken to us followed by the Tabernacle Choir singing "Reverently and Meekly Now."

We are grateful to the owners and managers of over 350 television and radio stations for offering their facilities to make proceedings of the conference available to millions throughout many areas of the world.

The proceedings of this session have been carried from the Tabernacle over direct oceanic cables to a large number of members and friends assembled in chapels throughout Great Britain, Germany, France, Holland, Belgium, and Austria.

We shall now conclude this sixth session of the conference with the Tabernacle Choir singing from the 148th Psalm, "Lord, Who Has Made Us for Thine Own," after which the benediction will be pronounced by Elder Eldred G. Smith, Patriarch to the Church.

This conference will then be adjourned until two o'clock this afternoon.

The Tabernacle Choir sang
 "The 148th Psalm."

The benediction was offered by Elder Eldred G. Smith, Patriarch to the Church.

The conference was adjourned until two o'clock p.m.

THIRD DAY AFTERNOON MEETING

SEVENTH SESSION

The seventh and concluding session of the General Conference began at 2 o'clock p.m. on Sunday, April 8, 1973.

President Harold B. Lee presided and conducted the meeting.

The choral numbers were provided by the Tabernacle Choir, with Jay E. Welch conducting, and Robert Cundick at the organ.

President Lee made the following remarks at the beginning of the session:

President Harold B. Lee

Members of the Church are convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City, Utah in the last general session of the 143rd Annual Conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Sessions of this conference have been carried in the United States and Canada over hundreds of radio and television stations cooperating to provide the extensive coverage of this conference to millions.

Here is an illustration of the report coming in a message from Brisbane, Australia: "Inspiring messages received by way of satellite loud and clear in Brisbane and five relay stations throughout Queensland, Australia. Potential radio audience one million. The saints are extremely grateful for the broadcasts and we in Brisbane fully support you and the other presiding brethren. (signed) William Proctor, Brisbane Stake President."

Many television and radio stations throughout the western part of the United States will carry the proceedings of this session of conference this afternoon.

Broadcasts of both sessions today will be scheduled by Stations KSL Radio and KIRO Radio, Seattle, beginning at midnight tonight.

We welcome all present this afternoon, and extend warm greetings to members of the Church and many friends everywhere who are tuned by radio and television.

The Tabernacle Choir, with Jay Welch conducting and Robert Cundick at the organ, will begin this service by singing, "Our God Is a God of Love." The invocation will then be offered by Elder Theodore M. Burton, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve.

The Tabernacle Choir sang "Our God Is a God of Love."

The opening prayer was offered by Elder Theodore M. Burton, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve.

President Lee

The Tabernacle Choir, directed by Jay Welch, will now sing "What Was Witnessed in the Heavens."

Following the singing, we shall hear from Elder Mark E. Petersen of the Council of the Twelve.

The Tabernacle Choir sang the number "What Was Witnessed in the Heavens."

President Lee

Elder Mark E. Petersen of the Council of the Twelve will now address us. He will be followed by Elder Marion D. Hanks, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve.

Elder Mark E. Petersen

Of the Council of the Twelve

When the Savior established his church during his mortal ministry, and as it was further developed by the twelve apostles of that day, one important fact became conspicuously clear, which is: that salvation comes through the Church.

It does not come through any separate organization or splinter group nor to any private party as an individual. It comes only through the Church itself as the Lord established it.

It was the Church that was organized for the perfecting of the Saints.

It was the Church that was given for the work of the ministry.

It was the Church that was provided to edify the body of Christ, as Paul explained to the Ephesians.

Therefore it was made clearly manifest that salvation is in the Church, and of the Church, and is obtained only through the Church.

The Lord established one strait and narrow way, and understandingly observed that "few there be that find it."

Safeguards

Not only did he provide that salvation should come through his regularly constituted church, but he set up safeguards to protect its members from being tossed to and fro with every wind of doctrine and to preserve them from the sleight of men who, with cunning craftiness, lie in wait to deceive. (See Eph. 4:14.)

Those safeguards, according to Paul's epistle to the Ephesians, rested primarily in the persons of the apostles and prophets whom God placed at the head of the Church for that specific purpose.

They were the inspired leaders in the Church. They were the mouthpieces of the Lord, and their inspired messages to the people were the will of the Lord, the mind of the Lord, the voice of the Lord, and the power of God unto salvation. (See D&C 68:4.)

With such heavenly guidance, none need go astray.

False teachers

But there were men in the Lord's own day who taught false doctrines and led the people into mistaken paths. These the Savior severely criticized, accusing them of apostasy from the very law of Moses which they pretended to preach.

He said to them, "Did not Moses give you the law, and yet none of you keepeth the law?" (John 7:19.)

And again he said, "... had ye believed Moses, ye would have believed me: for he wrote of me." (John 5:46.)

What a sad commentary! Had the people believed Moses, instead of the crafty false teachers of their day, they would have accepted Christ, because Moses wrote of Christ. And if they had accepted Jesus, they would have received salvation through his church.

But being blinded by false teachers, they rejected both Moses and Christ, and thus never joined the Lord's church and hence did not receive the salvation which was available through it.

Testimonies of Christ

Obviously all of the writings of Moses are not in our Bibles of today, but in the Savior's time they must have been available, for Jesus criticized the elders and scribes for not believing what Moses said when he testified of Christ.

Isn't it interesting that Moses testified of the Savior, and that when the people would not believe Moses they therefore were not prepared to receive the Christ either? Do you recall that Paul said the law of Moses was a schoolmaster to bring the people to Christ? (See Gal. 3:24-25.)

Not only did Moses write of the Lord, but the other prophets did likewise. Peter said, in speaking of Jesus, "To him give all the prophets witness, that through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins." (Acts 10:43.)

We read in the 28th chapter of Acts that Paul, while he was in Rome, received many visitors "to whom he expounded and testified the kingdom of God, persuading them concerning Jesus, both out of the law of Moses, and out of the prophets, from morning till evening." (Acts 28:23.)

Obviously, therefore, the scriptures available in that time spoke repeatedly of the Savior as all the prophets gave witness to him.

So there was no excuse for those who led the people astray, persuading them to crucify the Lord, knowing full well that the scriptures spoke plainly of him.

Cults organized

These false teachers of New Testament times established cults of their own, separate and apart from the true work of God, and they, with their man-made traditions, formed the chief opposition to Jesus as he began his ministry.

You are familiar with the names of some of those cults. The Pharisees and the Sadducees are best known. Both were apostate in their teachings. Both were condemned by the Lord, and both developed the religious bigotry which eventually brought about the crucifixion.

Others of these cults included:

The Zadokites, who wanted a stricter observance of the Mosaic laws.

The Essenes, who are believed to have written the Dead Sea Scrolls. They rejected temple worship.

The Zealots, a religious anti-Roman cult.

Among the strongest were the Hellenists, who sought to impose Greek philosophy upon the people, trying to merge it with the Mosaic law. They also rejected temple worship.

A falling away

But a new apostasy developed even during the Lord's own ministry. As early as the events recorded in the sixth chapter of John, this falling away took place. You will recall from reading that chapter in the New Testament that many of his disciples would not accept his pure doctrine and therefore fell away and no longer followed him.

In apparent dismay, Jesus turned to the Twelve and asked, "Will ye also go away?"

Then it was that Simon Peter replied, "Lord, to whom shall we go? thou hast the words of eternal life."

Note if you will that the words of eternal life were not with those who fell away, but rather with those who remained faithful and loyal.

Subsequently, during the administration of the Twelve, serious apostasy developed again. As a result, nearly all of the epistles of the New Testament were written to combat it.

Historians say that within one hundred years after Christ, as many as thirty splinter groups and separate denominations of Christians arose.

Further evidence of early apostasy in the Church is brought forcefully and particularly to our attention by the manner in which Paul wrote his first letter to the Corinthians.

In it he testified that there can be no divisions in Christ. Rather, he said, "... I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment." (1 Cor. 1:10.)

Early denominations

Some of the denominations which developed during the very early years of Christianity were these:

The Judaeo-Christians, who tried to Judaize Christianity and force it to include the Mosaic rites.

The Millenarianists.

The Ebionites, who preserved the custom of using water in the sacrament instead of wine.

The Gnostics, who rejected Jehovah and the Mosaic law.

The Elkesaites, known as baptists.

The Archontics, who taught the existence of a supreme mother in heaven.

The Coptics, who are still extant in Egypt.

The Syriac Christians.

The Mandaeans, another baptist sect.

The Manicheans, and a number of others.

After the fall of Jerusalem about A.D. 70, the Hellenists seized the upper hand in the Christian religion, taking advantage of the Greek influence, which was being superimposed on the existing culture of the area. Greek philosophical ideas entered strongly into the Christian picture, changing the doctrines and practices of the gospel. This will be understood more readily when it is remembered that both Arius and Athanasius of the Nicene Creed controversy were Greek philosophers. This also is why the early New Testament manuscripts were written in Greek.

Avoidance of splinter groups

These bits of history reveal clearly the importance of avoiding splinter groups, for as Paul expressed it, some "saith I am of Paul; and I of Apollos; and I of Cephas" (1 Cor. 1:12), but Christ cannot be divided. There is no Savior but Jesus, and he saves only in his own strait and narrow way and not according to man-made creeds and rituals.

It is all important, then, that members should not separate themselves from the true church, nor apostatize from it, nor be guilty of behavior which would justify their excommunication.

If persons separate themselves from the Lord's church, they thereby separate themselves from his means of salvation, for salvation is through the Church.

Modern cults

Some modern people have created cults of their own, and among them are those who attempt to take refuge in section 85 of the Doctrine and Covenants.

They endeavor to say that the Church has gone astray, that the leaders are no longer inspired, and that "one mighty and strong" is needed to take over the affairs of the Lord. And without any evidence of modesty whatsoever on their parts, they themselves volunteer for the position.

There is one verse particularly in that section which they fail to consider. It is especially pertinent. It says that apostates and others who have been cut off from the Church will not be found among the Saints of the Most High at the last day. Why? Because salvation is in the Church, not elsewhere.

Listen to the Lord's words:

"And they who are of the High Priesthood, whose names are not found written in the book of the law, or that are found to have apostatized, or to have been cut off from the church, as well as the lesser priesthood, or the members, in that day shall not find an inheritance among the Saints of the Most High." (D&C 85:11.)

Other apostates

But cultists are not the only ones who are excommunicated from the Church. There are those who are cut off for moral transgressions and other infractions of the Lord's rules of behavior. They too should ponder this scripture most carefully.

If people believe in God at all, if they have any regard whatever for their own salvation, should they not realize, as is expressed in scripture, that salvation is through the Church, and that if people are cut off from the Church for any reason, they thus lose their inheritance in the kingdom of God?

President Brigham Young was very expressive in describing the fate of apostates when he said:

"Why do people apostatize? You know we are on the 'Old Ship Zion.' We are in the midst of the ocean. A storm comes on, and, as sailors say, she labors very hard. 'I am not going to stay here,' says one; 'I don't believe this is the "Ship Zion."' 'But we are in the midst of the ocean.' 'I don't care, I am not going to stay here.' Off goes the coat, and he jumps overboard. Will he not be drowned? Yes. So with those who leave this Church. It is the 'Old Ship Zion.' Let us stay in it."

And then he added: "If the candle of the Almighty does not shine from this place, you need not seek for its light anywhere else."

And then this mighty man in Israel declared:

"Whenever there is a disposition manifested in any of the members of the Church to question the right of the President of the whole Church to direct in all things, you see manifested evidences of apostasy—of a spirit which, if encouraged, will lead to a separation from the Church and to final destruction; wherever there is a disposition to operate against any legally appointed officer of this Kingdom, no matter in what capacity he is called to act, if persisted in, it will be followed by the same results." So spoke President Brigham Young. (Discourses of Brigham Young [Deseret Book Co., 1943], pp. 82-83, 85.)

Salvation not in splinter groups

The language of the Lord is simple and easily understood. If any have apostatized from the Church or have been cut off by the duly appointed courts provided by the Lord, they shall not find an inheritance among the Saints of the Most High unless they repent.

Salvation is not to be found in splinter groups today any more than it was to be found in the various denominations which polluted the teachings of Moses anciently or which, in the days of early Christianity, transgressed the laws, changed the ordinances, and broke the everlasting covenant.

The Lord says further in this same section of the Doctrine & Covenants: "... all they who are not found written in the book of remembrance shall find none inheritance in that day, but they shall be cut asunder, and their portion shall be appointed them among unbelievers, where are wailing and gnashing of teeth." (D&C 85:9.)

There are some who claim that even though they are excommunicated from the Church, their priesthood and temple blessings are not taken away. Let us remind those persons that the power to seal is also the power to loose, for the Lord has said of his true servants that "whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." (Matt. 16:19; D&C 132:46.) Excommunication takes away all rights, privileges, and blessings of the Church.

What is so precious as salvation? And how is it to be obtained? Only through the Church and "being anxiously engaged" in its program.

There is no other way. If we are not valiant in the testimony of Jesus and if we fail to repent, we lose the crown over the kingdom and are assigned elsewhere. (See D&C 76:79.)

Principle of repentance

But how wonderful is repentance. The Lord has said that if we will repent of our sins and from then on keep all of his statutes, forgiveness will result and reformation is made possible.

What greater promise can the wayward expect?

The Lord came to save sinners. He taught that it is the sick who need the physician. Therefore, he invites the sick—as well as all others—to come unto him, repent, and be cleansed, sanctified, and saved in his kingdom.

"Have I any pleasure at all that the wicked should die? saith the Lord God: and not that he should return from his ways, and live?" (Ezek. 18:23.)

And so in his goodness and mercy, he calls out and says:

"Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.

"Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls.

"For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light." (Matt. 11:28-30.)

But let us remember that his yoke cannot be separated from his church, and his burden requires that each one of us live by every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God. And to this I testify humbly in the sacred name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

Thank you, Elder Petersen, for that most timely message. I am sure there are many who will understand more than they have done heretofore when they are being misled.

We shall now hear from Elder Marion D. Hanks, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve. He will be followed by Elder S. Dilworth Young of the First Council of Seventy.

Elder Marion D. Hanks

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

It is my purpose today to bear testimony to some who have special needs, and to those who have accepted commission from the Lord and covenanted with him to try to help satisfy those needs.

As Christ taught the gospel to the people of this hemisphere, he asked them, "... what manner of men ought ye to be?" and answered, "Verily I say unto you, even as I am." (3 Ne. 27:27.)

As Christians, we accept that instruction reverently as our guide and our goal.

Mission of Christ

We know that Christ loves his Father. He came into the world to do the will of his Father, knowing the part he was to play, the price he would have to pay.

He loves us, and for us he fulfilled his mortal mission with suffering so intense and so deep as to cause him to bleed at every pore. With his blood he bought us, brought us the gift of immortality, and made possible for us all good and lovely things now and eternally.

He was gracious but he was not timid. He taught men the truth about his Father, the living God, and testified of him and of his own atoning mission, even though many who had followed him thereafter no longer walked with him. He cried repentance and was baptized of John in Jordan, and taught all men to do likewise, and promised the obedient and faithful the blessing of the Holy Ghost.

Worth of souls

Christ knows the worth of souls.

He came as Isaiah had prophesied and as he affirmed in the synagogue in Nazareth: "... to preach the gospel to the poor; ... to heal the brokenhearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised." (Luke 4:18.)

He taught the parables of the lost sheep and the lost coin and the lost son, and he lunched with accused Zacchaeus; admonished men to emulate the compassionate act of the demeaned Samaritan—"Go thou and do likewise." He exalted the humble Publican, who, in contrast to the self-righteous Pharisee, "would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven, but smote upon his breast, saying, God be merciful to me a sinner" (Luke 18:13); and he confronted the accusers of the repentant woman.

So closely is he tied with his fellowmen that in one of the most powerful parables he taught that bread given to one of the least of his brethren is bread given to him, and so is any kindness or act of grace or mercy or service. To deny help to one of the least of his brethren, he said, was to deny him.

Message of hope

His message is one of hope and promise and peace to those who mourn the loss of loved ones: "And ye now therefore have sorrow; but I will see you again, and your heart shall rejoice, and your joy no man taketh from you." (John 16:22.)

To the lonely and the hopeless and those who are afraid, his reassurance reaches out: "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee." (Heb. 13:15.)

Christ understands. "Wherefore in all things it behoved him to be made like unto his brethren, that he might be a merciful and faithful high priest in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the sins of the people. For in that he himself hath suffered being tempted, he is able to succour them that are tempted." (Heb. 2:17-18.) "For we have not an high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin." (Heb. 4:15.)

He prayed to the Father for those who were not obedient, and he wept.

He called little children to him and blessed them, and wept.

He taught us to pray.

These and much more he taught and did. They represent the manner of person he was.

The Divine Redeemer

Of course he was more: he was the Divine Redeemer, the Savior of all mankind, the Firstborn in the spirit and the Only Begotten in the flesh. He was the Prince of Peace. He "came into the world . . . to be crucified for the world, and to bear the sins of the world, and to sanctify the world, and to cleanse it from all unrighteousness; That through him all might be saved. . . ." (D&C 76:41-42.)

What he did for us we could never do for ourselves, and his example of love and service and sacrifice and seeking first the kingdom of God is our guidestar and our path.

What does he expect of us?

At his call, commissioned with his holy priesthood, being his agents, on his errand, we are under covenant to represent him faithfully and to do the will of the Father.

Our opportunities

All about us are opportunities.

There came the other day the story of the small boy who had lost his pet and who in tears beseeched his anxious mother for help. She reminded him lovingly that she had tried as hard as she could to find the pet without success. "What more can I do, son?" she asked. "You can cry with me," he said.

"Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ." (Gal. 6:2.)

A cherished friend who works with little children who have difficulties told me recently of a nine-year-old girl who has lived in 17 foster homes. She needs someone to cry with her, and laugh with her, and teach her, and love her.

Not understood

There are so many who are not—or feel they are not—understood. Recently our family visited with a dear friend, Sister Louise Lake, who has lived her gracious, sharing life in a wheelchair for more than a quarter of a century.

Perhaps because our 12-year-old son was with us, Sister Lake told us of another 12-year-old with whom she became acquainted in a rehabilitation center in New York where she was working. The boy had been blind and for most of his 12 years had lived a sad existence, thought to be uneducable, incapable of learning. Then he was given a chance, thank the Lord, and a marvelous spirit and fine mind were discovered. He told his friend that he had thought all his life that being blind was the worst thing that could happen to one—until he met Campy. Campy was Roy Campanella, great athlete, who at the height of his career was rendered physically helpless in an automobile accident. The blind boy said he had decided after meeting Campy that his condition was worse than not being able to see. "But there is something even worse than that," he said. He talked of feeling his way down the hall at the hospital, hearing the scuff of feet as people passed him by. "There is something worse than being blind or crippled, and that is to have people not understand you," he said. "I guess they think that because I am blind I can't hear or speak either."

Friendship of God

There is one who always understands, and those who seek to become the manner of person he is must seek to understand. We are never really alone when we love God and accept the friendship of his loving Son. I think of the mother of 14 children who was asked if she had a favorite. "Well," she said, "if I do, it's the one who is ill until she gets well, or the one who is away until he gets home." So it seems to be with the Lord.

After a meeting with our servicemen at DaNang in South Vietnam, we talked with a senior pilot who had come very close to death that day and who was still shaken. He had a request to make, and he made it shyly, not wanting to impose. "I wonder if you might have just a minute when you get home, Brother Hanks, to call or write a note to my 12-year-old son to tell him that I am all right and that his dad is thinking about him. He was ordained a deacon last Sunday without his father there, and I want him to know how much I love him."

Those nearest us need love also.

Remembering God's mercy

There are so many who grieve and are weighted down because they have not behaved in a way their own conscience can approve. To them the Lord still speaks through his prophets ancient and modern. Recall the words of Jacob to his brethren: "And now my beloved brethren, seeing that our merciful God has given us so great knowledge concerning these things, let us remember him, and lay aside our sins, and not hang down our heads, for we are not cast off. . . ." (2 Ne. 10:20.)

In the last recorded letter of the great prophet Mormon to his son Moroni are written the lamentings of the prophet over the wickedness of the people, described in the record to be "without principle, and past feeling." Mormon's final testimony to his beloved son included this marvelous admonition and explanation of the effect Christ's gifts should have in all of our lives: "My son, be faithful in Christ; and may not the things which I have written grieve thee, to weigh thee down unto death; but may Christ lift thee up, and may his sufferings and death [and his resurrection], . . . and his mercy and long-suffering, and the hope of his glory of eternal life, rest in your mind forever." (Moro. 9:25.)

Lift for the repentant

Christ in our lives is not meant to grieve us or weigh us down into death because we have been imperfect. Through him we may be lifted up by accepting his gifts and his mercy and long-suffering. These blessings we must seek to keep in our minds always. "For how knoweth a man the master whom he has not served, and who is a stranger unto him, and is far from the thoughts and intents of his heart?" (Mosiah 5:13.)

They who would follow him and be the manner of person he is will, as he did, lift up the repentant who suffer and sorrow for sin, and bless them with love and forgiveness.

Of course, all honest men on occasion feel their weakness and groan in the face of their inadequacies and ignorance and pride. Even Job, that good and godly man who possessed a faith which all his afflictions could not shake, bore this witness at the conclusion of his ordeal, when, seeing God, he said, "I know that thou canst do every thing, and that no thought can be withholden from thee. I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear: but now mine eye seeth thee. Wherefore I abhor myself, and repent in dust and ashes." (Job 42:2, 5-6.)

Doing as Christ did

But Christ will lift us up and help us to become as he is as we do as he did; as we love our Father and give him our lives; as we love each other and all men, and learn to live and teach his word; believe in the worth of souls and let our lives be the warrant of our earnestness; mourn with those who mourn, and bring hope to them; understand and comfort those who weep; cry unto the Lord.

"Yea, and when you do not cry unto the Lord, let your hearts be full, drawn out in prayer unto him continually for your welfare, and also for the welfare of those who are around you.

"And now behold, my beloved brethren, I say unto you, do not suppose that this is all; for after ye have done all these things, if ye turn away the needy, and the naked, and visit not the sick and afflicted, and impart of your substance, if ye have, to those who stand in need—I say unto you, if ye do not any of these things, behold, your prayer is vain, and availeth you nothing, and ye are as hypocrites who do deny the faith." (Al. 34:27-28.)

God bless us to look up and to look around and to kneel down, and to be worthy, and to become the manner of person he is, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

Elder Marion D. Hanks, Assistant to the Council of Twelve, has just spoken to us. I am sure you will see revealed his sensitivity to the needs of others, which qualifies him for the great assignment that he has today working among these folks who need so much.

Elder S. Dilworth Young of the First Council of Seventy will now address us.

Elder S. Dilworth Young

Of the First Council of the Seventy

When I decided to choose a subject for this moment, I discovered I did not have enough words in the English language to properly express my true feelings, but it is the only language I know and so I shall have to use them and hope that the prayer of Brother Burton, which he offered at the beginning, will be applied to me as well as to you.

The Lord Jesus Christ

It is my purpose to speak of the Lord Jesus Christ.

From the depths of my soul I know that he has established the Church in these last days so that I may partake of the blessings of his kingdom on earth, to the end that I may inherit the eternal joy of dwelling in his presence when I have completed my work here, if I can prove faithful. He did not intend this to be my privilege alone. In his infinite love he reaches out to all of my family, all of my kin, to all of your families and kin, and to all of the people on the earth.

I know that I cannot know him as he is unless he reveals himself to me. That is the great hope—to penetrate the veil and see and know him as he is. Yet I do know some things because he has told holy men, who are prophets, about himself and has commanded that they bear record of what they saw and heard. I know that by reading about him in the scriptures I can hear his voice by the power of the Holy Ghost; that is, to read his word is to hear his voice.

Speaking through the Prophet Joseph Smith to his future modern apostles, he said: "These words are not of men nor of man, but of me; . . . For it is my voice which speaketh them unto you; for they are given by my Spirit unto you, and by my power you can read them one to another. . . . [Notice he said read them.] Wherefore, you can testify that you have heard my voice, and know my words." (D&C 18:34-36.)

I begin by learning that all things were made by him, and without him was not anything made that was made. (See John 1:3.) It is plain that this great being, this Word, as John expressed it, was made flesh and dwelt among us (see John 1:14) and was identified as the Only Begotten in the flesh, the Lord Jesus Christ.

Earthly mission

I learn, too, that all of the children of God were organized as spirits to come to the earth to be tested, to see if they would obey the principles of salvation and exaltation as proposed by this Son. They were told: "We will go down, . . . and we will make an earth whereon these may dwell; And we will prove them herewith, to see if they will do all things whatsoever the Lord their God shall command them." (Abr. 3:24-25.) Then, in due time, he himself came to earth, the light and life of men. (See John 1:4.)

Believing this with all my heart, I read of the earthly life of this great being, the Messiah. I learn that when he was born, a host of angels sang anthems of joy to an audience of shepherds. Out of the East, with no explanation as to why they started, wise men came and deposited with Joseph and Mary presents which were of value: gold, frankincense, and myrrh. I do not doubt that they were inspired to find the Lord or that they were prompted to leave valuable gifts which could be used to sustain his family.

Life of the Lord

I am thrilled when I read of the scene at Jordan. There came the Son of God, unmarked and unknown; yet, recognizing him by the Spirit, John the Baptist could not help crying out: "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." (John 1:29.) What do you imagine could have been John's feeling when, after the baptism, he heard a voice out of the heavens say in holy confirmation: "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased"? (Matt. 3:17.)

Then later, as I follow his life, I sense the extraordinary importance of this climb up the mountain with three fishermen who did not yet quite know what it was to be apostles, to be special witnesses. There, as his glory was manifest before them and their eyes were opened to the presence of Moses and Elijah, they heard the same solemn witness as had John, only this time it came from a bright cloud nearby, which overshadowed them. In my soul I hear the solemn words from out the cloud saying: "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him." (Matt. 17:5.)

There are many events in the life of the Lord in which I experience exquisite joy as I read of them, and there are others which bow me down with the tragedy of his suffering and of his sacrifice.

The atonement

Many of us know what it is to suffer physically for ourselves, and we suffer mentally and emotionally for our friends and loved ones in their sorrows and afflictions. I am not capable of fully understanding the suffering of this great firstborn Son of God for the sins of the world. We call it Gethsemane. He gave us agency and then, knowing all would sin to a greater or lesser degree, took the responsibility on himself of paying the price of the atonement for our sins, provided we would repent and follow him and his teachings. I find peace in doing what he said to do. When he said: "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you . . ." (John 14:27), he meant what he said. Someday I hope to be able to understand better. I know the peace I can have if I will keep his law and abide in his commandments.

I read that he was hung on a cross. I look at my own hands and feet and try to imagine the pain of such torture—to hang there in the heat of the day, the weight of his body on those tearing nails, every muscle and nerve drawn tight in agony. No stopping, no escape until he, having said, "It is finished" (John 19:30), gave up the ghost. I realize that this was endured for me and for you; I bow my head; it is hard to hold back the tears. Even now, 1900 years later, it is as poignant as though it occurred yesterday.

Triumphant ending

I read on and discover that each one of the gospels ends on a triumphant note. He has risen! He is the King of kings. He is the one named "Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace." (Isa. 9:6.) I think of each of these titles given to him in prophecy and marvel as the meaning of each one touches my own heart.

What did the 11 apostles think as the cloud received him out of their sight? I can see them, in my mind, walking across the Kedron, then the narrow streets to a common meeting place, each lost in his own fears, and in his own hopes according to his understanding. I read with gratitude of the great event of the day of Pentecost, when the promise of the Lord was realized and the Spirit of the Holy Ghost was on them in miraculous abundance.

Appearance to Nephites

I am puzzled over the long period of time in which there was no spiritual light, nearly 1700 years of spiritual darkness. And then I read in a book of scripture, newly discovered, with an unusual name—the Book of Mormon—of his coming to a people in this land, a people descended from the Jews and their kin in Israel. I read of his descent from the heavens above them, of the great multitude of Nephites gathered together round about their temple, and of the voice from heaven which pierced them to the center.

My heart sings in confirmation as I hear once more in my soul the words of introduction and acceptance twice heard during his ministry in Palestine and now repeated and enlarged: "Behold my Beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased, in whom I have glorified my name—hear ye him." (3 Ne. 11:7.) Once more the voice of the Father out of the cloud is placing his approval on his divine Son. I know that the account is true.

Visit to brother of Jared

I have already read of how this great personage lived as the firstborn of his Father in the spirit, and so I am not surprised, although I am deeply moved, to learn that he, as a premortal spirit, visited the brother of Jared (see Eth. 3:6-13), and I can sense his fear when the brother of Jared saw the finger of the Lord and realized that it was like unto the finger of a man. It surprised this prophet, but it does not surprise me, for I have learned that the Lord was the firstborn Son of God, whose name is Man of Holiness. So when the Lord showed his complete self to that great prophet, I am not surprised, but I am awed. The more I study and read the scriptures, the more I know this is true.

Joseph Smith's vision

Finally, I read of a great vision in this dispensation, in this modern day. For the first time, so far as I know, the personage who spoke in testimony at the baptism of Christ, again on the mount, and to the Nephites (saying, "This is my beloved Son") did not speak out of a cloud as on those occasions. This time he stood in majestic holy light together with his Son and declared to Joseph Smith: "This is My Beloved Son. Hear him!" (Joseph Smith 2:17.) With Joseph Smith, as I read, I know that there is a God and he is indeed my Father. He is the great Elohim, the Father of us all. And there with him stood his Son Jesus Christ, identified once more by his Father.

It is no coincidence that the Father used the same introduction. If the young Joseph Smith was to bear witness of the truth, he must know the truth. It was revealed to him in that grove of trees 153 years ago. By the spirit of truth I know that the vision is true.

For 1700 years men had claimed to represent Christ, but none had declared him, none had heard a voice declaring him. In 1700 years no man had imagined or dared to imitate this great statement of truth to justify his own claims. This time is different. There in one moment on a spring morning the eternal truth was once more revealed in such a way and in such power that no one with the Holy Spirit in his heart can doubt that the heavens were opened and that God our Father and his Son appeared together—the Father declaring the Son in almost exactly the same words as he did three times nearly 2,000 years ago.

Testimony to the world

The boy was too young to perpetrate a fraud. The sacred words are from the lips of the Eternal Father. This is my testimony, and our testimony to the world. Here today we declared his Beloved Son, and here today we worship him and give praise and honor and glory. Today in honor of him we assemble at this conference of his people.

We look forward to his return to reign a thousand years. Let us worship him in spirit and in truth. Let us give loyal support to his presently anointed prophet and mouthpiece and those who assist him. President Harold B. Lee is that prophet. He holds the same keys that were given to Joseph Smith by the heavenly messengers in 1829. His word, inspired of the Holy Ghost, is the modern revelation of our day. This is my witness to you and to the world, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

Thank you. President S. Dilworth Young of the First Council of Seventy has just spoken to us.

The congregation and choir will now join in singing, "Come, Come Ye Saints."

After the singing, Elder Franklin D. Richards, Assistant to the Twelve, will address us.

The congregation sang "Come, Come Ye Saints."

President Lee

Elder Franklin D. Richards,

Assistant to the Twelve, will now address us. He will be followed by Elder Howard W. Hunter of the Council of the Twelve.

Elder Franklin D. Richards

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

My dear brothers and sisters: This has been a most stimulating and inspiring conference, and I sincerely pray for the guidance of the Spirit in the things that I have to say to you.

Main differences

Frequently the question is asked, What is the difference between The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and other churches?

On one occasion the Prophet Joseph Smith was asked this question. He replied that one of the main differences was in our mode of baptism, including the gift of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands, and that we believe in the continuing power of the Holy Ghost. (See Documentary History of the Church, vol. 4, p. 42.)

The first and fourth Articles of Faith of the Church outline this belief:

"We believe in God, the Eternal Father, and in His Son, Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost.

"We believe that the first principles and ordinances of the Gospel are: first, Faith in the Lord Jesus Christ; second, Repentance; third, Baptism by immersion for the remission of sins; fourth, Laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost."

Conception of Godhead

Through modern revelation we are told that "the Father has a body of flesh and bones as tangible as man's, the Son also; but the Holy Ghost has not a body of flesh and bones, but is a personage of Spirit. Were it not so, the Holy Ghost could not dwell in us." (D&C 130:22.)

This is the simple and beautiful conception of the Godhead as taught by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

When Nicodemus, one of the rulers of the Jews, came to Jesus at night and asked him what he should do to be saved, he was told, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." (John 3:5.)

A new birth

In this dispensation we have been admonished to "go among this people, and say unto them, . . . Repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ, . . . for the remission of sins; And whoso doeth this shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, by the laying on of the hands of the elders of the church." (D&C 49:11, 13-14.)

That this new birth included a spiritual regeneration was indicated when the Savior explained, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit. Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again." (John 3:6-7.)

Faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, repentance, and baptism by water are prerequisites to receiving the Holy Ghost.

The apostle Paul, in writing the Corinthian saints, stated: "... know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you ..." (1 Cor. 6:19), and "If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are" (1 Cor. 3:17).

To keep in tune with the Holy Ghost, we must keep our bodies clean in every respect.

Object of existence

President Brigham Young stated: "The Holy Ghost ... opens the vision of the mind, unlocks the treasures of wisdom, and they begin to understand the things of God. ... They comprehend themselves and the great object of their existence." (Journal of Discourses, vol. 1, p. 241.)

If a person is going to get the most out of this life, he must comprehend the object of his existence.

The gifts of the Holy Ghost, to worthy recipients, are many and extremely helpful in answering the question, What is the purpose of life or the object of our existence?

One of the chief functions of the Holy Ghost is to bear witness of God the Father and Jesus Christ, his Son. The apostle Paul, in writing to the Corinthian saints, told them that "no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost." (1 Cor. 12:3.)

To know that God lives and that Jesus Christ is his Son and our Savior and Redeemer is absolutely essential to understand the purpose of life.

Blessings of Holy Ghost

In addition to being a witness for the Father and the Son, the Holy Ghost is a comforter. As the Savior was about to be crucified, he promised the disciples another comforter as he told them, "... the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you." (John 14:26.)

Thus we see that the Holy Ghost is a witness of the Father and the Son, a comforter, a teacher, and the bearer of valuable gifts of the spirit, such as wisdom, knowledge, faith, discernment, and direction.

Yes, the blessings of the Holy Ghost are real and very helpful in understanding and appreciating life, although in some respects beyond or comprehension at times.

Experience of cadet

I recall a testimony given by a young cadet attending the United States Air Force Academy.

He was experiencing great difficulty in passing his courses and was very discouraged. At this point, he met a Mormon cadet, and from him he learned that there were a number of Mormon boys attending the academy and that they met together at five o'clock each weekday morning in a religious study class. The cadet was invited to attend one of these classes.

He did so and was deeply impressed by the wonderful spirit. He continued attending, met the missionaries, was given the discussions, and, through study, prayer, and attending church, received a testimony and was baptized.

He bore witness that upon receiving the Holy Ghost he felt its influence quicken his mind and understanding and refresh his memory, and that thereafter he had no trouble in getting satisfactory grades. His feelings of discouragement left him, and a spirit of peace and comfort came over him. This was a most inspiring and impressive testimony of the great value of the Holy Ghost.

Guidance of the Spirit

Likewise, I have felt the guidance of the Holy Ghost many times in my life. In following these whisperings, my family and I have been blessed abundantly.

When our children were young, we were living in Salt Lake City, and I had an opportunity to accept a position with the government in Washington, D.C. This was an important decision for our family to make. After very careful and prayerful consideration, we decided to accept. We felt good about this decision, but it took considerable courage to follow the inspiration.

Years later, when I left the government, I had another important decision to make—whether to accept an attractive opportunity to work for others or go into business for myself. There were many pressures, many considerations, and after much deliberation I decided I would go into business for myself. After fervent prayers, I felt strongly that this was the path to pursue. I prayed for the courage to follow the whisperings of the Spirit.

I am sure many of you could testify that you have been troubled in making important decisions and have asked the Lord for direction and guidance, and that you have received it.

Likewise, manifestations of the Spirit are found in many other areas of life's activities.

Warning of danger

We hear many testimonies where worthy members have been warned of impending dangers.

A young father bore witness to me of a great blessing that had come to him and his family. He was awakened one night by a voice that clearly told him to get up and go downstairs. He heeded the warning, and in going into the kitchen he found one wall engulfed in flames. Hurriedly he awakened his family, called the fire department, and with the help of his family fought the fire, keeping it down until the fire department arrived and put it out.

There was no question in his mind that this warning was a manifestation of the protection the Holy Ghost can give to those who keep their lives in harmony with the Spirit.

A comforter

Again the Savior has promised that to worthy members the Holy Ghost would be a comforter in times of sickness and death.

Many have borne witness of the comforting spirit that has attended them in times of sorrow, helping them to find peace and understanding.

A few weeks ago it was my privilege to meet two wonderful women, close friends, who had lost their husbands in a tragic airplane accident. Did I find them in despair and deep mourning? No, indeed. I have never witnessed greater courage and strength. They both bore witness to the fact that they had truly felt the comfort of the Spirit, that they knew there was a purpose in the call that had been given to their husbands, and that they had an assurance that all would be well with them and their families as they lived close to the Church and kept the commandments of the Lord.

The still small voice

I have heard the still small voice, or the whisperings of the Spirit, as I have counseled with you, my brothers and sisters; as I have conferred the priesthood upon men; as I have set men and women apart to positions in the Church; as I have given blessings to the sick; as I have borne my testimony to non-members as well as members; as I have been delivering a sermon, and at many other times.

Sometime ago a young lady asked me, "How do you know when you are speaking under the influence of the Holy Ghost?" My answer was, "I can feel it spiritually and physically."

Witness of Holy Ghost

I testify to you that the Holy Ghost has borne witness to me that God lives and is the Father of our spirits; that Jesus is the Christ, our Redeemer and Savior; that Joseph Smith was and is a great prophet, through whom the gospel in its fullness was restored, the church of Jesus Christ was reestablished, and the power to act in the name of God was restored to earth. The Holy Ghost has also borne witness to me many times that President Harold B.

Lee is a great modern-day prophet, standing at the head of Christ's church on this earth. I pray that the Lord and each one of us will sustain him in every way. I am most grateful for the influence of the Holy Ghost in my life.

I bear my witness to you that as one accepts the restored gospel of Jesus Christ and conforms to the principles and ordinances thereof, the Holy Ghost will truly be a guide and comfort to him throughout his life.

Yes, one of the great differences between The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and any other church is that the worthy members may enjoy the continuing power and gifts of the Holy Ghost. May we all seek these gifts and be worthy of them, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

Elder Franklin D. Richards, Assistant to the Twelve, has just addressed us.

We will now hear from Elder Howard W. Hunter of the Council of the Twelve.

Elder Howard W. Hunter

Of the Council of the Twelve

At this late hour of the conference, one would be hard pressed to find a subject regarding the teachings of the Savior that has not been touched upon. I would like to have the ability to summarize what has been said by the Brethren, but let me touch upon one of the occasions of the Master's teachings.

This thought comes to me because we are approaching the season of the year when Christians around the world celebrate Easter by commemorating the events of the Savior's last few days in mortality, his death, and his resurrection from the tomb. These happenings, which occurred many years ago in Jerusalem, are recalled to us by the writings of the New Testament. His death, however, did not bring his personal ministry to a conclusion.

A second witness for Christ

An account in the Book of Mormon, a second witness for Christ, gives us additional knowledge of the teachings of the Master. This record tells of his appearance to the people of this Western Hemisphere after his death and resurrection, adding much to our understanding of the great atoning sacrifice.

The Nephite prophets foretold of the signs that would be given to the people of this continent at the crucifixion of the Savior, and according to their prophecies, a devastating tempest did burst upon the land. There was thunder and lightning greater than had ever been known, and earthquakes rocked the earth. The city of Zarahemla was burned by fire, the city of Moroni sank into the sea and the inhabitants drowned, and the city of Moronihah was covered by a mountain. Highways were broken up, other cities destroyed, and many people were slain or carried away by the tempest. The raging storm and devastation continued for three hours, and the face of the whole land was changed.

As the tempest ceased, a thick darkness gathered, and for three days no light was seen. Out of the darkness could be heard the great mourning, howling, and weeping of the people.

The voice of the Lord

"And it came to pass that there was a voice heard among all the inhabitants of the earth, upon all the face of the land, crying:

"Wo, wo, wo unto this people; wo unto the inhabitants of the whole earth except they shall repent; for the devil laugheth, and his angels rejoice, because of the slain of the fair sons and daughters of my people; and it is because of their iniquity and abominations that they are fallen!" (3 Ne. 9:1-2.)

The voice enumerated the widespread destruction. The survivors of the tempest and earthquakes were declared to be the more righteous, and hope was offered to them through repentance and conversion to the gospel of the Savior.

The speaker then identified himself:

"Behold, I am Jesus Christ the Son of God. I created the heavens and the earth, and all things that in them are. I was with the Father from the beginning. I am in the Father, and the Father in me; and in me hath the Father glorified his name.

"I came unto my own, and my own received me not. And the scriptures concerning my coming are fulfilled." (3 Ne. 9:15-16.)

The Lord told them that the law of Moses had been fulfilled and he would no longer accept burnt offerings, but only the sacrifice of a broken heart and a contrite spirit.

"Behold," he said, "I have come unto the world to bring redemption unto the world, to save the world from sin.

"Therefore, whoso repenteth and cometh unto me as a little child, him will I receive, for of such is the kingdom of God. Behold, for such I have laid down my life, and have taken it up again; therefore repent, and come unto me ye ends of the earth, and be saved." (3 Ne. 9:21-22.)

Many hours passed in silence and darkness, and again his voice was heard, sorrowing over his people and promising to gather them "as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings" (10:6) if they would repent and follow him. Darkness continued, and on the morning of the third day the earth ceased to tremble and all became quiet and peaceful. Christ had risen from the tomb. Many of the righteous dead of this land in the Western Hemisphere rose from their graves, as did many saints in Judea.

The appearance of Christ

A multitude assembled at the temple in the land Bountiful. If we would join with them as we read, we would learn a great lesson. They talked about the changes that had taken place in the land because of the earthquakes and the inrush of the sea, and about Jesus Christ of whom these signs had been given. While they were conversing one with another, they heard a voice which said unto them: "Behold my Beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased, in whom I have glorified my name—hear ye him." (3 Ne. 11:7.) They cast their eyes toward heaven and beheld a man clothed in a white robe who descended and stood in the midst of them.

"And it came to pass that he stretched forth his hand and spake unto the people, saying:

"Behold, I am Jesus Christ, whom the prophets testified shall come into the world.

"And behold, I am the light and the life of the world; and I have drunk out of that bitter cup which the Father hath given me. . . .

"Arise and come forth unto me, that ye may thrust your hands into my side, and also that ye may feel the prints of the nails in my hands and in my feet. . . ." (3 Ne. 11:9-11, 14.)

Teachings of the Savior

The Master called twelve disciples and gave them the authority to baptize. He admonished the multitude to cease their contentions and disputations; and he taught them, among other things, truths he had proclaimed to his followers on the eastern continent—the Sermon on the Mount, the Lord's Prayer, the fulfillment of the Mosaic law. He healed the sick, blessed little children, administered the sacrament and gave instruction concerning it.

As he taught the Nephites, the Savior defined his gospel. The statement he made to them describes the glories of the plan and explains the requirements for man to gain eternal life and exaltation. These are his words:

"Behold, I have given unto you my gospel, and this is the gospel which I have given unto you—that I came into the world to do the will of my Father, because my Father sent me.

"And my Father sent me that I might be lifted up upon the cross; and after that I had been lifted up upon the cross, that I might draw all men unto me, that as I have been lifted up by men even so should men be lifted up by the Father, to stand before me, to be judged of their works, whether they be good or whether they be evil.

"And it shall come to pass, that whoso repenteth and is baptized in my name shall be filled; and if he endureth to the end, behold, him will I hold guiltless before my Father at that day when I shall stand to judge the world.

"And he that endureth not unto the end, the same is he that is also hewn down and cast into the fire, from whence they can no more return, because of the justice of the Father.

"Now this is the commandment: Repent, all ye ends of the earth, and come unto me and be baptized in my name, that ye may be sanctified by the reception of the Holy Ghost, that ye may stand spotless before me at the last day. Verily, Verily, I say unto you, this is my gospel. . . ." (3 Ne. 27:13-14, 16-17, 20-21.)

The gospel

The gospel is often referred to as the good news, or glad tidings of salvation. The plan of salvation, therefore, is the gospel of Jesus Christ. The Master explained to the Nephites that he had fulfilled his mission on earth by complying with the will of the Father, thereby becoming the Redeemer of all mankind. The further statement to "repent . . . and be baptized in my name" defines the gateway to the narrow path leading to eternal life. This gives rise to the fundamental statement expressed in the Articles of Faith of the Church:

"We believe that through the atonement of Christ, all mankind may be saved, by obedience to the laws and ordinances of the Gospel.

"We believe that the first principles and ordinances of the Gospel are: first, Faith in the Lord Jesus Christ; second, Repentance; third, Baptism by immersion for the remission of sins; fourth, Laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost." (Articles of Faith 3, 4.)

These four are only the first of all the principles and ordinances of the gospel. Returning to the words of the Savior to the Nephites, we learn that after complying with these four, there must be a lifetime of compliance with the laws and commandments of the Lord, for he said, ". . . and if he endureth to the end, behold, him will I hold guiltless before my Father at that day when I shall stand to judge the world." (3 Ne. 27:16.)

The first principles alone are not sufficient: man is thereafter accountable in the eternal judgment for what he has done in life, whether good or evil. The atonement was for this very purpose, to bring about the resurrection and subsequent judgment of all men. The Master made it very clear by saying: "And for this cause have I been lifted up; therefore, according to the power of the Father I will draw all men unto me, that they may be judged according to their works." (3 Ne. 27:15.)

Gospel divided into two parts

An analysis divides the gospel plan into two parts:

First, that which is preparatory and administered under the authority of the Aaronic Priesthood. The 84th section of the Doctrine and Covenants states it this way: "And the lesser priesthood continued, which priesthood holdeth the key of the ministering of angels and the preparatory gospel; Which gospel is the gospel of repentance and of baptism, and the remission of sins. . . ." (D&C 84:26-27.)

Second, the fullness of the gospel administered by the authority of the Melchizedek Priesthood. The same revelation makes this statement: "And this greater priesthood administereth the gospel and holdeth the key of the mysteries of the kingdom, even the key of the knowledge of God.

"Therefore, in the ordinances thereof, the power of godliness is manifest.

"And without the ordinances thereof, and the authority of the priesthood, the power of godliness is not manifest unto men in the flesh;

"For without this no man can see the face of God, even the Father, and live." (D&C 84:19-22.)

Gospel plan unfolded

From the teachings of the Savior to the Nephites during this brief period after his resurrection, the gospel plan is unfolded. The pathway of the preparatory gospel for the forgiveness of sins and entrance to the kingdom is clearly marked. The way is pointed out for the fullness of the everlasting gospel to be enjoyed by man, blessed by the Spirit of the Holy Ghost, to so live as to obtain a knowledge of God and receive his approbation upon resurrection.

We should be grateful, as Easter approaches, for the record of the people of the western world, which has preserved for us the teachings of the resurrected Savior to the Nephites. It is an additional witness to his divine mission. I know the Book of Mormon is the word of God.

It is my witness that Jesus is the Christ. If the world would follow the principles of the gospel proclaimed by him, a real peace, beyond the cessation of hostilities, would come to all people, for he said, "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you. . . ." (John 14:27.)

May this peace come to us by living the commandments of the Savior and by following the counsel of his prophet here upon the earth, I humbly pray, in the name of the Lord and Master, Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

We are grateful to all who have contributed to the success and inspiration of this conference, especially to our General Authorities who have delivered such timely, inspired messages. Sitting where we do as the First Presidency, we have been aware these last six months that there has been such a feeling of need to have questions answered, to have spoken from this pulpit at this conference things that are needed by so many in this mixed-up world, to help them to set guidelines for their own lives.

Appreciation for brethren

I believe I have never known when the General Authorities have so completely covered the various areas where we have had great concern. If you want to know what the Lord has for this people at the present time, I would admonish you to get and read the discourses that have been delivered at this conference; for what these brethren have spoken by the power of the Holy Ghost is the mind of the Lord, the will of the Lord, the voice of the Lord, and the power of God unto salvation. I am sure all who have listened, if they have been in tune, have felt the sincerity and the deep conviction from those who have spoken so appropriately and so effectively.

My soul is filled with joy as I think of these great men whom the Lord has brought to the service of the Church as General Authorities and all others who have served, our Regional Representatives of the Twelve, our Mission Representatives of the Twelve and the First Council of Seventy, and all who serve in the various organizations. As we have seen them being brought into key positions, we have marveled as to how, when we have need of a man or person for a particular office, the man of the hour seems to have been brought to us, almost in a miraculous way.

Instruction of Alma

As I have listened to the brethren, and feeling the concern that has been so frequently referred to, I have remembered the instruction that was given by the prophet Alma as a group of those who had been converted waited on the banks for baptism; and as he explained to them the nature of the covenant in which they were to enter as baptized members, he said:

"... as ye are desirous to come into the fold of God, and to be called his people, and are willing to bear one another's burdens, that they may be light;

"Yea, and are willing to mourn with those that mourn; yea, and comfort those that stand in need of comfort, and to stand as witnesses of God at all times and in all things, and in all places that ye may be in, . . .

"Now I say unto you, if this be the desire of your hearts, what have you against being baptized in the name of the Lord, as a witness before him that ye have entered into a covenant with him, that ye will serve him and keep his commandments, that he may pour out his Spirit more abundantly upon you?" (Mosiah 18:8-10.)

I call your attention to one of these requirements, particularly that which has been stressed by direct and indirect words in this conference: "are willing to bear one another's burdens that they may be light." If I were to ask you what is the heaviest burden one may have to bear in this life, what would you answer? The heaviest burden that one has to bear in this life is the burden of sin. How do you help one to bear that great burden of sin, in order that it might be light?

Forgiveness of sins

Some years ago, President Romney and I were sitting in my office. The door opened and a fine young man came in with a troubled look on his face, and he said, "Brethren, I am going to the temple for the first time tomorrow. I have made some mistakes in the past, and I have gone to my bishop and my stake president, and I have made a clean disclosure of it all; and after a period of repentance and assurance that I have not returned again to those mistakes, they have now adjudged me ready to go to the temple. But, brethren, that is not enough. I want to know, and how can I know, that the Lord has forgiven me, also."

What would you answer one who would come to you asking that question? As we pondered for a moment, we remembered King Benjamin's address contained in the book of Mosiah. Here was a group of people who now were asking for baptism, and they said they viewed themselves in their carnal state:

"... And they all cried aloud with one voice, saying: O have mercy, and apply the atoning blood of Christ that we may receive forgiveness of our sins, and our hearts may be purified; . . .

"... after they had spoken these words the Spirit of the Lord came upon them, and they were filled with joy, having received a remission of their sins, and having peace of conscience. . . ." (Mosiah 4:2-3.)

There was the answer.

Peace of conscience

If the time comes when you have done all that you can to repent of your sins, whoever you are, wherever you are, and have made amends and restitution to the best of your ability; if it be something that will affect your standing in the Church and you have gone to the proper authorities, then you will want that confirming answer as to whether or not the Lord has accepted of you. In your soul-searching, if you seek for and you find that peace of conscience, by that token you may know that the Lord has accepted of your repentance. Satan would have you think otherwise and sometimes persuade you that now having made one mistake, you might go on and on with no turning back. That is one of the great falsehoods. The miracle of forgiveness is available to all of those who turn from their evil doings and return no more, because the Lord has said in a revelation to us in our day: "... go your ways and sin no more; but unto that soul who sinneth [meaning again] shall the former sins return, saith the Lord your God." (D&C 82:7.) Have that in mind, all of you who may be troubled with a burden of sin.

And to you who are teachers, may you help to lift that great burden from those who are carrying it, and who have their conscience so seared that they are kept from activity, and they don't know where to go to find the answers. You help them to that day of repentance and restitution, in order that they too may have that peace of conscience, the confirming of the Spirit of the Lord that he has accepted of their repentance.

Temporal and spiritual aid

The great call has come now in the sermons of the brethren to aid those who are in need of aid, not just temporal aid, but spiritual aid. The greatest miracles I see today are not necessarily the healing of sick bodies, but the greatest miracles I see are the healing of sick souls, those who are sick in soul and spirit and are downhearted and distraught, on the verge of nervous breakdowns. We are reaching out to all such, because they are precious in the sight of the Lord, and we want no one to feel that they are forgotten.

Experience at gate beautiful

I read again and again the experience of Peter and John, as they went through the gate beautiful on the way to the temple. Here was one who had never walked, impotent from his birth, begging alms of all who approached the gate. And as Peter and John approached, he held out his hand expectantly, asking for alms. Peter, speaking for this pair of missionaries—church authorities—said, "Look on us." And, of course, that heightened his expectation. "Then Peter said, Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk." (Acts 3:4, 6.)

Now in my mind's eye I can picture this man, what was in his mind. "Doesn't this man know that I have never walked? He commands me to walk." But the biblical record doesn't end there. Peter just didn't content himself by commanding the man to walk, but he "took him by the right hand, and lifted him up." (Acts 3:7.)

Will you see that picture now of that noble soul, that chiefest of the apostles, perhaps with his arms around the shoulders of this man, and saying, "Now, my good man, have courage, I will take a few steps with you. Let's walk together, and I assure you that you can walk, because you have received a blessing by the power and authority that God has given us as men, his servants." Then the man leaped with joy.

Lifting another

You cannot lift another soul until you are standing on higher ground than he is. You must be sure, if you would rescue the man, that you yourself are setting the example of what you would have him be. You cannot light a fire in another soul unless it is burning in your own soul. You teachers, the testimony that you bear, the spirit with which you teach and with which you lead, is one of the most important assets that you can have, as you help to strengthen those who need so much, wherein you have so much to give. Who of us, in whatever station we may have been in, have not needed strengthening?

Help from powers divine

May I impose upon you for a moment to express appreciation for something that happened to me some time ago, years ago. I was suffering from an ulcer condition that was becoming worse and worse. We had been touring a mission; my wife, Joan, and I were impressed the next morning that we should get home as quickly as possible, although we had planned to stay for some other meetings.

On the way across the country, we were sitting in the forward section of the airplane. Some of our Church members were in the next section. As we approached a certain point en route, someone laid his hand upon my head. I looked up; I could see no one. That happened again before we arrived home, again with the same experience. Who it was, by what means or what medium, I may never know, except I knew that I was receiving a blessing that I came a few hours later to know I needed most desperately.

As soon as we arrived home, my wife very anxiously called the doctor. It was now about 11 o'clock at night. He called me to come to the telephone, and he asked me how I was; and I said, "Well, I am very tired. I think I will be all right." But shortly thereafter, there came massive hemorrhages which, had they occurred while we were in flight, I wouldn't be here today talking about it.

I know that there are powers divine that reach out when all other help is not available. We see that manifest down in the countries we speak of as the underprivileged countries where there is little medical aid and perhaps no hospitals. If you want to hear of great miracles among these humble people with simple faith, you will see it among them when they are left to themselves. Yes, I know that there are such powers.

Assistance of noble men

As I came to realize the overwhelming magnitude of the responsibility that now has been given to me, if I were to have sat down and tried to think of the burden, I would have been devastated and wholly incapable of carrying it. But when I was guided by the Spirit to name two noble men, whose powerful words of teaching and testimony you have heard today, President N. Eldon Tanner and President Marion G. Romney, I realized that mine was not the responsibility to carry these responsibilities alone. And then as we meet week by week in the temple and look across the room and see twelve stalwart men, men chosen from out the world and given the power of the holy apostleship, I am aware that no greater men walk the earth than these men.

Once each month on the first Thursday (it was a week ago last Thursday because of conference), we meet with all the General Authorities, except a few that are not able to be with us.

We have been glad that we had the appearance briefly of President Hugh B. Brown at this conference. We wish that Brother Alvin R. Dyer could have been here. Brother Alma Sonne has been able to be with us. We have talked with Sister Dyer, and we are praying earnestly that Brother Dyer may soon be recovered to his normal strength. These men and their families are carrying great burdens and responsibilities.

Regional and Mission Representatives

The other day we met in the seminar for Regional Representatives of the Twelve. These are men who are fanning out over the whole earth now, to every corner of the earth. Newly baptized members who know little about the gospel and much less about the disciplines of the Church must be taught if the Church is to be safely led. These men who have been chosen from out of the strongest men we have in the Church now are going out now under the direction of the Council of the Twelve. And there are also the Mission Representatives of the Twelve and the First Council of the Seventy associated with them. They are going out to the humblest everywhere and teaching them these fundamental principles, teaching them, as the Prophet Joseph answered when asked, "How do you govern your people?" His answer was, "I teach them correct principles, and they govern themselves."

They are not going out to do the work themselves. As we have said to them, they are standing as "coaches" rather than as "quarterbacks" on the football team, teaching the quarterbacks how to direct, teaching them correct principles. They are men of faith. And how grateful we are for all these auxiliary workers who have gone out, likewise at great expense, great travel, and sacrifice on the part of their businesses and their families.

To you great leaders, stake presidencies, mission presidencies, bishoprics, priesthood quorum leaders, all of you, the faithful Saints everywhere, you who pray for us, I want you to know that we pray earnestly at the altars of the temple for all of you faithful who pray for us. How grateful we are for you!

Experience at temple dedication

As I come to you at the closing moments of this conference, I would like to take you back now to just one incident, and I am sorry that I can tell you only a part of it because of the limitations of some things contained therein.

It was just before the dedication of the Los Angeles Temple. We were all preparing for that great occasion. It was something new in my life, when along about three or four o'clock in the morning, I enjoyed an experience that I think was not a dream, but it must have been a vision. It seemed that I was witnessing a great spiritual gathering, where men and women were standing up, two or three at a time, and speaking in tongues. The spirit was so unusual. I seemed to have heard the voice of President David O. McKay say, "If you want to love God, you have to learn to love and serve the people. That is the way you show your love for God." And there were other things then that I saw and heard.

And so I come to you today, with no shadow of doubting in my mind that I know the reality of the person who is presiding over this church, our Lord and Master, Jesus Christ. I know that he is. I know that he is closer to us than many times we have any idea. They are not an absentee Father and Lord. They are concerned about us, helping to prepare us for the advent of the Savior, whose coming certainly isn't too far away because of the signs that are becoming apparent.

All you need to do is to read the scriptures, particularly the inspired translation of Matthew, the twenty-fourth chapter, found in the writings of Joseph Smith in the Pearl of Great Price, where the Lord told his disciples to stand in holy places and be not moved, for he comes quickly, but no man knows the hour nor the day. That is the preparation.

Serving the Lord

Go home now to your people, I pray you, and say as did Joshua of old: "... as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord." (Josh. 24:15.) Teach your families in your family home evening, teach them to keep the commandments of God, for therein is our only safety in these days. If they will do that, the powers of the Almighty will descend upon them as the dews from heaven, and the Holy Ghost will be theirs, which has been spoken of so excellently by Elder Franklin D. Richards. That can be our guide, and that kind of Spirit shall guide us and direct us to his holy home.

Blessing

And so as it is my privilege to do, I give you faithful members of the Church everywhere my blessing. God bless you, take care of you, preserve you as you travel home, that there may be no accident or no untoward experience. Take to your people out in the far reaches the feeling of love that we have for all of them; and indeed, as the missionaries go out, that love extends not only to those of our Father's children who are already members of the Church, but those who are our Father's children to whom he would have us bring the gospel of truth; make them also to enjoy all the blessings that we now have.

May the Lord help us so to understand and do, and fill our stations, and not be found wanting in the day of judgment that we have not done all we know how to do to advance his work in righteousness, I humbly pray in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

As we come to the closing minutes of this great conference, I wish to express in behalf of all who listened to the singing during the sessions of this General Conference our sincere appreciation and thanks to the members of the Tabernacle Choir for once again bringing to us the beautiful and inspirational music heard in this conference. And also our appreciation to the conductors and choirs and choruses who have generously rendered the beautiful, inspired music of this conference.

My experience of a lifetime, and particularly the last thirty-two years as a General Authority, convinces me that the most effective preaching of the gospel is when it is accompanied by beautiful, appropriate music. Thank God for these wonderful musicians who give so liberally of their time.

We appreciate the attention that has been given by the local and the national press representatives, and by the representatives of radio and television in reporting the sessions of this conference. They have been so gracious and we do appreciate all of them. To our city officials, for the cooperation they have given; to the traffic officers for the courteous and efficient handling of the increased traffic; to the fire department and the Red Cross who have been on hand to render service throughout the conference; to our ushers, those who serve behind the scenes, unheralded, unsung, oftentimes forgotten; we don't forget you and appreciate your great service and your courteous manner; and to those who have given public service time. If it were to be multiplied by the usual cost of the coverage, it would amount to untold thousands of dollars. Many radio and television stations have carried the sessions of this conference from coast to coast in the United States, in Hawaii, Alaska, Mexico, Central America, Canada, and by satellite to Australia and countries of South America.

The Tabernacle Choir will now conclude this conference by singing, "The Link Divine."

The benediction will then be offered by Elder W. James Mortimer, former president of the Butler Stake, following which this conference will stand adjourned for six months.

The Tabernacle Choir sang, "The Link Divine."

The benediction was offered by Elder W. James Mortimer.

The General Conference was adjourned for six months.

SALT LAKE TABERNACLE CHOIR AND ORGAN BROADCAST

The following broadcast, written and announced by J. Spencer Kinard, and originating with Station KSL, Salt Lake City, Utah, was presented from 9:30 to 10 o'clock a.m. on Sunday, April 8, 1973 through the courtesy of the Columbia Broadcasting System's network throughout the United States, parts of Canada, and through other facilities to several points overseas.

(At 9:30 on signal Organ and Choir break into "Gently Raise" singing words to end of second line, and humming to end of verse for announcer's background.)

Announcer: Once more we welcome you within these walls with Music and the Spoken Word from the Crossroads of the West.

CBS and its affiliated stations bring you at this hour the Tabernacle Choir from Temple Square in Salt Lake City, with Richard Condie conducting the Choir, Alexander Schreiner, Tabernacle Organist, and the Spoken Word by Spencer Kinard.

The Choir sings first a hymn by Evan Stephens with the words of William Goode: "Lo, the mighty God appearing; From on high Jehovah speaks! . . . Earth behold him!"

(Choir: "Lo! The Mighty God Appearing"—Stephens)

Announcer: The Tabernacle Choir sings next from the music of Flaxington Harker, with words from an Old Testament text: "How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace, that publisheth salvation; that saith unto Zion, Thy God reigneth!"

(Choir: "How Beautiful Upon the Mountains"—Harker)

Announcer: With music by Lowell Mason, Alexander Schreiner brings to us an improvisation on the hymn "O my Father, thou that dwellest In the high and glorious place, When shall I regain thy presence, And again behold thy face?"

(Organ: "Improvisation on 'O My Father'"—Mason)

Announcer: From Temple Square—"O My Father" presented by Alexander Schreiner at the Tabernacle Organ.

The Choir recalls now a familiar hymn from the music of Samuel McBurney: "'Come, follow me,' the Savior said, Then let us in his footsteps tread, For thus alone can we be one, With God's own loved, begotten Son."

(Choir: "Come, Follow Me"—McBurney)

"Come, Follow Me"

By J. Spencer Kinard

Of all the precepts taught by the Savior none was of fewer words, yet more difficult to live, than His simple admonition to come, "follow me."¹ Indeed, to follow the teachings and example of the Savior is a great challenge, and the reward is everlasting. As the Lord Himself pointed out "... this is my work and my glory—to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man."²

We all seek, or should seek, eternal life. Preparation for it is our purpose on earth, and the only way this goal can be achieved is through Jesus Christ. Remember the words of His prayer on the way to Gethsemane, "And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent."³ One wise diplomat and spiritual leader pointed out, "To know the Christ is the duty of all of us, and not alone our duty, but our privilege; . . ."⁴

Unfortunately, one of the goals we probably lose sight of more than any other is our own individual salvation. We become so involved with life that we overlook its purpose; we fail to understand what it is all about. Rightfully, we should be concerned with education and occupation, with marriage and parenthood with recreation and leisure—all the important activities which fill our days. But sometimes we forget that all of them are a part of the Savior's challenge to us. Indeed, the sum total of all we do in life will determine our final grade.

The final examination in this great eternal school begins the day we are born. Some of us may nearly have finished it, others may be just beginning. None of us know exactly where we are for it varies with each individual. However, one thing is certain: It is the most important examination we will ever take and no makeups will be allowed.

Our opportunity to follow the Savior is now, for we never know what temptation, or challenge, or experience awaits us; but if we always remember why we are here, why the Savior invited us to follow Him—that is to earn our own salvation—then we will be less likely to be caught in one of life's pitfalls.

(Organ: Without announcement "Improve the Shining Moments"—Baird)

Announcer: Alexander Schreiner has presented a hymn by R. B. Baird: "Improve the shining moments; Don't let them pass you by; . . . Let prudence guide your actions; Be honest in your heart; . . . God will love and bless you And help to you impart."

The women's voices of the Tabernacle Choir with Richard Condie conducting are heard now in a chorus by Handel: "Daughter of Zion, now rejoice! Lo, thy King now comes to thee; And words of peace He brings to thee: . . ."

(Women's Chorus: "Daughter of Zion, Now Rejoice!"—Handel, arr. Warren)

Announcer: "The Lord bless you and keep you, the Lord lift His countenance upon you; and give you peace, . . ."

(Men's Chorus: "The Lord Bless You and Keep You"—Lutkin)

Announcer: We have heard the Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir.

Now in closing, the Choir turns

¹New Testament, Matthew 16:24; Mark 8:34; Luke 9:59, etc.

²Pearl of Great Price, Moses 1:39

³New Testament, John 17:3

⁴J. Reuben Clark, Jr., Address delivered at Brigham Young University, December 11, 1951 to a sacred song of our Lord and Savior by Charles Gounod: "O Divine Redeemer."

(Choir: "O Divine Redeemer"—Gounod)

Announcer: Again we leave you within the shadows of the everlasting hills. May peace be with you, this day—and always.

This concludes the two thousand two hundred seventy-seventh performance continuing the 44th year of this traditional broadcast from the Mormon Tabernacle on Temple Square, brought to you by CBS and its affiliated stations, originating with Station KSL in Salt Lake City, Utah.

Richard Condie conducted the Tabernacle Choir, Alexander Schreiner was at the Organ. The Spoken Word by Spencer Kinard.

In another seven days, at this same hour, Music and the Spoken Word will be heard again from the Crossroads of the West.

This is the CBS Radio Network.

SUMMARY OF CONFERENCE MUSIC

The Salt Lake Tabernacle Choir furnished the choral numbers for the Friday morning, Saturday morning, Sunday morning and Sunday afternoon sessions of the conference, with Richard P. Condie, conductor, and Jay E. Welch, assistant conductor.

The Ogden Institute of Religion Combined Choruses, directed by Ladd Cropper, furnished the music at the Friday afternoon session.

The choral music for the Saturday afternoon session was provided by the Combined Primary Children's Chorus from the Bountiful, Kaysville, and Woods Cross Regions, with Sister Pat Maughan conducting.

An Aaronic Priesthood Chorus from the Oquirrh and Tooele

Regions, with Jerold Ottley conducting, furnished the music at the General Priesthood Meeting on Saturday night.

Richard P. Condie directed the singing of the Tabernacle Choir on the Choir and Organ Broadcast on Sunday morning, with Alexander Schreiner at the organ console.

Prelude and postlude music, and accompaniments on the Tabernacle organ throughout the conference sessions were played by Alexander Schreiner, Robert Cundick, and Roy M. Darley, Tabernacle Organists.

FRANCIS M. GIBBONS

Clerk of the Conference

Index

	Page
A
Anderson, Elder Joseph	146
Revelation to Enoch, 146; Plan fully charted, 147; Rulers chosen, 147; Gospel dispensations, 147; Nebuchadnezzar's dream, 147; Daniel's interpretation, 148; Callings foretold, 148; President Joseph F. Smith, 148; President Heber J. Grant, 148; President David O. McKay, 148; Events of last dispensation, 149; The timetable of life, 150.
Ashton, Elder Marvin J.	20
"I'm really nobody," 20; We are somebody, 21; Teaching of Ammon, 21; Labeling others, 21; An obscure boy a "somebody," 21; Destructive philosophy, 22; Lesson from missionary, 22; Worth of every soul, 22; The prodigal son, 23; Father's response, 23; Proper self-image, 24.
Authorities Present, General and Other	1
Authorities, Sustained, General	29
B
Backman, Elder Robert L. (Priesthood Meeting)	109
Testimonies of youth, 109; A royal generation, 109; Opportunities for leadership, 109; Youth service projects, 110; Leaders of youth, 111; Duties of quorum presidencies, 111; Organized workers, 111; Challenge given, 111.
Benson, Elder Ezra Taft	49
Warning voices, 49; Watchmen on the tower, 49; Age of appeasement, 50; A spiritual foundation, 50; False ideologies, 51; Road of goodness, 51; Downfall of Rome, 51; Gibbon's account, 52; Lessons of history, 53; Eternal verities, 53; A nation on its knees, 53.
Brown, Bishop Victor L. (Priesthood Meeting)	105
New MIA organizations, 105; Aaronic Priesthood MIA, 105; Ward organization, 106; Service and activity committee, 106; Youth committee, 107; Stake organization, 107; Regional activity, 107; Objectives listed, 108; Implementation of program, 108.
C
Church Finance Committee Report	28
Church Statistical Report 1972	26

D	Page
Dunn, Elder Loren C. -----	65
Two accounts of resurrection, 66; A second witness, 66; The Book of Mormon, 66; Purpose of Book of Mormon, 67; A second message, 67; Divinely inspired, 68; A promise, 68; The Church today, 68.
Dunn, Elder Paul H. -----	38
Little red schoolhouse, 38; Emphasis on individual, 39; Concern for people, 39; A piece of property, 39; Worth of a soul, 39.
E
Edling, Elder Wilford G. (Finance Committee Report) -	28
F
Faust, Elder James E. (Priesthood Meeting) -----	112
Single adult members, 112; Being left out, 113; Reaching the one, 113; Guiding principles, 113; Individual involvement, 113; Flexibility of program, 114; Additional instructions 114; Personal testimony, 115.
Featherstone, Bishop Vaughn J. -----	44
All are beggars, 44; Rich man and Lazarus, 45; "The Touch of the Master's Hand," 45; Caring for all, 46; Story of Goates family, 46; The Lord's way, 48.
Fifth Session -----	104
Finance Committee Report -----	28
First Day—Afternoon Meeting -----	25
First Day—Morning Meeting -----	3
First Session -----	3
Fourth Session -----	76

G	Page
General Authorities Present	1
General Authorities and Officers Sustained	29
General Priesthood Meeting	104
Gibbons, Elder Francis M. (Statistical Report)	26

H

Haight, Elder David B.	82
Scale of values, 82; False prophets, 83; Eternal struggle with evil, 83; Warning of evil power, 83; Reality of Satan, 84; Experience of college student, 84; Need of parental direction, 85; Influence of devil, 85; Shield of righteousness, 85.
Hanks, Elder Marion D.	162
Mission of Christ, 162; Worth of souls, 162; Message of hope, 162; The Divine Redeemer, 163; Our opportunities, 162; Not understood, 163; Friendship of God, 164; Remembering God's mercy, 164; Lift for the repentant, 163; Doing as Christ did, 165.
Hinckley, Elder Gordon B.	72
Response of convert, 72; Reasons for church growth, 72; No equivocations, 73; Motivation by convictions, 73; Strength of Church, 73; Miracle of conversion, 74; Every man may know, 75; Testimony of young woman, 75; The rock of revelation, 75.
Hunter, Elder Howard W.	172
A second witness for Christ, 172; The voice of the Lord, 173; The appearance of Christ, 174; Teachings of the Savior, 175; The gospel, 174; Gospel divided into two parts, 175; Gospel plan unfolded, 175.

K

Kimball, President Spencer W.	150
Family and home life, 150; Great plan of life, 151; Training in the home, 151; Checklist for success, 151; Preparation dispels fear, 152; Early training, 152; Legacy to children, 152; Spirituality in the home, 153; The time at home, 153; Faithfulness to family duties, 153; Parental love, 154.

L	Page
Lee, President Harold B. -----	3, 10, 11, 13, 14, 16, 20, 24, 25, 26, 28, 33, 37, 40, 44, 48, 54, 55, 61, 65, 69, 71, 76, 77, 82, 85, 89, 90, 94, 97, 103, 104, 105, 108, 112, 115, 119, 131, 132, 137, 141, 142, 146, 150, 155, 156, 161, 165, 168, 169, 172, 181
Lee, President Harold B. -----	4
Anniversary of church organization, 4; "Zion must arise . . .," 4; Meaning of Zion, 4; "A standard for the nations," 5; Stakes of Zion, 5; Prophetic warning, 5; Promise to righteous, 5; Boundaries being enlarged, 6; Remarks at Mexico City, 6; Growth of Church, 7; Adherence to fundamentals, 7; Reason for confusion, 7; Ecumenical movement, 8; Mission of the Church, 8; Meeting today's needs, 8; Individual testimonies, 9; Letter from student leader, 9; United support, 10; Divinity of work, 10.
Lee, President Harold B. (Priesthood Meeting) -----	125
Representative of servicemen, 125; Aaronic and Melchizedek Priesthood MIA, 125; Social activities to be unified, 126; Questionable predictions, 126; Counsel of President Ivins, 127; Repetition of warning, 127; Revelation to Edward Partridge, 128; Duties of Aaronic Priesthood, 128; Meaning of priesthood, 129; Power of the priesthood, 129; Strengthening the home, 130; Need for loyalty, 130; Solemn witness, 130.
Lee, President Harold B. -----	176
Appreciation for brethren, 176; Instruction of Alma, 176; Forgiveness of sins, 177; Peace of conscience, 177; Temporal and spiritual aid, 178; Experience at gate beautiful, 178; Lifting another, 178; Help from powers divine, 179; Assistance of noble men, 179; Regional and Mission Representatives, 180; Experience at temple dedication, 180; Serving the Lord, 181; Blessing, 181.

M

McConkie, Elder Bruce R. -----	33
"Upon Judea's Plains," 33; Salvation in Christ, 34; Commission to proclaim the truth, 34; To teach and to warn, 34; Obligation to know, 34; Personal witness, 35; Peter's witness, 35; The seal of testimony, 36; As one having authority, 37; "In an Upper Room," 37.

	Page
Monson, Elder Thomas S.	61
Legacy of Kathleen McKee, 61; World made brighter, 62; Yellow canaries with gray, 62; Sons and daughters of God, 63; Outward appearance, 63; The better life, 63; Call of the fisher- man, 63; Saul of Tarsus, 64; A call to serve, 64.
Music, Summary of Conference	184
O
Obituaries	26
P
Packer, Elder Boyd K.	78
"Behold your little ones," 78; Talk to children, 78; Reasons for mortality, 78; Death a separation, 79; God's plan, 79; Learning good from evil, 80; Importance of cleanliness, 80; Steps to enter Church, 80; An apostle of the Lord, 81; A time of testing, 81; Redemption of Christ, 81.
Passed Away, Those Who Have	27
Perry, Elder L. Tom	14
Conditions of today, 14; Personal experiences, 15; Companion- ship of Holy Ghost, 15; Security of love, 15; Influences of home, 16; Consider your ways, 16.
Petersen, Elder Mark E.	157
Safeguards, 157; False teachers, 157; Testimonies of Christ, 157; Cults organized, 158; A falling away, 158; Early denominations, 159; Avoidance of splinter groups, 159; Modern cults, 159; Other apostates, 160; Salvation not in splinter groups, 160; Principle of repentance, 161.
Pinegar, Elder Rex D.	94
Sharing the gospel, 94; A sacred responsibility, 94; The Jones family, 95; Virginia branch, 95; Captive audience, 95; Corres- pondence with friend, 96; Something better, 96; One way, 96; Charge to share, 97; Paul's promise, 97.
Priesthood Meeting, General	104

R	Page
Rector, Jr., Elder Hartman	86
Definition of success, 86; Attainment of joy, 86; Everything has its price, 87; Material possessions, 87; Seeking righteousness, 88; Success in the home, 88; Path to temple altar, 89; Eternal life, 89.
Richards, Elder Franklin D.	169
Main differences, 169; Conception of Godhead, 169; A new birth, 169; Object of existence, 170; Blessings of Holy Ghost, 170; Experience of cadet, 170; Guidance of the Spirit, 171; Warning of danger, 171; A comforter, 171; The still small voice, 171; Witness of Holy Ghost, 172.
Richards, Elder LeGrand	98
The holy scriptures, 98; Prophecy of second coming, 98; John the Revelator, 98; Worship of true God, 99; Seeking after God, 99; Joy in missionary service, 100; Isaiah's prophecy, 100; Book of Mormon prophecy, 100; Talk to Bible class, 101; Sermon on eternal marriage, 101; Attendance at church convention, 102; The Lord's blueprint, 102; Meaning of Biblical passages, 102; A restitution, 103.
Romney, President Marion G. (Priesthood Meeting) ---	115
Covenant of priesthood bearers, 115; Motivating desire, 116; Self-serving ambition, 116; Motivating conviction, 117; Pondering the things of God, 117; Experience of Joseph F. Smith, 118; Prayer opens the door, 118; Watch and pray, 118; Nephi's exhortation, 118.
Romney, President Marion G.	133
Offspring of God, 133; Gospel taught anciently, 133; Begotten sons and daughters, 133; Nature of a spirit, 134; Abraham's vision, 134; Alexander Pope's portrayal, 135; Block to spiritual growth, 135; A child of God, 136; Difference in aspirations, 136; Acceptance of God's laws, 136; Faith of the prophets, 137.
S
Salt Lake Tabernacle Choir and Organ Broadcast ----	182
Second Day—Afternoon Meeting	76
Second Day—Morning Meeting	55

	Page
Second Session	25
Seventh Session	156
Sill, Elder Sterling W.	142
Uses of our hands, 142; Our fingers, 143; The thumb, 143; The second finger (Pointing finger), 144; The third finger, (Big finger), 144; The fourth finger (Ring finger), 145; The last finger (little finger), 145; Personal covenant, 146.
Simpson, Elder Robert L.	17
God's work and glory, 17; Our brother's keeper, 17; Help for unfortunate, 18; Following the Savior's example, 18; Acceptable in good works, 19; Concern for others, 19; "Go, and do thou likewise," 19.
Sixth Session	132
Stapley, Elder Delbert L.	138
Our need for God, 138; The gospel plan, 138; Faith in God, 139; Repentance, 139; The importance of man, 139; Unity, 139; Strength of the Church, 140; Obedience to gospel requirements, 140; The Holy Ghost, 141; Personal testimony, 141.
Statistical Report 1972	26
Stone, Elder O. Leslie	90
Prayers answered, 90; Faith defined, 90; Faith requires action, 91; Gaining faith, 91; Ways to build faith, 91; The faith of Moses, 92; Joseph Smith's demonstration of faith, 92; Brigham Young, a man of faith, 92; Patience and faith, 93; Need for faith, 93.
Sustaining of General Authorities and Officers	29

T

Tabernacle Choir and Organ Broadcast	182
Tanner, President N. Eldon	29, 33
Tanner, President N. Eldon	55
Two plans presented, 56; Satan's plan to destroy, 56; Examples of Satan's influence, 57; As we sow, so shall we reap, 57; Self-discipline, 57; Child discipline, 58; Choosing the right, 58; Collapse of moral standards, 59; Fight against evil, 59; Stand firm, 59; Opposition in all things, 60; The restored gospel, 60; Daily choices, 60.

	Page
Tanner, President N. Eldon (Priesthood Meeting) -----	119
Appreciation of priesthood, 119; Importance of family, 120; Example of good teaching, 120; Appreciation for father, 121; Expression of confidence, 121; Representing the Lord, 121; Responsibility for Aaronic Priesthood, 112; Readiness for priesthood, 122; Encouragement to advance, 123; Judges in Israel, 123; Cases to be handled, 123; Keeping morally clean, 124; Worthiness for callings, 124.
Taylor, Elder Henry D. -----	69
Events at Gethsemane, 69; Sacrament re-instituted, 70; Sacramental prayers, 70; Remembering the Savior, 70; Our obligation, 71; Blessing promised, 71; Gaining the Spirit, 71.
Third Day—Afternoon Meeting-----	156
Third Day—Morning Meeting -----	132
Third Session -----	55
Tuttle, Elder A. Theodore -----	11
Characteristics of a prophet, 11; A living prophet, 11; Mouthpiece of God, 12; Revelations for specific times, 12; Counsel to Saints, 12; Listening ears, 13.
V
Vandenberg, Elder John H. -----	40
Persuasions of the heart, 40; The principle of agency, 41; Author of man's agency, 42; Answers in the scriptures, 42; Commitment, 43; Making proper choices, 43.
Y
Young, Elder S. Dilworth -----	165
The Lord Jesus Christ, 165; Earthly mission, 166; Life of the Lord, 166; The atonement, 167; Triumphant ending, 167; Appearance to Nephites, 167; Visit to brother of Jared, 167; Joseph Smith's vision, 168; Testimony to the world, 168.

ONE HUNDRED FORTY-THIRD SEMI-ANNUAL

CONFERENCE

OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST
OF LATTER-DAY SAINTS

HELD IN THE TABERNACLE
SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH

OCTOBER 5, 6, 7, 1973

WITH REPORT OF DISCOURSES

Published by
The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints
Salt Lake City, Utah

OFFICIAL REPORT
of the
ONE HUNDRED FORTY-THIRD
SEMI-ANNUAL GENERAL CONFERENCE
of
THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST
OF LATTER-DAY SAINTS
held in the Tabernacle On Temple Square
in
Salt Lake City, Utah
October 5, 6, 7, 1973

Published by
The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints

1973 Corporation of the President
of
The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints

All Rights Reserved
Printed in USA by the
Deseret Press
PBCT050A 10/73

THE ONE HUNDRED FORTY-THIRD SEMI-ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER-DAY SAINTS

The 143rd Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City, Utah, on Friday, October 5, 1973, at 10 o'clock a.m.

The general sessions of the conference were held at 10:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m. on Friday, October 5, Saturday, October 6, and Sunday, October 7. The General Priesthood Meeting was held in the Tabernacle on Saturday, October 6, at 7 o'clock p.m.

President Harold B. Lee was present and presided at and conducted all sessions of the conference. All General Authorities of the Church were present at the opening session.

The proceedings of the conference sessions were given extensive coverage in the United States and Canada over many television and radio stations, coast to coast, originating with KSL in Salt Lake City, and also in major cities of Mexico and Central America. By means of satellite transmission, sessions of the conference were heard over the facilities of nearly 100 radio stations in Australia and countries of South America.

The Sunday morning session was broadcast by many radio and television stations in the United States and Canada, and by short-wave radio to England, Europe, Mexico, Central America, Africa, and parts of Asia. The proceedings of this session were also carried from the Tabernacle over direct oceanic cables to a large number of members and friends assembled in chapels throughout Great Britain, Germany, France, Switzerland, Holland, Belgium and Austria.

Rebroadcasts of all sessions of the conference were sent by KSL Radio in Salt Lake City and KIRO Radio in Seattle, Washington, beginning at midnight, on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, October 5, 6, and 7, to many parts of the United States and the world.

The General Priesthood Meeting held on Saturday evening was transmitted over closed-circuit from the Salt Lake Tabernacle to over 185,000 men of the priesthood assembled in approximately 850 buildings throughout the United States and Canada, and via closed-circuit television to ten buildings in Salt Lake City, and on the campus at Brigham Young University.

This report of the conference also includes the continuity of the Tabernacle Choir and Organ Broadcast over the Columbia Broadcasting System on Sunday morning from 9:30 to 10 o'clock, immediately preceding the general conference session.

GENERAL AUTHORITIES PRESENT

The following General Authorities of the Church attended one or more of the general sessions:

The First Presidency: Harold B. Lee, N. Eldon Tanner, and Marion G. Romney.

The Quorum of the Twelve Apostles: Spencer W. Kimball, Ezra Taft Benson, Mark E. Petersen, Delbert L. Stapley, LeGrand Richards, Hugh B. Brown, Howard W. Hunter, Gordon B. Hinckley, Thomas S. Monson, Boyd K. Packer, Marvin J. Ashton, and Bruce R. McConkie.

Patriarch to the Church: Eldred G. Smith.

Assistants to the Twelve: Alma Sonne, ElRay L. Christiansen, Sterling

W. Sill, Henry D. Taylor, Alvin R. Dyer, Franklin D. Richards, Theodore M. Burton, Bernard P. Brockbank, James A. Cullimore, Marion D. Hanks, Joseph Anderson, David B. Haight, William H. Bennett, John H. Vandenberg, Robert L. Simpson, O. Leslie Stone, James E. Faust, and L. Tom Perry.

The First Council of Seventy: S. Dilworth Young, Milton R. Hunter, A. Theodore Tuttle, Paul H. Dunn, Hartman Rector, Jr., Loren C. Dunn, and Rex D. Pingar.

The Presiding Bishopric: Victor L. Brown, H. Burke Peterson, and Vaughn J. Featherstone.

OTHER AUTHORITIES PRESENT

Other authorities of the Church in attendance at the conference included the Presidents of Temples; Regional Representatives; Mission Representatives; Presidents of Stakes and their counselors; Patriarchs; Bishoprics of wards; and presidencies and members of Melchizedek and Aaronic Priesthood quorums.

Many auxiliary officers, general, stake and ward, from all parts of the Church were also in attendance.

FIRST DAY MORNING MEETING

FIRST SESSION

The opening session of the conference convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City, Utah, on Friday, October 5, 1973, at 10 o'clock a.m., with President Harold B. Lee presiding and conducting.

The music for this session was provided by the Tabernacle Choir, with Richard P. Condie conducting. Alexander Schreiner was at the organ.

Before the opening of the meeting the Tabernacle Choir sang the number, "Glory to God." President Lee then made the following remarks:

President Harold B. Lee

To all who are present in this historic building and to all who have joined with us by radio and television, we extend a cordial greeting at the commencement of this, the first general session of the 143rd Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. We are convened in the historic Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City.

We are delighted to announce that seated on the stand are all of the General Authorities of the Church. We particularly are pleased to have Brother Brown, Brother Sonne and Brother

Dyer with us. In attendance also are regional representatives, mission representatives, stake, mission and temple presidencies, bishoprics, and other general and local officers of the Church, and members of the Church from many foreign lands. We extend a special welcome to government, educational and civic leaders who are present, and to the thousands of members and friends of the Church who are tuned to these proceedings by radio and television in many areas of the world.

The Tabernacle Choir, which opened these services singing "Glory to God", under the direction of Richard Condie with Alexander Schreiner at the organ, will now render, "Achieved Is the Glorious Work," from "The Creation" by Hayden.

Following the singing, the invocation will be offered by Elder Hugh B. Brown of the Council of the Twelve.

The Tabernacle Choir sang "Achieved Is the Glorious Work."

The invocation was offered by Elder Hugh B. Brown of the Council of the Twelve.

The Tabernacle Choir without announcement then sang the hymn "Lord, Accept Our True Devotion."

President Harold B. Lee

My beloved brothers and sisters and friends who are listening by radio and television. May I now for a few moments make some comments about a condition which is of great concern to all of us today. I speak of the shocking lack of self-respect by so many individuals, as is evidenced by their dress, their manner, and engulfing waves of permissiveness which seem to be moving over the world like an avalanche.

Standards of decency

We see among us so many who seem to be forsaking standards of decency or an understanding of the meaning of time-honored words which, since the beginning of time, have had real meaning to our forebears; words that have made for strength of character and righteousness and harmony and unity and peace in the world.

There are eternal words which, if understood and taught and practiced, would bring salvation to every man, woman, boy and girl who does now live or has lived or will yet live in the world.

To some it may seem old-fashioned to speak of virtue and chastity, honesty, morality, faith, character, but these are the qualities which have built great men and women and point the way by which one may find happiness in the living of today and eternal joy in the world to come. These are the qualities which are the anchors to our lives, in spite of the trials, the tragedies, the pestilences, and the cruelties of war which bring in their wake appalling destruction, hunger, and bloodshed.

Like the troubled sea

To those who fail to heed the warnings of those who are striving to teach these principles and choose to go in the opposite course, they will eventually find themselves in the pitiable state which you are witnessing so often among us. The prophet Isaiah described the tragic result most dramatically when he repeated the words of God which came to him as he sought to fortify his people against the wickedness of the world, and I quote his words:

"... Peace, peace to him that is far off, and to him that is near, saith the Lord; and I will heal him. But the wicked are like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest, whose waters cast up mire and dirt. There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked." (Isa. 57:19-21.)

Other prophets have declared likewise, so forcibly as to not be misunderstood, that "wickedness never was happiness." (Al. 41:10.)

Self-respect

As I have prayerfully thought of the reasons why one chooses this course which is dramatically described by the prophet Isaiah—when one who has departed from the path which would have given him peace is like the troubled sea, casting up mire and dirt—it seems to me that it all results from the failure of the individual to have self-respect. Listen to these words of wisdom from those whose lives have been worthy of emulation and who have experienced the realities of the periods of time from which they speak. I quote:

"Self-respect—that corner-stone of all virtue."

—Sir John Frederick
William Herschel

Others have declared:

"Self-respect is the noblest garment with which a man can clothe himself, the most elevating feeling with which the mind can be inspired."

—Samuel Smiles

"Every man stamps his value on himself. The price we challenge for ourselves is given us by others.—Man is made great or little by his own will."

—Johann von Schiller

A lovely mother in a nearby community wrote this to me, "I love America, I love my husband, I love my children, I love my God, and why is this possible? Because I truly love myself."

Such are the fruits of self-respect. Conversely, when one does not have that love for himself of which this sister speaks, other consequences can be expected to follow. He ceases to love life. Or if he marries, [he] has lost his love for his wife and children—no love of home or respect for the country in which he lives, and eventually he has lost his love of God. Rebellion in the land, disorder and the lack of love in the family, children disobedient to parents, loss of contact with God, all because that person has lost all respect for himself.

Who Am I?

I recall an invitation I had to speak to men who, for the most part, had not been advanced in the Church because of their lack of desire or their lack of understanding of the importance of conforming to certain standards required for advancement. The subject on which I was to speak was "Who Am I?" As I pondered this subject and searched the word of God to prepare for this assignment, I immediately sensed that I was to talk about a subject that is of first importance to each of us as it was to those men among whom, no doubt, there were some who had not found themselves and lacked the basis of a solid foundation upon which to build their lives.

The rowdiness of children, the incorrigibility of adolescents are more often than not a bid for a kind of attention or popularity that physical and mental endowments do not invite. So the blasé girl [and] the unkempt boy are often but a reflection of an individual who is seeking, by superficial adornment or by abnormal conduct (in a strange way), to supply that indefinable quality they may think is charm—a clumsy attempt to draw attention by conduct which certainly reflects that inward frustration because of the lack of understanding of their true identity as a human being.

Well, then, "Who am I?" Those lacking in that important understanding, and, consequently, in some degree [those] failing to hold themselves in the high esteem which they would have if they did understand, are lacking self-respect.

Scriptural questions

May I begin to answer that question by posing two questions from scriptural texts which should be impressed upon every soul.

The psalmist wrote: "What is man, that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man, that thou visitest him? For thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, and hast crowned him with glory and honour." (Ps. 8:4-5.)

And the next is the question the Lord posed to Job: "Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth? declare, if thou hast understanding. . . . [of] when the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy?" (Job 38:4-7.)

Reduced to more simple language than the words of those questions from the scriptures, the prophets in these quotations are simply asking each of us, "Where did you come from? Why are you here?"

Belief in one's worth

A great psychologist, MacDougall, once said: "The first thing to be done to help a man to moral regeneration is to restore if possible his self-respect." Also I recall the prayer of the old English weaver, "O God, help me to hold a high opinion of myself." That should be the prayer of every soul; not an abnormally developed self-esteem that becomes haughtiness, conceit, or arrogance, but a righteous self-respect that might be defined as "belief in one's own worth, worth to God, and worth to man."

Now, consider these answers to the searching questions which must be burned into the consciousness of all those who have strayed away or who have not arrived at a true evaluation of themselves in this world of chaos. In the limited time allotted me, I hope that in some measure my voice will be heard above the dismal dreariness of this troubled world.

The apostle Paul wrote: "Furthermore we have had fathers of our flesh which corrected us, and we gave them reverence: shall we not much rather be in subjection unto the Father of spirits, and live?" (Heb. 12:9.)

Father of spirits

This suggests that all who live upon the earth, who have fathers on earth, likewise have a father of their spirits. So did Moses and Aaron, as they fell upon their faces, cry out: "O God, the God of the spirits of all flesh, shall one man sin, and wilt thou be wroth with all the congregation? (Num. 16:22.)

Note how they addressed the Lord, "... the God [Father] of the spirits of all flesh [mankind]. . . ."

Definition of a spirit

From the revelations through Abraham, we get a glimpse of who and what the spirit is:

"Now the Lord had shown unto me, Abraham, the intelligences that were organized before the world was; and among all these there were many of the noble and great ones;

"And God saw these souls that they were good, and he stood in the midst of them, and he said: These I will make my rulers; for he stood among those that were spirits, and he saw that they were good; and he said unto me: Abraham, thou art one of them; thou wast chosen before thou wast born." (Abr. 3:22-23.)

There we are told that the Lord promised that those who were faithful in that premortal world would be added upon, by having a physical body in this second estate of this earth's existence and, furthermore, if they would keep the commandments as God taught by the revelations, they would have "glory added upon their heads for ever and ever." (Abr. 3:26.)

Now, there are several precious truths in that scripture. First, we have a definition of what a spirit is, as it relates to our physical body. What did it look like in that premortal world (if we could see it apart from our mortal body)? A modern Latter-day prophet gives us an inspired answer:

"... that which is spiritual being in the likeness of that which is temporal; and that which is temporal in the likeness of that which is spiritual; the spirit of man in the likeness of his person, as also the spirit of the beast, and every other creature which God has created." (D&C 77:2.)

Privilege of mortality

The next truth we learn from this scripture [is] that you and I, having been spirits and now having bodies, were among those who passed that first test and were given the privilege of coming to earth as mortal individuals. If we hadn't passed that test, we wouldn't be here with mortal bodies, but would have been denied this privilege and would have followed Satan or Lucifer, as he came to be known, as did one-third of the spirits created in that premortal existence who were deprived of the privilege of having mortal bodies. These are now among us, but only in their spiritual form, to make a further attempt to thwart the plan of salvation by which all who would obey would have the great glory of returning to God our Father who gave us life.

So the Old Testament prophets declared with respect to death: "Then shall the dust (meaning our mortal bodies) return to the earth as it was; and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it." (Eccles. 12:7.)

Obviously we could not return to a place where we had never been, so we are talking about death as a process as miraculous as birth, by which we return to "our Father who art in heaven," as the Master taught his disciples to pray.

Foreordination

A further truth is clearly set forth in that scripture [Abr. 3:22-23], that many were chosen, as was Abraham, before they were born, as the Lord told Moses and also Jeremiah. This was made still more meaningful by the Latter-day Prophet, Joseph Smith, who declared, "I believe that every person who is called to do an important work in the kingdom of God, was called to that work and foreordained to that work before the world was." Then he added this, "I believe that I was foreordained to the work that I am called to do." (See Documentary History of the Church, vol. 6, p. 364.)

But now there is a warning: Despite that calling which is spoken of in the scriptures as "foreordination," we have another inspired declaration: "Behold, there are many called, but few are chosen. . . ." (D&C 121:34.)

This suggests that even though we have our free agency here, there are many who were foreordained before the world was, to a greater state than they have prepared themselves for here. Even though they might have been among the noble and great, from among whom the Father declared he would make his chosen leaders, they may fail of that calling here in mortality. Then the Lord poses this question: ". . . and why are they not chosen?" (D&C 121:34.)

Two answers were given—First, "Because their hearts are set so much upon the things of this world. . . ." And second, they ". . . aspire to the honors of men." (D&C 121:35.)

Paul's sermon

Now then, to make a summary of what I have just read, may I ask each of you again the question, "Who are you?" You are all the sons and daughters of God. Your spirits were created and lived as organized intelligences before the world was. You have been blessed to have a physical body because of your obedience to certain commandments in that premortal state. You are now born into a family to which you have come, into the nations through which you have come, as a reward for the kind of lives you lived before you came here and at a time in the world's history, as the Apostle Paul taught the men of Athens and as the Lord revealed to Moses, determined by the faithfulness of each of those who lived before this world was created.

Hear now the significant words of that powerful sermon to "The Unknown God" preached by the apostle Paul, to those who were ignorantly worshipping images of stone and brass and wood, and I quote:

"God that made the world and all things therein, seeing that he is Lord of heaven and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands;

"And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth [now mark you this], and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation;

"That they should seek the Lord, if haply they might feel after him, and find him, though he be not far from every one of us." (Acts 17:24, 26-27.)

Children of Israel

Here then again we have the Lord making a further enlightening declaration to Moses as recorded in the Book of Deuteronomy:

"When the most High divided to the nations their inheritance, when he separated the sons of Adam, he set the bounds of the people according to the number of the children of Israel." (Deut. 32:8.)

Now, mind you, this was said to the children of Israel before they had arrived in the "Promised Land," which was to be the land of their inheritance.

Then note this next verse: "For the Lord's portion is his people; Jacob is the lot of his inheritance." (Deut. 32:9.)

It would seem very clear, then, that those born to the lineage of Jacob, who was later to be called Israel, and his posterity, who were known as the children of Israel, were born into the most illustrious lineage of any of those who came upon the earth as mortal beings.

All these rewards were seemingly promised, or foreordained, before the world was. Surely these matters must have been determined by the kind of lives we had lived in that premortal spirit world. Some may question these assumptions, but at the same time they will accept without any question the belief that each one of us will be judged when we leave this earth according to his or her deeds during our lives here in mortality. Isn't it just as reasonable to believe that what we have received here in this earth [life] was given to each of us according to the merits of our conduct before we came here?

Free agency

Now there is another important understanding that we have from the scriptures. We are all free agents, which means to some people who manifest a spirit of rebellion that they are free to do anything they please, but that is not the correct meaning of free agency as the prophets have declared in the scriptures where free agency has been defined. I quote:

"Wherefore, men are free according to the flesh; and all things are given them which are expedient unto man. And they are free to choose liberty and eternal life, through the great mediation of all men, or to choose captivity and death, according to the captivity and power of the devil; for he seeketh that all men might be miserable like unto himself." (2 Ne. 2:27.)

The temple of God

The apostle Paul impressed the sacredness of our individual bodies in this statement: "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are." (1 Cor. 3:16-17.)

And, again, he said further to those who had been baptized members of the church that they had received the gift of a special endowment known as the Holy Ghost. This was his teaching: "What? know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own? . . . therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's." (1 Cor. 6:19-20.)

Restoring self-respect

If we can get a person to think what those words mean, then we can begin to understand the significance of the words of the renowned psychologist, MacDougall, from whom I have previously quoted, "The first thing to be done to help a man to moral regeneration is to restore, if possible, his self-respect." How better may that self-respect be restored than to help him to fully understand the answer to that question, "Who am I?"

When we see one devoid of respect for himself, as indicated by his conduct, his outward appearance, his speech, and his utter disregard of the basic measures of decency, then certainly we are witnessing the frightening aspect of one over whom Satan has achieved a victory, as the Lord declared he would try to do "to deceive and to blind men, and to lead them captive at his will . . . to destroy the agency of man." (See Moses 4:1-4.) This is the fate of "even as many as would not hearken unto my voice" (Moses 4:4), so declared the Lord to Moses.

Some years ago I read a report from a survey made by ministers who had studied a number of cases of students who had committed suicide. This was their firm conclusion after an exhaustive study: "The philosophy of the students who took their lives was so lacking that when a severe crisis came in their lives, they had nothing to hold fast to, and so they took the coward's way out."

Such could be the awful state of those described by the Master in a parable with which he concluded the Sermon on the Mount:

"And every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand:

"And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell: and great was the fall of it." (Matt. 7:26-27.)

The Lord's eternal purpose with respect to his plan of salvation was declared to Moses: "For behold, this is my work and my glory—to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man." (Moses 1:39.)

Eternal plan

The first goal in that eternal plan was for each of us to come to earth and gain a physical body, and then, after death and the resurrection which would follow, the spirit and the resurrected body would not thereafter be subject to death. All of this was a free gift to every living soul as Paul declared: "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." (1 Cor. 15:22.)

What this means to one dying with a malignant malady or to a mother bereft of a child may be illustrated by the expressions of a young mother whom I visited in the hospital some years ago. She said to me, "I have thought all this through. It doesn't make any difference whether I go now or whether I live to 70, 80, or 90. The sooner I can get to a place where I can be active and doing things that will bring me eternal joy the better for all concerned." She was comforted by the thought that she had lived such a life as to be worthy to enter into the presence of God, which is to enjoy eternal life.

A mother's teachings

The importance of taking advantage of every hour of precious time allotted to each of us here was impressed forcibly upon me by an incident in my own family. A young mother came with her beautiful flaxen-haired six-year-old daughter to her grandparents. The mother asked if we would like to hear a beautiful new children's song which the daughter had just learned in her Primary class. While the little mother accompanied her, she sang:

"I am a child of God,
And he has sent me here,

Has given me an earthly home
With parents kind and dear.

"I am a child of God,
And so my needs are great;
Help me to understand His words
Before it grows too late.

"I am a child of God,
Rich blessings are in store;
If I but learn to do His will
I'll live with him once more.

(Chorus)

"Lead me, guide me, walk beside me,
Help me find the way.
Teach me all that I must do
To live with him some day."

—Sing With Me, no. B-76

Her grandparents were in tears. Little did they know then, that hardly before that little girl would have had the full opportunity for her mother to teach her all that she should know in order to return to her heavenly home, that [the] little mother would be suddenly taken away in death, leaving to others the responsibility of finding the answer to the pleadings of that childhood prayer, to teach and train and to lead her through the uncertainties of life.

Divine relationship

What a difference it would make if we really sensed our divine relationship to God, our Heavenly Father, our relationship to Jesus Christ, our Savior and our elder brother, and our relationship to each other.

Contrasted with the sublime peace to one such as that wonderful sister I visited in the hospital is that terrifying state of those who do not, as they approach death, have that great comfort, for as the Lord has told us plainly: "And they that die not in me, wo unto them, for their death is bitter." (D&C 42:47.)

It was George Bernard Shaw who said, "If we all realized that we were the children of one father, we would stop shouting at each other as much as we do."

Goal of eternal life

Now, as I come to the closing of this address, I trust that I might have given to you and others who have not yet listened to such counsel, something to stimulate some sober thinking as to who you are and from whence you came; and, in so doing, that I may have stirred up within your soul the determination to begin now to show an increased self-respect and reverence for the temple of God, your human body, wherein dwells a heavenly spirit. I would charge you to say again and again to yourselves, as the Primary organization has taught the children to sing "I am a [son or a daughter] of God" and by so doing begin today to live closer to those ideals which will make your life happier and more fruitful because of an awakened realization of who you are.

God grant that each of us here today may so live that all among us, and with us, may see, not us, but that which is divine and comes from God. With that vision of what those who have lost their way may become, my prayer is that they may receive strength and resolution to climb higher and higher and upward and onward to that great goal of eternal life and also that I may do my part in seeking to show by example, as well as by precept, that which will be the best of which I am capable of doing.

Witness of Christ

I again bear my solemn witness to the great truth of the Master's profound words to the sobbing Martha: "I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live." (John 11:25.)

I thank God that I too can say, with the same spirit as did Martha, who bore her testimony as the Spirit witnessed to her from the depths of her soul:

"Yea, Lord: I [too know] that thou art the Christ, the Son of God, which [came] into the world." (See John 11:27.)

In the name of our Lord and Master, Jesus, the Christ, the Savior of the world, even so. Amen.

After President Lee's talk, the Tabernacle Choir without announcement sang the song "How Beautiful Upon the Mountain."

President Harold B. Lee

The Tabernacle Choir has sung that stirring song, "How Beautiful Upon the Mountain," by my measure one of the most beautiful pieces of music that has ever been written. Thank you for that wonderful rendition.

We shall now hear from Bishop H. Burke Peterson, first counselor in the Presiding Bishopric of the Church.

For the benefit of the television and radio audience who have just joined with us, we are gathered in the historic Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City in this, the first session of the 143rd Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Bishop Peterson will now speak to us.

Bishop H. Burke Peterson

First Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric

I thrill with you, brethren and sisters, as we have listened this morning to a prophet's voice and heard the word of God; and I pray that the Lord will continue to sustain his mouthpiece on the earth for the blessing of all of his children throughout the world.

One young mother once said to me, "It seems in our home we go from one crisis to another. We never seem to be in calm waters. Either it's sick children, a Primary lesson to prepare, a car that breaks down before meetings, a flooded bathroom—you name it, we've had it."

I suppose there are many of us whose life pattern would echo that refrain, even though the experiences will vary with each of us.

Why adversity

Because of the countless problems surrounding us and because of the trials and tribulations we are all confronted with, I've felt a need to be built up again in our understanding—of why we have adversity and what we can do—to weather its storm. It seems that life is filled with a variety of difficult experiences that test us and try us.

We should understand that a life filled with problems is no respecter of age or station in life. A life filled with trials is no respecter of position in the Church or social standing in the community. Challenges come to the young and to the aged—to the rich and to the poor—to the struggling student or the genius scientist—to the farmer, carpenter, lawyer, or doctor. Trials come to the strong and to the weak—to the sick and to the healthy. Yes, even to the simplest child as well as to a prophet of God. At times they seem to be more than we can bear.

Answers in scriptures

Now, some will say, "Why would a Father in heaven who calls us his children—who says he loves us above all of his creations—who says he wants only the best for us—who wants us to be happy and enjoy life to the fullest—why does he let these things happen to us—if we are really that dear to him?" The scriptures and the prophets have some needed answers for us:

We read in Helaman: "And thus we see that except the Lord doth chasten his people with many afflictions, yea, except he doth visit them with death and with terror, and with famine and with all manner of pestilence, they will not remember him." (Hel. 12:3.)

Blessing of understanding

At a recent stake conference the stake president called a young father, who had just been ordained an elder, from the audience to bear his testimony. The father had been active in the Church as a boy, but during his teenage years had veered somewhat from his childhood pattern. After returning from the military service he married a lovely girl and presently children blessed their home. Without warning an undisclosed illness overcame their little four-year-old daughter. Within a very short time she was on the critical list in the hospital. In desperation and for the first time in many years the father went to his knees in prayer—asking that her life be spared. As her condition worsened and he sensed that she would not live, the tone of the father's prayers changed—he no longer asked that her life be spared—but rather for a blessing of understanding—"Let thy will be done," he said. Soon the child was in a coma, indicating her hours on earth were few. Now, fortified with understanding and trust, the young parents asked for one more favor of the Lord. Would he allow her to awaken once more that they might hold her closely. The little one's eyes opened, her frail arms outstretched to her mother and then to her daddy for a final embrace. When the father laid her on the pillow to sleep till another morning, he knew their prayers had been answered—a kind, understanding Father in heaven had filled their needs as he knew them to be. His will had been done—they had gained understanding—they were determined now to live that they might live again with her.

Test of faith

Do you remember the words of the Lord to the Prophet Joseph Smith when he was having that great test of his faith in the Liberty Jail? The Lord said,

"If thou art called to pass through tribulation . . ." and then the Lord called to mind a series of possibilities that would test any man to the utmost—and he then concluded: "Know thou, my son, that all these things shall give thee experience and be for thy good." (D&C 122:5, 7.)

It is interesting to note that from the depths of trial and despair have come some of the most beautiful and classic passages of modern-day scripture—not from the ease of a comfortable circumstance. Might this also be the case in our own lives! From trial comes refined beauty.

Opportunities for growth

We could cite Beethoven or Abraham Lincoln or Demosthenes who won out in a most difficult struggle to become a magnificent orator—but closer to us we see the great beauty and wisdom in the speaking and teaching of President Spencer W. Kimball and we see the price he's paid that our lives might be blessed.

In speaking of the Savior, the scriptures tell us: "Though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered." (Heb. 5:8.)

From Hebrews we also read: "My son, despise not thou the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of him: for whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth." (Heb. 12:5.)

Let us remember—trials are an evidence of a Father's love. They are given as a blessing to his children. They are given as opportunities for growth.

Strength from the Lord

Now, how do we approach them? How do we overcome them? How are we magnified by them? There seems to be a reason why we lose our composure in adversity—why we think we can no longer cope with what we're faced with here in this life. There is a reason why we give up, why we "fall apart at the seams" so to speak. The reason may be so simple that we lose sight of it.

Could it be it's because we begin to lose contact with our greatest source of strength—our Father in heaven? He is the key to our enjoying sweetness in adversity—in gaining strength from our trials—he and he alone.

As a reassurance to us, let us read from the New Testament: "There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man: but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it." (1 Cor. 10:13.)

Did you get the significance of that scriptural promise—we will have no temptation or trial beyond our ability to overcome—he will provide a way for us to rise above—whatever it may be.

Help through prayer

May I suggest the best way I know to keep close to the source of this great strength is through prayer. No man can stand alone in his struggle through life. Sometimes in discouragement our prayers, at best, become occasional or maybe not at all. Sometimes we forget or just don't care. Brigham Young once said, "Prayer keeps man from sin, and sin keeps man from prayer."

Some may be thinking that because they have a Word of Wisdom problem or because they have been dishonest or immoral—because they have not prayed for years—because of any reasons they now feel unworthy—they may say, "It's too late, I've made so many mistakes—so why even try?" To these we say, "For your own sake, give yourself another chance."

Sincere prayer is the heart of a happy and productive life. Prayer strengthens faith. Prayer is the preparation for miracles. Prayer opens the door to eternal happiness. The Father of us all is personal, ever waiting to hear from us, as any loving father would his children. To learn to communicate with him, to learn to pray effectively, requires diligence and dedication and desire on our part. I wonder sometimes if we are willing to pay the price for an answer from the Lord.

As we learn to develop this two-way communication, the standard of our life will improve. We will see things more clearly, we will try harder to do better, we will see the real joy that can come through trials and testing. Although problems will still be with us, peace, contentment, and true happiness will be ours in abundance.

Improving quality of prayer

As you feel the need to confide in the Lord or to improve the quality of your visits with him—to pray, if you please—may I suggest a process to follow: go where you can be alone, go where you can think, go where you can kneel, go where you can speak out loud to him. The bedroom, the bathroom, or the closet will do. Now, picture him in your mind's eye. Think to whom you are speaking, control your thoughts—don't let them wander, address him as your Father and your friend. Now tell him things you really feel to tell him—not trite phrases that have little meaning, but have a sincere, heartfelt conversation with him. Confide in him, ask him for forgiveness, plead with him, enjoy him, thank him, express your love to him, and then listen for his answers. Listening is an essential part of praying. Answers from the Lord come quietly—ever so quietly. In fact, few hear his answers audibly with their ears. We must be listening so carefully or we will never recognize them. Most answers from the Lord are felt in our heart as a warm comfortable expression, or they may come as thoughts to our mind. They come to those who are prepared and who are patient.

Gains from trials

Yes, the trials will still be there; but with the companionship of the Spirit, our approach to trials will change frustrations and heartaches to blessings.

Just for a moment, think with me. Forget the trials you now have. Remember back to those trials you had last year, five years ago, ten years ago. What did you gain? What did you learn? Aren't you better prepared now because of them?

I testify he is ready and waiting to help us. For our own good we must take the first step and this step is prayer. I know he lives, brothers and sisters, I know Jesus is the Christ. I know he established his church here for our blessing. I know his mouthpiece is before us this morning, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

Without announcement, the Tabernacle Choir sang the number, "Sing Unto God."

President Harold B. Lee

Bishop H. Burke Peterson of the Presiding Bishopric of the Church has just spoken to us. If you parents have been listening, you have an excellent basis for a wonderful family home evening in teaching your children how to pray. Thank you, Bishop.

The Tabernacle Choir has sung "Sing Unto God" by Handel.

The choir and the congregation will now join in singing "Redeemer of Israel."

Following the singing, Elder Marion D. Hanks, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve, will speak to us.

The congregation and choir sang the hymn, "Redeemer of Israel."

President Lee

To those of the television and radio audience who have just joined us, we announce that we are gathered in the Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City, Utah in the first session of the 143rd Semi-Annual Conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Elder Marion D. Hanks, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve, will now address us. Elder Hanks will be followed by Elder James E. Faust, Assistant to the Twelve.

Elder Marion D. Hanks

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

After a meeting with a group of students recently one young man waited to ask a question. "Elder Hanks," he said, "what are your goals? What do you want to accomplish?" I observed his seriousness of purpose and answered in the same spirit that my strongest desire is to qualify to be a friend of Christ.

I had not responded to such a question just that way before, but the answer did put into words the deep yearnings of my heart.

Friendship of God

In ancient times Abraham was called the "friend of God." Jesus, shortly before his crucifixion, said to his disciples, "Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you. Henceforth I call you not servants . . . but I have called you friends. . . ." (John 15: 14-15.)

In 1832, to a group of elders returning from missionary service, he repeated the message: ". . . from henceforth I shall call you friends. . . ." (D&C 84:77.)

Lesson of forgiveness

Today I would like to speak of one lesson among many that he taught us and that you and I must learn if we are to merit his friendship.

Christ's love was so pure that he gave his life for us: "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." (John 15:13.) But there was another gift he bestowed while he was on the cross, a gift that further measured the magnitude of his great love: he forgave, and asked his Father to forgive, those who persecuted and crucified him.

Was this act of forgiveness less difficult than sacrificing his mortal life?

Was it less a test of his love? I do not know the answer. But I have felt that the ultimate form of love for God and men is forgiveness.

He met the test. What of us? Perhaps we shall not be called upon to give our lives for our friends or our faith (though perhaps some shall), but it is certain that every one of us has and will have occasion to confront the other challenge. What will we do with it? What are we doing with it?

Someone has written: “. . . the withholding of love is the negation of the spirit of Christ, the proof that we never knew him, that for us he lived in vain. It means that he suggested nothing in all our thoughts, that he inspired nothing in all our lives, that we were not once near enough to him to be seized with the spell of his compassion for the world.”

Christ's example and instructions to his friends are clear. He forgave, and he said: “. . . Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you.” (Matt. 5:44.)

Response to offenses

What is our response when we are offended, misunderstood, unfairly or unkindly treated, or sinned against, made an offender for a word, falsely accused, passed over, hurt by those we love, our offerings rejected? Do we resent, become bitter, hold a grudge? Or do we resolve the problem if we can, forgive, and rid ourselves of the burden?

The nature of our response to such situations may well determine the nature and quality of our lives, here and eternally. A courageous friend, her faith refined by many afflictions, said to me only hours ago, “Humiliation must come before exaltation.”

Forgiveness required

It is required of us to forgive. Our salvation depends upon it. In a revelation given in 1831 the Lord said:

“My disciples, in days of old, sought occasion against one another and forgave not one another in their hearts; and for this evil they were afflicted and sorely chastened.

“Wherefore, I say unto you, that ye ought to forgive one another; for he that forgiveth not his brother his trespasses standeth condemned before the Lord; for there remaineth in him the greater sin.

“I, the Lord, will forgive whom I will forgive, but of you it is required to forgive all men.” (D&C 64:8-10.)

Therefore, Jesus taught us to pray, “And forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us.” (See Matt. 6:14-15.)

Does it not seem a supreme impudence to ask and expect God to forgive when we do not forgive?—openly? and “in our hearts”?

The Lord affirms in the Book of Mormon that we bring ourselves under condemnation if we do not forgive. (See Mosiah 26:30-31.)

But not only our eternal salvation depends upon our willingness and capacity to forgive wrongs committed against us. Our joy and satisfaction in this life, and our true freedom, depend upon our doing so. When Christ bade us turn the other cheek, walk the second mile, give our cloak to him who takes our coat, was it to be chiefly out of consideration for the bully, the brute, the thief? Or was it to relieve the one aggrieved of the destructive burden that resentment and anger lay upon us?

Separation from God

Paul wrote to the Romans that nothing “shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.” (Rom. 8:39.)

I am sure this is true. I bear testimony that this is true. But it is also true that we can separate ourselves from his spirit. In Isaiah it is written: “. . . your iniquities have separated between you and your God. . . ." (Isa. 59:2.) Again, ". . . they have rewarded evil unto themselves." (Isa. 3:9.)

Through Helaman we learn that "whosoever doeth iniquity, doeth it unto himself . . ." (Hel. 14:30); and from Benjamin, ". . . ye do withdraw yourselves from the Spirit of the Lord. . ." (Mosiah 2:36.)

In every case of sin this is true. Envy, arrogance, unrighteous dominion—these canker the soul of one who is guilty of them. It is true also if we fail to forgive. Even if it appears that another may be deserving of our resentment or hatred, none of us can afford to pay the price of resenting or hating, because of what it does to us. If we have felt the gnawing, mordant inroads of these emotions, we know the harm we suffer.

So Paul taught the Corinthians that they must "see that none render evil for evil unto any man. . ." (1 Thess. 5:15.)

It is reported that President Brigham Young once said that he who takes offense when no offense was intended is a fool, and he who takes offense when offense was intended is usually a fool. It was then explained that there are two courses of action to follow when one is bitten by a rattlesnake. One may, in anger, fear, or vengeance, pursue the creature and kill it. Or he may make full haste to get the venom out of his system. If we pursue the latter course we will likely survive, but if we attempt to follow the former, we may not be around long enough to finish it.

Examples of forgiveness

Years ago on Temple Square I heard a boy pour out the anguish of his troubled heart and make a commitment to God. He had been living in a spirit of hatred toward a man who had criminally taken the life of his father. Nearly bereft of his senses with grief, he had been overcome with bitterness.

On that Sabbath morning when others and I heard him, he had been touched by the Spirit of the Lord, and in that hour through the pouring in of that spirit had flooded out the hostility that had filled his heart. He tearfully declared his determined intent to leave vengeance to the Lord and justice to the law. He would no longer hate the one who had caused the grievous loss. He would forgive and would not for another hour permit the corrosive spirit of vengefulness to fill his heart.

Sometime later, touched with the remembrance of that moving Sabbath morning, I told the story to a group of people in another city. Before I left that small community the next day I had a visit from a man who had heard the message and understood it. Later a letter came from him. He had gone home that night and prayed and prepared himself and had then made a visit to the place of a man in his community who had years before imposed upon the sanctity of his home. There had been animosity and revenge in his heart and threats made. That evening when it was made known that he was at the door, his frightened neighbor appeared with a weapon in his hand. The man quickly explained the reasons for his visit, that he had come to say that he was sorry, that he did not want hatred to continue to consume his life. He offered forgiveness and sought forgiveness and went his way in tears, a free man for the first time in years. He left a former adversary also in tears, shaken and repentant.

The next day the same man went to the home of a relative in the town. He said, "I came to ask your forgiveness. I don't even remember why we have been so long angry, but I have come to tell you that I am sorry and to beg your pardon and to say that I have learned how foolish I have been." He was invited in to join the family at their table, and was reunited with his kin.

When I heard his story I knew again the importance of qualifying ourselves for the forgiveness of Christ by forgiving.

Strength to forebear

Robert Louis Stevenson wrote: "The truth of Christ's teaching seems to be this: In our own person and fortune, we should be ready to accept and pardon all; it is our cheek we are to turn and our coat we are to give to the man who has taken our cloak. But when another's face is buffeted, perhaps a little of the lion will become us best. That we are to suffer others to be injured and stand by, is not conceivable and surely not desirable."

So there are times when, in defense of others and principle, we must act. But of ourselves, if we suffer injury or unkindness, we must pray for the strength to forebear.

Christ gave his life on a cross; and on that cross he fully, freely forgave. It is a worthy goal to seek to qualify for the friendship of such a one.

Addison's comment

More than 250 years ago Joseph Addison printed in The Spectator a paragraph of sobering thoughtfulness:

"When I look upon the tombs of the great, every emotion of envy dies in me; when I read the epitaphs of the beautiful, every inordinate desire goes out; when I meet with the grief of parents upon a tombstone, my heart melts with compassion; when I see the tombs of the parents themselves, I consider the vanity of grieving for those whom we must quickly follow; when I see kings lying by those who deposed them, when I consider rival wits placed side by side, or the men that divided the world with their contests and disputes, I reflect with sorrow and astonishment on the little competitions, factions, and debates of mankind. When I read the several dates of the tombs, of some that died yesterday, and some six hundred years ago, I consider that great Day when we shall all of us be contemporaries, and make our appearance together."

God help us to rid ourselves of resentment and pettiness and foolish pride; to love, and to forgive, in order that we may be friends with ourselves, with others, and with the Lord.

"... even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye." (Col. 3:13.)

In the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

Elder Marion D. Hanks, Assistant to the Twelve, has just spoken to us. Here is a man who has been a friend to so many of our youth. The Lord bless his name to be always in their minds.

Elder James E. Faust, Assistant to the Twelve, will now address us. He will be followed by Elder Boyd K. Packer of the Council of the Twelve.

Elder James E. Faust

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

My beloved brothers and sisters and friends: Because of a great desire to be understood, I have humbly prayed for the Spirit of the Lord, and I also earnestly seek your sustaining spirit in what I have to say.

A dad who cares

Recently a father of a family of six children, who has had the sole responsibility for raising the family, beginning when the youngest was in diapers, told of the struggles in raising the family alone. One night he came home from work, faced with the problems of being both father and mother and felt unusually burdened with his responsibilities. One of his appreciative little girls, age 12 years, approached him eagerly, after having laid a rock on his dresser, which she had painted at school. On the flat portion of the rock she had written, "Happiness is having a dad who cares." This painted rock and its sublime message instantly and permanently lightened the burden of this father.

Head of the family

Some years ago, from this pulpit, President Stephen L. Richards quoted Judge Samuel S. Liebowitz, to both of whom I give full acknowledgement, in an article appearing in the Reader's Digest entitled "Nine Words That Can Stop Juvenile Delinquency." The nine words suggested by the judge were, "Put father back at the head of the family." President Richards concluded from the article "that the primary reasons for reduced percentages of juvenile delinquency in certain European countries, was a respect for authority in the home, which normally reposes in the father as head of the family." President Richards continued: "For generations in the Church, we have been endeavoring to do just what the Judge advocates, to put and keep the father at the head of the family, and with all our might, we have been trying to make him fit for that high and heavy responsibility." Since the primary purpose of the Church is to help the family and its members, how well the father functions in his responsibility is of utmost importance.

In urging that the fathers be put back at the head of their homes, we wish to take nothing away from mothers. In all the world, there is no higher or greater honor or responsibility than motherhood. It is to be hoped that they too will have their powerful influence extended to even a greater degree within the home and beyond the home.

Strengthening the father

In order to strengthen the father in his position, I make two simple suggestions: first, sustain and respect the father in his position; second, give him love, understanding, and some appreciation for his efforts.

There are some voices in our society who would demean some of the attributes of masculinity. A few of these are women who mistakenly believe that they build their own feminine causes by tearing down the image of manhood. This has serious social overtones, because a primary problem in the insecurity of both sons and daughters can be the diminution of the role of the father image.

Let every mother understand that if she does anything to diminish her children's father or the father's image in the eyes of the children, it may injure and do irreparable damage to the self-esteem and personal security of the children themselves. How infinitely more productive and satisfying it is for a woman to build up her husband rather than tear him down. You women are so superior to men in so many ways that you demean yourselves by posturing or belittling masculinity and manhood.

In terms of giving to fathers love and understanding, it should be remembered that fathers also have times of insecurity and doubt. Everyone knows fathers make mistakes—especially they themselves. Fathers are in need of all the help they can get; mostly they need love, support, and understanding from their own.

Priorities to guide

President Harold B. Lee has said, "Most men do not set priorities to guide them in allocating their time and most men forget that the first priority should be to maintain their own spiritual and physical strength; then comes their family; then the Church and then their professions, and all need time." (Bishop's Training Course and Self-Help Guide, sec. 2, p. 7.) In giving time to his children, a father should be able to demonstrate that he has enough love for his children to command as well as discipline them. Children want and need discipline. As they approach some dangers, they are silently pleading, "Don't let me do it." President [David O.] McKay said that if we do not adequately discipline our children, society will discipline them in a way we may not like. Wise discipline reinforces the dimensions of eternal love. This reinforcement will bring great security and stability into their lives.

Interest in families

All society, including the adult single members, for whom I have special concern, have a vested interest in fathers and mothers and families. Recently, Elder Boyd K. Packer said to the single members of the Church, "We talk a lot about families. Sometimes in bitterness, you will want to say 'all this talk about families, but I don't have a family, and . . .,' stop there! Don't add that extra phrase, 'I wish they would stop talking so much about families.' You pray that we do keep talking about families; about fathers and mothers and children and family home evening, temple marriage and companionship and all of the rest, because all of that will be yours. If we stop talking about it, then you, among all others, will be the losers." (Melchizedek Priesthood MIA Conference, June 1973.)

Relationship with bishop

In this Church we have another fatherlike relationship with our bishops who are the spiritual fathers of the wards. Recently I set apart the chief of police of a large city to serve as bishop for the second time. One of the women who was in the room at the time commented afterwards that she found it a little strange for the chief of police to be a bishop. The next morning in a conference meeting, the bishop responded by saying that he found nothing incompatible as chief of police with being bishop. He said that as chief of police he needed all of the help and guidance he could get from his ecclesiastical office as a spiritual father. He further said that he recommended the same source of help for all police chiefs.

Pride of a father

The exalted position of a father was well stated by General Douglas MacArthur who said, "By profession, I am a soldier and take pride in that fact, but I am prouder, infinitely prouder, to be a father. A soldier destroys in order to build. A father only builds, never destroys. The one has the potentiality of death; the other embodies creation and life. And while the hordes of death are mighty, the battalions of life are mightier still. It is my hope that my son, when I am gone, will remember me, not for the battle, but in the home repeating with him, our simple, daily prayer, 'Our Father Who art in Heaven.'" (Emerson Roy West, Vital Quotations, Bookcraft, Inc., 1968.)

Priesthood of God

It is important to remember that in this Church, the husbands and fathers, and members of the family through them, enjoy a power and influence in their lives, far beyond the natural gifts of intellect and character of the father. I refer to the priesthood of God, which every worthy man and boy over 12 years of age enjoys.

A prominent Church and business leader in this community was born without life. His father, exercising his priesthood, made a promise that if his firstborn could live, that he, the father, would do all in his power to provide the proper example and teachings for his son. After a few minutes his infant son began to breathe and is well and vigorous to this day.

It is through the power of the priesthood that marriage and the family unit can extend into and continue throughout all eternity. The conscientious women of this Church wish to have such a righteous influence in abundance in their homes.

Just a few weeks ago, in a stake conference, one gracious mother joyously recounted a marvelous experience of being in one of the temples with her husband and with all of her children but one and being sealed together as husband and wife and family for time and all eternity. Her husband, newly involved in the priesthood, sat in the conference audience a few rows back. For a moment she seemed to forget all of the rest of us and spoke only to him. Over the pulpit, and through the loudspeaker, with over 1,000 people in tears watching and listening, she said, "John, the children and I don't know how to tell you what you mean to us. Until you honored the priesthood, the greatest blessings of eternity would not open up for us. Now they have. We all love you very much and we thank you with all our hearts for what you have made possible for us."

You may recall the story about a child being trapped in a hole in the ground, who could only be extricated by sending another smaller child into the tunnel. One little fellow was approached to see if he would be willing to go down and rescue the one who was lodged. The lad said, "I am scared to go in that hole, but I will go if my father will hold the rope."

What fathers are for Elder Richard L. Evans gave the proper dimension for all fathers in this faith when he said, "First of all, fathers are for giving a name and a heritage to their children—clean and honorable. Fathers are for long, hard work. Mostly their own kind of work. For not being home so much as mothers; for seeming to be pretty busy; and for trying to give their children the things their fathers never had. Fathers are for talking with, for encouraging; for putting arms around; for understanding mistakes, but not condoning them; for disciplining when needed, then loving all the more; for being strong and forceful, and for being tender and gentle." (Emerson Roy West, Vital Quotations.)

It is always appropriate in all family relationships to ask, "What would Jesus do?" Having turned to the scriptures for the answer to this question, President [Marion G.] Romney testifies, "There in the gospel as recorded by St. John, I found the clear and certain answer: Jesus would always do the will of his Father. 'For I do always those things that please him.'" (John 8:29.)

Blessing

God bless you children to have listening ears and understanding hearts.

God bless you mothers for the endless dimension of your love and for all of the help you give the fathers of your children.

God bless you fathers to be equal to your overwhelming responsibilities and to have a father's special caring for each one under your protective arms. "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." (John 3:16.)

That this may be so; I pray, in the name of the Lord, Jesus Christ. Amen.

The Tabernacle Choir rendered the song, "God So Loved the World," without announcement following which Alexander Schreiner played an organ interlude.

President Harold B. Lee

We have just listened to Elder James E. Faust, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve, who has delivered a most meaningful talk to fathers. We would hope that all the careless fathers have listened also.

He was followed by the Tabernacle Choir singing "God So Loved the World."

We welcome those joining us on television and radio in this first session of the 143rd Semi-Annual Conference of the Church.

Elder Boyd K. Packer of the Council of the Twelve will be our concluding speaker.

Elder Boyd K. Packer

Of the Council of the Twelve

President Lee concluded our last conference in April, with the statement that in his 32 years as a General Authority he had learned that the most inspired preaching is always accompanied by beautiful, inspired music. I am grateful this morning to be sustained by the beautiful renditions of the choir.

Use of music

"Music," Addison said, "is the only sensual gratification in which mankind may indulge to excess without injury to their moral or religious feelings."

If that were true in his day, it is not in ours. Music, once that innocent, now is often used for wicked purposes.

It has been obvious for centuries that lyrics of the worst kind can be set to music that is innocent of itself. Words which are bad can be set to music which is otherwise good, and lead men astray.

Recently the First Presidency restated this counsel:

"Through music, man's ability to express himself extends beyond the limits of the spoken language in both subtlety and power. Music can be used to exalt and inspire or to carry messages of degradation and destruction. It is therefore important that as Latter-day Saints we at all times apply the principles of the gospel and seek the guidance of the Spirit in selecting the music with which we surround ourselves." (Priesthood Bulletin, August, 1973.)

Music corrupted

In our day music itself has been corrupted. Music can, by its tempo, by its beat, by its intensity, dull the spiritual sensitivity of men.

Studies citing physiological effects from some of the extreme music of today neglect the most serious thing concerning it.

Our youth have been brought up on a diet of music that is loud and fast, more intended to agitate than to pacify, more intended to excite than to calm. Even so, there is a breadth of it, some soft enough to be innocent and appealing to our youth, and that which is hard, and that is where the problem is.

Willingness to compromise

One of the signs of apostasy in the Christian churches today is the willingness of their ministers to compromise and introduce into what had been, theretofore, the most sacred religious meetings the music of the drug and the hard rock culture. Such music has little virtue and it is repellent to the Spirit of God.

The pity of it is, their foolishness has not accomplished the ends they sought. Their young people are not drawn to them as they hoped and expected. Rather, young people are inventing so-called churches of their own, groping and seeking for something that they find missing in their lives.

Better standards for youth

Some have been critical when our leaders have exercised restraint on the kind of music we will allow at church activities.

"Do you want to lose your youth?" they ask.

I would remind all such that it is not the privilege of those called as leaders to slide the Church about as though it were on casters, hoping to put it into the path that men or youth will be safe within it.

President J. Reuben Clark said: "We may not, under our duty, provide or tolerate an unwholesome amusement on the theory that if we do not provide it the youth will go elsewhere to get it. We could hardly set up a roulette table in the Church amusement hall for gambling purposes, with the excuse that if we do not provide it the youth would go to a gambling hall to gamble. We can never really hold our youth thus. Our task is to help the home to plant better standards in the minds of the youth."

And so we urge parents in the Church to show as much interest in the records and tapes their children purchase as they would the books and magazines they bring into the home. There are many parents who would not for one moment tolerate a pornographic magazine in their homes who unwittingly provide money for music, some of which in its influence can be quite as damaging.

Hard music

Someone said recently that no music could be degrading, that music in and of itself is harmless and innocent.

If that be true, then there should be some explanation for circumstances where local leaders have provided a building—expansive, light, and inviting—and have assembled a party of young people dressed modestly, well-groomed, with manners to match. Then overamplified sounds of hard music are introduced and an influence pours into the room that is repellent to the Spirit of God.

The youth of the Church, by and large, have found a sensible and reasonable adjustment to the grooming and dress styles of our day. Our young men and women can dress with decency and modesty and yet not be unstylish or look all that different or odd.

We have said a good deal through our youth organizations and at our Church schools about dress and grooming standards and have been successful.

By comparison, we have not given sufficient counsel and attention, I think, to the music that our young people consume. And "consume" is a proper word. There is much of today's music that they may well enjoy, if they avoid the hard kind.

Wise counseling

Parents and Church leaders who counsel young people in this area soon learn that they must move very wisely.

If a little child picks up a sharp object, sometimes a foolish adult will grab for it, frightened for the safety of the child. Instinctively, the child will grip it more tightly and perhaps be injured. The wise parent will trade him for it—some equally appealing, but harmless object, given in exchange, so that he lets go willingly and without tears.

Keep that in mind when you have a problem with young people and their music. To change it may take some time and require inspiration.

Confidence in youth

In the Church we have great confidence in our youth; and, particularly in the last year or two, we have moved to a pattern of programming where their desires and wishes are more dominant in our activities.

This places great responsibility on you, our young people. Pay careful attention to the music you program for your activities.

It is not that we lack confidence in you. However, the breach between the world and the extremes of its music and the Church is wider in our day than ever in generations past. And the middle of the road runs through an entirely different valley now than it did a few years ago.

Remember, young leaders, He is your Lord, and it is your Church quite as much as it is ours.

Keep the best

I would recommend that you go through your record albums and set aside those records that promote the so-called new morality, the drug, or the hard rock culture. Such music ought not to belong to young people concerned about spiritual development.

Why not go through your collection? Get rid of the worst of it. Keep just the best of it. Be selective in what you consume and what you produce. It becomes a part of you.

If you are blessed with musical talent, develop a wide range of good music.

There is so much wonderful, uplifting music available that we can experience to our advantage. Our people ought to be surrounded by good music of all kinds.

Parents ought to foster good music in the home and cultivate a desire to have their children learn the hymns of inspiration.

Musical training

The time for music lessons seems to come along when there are so many other expenses for the family with little children. But we encourage parents to include musical training in the lives of their children.

Somehow Andrew and Olive Kimball did, and Spencer learned to play. Somehow Samuel and Louisa Lee managed to do it, and Harold learned to play. And now, as the leaders of the Church assemble for our sacred meetings in the upper room of the temple, we always sing a hymn. At the organ is President Spencer W. Kimball or President Harold B. Lee.

How wonderful is the music instructor who will teach children and youth to play and will acquaint them with good music in their formative years, including the music of worship. To have such music as a part of one's life is a great blessing.

The Lord has said, "For my soul delighteth in the song of the heart; yea, the song of the righteous is a prayer unto me, and it shall be answered with a blessing upon their heads." (D&C 25:12.)

I think I would like to share with the young people something about how such music has been very important in my life, although I am not trained as a musician.

Controlling your thoughts

Probably the greatest challenge to people of any age, particularly young people, and the most difficult thing you will face in mortal life is to learn to control your thoughts. As a man "thinketh in his heart, so is he." (Prov. 23:7.) One who can control his thoughts has conquered himself.

When I was about ten years old, we lived in a home surrounded by an orchard. There never seemed to be enough water for the trees. The ditches, always fresh-plowed in the spring, would soon be filled with weeds. One day, in charge of the irrigating turn, I found myself in trouble.

As the water moved down the rows choked with weeds, it would flood in every direction. I raced through the puddles trying to build up the bank.

As soon as I had one break patched up, there would be another.

A neighbor came through the orchard. He watched for a moment, and then with a few vigorous strokes of the shovel he cleared the ditch bottom and allowed the water to course through the channel he had made.

"If you want the water to stay in its course, you'll have to make a place for it to go," he said.

I have come to know that thoughts, like water, will stay on course if we make a place for them to go. Otherwise our thoughts follow the course of least resistance, always seeking the lower levels.

I had been told a hundred times or more as I grew up that thoughts must be controlled. But no one told me how.

I want to tell you young people about one way you can learn to control your thoughts, and it has to do with music.

Mind like a stage

The mind is like a stage. Except when we are asleep the curtain is always up. There is always some act being performed on that stage. It may be a comedy, a tragedy, interesting or dull, good or bad; but always there is some act playing on the stage of the mind.

Have you noticed that without any real intent on your part, in the middle of almost any performance, a shady little thought may creep in from the wings and attract your attention? These delinquent thoughts will try to upstage everybody.

If you permit them to go on, all thoughts of any virtue will leave the stage. You will be left, because you consented to it, to the influence of unrighteous thoughts.

If you yield to them, they will enact for you on the stage of your mind anything to the limits of your toleration. They may enact a theme of bitterness, jealousy, or hatred. It may be vulgar, immoral, even depraved.

When they have the stage, if you let them, they will devise the most clever persuasions to hold your attention. They can make it interesting all right, even convince you that it is innocent—for they are but thoughts.

What do you do at a time like that, when the stage of your mind is commandeered by the imps of unclean thinking?—whether they be the gray ones that seem almost clean or the filthy ones which leave no room for doubt.

If you can control your thoughts, you can overcome habits, even degrading, personal habits. If you can learn to master them you will have a happy life.

Inspiration of sacred music

This is what I would teach you. Choose from among the sacred music of the Church a favorite hymn, one with words that are uplifting and music that is reverent, one that makes you feel something akin to inspiration. Remember President Lee's counsel; perhaps "I Am A Child of God" would do. Go over it in your mind carefully. Memorize it. Even though you have had no musical training, you can think through a hymn.

Now, use this hymn as the place for your thoughts to go. Make it your emergency channel. Whenever you find these shady actors have slipped from the sidelines of your thinking onto the stage of your mind, put on this record, as it were.

As the music begins and as the words form in your thoughts, the unworthy ones will slip shamefully away. It will change the whole mood on the stage of your mind. Because it is uplifting and clean, the baser thoughts will disappear. For while virtue, by choice, will not associate with filth, evil cannot tolerate the presence of light.

In due time you will find yourself, on occasion, humming the music inwardly. As you retrace your thoughts, you discover some influence from the world about you encouraged an unworthy thought to move on stage in your mind, and the music almost automatically began.

"Music," said Gladstone, "is one of the most forceful instruments for governing the mind and spirit of man."

I am so grateful for music that is worthy and uplifting and inspiring.

Hard music not harmless

Once you learn to clear the stage of your mind from unworthy thoughts, keep it busy with learning worthwhile things. Change your environment so that you have things about you that will inspire good and uplifting thoughts. Keep busy with things that are righteous.

Young people, you cannot afford to fill your mind with the unworthy hard music of our day. It is not harmless. It can welcome onto the stage of your mind unworthy thoughts and set the tempo to which they dance and to which you may act.

You degrade yourself when you identify with all of those things which seem now to surround such extremes in music: the shabbiness, the irreverence, the immorality, and the addictions. Such music as that is not worthy of you. You should have self-respect.

You are a son or a daughter of Almighty God. He has inspired a world full of wonderful things to learn and to do, uplifting music of many kinds that you may enjoy.

Courage from pioneer hymn

The choir, I think, will sing in conclusion, that pioneer hymn, "Come, Come, Ye Saints."

I have a brother who became a brigadier general in the Air Force. During World War II he was a bomber pilot and took part in some of the most dangerous and desperate raids in Europe. He returned to an assignment in Washington, D.C., about the time I finished pilot training in the same B-24 bombers and was heading for the Pacific. We had a day or two together in Washington before I left for overseas.

We talked of courage and of fear. I asked how he had held himself together in the face of all that he had endured.

He said, "I have a favorite hymn—'Come, Come, Ye Saints,' and when it was desperate, when there was little hope that we would return, I would keep that on my mind and it was as though the engines of the aircraft would sing back to me:

*'Come, come, ye saints,
No toil nor labor fear;
But with joy wend your way.
Though hard to you
This journey may appear,
Grace shall be as your day.'*"

—Hymns, no. 13

From this he clung to faith, the one essential ingredient to courage.

Influence of good music

There are many references in the scriptures, both ancient and modern, that attest to the influence of righteous music. The Lord, Himself, was prepared for His greatest test through its influence, for the scripture records: "And when they had sung an hymn, they went out into the mount of Olives." (Mark 14:26.)

I bear witness that God is our Father, that we are His children, that He loves us and has provided great and glorious things in this life. I know this, and I thank Him for the uplifting influence of good music in my life and in the lives of my children. There are many things we can do together as a family; inspired music we can feel together. In the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

Following Elder Packer's address, the hymn, "Come, Come Ye Saints," was sung by the Tabernacle Choir without announcement.

President Harold B. Lee

I suppose there has never been a time when more people are asking for the answers to questions. Brothers and sisters, you who have listened have been receiving answers this morning to some of the most important questions that many are trying to find the answers for today. The Lord bless these brethren.

Elder Packer of the Council of the Twelve has just spoken to us in the concluding address, followed by the choir who sang, "Come, Come Ye Saints."

We are grateful to the managers and operators of the many television and radio stations for offering their facilities to bring the proceedings of this conference to millions throughout many parts of the world.

We shall conclude this session of the conference with the Tabernacle Choir singing that great anthem, "Hallelujah Chorus," by Beethoven.

Following the singing, the benediction will be pronounced by Elder Franklin D. Richards, Assistant to the Twelve, and this conference will then be adjourned until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The Tabernacle Choir sang Beethoven's "Hallelujah Chorus."

The benediction was pronounced by Elder Franklin D. Richards, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve.

The conference was adjourned until 2 o'clock p.m.

FIRST DAY AFTERNOON MEETING

SECOND SESSION

The second session of the conference convened at 2 p.m. on Friday, October 5, 1973, with President Harold B. Lee presiding and conducting.

The choral music for this session was provided by the Relief Society Chorus, with Ellen N. Barnes conducting and with Robert Cundick at the organ.

President Lee made the following introductory remarks:

President Harold B. Lee

To all assembled here this afternoon in this historic Tabernacle, and to the many members and friends tuned to these proceedings by radio and television, we extend our warm greetings and welcome to this, the second session of the 143rd Semi-Annual Conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

There are in attendance officers and members of the Church from many lands who have assembled to worship and counsel together in the traditional setting of the historic Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City.

We are grateful to the managers and operators of radio and television stations throughout many parts of the world for the extensive coverage being given to this session of the conference.

During the past two days the general officers and teachers of the Relief Society have been convened in their annual conference. We are grateful to these sisters for the outstanding and devoted service they are rendering to this great women's organization of the Church.

We are favored this afternoon by the presence of the Relief Society Chorus under the direction of Sister Ellen N. Barnes with Robert Cundick at the organ. The chorus will begin this service by singing "O My Father."

The invocation will then be offered by Elder Eugene D. Bryson, former president of the Germany North Mission.

The Relief Society Chorus sang the hymn, "O My Father."

The opening prayer was offered by Elder Eugene D. Bryson, former president of the Germany North Mission.

pleased to hear from Elder Thomas S. Monson of the Council of the Twelve.

The song, "Omnipotence," was sung by the Relief Society Chorus.

President Lee

The Relief Society Chorus will now favor us by singing Schubert's "Omnipotence."

Following the singing, we shall be

President Lee

Elder Thomas S. Monson of the Council of the Twelve will be our first speaker. He will be followed by Elder Rex D. Pinegar of the First Council of Seventy.

Elder Thomas S. Monson

Of the Council of the Twelve

One summer day I stood alone in the quiet of the American War Memorial Cemetery of the Philippines. A spirit of reverence filled the warm tropical air. Situated among the carefully mowed grass, acre upon acre, were markers identifying men, mostly young, who in battle gave their lives. As I let my eyes pass name by name along the many colonnades of honor, tears came easily and without embarrassment. As my eyes filled with tears, my heart swelled with pride. I contemplated the high price of liberty and the costly sacrifice many had been called upon to bear.

My thoughts turned from those who bravely served and gallantly died. There came to mind the grief-stricken mother of each fallen man as she held in her hand the news of her precious son's supreme sacrifice. Who can measure a mother's grief? Who can probe a mother's love? Who can comprehend in its entirety the lofty role of a mother? With perfect trust in God, she walks, her hand in his, into the valley of the shadow of death that you and I might come forth unto life.

"The Name of Mother"

*"The noblest thoughts my soul can claim,
The holiest words my tongue can frame,
Unworthy are to frame the name
More sacred than all other.
An infant when her love first came,
A man, I find it just the same:
Reverently I breathe her name—
The blessed name of mother."*

—George Griffith Fetter

In this spirit, let us consider mother. Four mothers come to mind: first, mother forgotten; second, mother remembered; third, mother blessed; and finally, mother loved.

Mother forgotten

"Mother forgotten" is observed all too frequently. The nursing homes are crowded, the hospital beds are full, the days come and go—often the weeks and months pass—but mother is not visited. Can we not appreciate the pangs of loneliness, the yearnings of mother's heart when hour after hour, alone in her age, she gazes out the window for the loved one who does not visit, the letter the postman does not bring. She listens for the knock that does not sound, the telephone that does not ring, the voice she does not hear. How does such a mother feel when her neighbor welcomes gladly the smile of a son, the hug of a daughter, the glad exclamation of a child, "Hello, Grandmother."

There are yet other ways we forget mother. Whenever we fall, whenever we do less than we ought, in a very real way we forget mother.

Last Christmas I talked to the proprietress of a Salt Lake City nursing home. From the hallway where we stood, she pointed to several elderly women assembled in a peaceful living room. She observed, "There's Mrs. Hansen. Her daughter visits her every week, right at 3:00 p.m. on Sunday. To her right is Mrs. Peek. Each Wednesday there is a letter in her hands from her son in New York. It is read, then reread, then saved as a precious piece of treasure. But see Mrs. Carroll; her family never telephones, never writes, never visits. Patiently she justifies this neglect with words which are heard but do not convince or excuse, 'They are all so busy.'" Shame on all who thus make of a noble woman "mother forgotten."

"Hearken unto thy father that begat thee," wrote Solomon, "and despise not thy mother when she is old." (Prov. 23:22.) Can we not make of a mother forgotten a "mother remembered"?

Mother remembered

Men turn from evil and yield to their better natures when mother is remembered. A famed officer from the Civil War period, Colonel Higgenson, when asked to name the incident of the Civil War that he considered the most remarkable for bravery, said that there was in his regiment a man whom everybody liked, a man who was brave and noble, who was pure in his daily life, absolutely free from dissipation in which most of the other men indulged.

One night at a champagne supper, when many were becoming intoxicated, someone in jest called for a toast from this young man. Colonel Higgenson said that he arose, pale but with perfect self-control, and declared: "Gentlemen, I will give you a toast which you may drink as you will, but which I will drink in water. The toast that I have to give is, 'Our mothers.'"

Instantly a strange spell seemed to come over all the tipsy men. They drank the toast in silence. There was no laughter, no more song, and one by one they left the room. The lamp of memory had begun to burn, and the name of "Mother" touched every man's heart.

Mother's Day

As a boy, I well remember Sunday School on Mother's Day. We would hand to each mother present a small potted plant and sit in silent reverie as Melvin Watson, a blind member, would stand by the piano and sing, "That Wonderful Mother of Mine." This was the first time I saw a blind man cry. Even today, in memory, I can see the moist tears move from those sightless eyes, then form tiny rivulets and course down his cheeks, falling finally upon the lapel of the suit he had never seen. In boyhood puzzlement I wondered why all of the grown men were silent, why so many handkerchiefs came forth. Now I know. You see, mother was remembered. Each boy, every girl, all fathers and husbands seemed to make a silent pledge: "I will remember that wonderful mother of mine."

Some years ago I listened intently as a man well beyond middle age told me of an experience in his family history. The widowed mother who had given birth to him and his brothers and sisters had gone to her eternal and well-earned reward. The family assembled at the home and surrounded the large dining room table. The small metal box in which Mother had kept her earthly treasures was opened reverently. One by one each keepsake was brought forth. There was the wedding certificate from the Salt Lake Temple. "Oh, now Mother could be with Dad." Then there was the deed to the humble home where each child had in turn entered upon the stage of life. The appraised value of the house had little resemblance to the worth Mother had attached to it.

Then there was discovered a yellowed envelope which bore the marks of time. Carefully the flap was opened and from inside was taken a home-made valentine. Its simple message, in the handwriting of a child, read, "I love you, Mother." Though she was gone, by what she held sacred, Mother taught yet another lesson. A silence permeated the room, and every member of the family made a pledge not only to remember, but also to honor mother. For them it was not too little and too late, as in the classic poem of Rose Marinoni entitled "At Sunrise":

*"They pushed him straight against the wall,
The firing squad dropped in a row;
And why he stood on tiptoe,
Those men shall never know.
He wore a smile across his face
As he stood primly there,
The guns straight aiming at his heart,
The sun upon his hair.
For he remembered in a flash
Those days beyond recall,
When his proud mother took his height
Against the bedroom wall."*

Mother blessed

Now that we have considered "mother remembered," let us turn to "mother blessed." For one of the most beautiful and reverent examples, I refer to the holy scriptures.

In the New Testament of our Lord, perhaps we have no more moving account of "mother blessed" than the tender regard of the Master for the grieving widow at Nain.

"And it came to pass . . . that he went into a city called Nain; and many of his disciples went with him, and much people.

"Now when he came nigh to the gate of the city, behold, there was a dead man carried out, the only son of his mother, and she was a widow: and much people of the city was with her.

"And when the Lord saw her, he had compassion on her, and said unto her, Weep not.

"And he came and touched the bier: and they that bare him stood still. And he said, Young man, I say unto thee, Arise.

"And he that was dead sat up, and began to speak. And he delivered him to his mother." (Luke 7:11-15.)

What power, what tenderness, what compassion did our Master and exemplar thus demonstrate. We, too, can bless if we will but follow his noble example. Opportunities are everywhere. Needed are eyes to see the pitiable plight, ears to hear the silent pleadings of a broken heart. Yes, and a soul filled with compassion that we might communicate not only eye to eye or voice to ear, but in the majestic style of the Savior, even heart to heart. Then every mother everywhere will be "mother blessed."

Mother loved

Finally, let us contemplate "mother loved." Universally applicable is the poem recalled from childhood and enjoyed by children even today, "Which Loved Best?"

*"I love you, Mother, said little John;
Then, forgetting his work, his cap went on,
And he was off to the garden swing,
Leaving his mother the wood to bring.*

*"I love you, Mother, said rosy Nell;
'I love you better than tongue can tell';
Then she teased and pouted full half the day,*

Till her mother rejoiced when she went to play.

*"I love you, Mother," said little Fan;
"Today I'll help you all I can;
How glad I am that school doesn't keep!"
So she rocked the baby till it fell asleep.*

*"Then, stepping softly, she took the broom,
And swept the floor, and dusted the room;
Busy and happy all day was she,
Helpful and cheerful as child could be,*

*"I love you, Mother," again they said—
Three little children going to bed;
How do you think that Mother guessed Which of them really loved her best?"*

—Joy Allison

Demonstration of love

One certain way each can demonstrate genuine love for mother is to live the truths mother so patiently taught. Such a lofty goal is not new to our present generation. On this continent, in times described in the Book of Mormon, we read of a brave, a good, and noble leader named Helaman who did march in righteous battle at the head of 2,000 young men. Helaman described the activities of these young men: "... never had I seen so great courage, ... as ... they said unto me: ... behold our God is with us, and he will not suffer that we should fall; then let us go forth; ... Now they never had fought, yet they did not fear death; ... yea, they had been taught by their mothers, that if they did not doubt, God would deliver them. And they rehearsed unto me the words of their mothers, saying: We do not doubt our mothers knew it. (Al. 56:45-48.)

At the end of the battle, Helaman continued his description: "... behold, to my great joy, there had not one soul of them fallen to the earth; yea, and they had fought as if with the strength of God; yea, never were men known to have fought with such miraculous strength; and with such mighty power." (Al. 56:56.)

Miraculous strength, mighty power—mother's love and love for mother had met and triumphed.

"Behold thy mother!"

The holy scriptures, the pages of history are replete with tender, moving, convincing accounts of "mother loved." One, however, stands out supreme, above and beyond any other. The place is Jerusalem, the period known as the Meridian of Time. Assembled is a throng of Roman soldiers. Their helmets signify their loyalty to Caesar, their shields bear his emblem, their spears are crowned by Roman eagles. Assembled also are natives to the land of Jerusalem. Faded into the still night, and gone forever are the militant and rowdy cries, "Crucify him, crucify him."

The hour has come. The personal earthly ministry of the Son of God moves swiftly to its dramatic conclusion. A certain loneliness is here. Nowhere to be found are the lame beggars who, because of this man, walk; the deaf who, because of this man, hear; the blind who, because of this man, see; the dead who, because of this man, live.

There remained yet a few faithful followers. From his tortured position on the cruel cross, he sees his mother and the disciple whom he loved standing by. He speaks: "... woman, behold thy son! Then saith he to the disciple, Behold thy mother!" (John 19:26-27.)

From that awful night when time stood still, when the earth did quake and great mountains were brought down—yes, through the annals of history, over the centuries of years and beyond the span of time, there echoes his simple yet divine words, "Behold thy mother!"

Honoring God and mother

As we truly listen to that gentle command and with gladness obey its intent, gone forever will be the vast legions of "mothers forgotten." Everywhere present will be "mothers remembered," "mothers blessed," and "mothers loved" and, as in the beginning, God will once again survey the workmanship of his own hand and be led to say, "It [is] very good."

May each of us treasure this truth; One cannot forget mother and remember God. One cannot remember mother and forget God. Why? Because these two sacred persons, God and mother, partners in creation, in love, in sacrifice, in service, are as one.

May we, by our thoughts and our actions, honor God and mother, I pray humbly yet earnestly, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

We have just listened to Elder Thomas S. Monson of the Council of the Twelve. Elder Rex D. Pinegar of the First Council of Seventy will now address us. He will be followed by Elder ElRay L. Christiansen, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve.

Elder Rex D. Pinegar

Of the First Council of the Seventy

It is a great blessing to be here today. After briefing the office staff at our mission in Virginia, I turned to leave, and our treasurer and fleet coordinator said: "President, just tell President Lee we're behind him." On behalf of all the missionaries throughout the world who testify daily that Jesus is the Christ and of your prophetic calling, President Lee, we want you to know, "We are behind you."

The human measure

William Jennings Bryan wrote:

*"The human measure of a human life is its income;
the divine measure of a life is its outgo, its overflow—
its contribution to the welfare of all."
(From The Prince of Peace, by William Jennings Bryan.)*

In our search for happiness we may get so involved with the "human measure of life" that we fail to recognize the temporary value of such riches. Christ warned that we can become spiritually "choked" with the "cares and riches and pleasures of this life, and bring no fruit to perfection." (Luke 8:14.)

The Savior also said, "... a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth.

"And he spake a parable unto them, saying, The ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully:

"And he thought within himself, saying, What shall I do, because I have no room where to bestow my fruits?

"And he said, This will I do: I will pull down my barns, and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits and my goods.

"And I will say to my soul, Soul, thou has much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry.

"But God said unto him, Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee: then whose shall those things be, which thou hast provided?

"So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God." (Luke 12:15-21.)

Rich toward God

It is, then, our blessing and responsibility to become rich toward God. We are to go beyond acquiring something for ourselves. The Savior also taught us how to do this when he said, "... seek ye the kingdom of God; and all these things shall be added unto you" (Luke 12:31), and, "... whoso desireth to reap, let him thrust in his sickle with his might, and reap while the day lasts, that he may treasure up for his soul everlasting salvation in the kingdom of God." (D&C 6:3.)

This means we may gain eternal life. "Behold, he that hath eternal life is rich." (D&C 11:7.)

Sharing the gospel

The significance of this truth was brought to the heart of a certain man when his friend approached him with a plan to obtain the riches of this life. He wrote:

"Dear friend,

"During one of our conversations you said something which has been on my mind ever since. In fact, you might say that it has really 'troubled' me and has caused me to do some real 'soul' searching. In explaining why you felt compelled to make the sales plan known to me, you said, 'I would feel real bad a few years from now if I knew about this, got rich from it, and did not tell my friends about it.'

"You will never know how that statement has troubled me because I have made no attempt to share something more precious than money with you. I am speaking of the true gospel of Jesus Christ.

"Now hold on a minute. I know what is going through your mind. 'This kook has lost his cool and gone off the deep end.' T'ain't so. I believe we spent enough time together in the past couple of years for you to know that I haven't turned into a freak or something. But I am sure you have noticed a change. I no longer do many of the earthly things you probably remember of me. I have a great love for my family and mankind in general. I am truly sorry for many things in my past and will do my best to never do them again. But this isn't the most important thing.

"The most important thing in all this world is that I know that I existed in the preexistence as a spirit child of my Heavenly Father; that I am here in mortality as part of his great plan for me in order that I may prove my worthiness to him by constantly making the proper choices between good and evil; and that if I prove myself worthy I will return to his presence.

"I further know that there is a prophet, Harold B. Lee, here upon the earth today who communicates regularly with the true and living Jesus Christ, the son of God. Through this prophet I can learn everything necessary to help me live my life and guide my family in the proper manner to return to his presence.

"Oh, there is so much more that I could tell you, but suffice it to say that there is absolutely no unanswered question in my mind concerning my reason for being here at this time, nor what reward I will earn if I obey the teachings of my Father in heaven.

"Of course, I have learned all of these things through study and prayer and the teachings of the Mormon Church (The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints). It is this that I have never shared with you that has troubled my conscience so.

"Now I am going to do something about it. At the same time this letter is mailed I am sending your name to the Church representatives in your area and asking them to contact you. They will undoubtedly send a couple of young men (or lady) missionaries to see you. These will be people who are dedicating a couple of years of their lives at their or their family's expense to tell people like yourselves of this gospel. They have about six one-hour lessons they will want to teach you. I beg of you to listen to their message. I testify to you that it is true."

I also testify that this is the true Church, that Harold B. Lee is a prophet of the true and living God, and that this gospel of Jesus Christ is more precious than money.

"Walk in the Light"

A recent Relief Society film, "Walk in the Light," highlights the incident of a young granddaughter who desired to become the heir to her grandmother's watch. It seemed to the grandchild a real treasure. Here are the soul-stirring words of her grandmother's reply:

"The watch is of small value. But I do want to leave you something very precious. It is something I brought with me all the way from Scotland. I carried it with me across the plains. It is something that will be of value to you all the days of your life and into the eternities. I want to leave to you my testimony—my testimony of the gospel. I know that the gospel is true. I know that God lives and that Jesus is the Christ."

It is said that many grandchildren honor the name of that grandmother and recall her testimony with joy. How great are the riches she has laid up in store in our Heavenly Father's kingdom.

Wealth of testimony

I am grateful to the Lord for you members of the Church who desire to share the wealth of the gospel of Jesus Christ with your family and friends. Not only are you becoming rich toward God, but you are making other lives rich also. You are giving them the true Christian religion.

Patrick Henry, a great American patriot, said:

"I have now disposed of all my property to my family. There is one thing more I wish I could give them, and that is the Christian religion. If they had that, and I had not given them one shilling they would have been rich, and if they had not that, and I had given them all the world, they would be poor."

May we all share our wealth of testimony with others that we and they may become rich toward God, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

You can understand the fire that comes from a mission president when he comes home to bear his testimony. We have just listened to Elder Rex D. Pinegar of the First Council of Seventy, fresh from the mission field.

We shall now hear from Elder ElRay L. Christiansen, Assistant to the Twelve.

Elder ElRay L. Christiansen

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

So many timely subjects have been discussed today, beginning with the great address by President Lee, that I have been edified and I am sure that you have been as well. Now I humbly pray that I may not detract from but may add a little bit to your thinking and doing as we consider the second great principle of the gospel. I feel there is need for it.

A pattern for living

The primary purpose of the gospel and of the Church is to provide a pattern for living and a prescription for happiness and success—here and hereafter. President McKay declared on many occasions that next in importance to life itself is the privilege of directing that life. To direct one's life is a privilege. It is also a real personal responsibility.

Speaking to his sons, Lehi explained this by saying: "Wherefore, men are free. . . . They are free to choose liberty and eternal life, through the great mediation of all men, or to choose captivity and death, according to the captivity and power of the devil; for he seeketh that all men might be miserable like unto himself.

"And now, my sons, I would that ye should look to the great Mediator, and hearken unto his great commandments; and be faithful unto his words, and choose eternal life, according to the will of his Holy Spirit;

"And not choose eternal death, according to the will of the flesh and the evil which is therein, which giveth the spirit of the devil power to captivate, to bring you down to hell, that he may reign over you in his own kingdom." (2 Ne. 2:27-29.)

Principle of repentance

Because sin is such a devastating, destructive force, the great principle of repentance was provided by our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, to extricate ourselves from the clutches of sin. Without the blessed privilege of repentance, we would have but little incentive to improve our lives.

Repentance isn't easy. It takes ability. It takes self-discipline and humility.

Repentance is not a negative teaching, but rather it is a positive process of building good character.

Repentance could become a remedy for most spiritual ills. However, it is not a mere superficial, shallow-rooted expression of regret.

True repentance

What, then, is true repentance?

President Joseph F. Smith declared that: "True repentance is not only sorrow for sins, and humble penitence and contrition before God, but it involves the necessity of turning away from them [sins], a discontinuance of all evil practices and deeds, a thorough reformation of life, a vital change from evil to good, from vice to virtue, from darkness to light. Not only so, but to make restitution, so far as it is possible, for all the wrongs we have done, to pay our debts, and restore to God and man their rights—that which is due to them from us. This is true repentance, and the exercise of the will and all the powers of body and mind is demanded, to complete this glorious work of repentance; [only] then God will accept it." (Gospel Doctrine, p. 123.)

If one truly repents, it will be manifested by his works, for, "By this ye may know if a man repenteth of his sins—behold, he will confess them and forsake them." (D&C 58:43.)

Thus repentance calls for a heartfelt sorrow for sin resulting not only in a cessation thereof but also in reformation of life. That's the important thing—a reformation of life!

Goal of perfection

To repent isn't exactly popular these days. Yet the Lord expects each of us to repent, to improve, and to conscientiously reform our lives. In fact, he set for us a lofty goal, saying:

"Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect." (Matt. 5:48.)

Admittedly, this is an imperfect world. Nevertheless, each of us should be constantly striving toward perfection.

1. "Let him that stole steal no more. . . ." (Eph. 4:28.)
2. ". . . let virtue garnish thy thoughts unceasingly. . . ." (D&C 121:45.)
3. ". . . pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you." (Matt. 5:44.) Destroy your enemies by making them your friends.
4. Let the unkind among us become considerate.
5. Let the truth be spoken always, no matter what the consequences may be.

I would like to add Brother Packer's recommendation that we rid ourselves of the unmusical music and adopt some that does the soul and the heart good and which is pleasing to the Lord. We can at least do that in our own homes.

To practice such virtues as these gives evidence of forsaking wrong. We ought not to let personal faults, bad habits, and moral weaknesses persist. They should be overcome and corrected without delay. I have often said: "You can't repent too soon because you don't know how soon it will be too late."

Story of convert

One of my distant Scandinavian relatives who was thriving financially in Denmark came with his family as converts to the Church to America and his family was directed to settle in Sanpete County. He was quite well-to-do, as I said, and he sold his lands, herds, and flocks for what he could and came without complaint. For a while he did well as far as the Church and his activities were concerned; and amazingly, even without the abundant rainfall and the water and the resources, he began to thrive again. He accumulated wealth again. He became so interested and involved in his possessions that he forgot about the purpose of his coming to America. They waited upon him as ward teachers. The bishop would call upon him and implore him to become active as he used to be, and he would promise them that in the future when he got certain things settled that he would do it. Finally he was growing old, and they came and said to him, "Now, Lars, the Lord was good to you when you were in Denmark. He has been good to you since you have come here. See all of the things that you possess. We think now, since you are growing a little older, that it would be well for you to spend some of your time in the interests of the Church. After all, you can't take these things with you when you go."

He stopped. He was shocked, and he said, "Vell, den, I vill not go." But he did. And so will we. It is time today to begin the program and process of repenting!

Power of the destroyer

Brothers and sisters, you know and I know that the power of the destroyer is persistently, relentlessly operating upon the minds and hearts of the children of men, young and old, in the Church and out of the Church, and too many are yielding to his evil enticements.

We have been warned by the Lord and by our leaders through the years to repent. President Lee this morning urged us to begin with ourselves and develop self-respect, and beginning there, set out on the real purpose of life.

We have been supplied with heaven-sent programs such as the family home evening program, to keep families secure and our homes intact. It has been predicted that in the last days men shall become "lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God." (2 Tim. 3:4.)

"For behold, at that day shall he rage in the hearts of the children of men, and stir them up to anger against that which is good.

"And others will he pacify, and lull them away into carnal security, that they will say: All is well in Zion; yea, Zion prospereth, all is well—and thus the devil cheateth their souls, and leadeth them away carefully down to hell." (2 Ne. 28:20-21.)

I like that word carefully because that is the way he operates. He never jerks. He never pulls—just misleads us gradually, step by step. Now in this situation and in the world today, let us remember the admonition of James:

"Submit yourselves therefore to God. Resist the devil, and he will flee from you.

"Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you. Cleanse your hands, ye sinners; and purify your hearts, ye double minded.

"Humble yourselves in the sight of the Lord, and he shall lift you up." (James 4:7-8, 10.)

May we all repent and place our lives and our homes in order and in perfect harmony with the gospel of Jesus Christ, I pray, testifying to the truthfulness of the restored gospel and in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President Harold B. Lee

We rejoice in the strength of Brother Christiansen as manifested here today.

The congregation and the chorus will now join in singing "How Firm A Foundation." After the singing, Elder Henry D. Taylor, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve, will address us.

"How Firm a Foundation" was sung by the congregation.

President Lee

Elder Henry D. Taylor, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve, will now address us. He will be followed by Elder O. Leslie Stone, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve.

Elder Henry D. Taylor

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve

After the Lord had created Adam, he made it crystal clear that he did not intend that Adam should go through life without a companion, when he said: "It is not good that the man should be alone; I will make him an help meet for him." (Gen. 2:18.) So Eve was created and given to Adam to be his wife and companion.

Period of courtship

Many of you young people in the Church have reached an age where you are old enough to look for a companion and mate. As you commence dating on a steady basis, you will enter a period known as courtship. This will be a thrilling and important time in your lives. President McKay referred to it in these words:

"Courtship is a wonderful period. It should be a sacred one. That is the time in which you choose your mate. Young men, your success in life depends upon that choice. Choose prayerfully the one who inspires you to your best and always remember that no man injures the thing he loves. . . . The seeds of a happy marriage are sown in youth. Happiness does not begin at the altar; it begins during the period of youth and courtship. . . ."

Young people, choose prayerfully and carefully. Don't rush hastily into marriage. Determine that you have common goals and interests. Especially be certain that you possess the same religious convictions and beliefs.

A wise man once counseled: "Before marriage keep thine eyes wide open, then after marriage keep them half closed."

Making a successful marriage

Marriage brings adjustments, because each has his or her own personality. Reared in homes with varying backgrounds, marriage naturally will require the making of adjustments.

Marriage, my beloved young brothers and sisters, should not be just taken for granted. It must be worked at, but realize that you can have the kind of marriage that you earnestly desire and for which you are willing to work. Marriage will require giving and taking; it will mean sharing, because life was meant to be shared. A happy and successful marriage means forgetting oneself and thinking of ways in which to make one's companion happy. It might be well each day for the husband to think, "What can I do today to make Mary happy?" And Mary should say to herself, "What can I do today to make John happy?" A happy home is where the wife is treated like a queen and the husband is treated like a king. And so, it is not only marrying the right partner, it is being the right partner.

Principle of love

